H. M. Addison, whose many exploitation feats as managing director of the Great Lakes theatre at Buffalo have been noted from time to time in this department, has been named as special representative of M. E. Comerford, president of the Comerford circuit.

In his two years at the Fox Great Lakes, Comerford has been president of the theatre managers' association, active in the Allied Fraternal toy fund, honorary member of the Kwanis and Great Buffalo Ad clubs, and has done much community work from station WKEN, which has a studio in the theatre building.

Prospector With Guitar Pulls Burros Around City

Varied exploitation ideas have been used for "The Trail of '98" in different theatres. At the Fonda one outstanding angle was the placing of large oil paintings in downtown store windows. At the Stilman in Cleveland, a popular stock actor read over the entire script of "The Trail of '98" on station WIVAM. At Birmingham, an itinerant singer with a guitar and dressed as a gold prospector rode a horse to town with two Mexican burros on a leash trailing.

Anent Small Theatres

BATH, PA.—To The Editor: I'd like to say a word, not about what the picture frame, but what the moving pictures did to our house. They brought us to the point where we have to out of business.

Now I know enough about the great governing thing that I heard about the law of the survival of the fittest and little fellows and the small theatre must under; that's clear. I've reconciled my fate. However, what's going to take place of the movie theatre in the small town? Have the producers considered such a contingency? The agents come around and infor us the feature that goes to the six month's show, no help to the later on the investment.

In a town like mine there are 1,400 sons. Not all of them own automobiles to which to run to the nearest city to view first run showings, to hear the big organs the rousing sounds that are talked about. (Lord, deliver us from the pretentious synchronized orchestrations that accompany the sound-movies). They can't afford to go and we can't afford to give them the stimulus features a few months later, a scratchy phonomograph reproduction, a fiddle and bassoon.

There is only one Roxy theatre in whole world, only one Paramount. There; only a few first-run houses in the Lehi valley; the rest of us are debating how are going to keep our houses open and (Lord, deliver us from the free), I'm sure many which case the weak ones are now fated to close forever. While the big distributors: buying tickets, buying tickets, buying kings of finance to organize and ask and do some other Wall Street stunts, a little exhibitor off on the firing line is left to take care of him.

You big men at the head of affairs who pictures often grace the trade journals h better begin to save the little houses for perpetual defense and financial ruin. We relish an answer from some scolared big fellow who sits at an overdecorated desk, amid artificial flowers and genuine antiquities. Can you tell us how to save the industry, the hike town and the near-bucolic city?

A Speedy Recovery

WALTHILL, NEBR.—To the Editor: I am very sorry that I have been a backsider on "What the Picture Did for Me," but I am going to make up for lost time. I am recuperating from an operation and have been laid up since December 5. But have had no blanks to fill out. Don't know what I would do without the old HERALD-WORLD. While I have been shut up, it is sure a nice sight to see someone bring it home.

Was wondering what EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD thinks about the chance us small town fellows have on the "talkie" situation. I am located 30 miles from Sioux City, and they have three "talkie" theatres. I see they are making some synchronous machines for around $1,000. Do you know if these machines are working fine? I enclosed find reports for "What the Picture Did for Me."—William R. Boughin, Jr., Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.

The Farmer's Status

CAMBRIDGE, ILL.—To the Editor: "What the Picture did TO ME"—that's more fitting subject for a busted exhibitor! "Wings—the Outstanding picture of the year." I have no fault to find with the feature or the splendid cast, it is all that is claimed for it, a dandy picture. I would call the photography splendid, direction ditto. But here is where the big moment comes—the price of the guarantee is not for small towns. When a company comes in and wants a deed to your house and equipment and, incidentally, a mortgage on the sun, moon and stars, show them the gate and send them through it.

Paramount places this feature in the cities and gets all the little fellows' patrons "het" up about it with sound presentation, etc., and they trot in and throw it. Still all right. Then they come out and try to make you think you will get them in again and this doesn't happen. You sign on the dotted line and the skies are started.

New York office or Chicago should not set the price of admission for the small town exhibitor. That is one of the main reasons why I did no business. My children's tickets should never be more than 15 cents. Let the big fellows get it through their heads that the farming communities are broke. And it will take a good many years of "Farm Relief" and several Hoovers to put them on the road to 25 and cents. I could have got ten adult admissions of 50 cents, but the child's ticket price should be left to the discretion of the exhibitor, or some forcefulness body in New York, who never comes in contact with the small, dirt-farm exhibitor or patron. After all these years, it is funny that some film has not刻画ed their heads. They built their business and place in the commercial world, not by 25 and 50 cent admission, but by the poor man's and middle class patronage.

Paramount is at present the only company in my territory that still asks wartime prices, and their picture is not so outstanding. From now on I shall set the admission price in my own theatre. If the producing company comes with a picture of Heaven and all the saints and angels filmed, my kid ticket price shall be 10 cents. I have a lot of disappointed kiddies who wanted to see "Wings" and couldn't. If I had even broken even on expenses, I would have cut the price to them, but I am away short.

The best plan is to tie to the companies that realize the actual conditions of the small towns. There are quite a few of these fellows and from how on they get my business. But their "talkie" picture is not so outstanding. "Wings" is a good picture, but I have played some other war pictures that were just as good, and none of them are over one or over an order. I am not just a sorehead on this occasion, nor would I put on a perfectly good picture because I lost money on it. After ten years in the business I have learned to take my medicine standing up, but this is just the last straw. Price fixing is an abuse of the exhibitor's privilege that should be stopped—and IS stopped in the Palace theatre at Cambridge. They can peddle their contracts where they will if they can't let me run my own show.

Play "Wings," you small fellows, but don't play a big guarantee. Let them take a part of the risk. It's more than you can stand, that's why they're charging on by a shoe string, and it is getting thin.

Metro has some dandy stuff, and you get good prices from them. Universal is always the best bargain. MGM is the very place to find the right manager. As to Warner Brother's ACTION pictures, don't let them kid you on the stuff that they exploit for Vitaphone. You can't put it over even on the phonograph players. That was tried in one of my nearby towns, and it was a joke. United Artists is helping the small man out now. From the Chicago exchange we had some of the best of theirs and at prices that anyone could meet. FBO is another company with splendid product for small town exhibitor.

Columbia

UBRMANE: Special cast—Another picture tied and shoulders above the average so-called hit. It has that ingredient that the people and their money to see, entertainment—yes sir, so of it—and it has some very good underwarc thrill. It's an out-of-the-ordinary picture, if you know what I mean. Nine reels.—P. G. Vaught, Va., theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THING TO WEAR: Jacqueline Logan—50%. Shot in a picture with a fine cast of performers, unusual photography and some clever camera angles, yet there's very little to it. No story. You keep hoping for something to happen and it never does. Just too bad. It could have been a knockout.—P. G. Vaught, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—January 23. Someone must have been asleep, or they would have given this young lady the lead in some picture way back there. The whole of our patrons say she is the greatest. Entirely she was born that way, because she fits in perfectly in "Show Girl." Talk about perp, and how! She has got it! Seven reels.—R. V. McLintock, Capitol theatre, Newport, Ark.—General patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—25%. Played this in below zero weather or would have had better crowd. Barthelmess did some very nice acting in this, and Betty Compson and Loretta Young also did very good work.—William R. Boushn, The Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—24%. This is one of the best pictures he has made a long while. Pleased 100 per cent. A great favorite of the action-loving crowd. First National has them all. Would have done better, but bad weather kept them at home.—Mrs. J. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—January 24. This is sure to please anywhere. Our patrons liked it very much. Even asked us to get another soon. The story is there and so is Dick. You can't go wrong on this one. Seven reels.—R. V. McLintock, Capitol theatre, Newport, Ark.—General patronage.

WATERFRONT: Mackall-Mulhall—75%. From my own estimation, these two stars are the best on the screen tonight, and from comment I think the people like them. If these stars have a bad story, they can go about it and put it across in such a manner that they can never be knocked. Many of our patrons call it a knockout.—William R. Boushn, The Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

THE WHIP: Dorothy Mackall—12%. January 24. As the special we bought it for, rotten. As a profits picture, just fair. So watch your admission price. Seven reels.—Weber & Haas, LaCroce theatre, LaCroce, Kan.—General patronage.

THE WARE CASE: Special cast—60%. January 15-16. This story was not so bad, but it was a failure for me. If this is a sample of a foreign made film, no wonder they want to see good U. S. films over there. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Anoka, Minn.—General patronage.

SYNTHETIC SIN: Colleen Moore—Another good picture that gave satisfaction, but I think Colleen Moore is the only actress in pictures that could make a satisfactory entertainment out of this story. Her work was great and she had a good cast. The picture gave general satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greensville, Mich.—General patronage.

IGHT WATCH: Billie Dove—75%. Billie Dove is undoubtedly the most beautiful woman on the screen. Admired by both men and women. Six reels.—Mrs. H. D. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME:

CONTEST ENDS MARCH 1

I t has been decided to close the "My Favorite Players" contest March 1. By that time the voting will have been conducted for a couple of months. Interest is now at its height, so a short time more is allowed those who haven't yet cast their votes. And all eligible to vote—exhibitors (not employees) and the members of their immediate families—are urged to name their favorites without delay. Ballots received after March 1 will not be counted.

Miss Boe seems to have settled down pretty certainly in first place among the feminine players, but it is not improbable that a close race is still left for second place between Joan Crawford, Colleen Moore and Billie Dove. Cheney still leads the male players, but not by a big margin. Richard Dix and William Haines, who are tied for second place, are on his heels, with several others close behind them.

The standings thus far are presented in the adjoining column.

Richard Barthelmess—January 17. A very good picture from ancient ruins—M. K. Wiess, Star theatre, Villa Grove, III.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—44% January 20. This is the true Colleen Moore just will not click at the box office for, but every one was pleased with her work in this. Perhaps she will sell all her necks soon enough. Seven reels—Weber & Huas, LaCoose the-atre—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—January 29-21-22. A very good picture, but had been played all around my immediate territory, so I did not do much on it. Eleven reels—M. K. Wiess, Star theatre, Villa Grove, III.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—93% January 22. Play it but be careful how much you pay to see it. Here's how it is. It will stand a rise in admission, but for me, F. N. got a good raise and shut off back. I think it is Colleen's best, and it has plenty of action and comedy to please all classes—J. C. Ligons, Glendale theatre.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—January 18-19. This is really a special. Fine music will furnish special “Lilac Time” color slides, no charge, and there is one Victor record which will sing exactly with them. Makes a fine combination. The deluxe trailer is a dandy also. Had zero weather both nights, but pulled a good crowd. Eleven reels—John Cooper, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—In my opinion, one of the best pictures ever made by Colleen or anyone else, and I will please practically all classes of people, both young and old. I started to decide on it, as I had a terrible battle of snow and ice, but the picture is one of the year's ten best. Step on B. Nine reels—P. G. Vaucan, Sun theatre—General patronage.

THE NOOZE: Richard Barthelmess—Good, strong dramas. Death march footage is too long, and ending was somewhat chopped off—George E. Fule. The Playhouse theatre, Fairbanks, Al.—Small town patronage.

BLOODFORD: Special cast—January 22-23. This was a very pleasing one of its kind, and its kind does not go badly here. However, I am not giving any stars except the cast, so bad recently that it doesn't mean anything. After all it was made for the better because it was a killing on this, it is no sign the other fellow could.-H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

gram subjects from Fox this season. O'Brien and Lewis Moore are at their best, and the cast work is splendid. The one, and the result is splendid entertainment. It tells the story of a young policeman who finally runs to ground a gang of thieves who have finally convinced the courts of their innocence. Must feature all the time, and make a hit here—Fred H. Weber, Palace, Glendale, Ark.—Plenty patronage.

FIRE AND PEP: Special cast—Very lively tale of a boy's military college, excellently directed and well executed. A hit with the kids, and interesting, but also leaves, without pampering, the value of courage in facing disappointments. Adults as well as juveniles raised this number as being a nice slice of movie entertainment. Worth playing anywhere that people like good stories of college life. Six reels—H. H. Hoadbery, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

WIN THAT GIRL: Special cast—Very very commonly advertised. Will give us a good picture. “High School Hero,” and then get more money for one like this on the plea that it would be a better picture. They razzed this one and walked out on it—L. M. Jones, Arcadia theatre, Vandersprin.

THE RIVER PIRATE: Victor McLaglen—Good picture, business only fair. Fox does not advertise hard enough to take full advantage of picture. Writer was sick, so did not see it, but all of them said it was fine. Rainy weather ruined us for making money. Ten reels—J. C. Ligons, Glendale theatre, Glendale, Ark.—General patronage.

ROSEMARY: Special cast—It is a melodrama of jazz-mad moral and fairly good picture with a good all cast star and it ends with a good lesson for both fathers and daughters. Dime theatre, Durant, Miss.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast—This is one of our best pictures of the season. It was not advertised and we

Boosted in Vote

The stock of Dolores Del Rio changed from "common" to "preferred" in the favorite player contest. The United Artists player was in eighteenth position in the list, with only two markers, when her votes suddenly became eight and her location in the standing seventh.

SOFT LIVING: Madame Bellamy—Very good program picture. Johnny Mack Brown and Miss Bellamy are fine. Six reels—Samuel Jackson, Jackson's picture, Florence, Ala.—Small town patronage.

FAZIL: Special cast—January 1. This was a good picture. Well made and liked by the few that turned out, but I failed absolutely to get them in. Should do well in three places. Seven reels—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

FAZIL: Special cast—A Fox special with the main title misspelled. It should be spelled "Fazile." It's an elaborate, well produced "shoek" picture that didn't do any business. However, the weather was very cold. The ending kills the picture for most people. P. G. Vaucan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

MOTHER MACHREE: Special cast—January 24-25
This is a good one and pleased my patrons. I think I should have more of these fast-frothing pictures. Stahl. I can't go wrong on these clean ones. When Victor McLaglen steps out with that military stride of his when he takes these things looks good. We lost a box office attraction in McNamara's death, and when I saw him in this I again wondered if we will ever see another like him—so good. H. B. THE FLYING FLEET: Ramon Novarro—12% January 27. Brother, here is a bellawa good picture. When this picture has made a little advance in admission. Not only a very interesting and entertaining picture, with a good story, but there is going to be a lot of money in the younger set who are interested in aviation. If you want to class up your patrons, be sure to get it. Ramon is bigger than Anna Page doesn't attract any-tall from the picture, and Elsh Graver's performance is very good. A trifle long and just a little dark for us, but the print was practically perfect, and the picture held the interest of the audience. Ramon! Eleven reels—Wolfe & Williams, Serendip-

THE FLYING FLEET: Ramon Novarro—90% January 22-11. If you ever had a special, here is one. Do not lose. Very good back of this one— it will please all classes. Fine special cast. A story of naval aviation school. Good comedy and a lot of extra fine flying. Makes planes in this one that you can count. It ends with a flight to Honolulu and the big ship falls in the ocean. Thrills from start to finish. A mighty nice number. Eleven reels—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Anamosa, Ia.—General patronage.

A pretty fair program picture with a surprise in it. It is disappointing however as the Sun chain does not marry Eddie Nussent rather than Cody yet at the same time, that's unusual—only on experts a youth to marry youth, and there was not a discrepancy between Sue and Cody in age.—H. Show People: Special cast—March 19-20. A good picture, but can't say title is a good feature. Made a hit, however, as H. A. Nussent does in his regular program. Should be a box drawing card in larger cities, as there is nothing in the matter with this picture. Many will like it and it will do well with us. Would class this as a very good programme offering. Keep a special take to it on a picture is an old chestnut. Nine reels—William A. Clark, Garden theatre, Canton, Ill.—General patronage.

Joan Crawford is one of the best stars we ever played here, and especially in this particular picture, no pat naturally gets everyone's eye. Also the applause. Next to Clara Bow, she is leading the feminine line. Nine reels.—R. V. McFarlin, Capitol theatre, Newport, Ark.—General patronage.

WEDF OF ZANZIBAR: Lon Chaney—January 12. Referring to pictures, we might add, "Nothing new in this story." Five nothing. Green, Clark. Seven reels. This S. on a will Fair C. Tim will one Saturday good game. (Referring here, January 21.)

General patronage.

THE BUSH RANGER: Tim McCoy—1905. January 19. A good strip, but the photography was not too good, but the picture in the world is a total loss if the photography is below. Pathe-MQM, never been in a Saturday night show for us. We've had this trouble before from M.G.M, but lately they have been sending us good bright pictures. We prefer this one to the Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

THE BUSH RANGER: Tim McCoy—3PM. January 24. With an average program, but the photography was so dark and dim we could hardly see the picture. We certainly don't think the photography is any better. And yet, a picture we would like to see in this theatre. Pat a mixture of Ailer and Henry, print as dark as it could be, and you have the Wotta life! We're not kidding when we say that the name McCoy keeps people away, because they tell us it is no good. It is a good picture if you can read it. If only half as dark. Seven reels.—Wolfe & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patrons.

LADY OF CHANCE: Norma Shearer—69%. January 12-14. Way above the average program picture. Every one seemed to like it. Seven reels.—O. A. Halstead, Cosy theatre, Ducheese, Utah.—General patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Flash—January 2. Sure a good picture. Flash, the police dog, was discovered in this picture. We believe it to be his laurels. Play it. Crook drama, plenty of action. Six reels.—Mrs. R. R. Record, Palace theatre, Cam-

CIRCUS BOOKIES: Dante-Arthur—Three two boys got off some good laughs. Seven reels.—J. C. Lind, Screenland theatre, Glenwood, Ark.—General patronage.

BILLY BUSTER: Harry Carey—Played this one Saturday night with two reels of comedy, "Taxi Beauty." Well, it is all right that is, it will do. —William Odom & Sons, Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.—General patronage.

THE WEDDING MARCH: Special cast—January 7s. This would have been a good picture had the title been a little more suitable. Nine reels. —I. H. Dietz, Sun theatre, Sarasota, Neb.—Small town patrons.

THE WEDDING MARCH: Erich von Stroheim—1929. The worst we have played. We have never thought it was as bad on any 35 or 59 cent picture. The few that came walked out. The balance that re-

NELIGH, NEBRASKA, February 3, 1929.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Within the past week the truth has been brought home to us very forcibly as to the reason for the growing indifference of the public toward motion pictures. We have discussed this matter with hundreds of patrons, especially in the smaller communities, and the commonly accepted reasons assigned for the lack of attendance at theatres, are the radio, school entertainments, whistle parties, clubs, basketball, elections, epidemics, etc., all of which probably have a certain competition but do not constitute REASONS.

We can learn a lot from books and magazines, but the school in the world is the school of experience, and knowledge gained from that school is deep-seated and lasting.

It has been our contention that the real reason for the growing lack of interest in picture entertainment is one thing: i.e., too much poor entertainment, and we are going to cite a few concrete examples in support of this contention.

It has been our experience, as we have traveled over the country, that whenever a theatre offered meritorious entertainment, as a rule, there was no complaint of a lack of patronage, regardless of various kinds of opposition. Last Wednesday night the Moon theatre of this place finished a three-day run in a two-act vaudeville. The play was written by Anne Nichols and put into it realism and a human touch that was refreshing.

The picture contained a few sills, a few tears and a lot of laughs and was devoid of sex situations and bawdy scenes, and the director followed closely the author's idea of sane and sensible entertainment.

The picture was directed with ability and it contained a cast seldom seen. The audience went away delighted, and the patrons are still talking about it.

The picture was "A BIBEL'S IRISH ROSE," the theatre played "TAXI 13." A three-act comedy, Dick was a character or something in the French army and deserted to go to Paris to see his sweetheart. He was captured and court-martialed and condemned to die. They stood him up against a barn or something and just as the firing began he had ready to pull the trigger the scene was cut off and the next scene showed him looking through the window of his sweetheart's room. After that there was something like 3,000 feet of clinches and other inter-features for weak-minded people which went over our gourd. This picture failed to draw expenses, which was evidence conclusive of the truthfulness of old saying that a fool and his money is soon parted. But this audience didn't part with much. John McMaeley once said in Opie Reid's "Emmet Bon- lore," when after a hard fought political battle he had been elected justice of the peace, "Emmet they can't keep a good man down," and this leads us to remark that if they put Dic in two or more such insipid pictures he will not only be down but will be out as well.

Now, what do these examples teach, or do they teach us anything? This much the public has done, and this is that—when they want T-bone steak, you can't feed em calf stew and make 'em like it.

We are wondering if there is only one Anne Nichols in this country, and we are also wondering if the director of "A BIBEL'S IRISH ROSE" is the only director who can make good pictures. There are thousands of patrons who could as well fill the same positions as the cast and material to work with and a free hand to work out a story as their judgment dictated, and our further guess is that there is too much New York interference with Holly wood pictures.

If we are going to cross what was used to be known as "The Great American Desert," we would sooner be guided by the judgment of the man who wrote "BEYOND THE MIS SISSIPPI" than to take directions from some chaise warmer down in New York who had only read the book.

We presume the foregoing will establish the conviction in your mind that we don't know a thing about it, and to save the introduction of testimony to prove it, we will admit it. And we will also admit that our experience hasn't taught us a thing, but if you can offer a better reason for the growing indifference toward picture entertainment, we will examine the evidence given above, there are 20,000 theatremen in this country who would be glad to hear from you, but they will make up their own minds. * * *

There are three very plausible reasons why we previously said that "THE SHOPWORN ANGEL" was a good picture. One reason was Gary Cooper, another reason was Nancy Carroll, and the third one, that Thomas O. Service said it was. We always like to agree with Tommy, for it's a source of great satisfaction to know that two such great minds run in the same channel. There are, however, when Tommy's judgment gets a little out of plumb and takes off through the underbrush over towards Wisconsin's, but we are not going to cite any specific case except to refer to his review of "THE WEDDING MARCH," wherein he stated that it was one of "the best pictures ever made." Thomas, you know, lives in Chicago where the best people patronize the art galleries (and some cellars), and we circulate among folks who live in the tall grass and patronize entertainment. Tommy calls "THE WEDDING MARCH" entertainment. We just haven't the heart to ask Thomas if his cellars is still in good working order—no, sir, we just haven't. It would be too personal a question.

We note by last week's issue of the world's greatest magazine (and you don’t need to be told that) that Tragsdorf of Neillsville has been down to New York. That's the general announcement of 1929. How a Wisconsin editor can be beyond our understanding. He didn’t ride the rods, for his wife was with him. He didn’t walk; he has corns and flat feet, so we would like to know how he got there.

Traganos is a consultant with the Embassy of Brazil and other dignitaries with the same indifference he would in talking about the beauties of the harvest moon with the hired girl on the back porch. He says they wanted to soak him 13 bucks for two bench seats to see Will Rogers. The fact is they saw him and someone told the ticket seller they could stand in the front of the audience. Fifteen cents. H. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

WINGS: Special cast—January 24-25. Splendid picture. Play it at any time if you can buy it right, but buy it if you can. The only way to know the all the money and I the grief—ioo, lool and had us all sewed up for a poor fellow. Fifteen cents. H. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

THE PATRIOT: Emil Jannings—December 4-5-6. A splendid picture. The audience was agog. The Sun theatre, Walthib, Neb.—General patronage.

THE KIT LEGION: Harold Landon—January 9. A little rough for Clara, but patrons were well pleased. I agreed with patrons that this one was good. The Sun theatre, Walthib, Neb.—General patronage.

THE MANHATTAN COCKTAIL: Special cast—January 13-14. The picture was good enough, but it wasn’t what we were promised. This was not the picture I have heard so much about. J. C. Kennedy, Enterprise theatre, Akron, la.—General patronage.

JULIUS AND JUDITH: Special cast—January 18. Very good comedy. The audience was enthusiastic. J. C. Kennedy, Enterprise theatre, Akron, la.—General patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—January 14-15. Best Clara Bow yet. It drew a good crowd. We were not the only ones to think so. Seb Dreben, one of the red commercial men, on "Winks" than any other picture I have ever seen. Ripped up sound apparatus for this and we didn’t give him a cent. The Sun theatre, Walthib, Neb.—General patronage.

FOOLS FOR LUCK: Special cast—January 22. Good comedy, but it isn’t worth more than program price. Paramount has several stars that they raise the price on, but they only draw program crowds and give only program satisfaction. Good print and photography. Six reads.—Robert K. Yancey, Brownfield, Me.—General patronage.

OUR CONQUERED: Cooper—Nag:—Now shown, here is a real picture. This lady star, Fay Wray, from now on will be my bet for all time to come. We received more real compliments on "The Man Before the Walls" and embraces better than any star screen player I ever looked at. Then turn and gaze on her audience without a blush, without excitement whatever. She is a natural picture star. Goodness knows, I would love to meet her myself... Lots of the young men ask me, "Is she married?" Let me know. Right reads.—Wallace Odum and Soto, Dixie theatre. Darby, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST COMMAND: Emil Jannings—January 15. Poor cast. The story, although logical, is sad and leaves a bad taste in their mouths. Otherwise, very good. Nine reads.—William E. Tragsdorf, Travels theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HAL A BRIDE: Esther Ralston—General picture that has W. R. C. remolded. It is a good picture and I am sorry Paramount will not make her full quota this year. S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Richard Dix—I do not consider the picture as good as last year’s production, but it is a good picture. S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN CHARACTERS: Face Brooke—50% good comments on this one, but too much flu. I wish more of my patrons could have seen it, as it was one of three what you could call pictures in January. The rest were duds.—William R. Bougn, The Sun theatre, Walthib, Neb.—General patronage.

WIFE SAVERS: Hatton Deery—Fair picture. This is the last of the team. And I am sorry they never drew extra business for me.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—January 22.

How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the "My Favorite Players" contest, with their respective choices for male and feminine players (in parentheses) and arranged by trades. The first voter's name is that of the exhibitor, the next that of his wife (unless when conditions are otherwise), and the rest those of the children. No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, although the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot was received.

Sun, Farrell Neb.—G. A. Dills (Laura La Plante, Reginald Owen); Mrs. G. A. Dills (Clara Bow, Clive Brook); Gilbert Dills (Glen Troy, Patty Ruth Miller); George Dills (Glen Troy, Patty Ruth Miller).

Aiken Mills, Bath, S. C.—R. J. Geier, owner, says he has too many favorites to vote. His family's votes follow: Mildred Gers (Billie Dove, Barry Norton); Doris Gers (Dorothy Costello, Richard Dix); Carolyn Grice (Greta Garbo, John Gilbert); Michelle Grice (Clara Bow, Conrad Nagel).

Gretna, La.—Bill E. Brener (Dorothy Costello, Conrad Nagel); Mrs. N. E. Frank (Jean Crawford, Richard Dix); Mrs. N. E. Frank (Jean Crawford, Richard Dix); Mrs. N. E. Frank (Jean Crawford, Richard Dix).

Sm. Forrest, Neb.—G. A. Dills (Clara Bow, Reginald Owen); Mrs. G. A. Dills (Clara Bow, Clive Brook); Gilbert Dills (Glen Troy, Patty Ruth Miller); George Dills (Glen Troy, Patty Ruth Miller).

Business good and also a real good picture. Seven reels—Ted Ruscio, Russell theatre, Matherville and Otis, Ill.—General patronage.

Sawdust Paradise: Esther Bollen—Story not good for a picture. Paramount is ruining Esther just as fast as it can. A company that should make some changes in department heads. Seven reels—William A. Clark, Garden theatre, Canton, Ill.—General patronage.

Wings: Special cast—108%. January 22-23. A wonderful, wonderful picture. In our opinion, and that of every theatre owner, it is the best picture that has ever been made. No one can say they have seen a picture that has been so good. It should make some changes in department heads. Business good and also a real good picture. Seven reels—William A. Clark, Garden theatre, Canton, Ill.—General patronage.

RKO Box

Hit of the Show: Special cast—Don't let any one tell you this is a special when you go up on it. A fair program picture. A tragedy which did not set good in our town. One woman said she had trouble enough without paying her money to see more. The same type as "Laugh, Clowns, Laugh."

The Lighter That Failed: Charlie Chase—Very, very funny. It has two reels of nothing. Two reels.—Samuel Jackson, Jackson’s theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—Small town patronage.

That New Max Davidson—Kids ate this up, but adults didn’t say whether they liked it or not.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

Should Married Men Go Home: Laurel-Hardy—Sometimes later when I get through laughing, I’ll tell you about this one. Two reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, La.—General patronage.

What Every Ice Man Knows: Max Davidson—Family comedies I’ve played in years. Made plenty of Davidson fans. Laughed the roof off. Last year’s joke, but this one is forgotten. Great. Two reels.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

Our Gang Comedies: Not nearly as good as they used to be. Most people are fed up on them.—George Fuller, The Playhouse theatre, Fairhope, Ala.—Small town patronage.

Two Tars: Laurel-Hardy.—If you have the flu and want to laugh it off, buy this set of comedies. They are the best we have ever run. Two reels.—R. V. McGinnish, Capitol theatre, Newport, Ark.—General patronage.

Two Tars: Laurel-Hardy—As we say elsewhere, if you want to hear them howl with glee, give ’em a dose of this, with United Artists’ “College.” Booked these two together, also ran a two-reel Universal Western, “Dead Game,” and a Paths News. It made two hours of fun. Three reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

 Paramount

Call Again: Edward Everett Horton—A very funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Green River, Utah.—General patronage.

Happy Heels: Billy Dooley—Comedy. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

Koko’s Magic: Cartoon. These do not go well with us. One reel.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Long Rose: Jack Duffy—Another good comedy from Jack Duffy. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Green River, Utah.—General patronage.

Nicked Nags: Kraty Katz—These Kraty Katz are well liked. One reel.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Should Scotchmen Marry: Jack Duffy—Fair enough. One reel.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Green River, Utah.—General patronage.

Walls Tell Tales: Funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Wedding Wows: Billy Dooley—This is good. Two reels.—G. A. Dills, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

Patie

Calling Hubby’s Bluff: This is a good one. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenfield, Mich.—General patronage.

Fiddleticks: Harry Langdon—Just a release. Two reels.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Forgotten Sweeties: Charlie Chase—Very good. Two reels.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

From Hand to Mouth: Harold Lloyd—Old release. Too out of date to please. Two reels.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theater, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

The Main Event: Vera Reynolds—January 17. A good picture, Drew well. Six reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Green River, Utah.—General patronage.

No Sale: The Smiths—Pate has some good comedies. Very good. Two reels.—Mrs. I. H. Dietz, Star theatre, Covington, Ga.—Small town patronage.

Sailors Beware: Laurel-Hardy—While this is not as good as the MGM Laurel-Hardy comedies, it’s a funny comedy. These birds are good any place you find them. Two reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.
BOARD UPHOLDS RICKARD TAX ON ILLEGAL SHIPMENT OF DEMPSEY FIGHT FILMS

Washington Bureau of the Herald-World

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Income taxes totaling $5,911 assessed against the late Tex Rickard, by the commission of internal revenue, were approved by the United States board of tax appeals yesterday as due the government on profits made through illegal distribution of the Dempsey-Carpentier prize-fight films in 1921. Rickard, with John Ringling, circus man, as a silent partner, divided net profits of $40,900, but failed to show them in his tax return, believing that his share and more might be required as a result of indictments then pending.

The internal revenue bureau assessed a tax on his share of the net, and added a 50 per cent penalty for fraud as a result of his failure to report. The tax commissioner ruled the fraud assessment on the ground there was no intent to defraud.

100 LEAVE U IN THREE DAYS AS PRODUCTION SLACKENS

Hollywood, Feb. 12.—Universal has lost more than 100 men in the last three days following a slackening of production. Important directors such as Edward Laemmle, director and nephew of President Carl Laemmle; Sigmund Mogoe, who has been with Universal more than 15 years; Victor Volderberg, casting director, and Nat Goldstone, have been placed on leave without pay.

Fox West Coast Theatres
Will Be Houses’ Name Now

(Special to the Herald-World)

Hollywood, Feb. 12.—The West Coast Theatres chain is about to take a new name. It has been agreed to change the title to Fox West Coast Theatres, in line with a rational movement of William Fox, who has acquired 400 theatres throughout the country, to identify them with his organization.

The West Coast organization is taking over operation of the Carlin Circle, with Fred Miller continuing as manager.

Consolidated Film Places Stock on $2 Yearly Basis

(Special to the Herald-World)

New York, Feb. 12.—Consolidated Film Industries Inc., New York and Hollywood, announced its common stock has been placed on a $2 annual dividend basis through declaration of an initial quarterly dividend of 50 cents on common stock. It is payable April 1 to stock of record March 15.

Louis Cohen Heads Realty Operations for Universal

Los Angeles, Feb. 12.—Louis Cohen, real estate expert, has resigned from Fox West Coast Theatres to accept a post that will make him head of the real estate operations of the Universal Pictures corporation.

SPECIAL EDITION: Ben King—About as goofy as anything could be, and a poor print brochure. One reel—Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—General patronage.

MISCELLANEOUS

BIG SHOT: Ruth Pallard—This is a good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.
SERVICE TALKS

INcorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

MORE ABOUT ME

By T. O. Service

I CONTINUE to grow in unpopularity—which is popularity by its maiden name—as witness the following from F. Stanley, Holton Amusement Company, Holton, Kansas, in Mr. Stanley's letter to my esteemed colleague, the editor of the "What the Picture Did For Me" department.

"I note your advice to Mrs. Grace Dinsmore, to read Service Talks by all means, as he's entertaining, but contrary to his opinion his comments don't mean much. I fully agree with you since I read his review on 'The Wedding March' in the January 26 issue of the HERALD-WORLD."

"T. O. calls Mr. Von Stroheim an artist. Well, he certainly is, for any man that can spend as much as they claim he did on this picture and yet even one critic to say it is entertainment is an artist all right, but that is not what the patrons or the small town exhibitors that have run it say he is.

"T. O. says, 'I don't care if I never see better entertainment.' But I hope I never have to run another one as poor entertainment, for I don't like to have people walk out and give me that nasty look. In this instance T. O. reminds me of the soldier that the whole army was out of step with but they sent him to the guard house for it.

"I will continue to read Service Talks because he is usually right as well as entertaining."

Now that, ladies and gentlemen, is what I call a pretty sentiment. Mr. Stanley didn't like "The Wedding March," as I did, and yet he refrain's from calling me names or accusing me of taking bribes. His line about the soldier out of step is no less than classic. And he concludes by saying I'm not merely entertaining but usually right. This is almost too much—for first is as much as anyone ought to hope for—but I thank him none the less.

Before leaving the subject, however, I must add a remark or two about "The Wedding March." Frankly, I don't know how much was spent on it or how much was reported spent. I don't even know what was left out of the completed print. That may be the reason that I liked it. At any rate, I speak only of the completed product and it is no more my business than it is the public's if Mr. Von Stroheim and his associates spent a million dollars or so on other things. If we must look at the expenditures within the trade, why not reflect, as no one seems to, that the millions of dollars expended on Mr. Von Stroheim's follies have brought the industry newspaper publicity worth many times the amount? Of course this is a bit hard on the people who do the spending, but that's another and a quite individual matter. I have not heard Paramount complaining.

"CAPTAIN LASH"

I REMEMBER no more entertaining picture than "A Girl in Every Port," wherein Victor McLaglen was a sturdy seaman with ideas about women—many women. And I expected to see something like it in "Captain Lash," which is almost identically billed. But it isn't there. The picture is good enough, I suppose, but it isn't better than "A Girl in Every Port," and I thought it should be. My error.

In "Captain Lash" Mr. McLaglen is again a seaman, a stoker to be exact, and a good one to be complete. He falls hard for a gal who uses him to smuggle jewels into Singapore and survives it. Most of the players are good and the settings, etc., are excellent. I suspect I liked "A Girl in Every Port" too well to like "Captain Lash" as well as I should. (I seem always to be getting caught in these traps of my own making and I don't wonder that Mr. Stanley and other good showmen who try to make sense of my paragraphs find it difficult. They don't mean a great deal more to me—and I write them.)

"THE DOCTOR'S SECRET"

If you've been in the business long while you will recall a Paramount picture called "Half An Hour." Elsie Ferguson was in it and I believe William De Mille made it. The Chicago print was brutally butchered by the censors but I have the impression that it was a good picture and did quite well in most cities.

Well, William De Mille made "The Doctor's Secret" and it is "Half An Hour" with the conversation retained and it has Ruth Chatterton in Miss Ferguson's role. It also has Robert Edeson, H. B. Warner and John Loder. And it just couldn't be bad with that cast (in fact it is excellent), but it plays the devil with my personal estimates of these players. To wit:

I have always considered Elsie Ferguson a better actress than Ruth Chatterton, but Miss Chatterton in this is perfect. I have always considered H. B. Warner a splendid actor, on stage or screen, but in this he gives me a severe attack of migraine (high-hat talk for headache). I have always considered Robert Edeson excellent and he is excellent in this. Mr. Loder is new to me and I think I'll like him better in fatter assignments; his chief business in this is to die.

But the thing that really puzzles me is the audience reaction to the picture. I saw it at the Chicago, which has as good a clientele for its 5,000-seat capacity as any theatre in the world, and many of the folks laughed at the wrong places. I suppose these were, of course, the wrong folks. What puzzles me is that people who sit and thrill and weep and so forth when Miss Chatterton emotes at the Studebaker or another stage playhouse giggle when she does the same thing at the Chicago. As I say, this puzzles me, wherefore I leave it to others to worry about. I think the condition will not long prevail.

"A WOMAN OF AFFAIRS"

MRS. SERVICE was ill during the year that Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat" was published and so a copy of it came into our home and eventually into my hands. (Maybe I should mention here that Mrs. Service recovered, although I doubt that "The Green Hat" had anything to do with it.) And so that is the novel I read in that year—was in 1927—and so, having read the book and having been informed that "A Woman of Affairs" is not "The Green Hat," I went to see the picture quite dismayed. Now, having seen it, I can report that "A Woman of Affairs" is not the "Green Hat" but I should become a near-beer enthusiast tomorrow if the near-brewers could come even half so near to the original.

Greta Garbo is the Diana of the picture—the Iris March of the book—and a complete company of equally good or better players does the rest of the work. Mr. Gilbert is among those present, although not so actively as usual, and I suppose that will make the ladies glad. Lest it have a similar effect upon the earnest showmen who say they care what I write on this page, I utter here the news that I have changed my opinion of Miss Garbo and now consider her an eminently capable actress. This ought to convince Mr. Stanley that he was entirely correct in his remark identifying me as "the soldier that the whole army was out of step with but they put him in the guard house for it."
HE R C A Photophone premier showing at the Belmont theatre February 5, attracted more than 75 exhibitors and representatives of theatres and circuits. The demonstration started at 11 o’clock and was over at about 1 o’clock. The pictures played on Photophone were “Joy Ride,” “Sure Shot Dicky,” “Circus Kid,” songs by Marion Harris and a dramatic talk by Bert Lytell.

Among the 75 present were Mort Singer, Samansky and Miller, A. Saperstein, Philip Greenwald, Aylesworth from the York theatre in Elmhurst, Ill., Paley of the Empire theatre, John C. Miller of the Woodstock theatre, Herb Washburn of R. K. O, and representatives from the following circuits and theatres:

The R C A Photophone Chicago office is covering 19 states. The local offices are located at 100 West Monroe Street.

W. T. Pierce of the Pierce theatre at Kewanee, Ill, and son were guests at the dinner given for Dr. Lee DeForest at the Stevens hotel February 7. A survey was taken of the Pierce theatre for installation of DeForest Phonofilm.

Dr. DeForest expressed his belief that colored pictures will be a bigger hit in sound than the present white and black. DeForest came to Chicago from Detroit. ** * * *

Mary Pickford’s Coquette girls were in town last week to take the ratlars en masse to Hollywood. A big luncheon was given for all newspaper representatives. There were about 72 present and “a great time was had by all.” W. Smith representative for Mary Pickford, arranged the affair, assisted by Langdon Burks of the United Artists theatre. Out of the 25 winners there were 11 present. The rest were to go to the Coast from their home towns. Those here were Catherine J. Roos, Buffalo; Victoria Spetland, New York City; Ruth Price, Youngstown, O.; Dessa Lacick, Pittsburgh; Virginia Beauchamp, Birmingham; Ruth Kifer, Grand Rapids; Elsa Murphy, Detroit; Miss Henn, New Orleans; Herta Zimmerman, Toledo; Mary Linnane, Boston; and Mary Philips, Chicago.

The girls left on a special train at 6 o’clock Saturday. M G M Newsreel cameramen shot the happy maidens and said shots were projected at the United Artists theatre this week. ** * *

Just as Max Fleshman was being conceded to have the most perfect mustache, he went and cut the thing off. Some fellows are always doing something like that.

If you will go into R K O’s office any time within the next two weeks and ask them what they are looking forward to, they will reply “Syncopation.” O. According to E. McAvoy, who is in town concerning the picture, the film will be ready for its Chicago premiere in a few weeks. Waring’s Pennsylvania are in the picture, with a bunch of other stage and screen stars. In making inquiries around the office this is what we hear: Sam Pickford has been more or less absent lately from this page, says that he will take his baby to hear it. Herb Washburn is all anticipatory smiles, whatever they are; and Walter Brown is actually losing a few pounds worrying about how he is going to get enough ink to sign contracts for it. C. L. Dickerson says that if you like Lindy, you’ll like “Syncopation,” so we guess the matter is definitely settled.

Phil Reisman, general sales manager for Pathe, was in town last week.

A congested street is Wasbash at 11th these days, and the reason is the attractive display on the “Godless Girl” at Pathe. Grab a look when you are in that vicinity and you won’t be disappointed.

The local office of the Pantages Reproducing corporation, located at 208 North Michigan Avenue, has H. J. Trinz as the local representative. L & T’s Paramount theatre has installed the device.

George Wilson, sales man for Universal, is suffering from three broken ribs he received in a fall a few weeks ago.

Master minds have their weak moments. And so it was that Jimmy Coston, who is rated highly as a poker player bowed to Grad Sears, manager of the First National exchange, in a little game last week. Jimmy, according to a tip, was given pointers on how to play the great American indoor sport but Grad now wears the medal as champion.

A successful tie-up was arranged by Jack Baker, exploiter of the Universal exchange, with the White City ballroom in sponsoring an “Oswald, the Lucky Rabbit” party. Two hundred and fifty 24-sheets were posted on elevated platforms a week before the party. At the White City ballroom each person received an Oswald pin. Girls dressed as Oswald were mistresses of ceremonies—and that’s what we call a title! ** * *

Last Thursday M G M moved its poster department to 845 South Wabash so as to make more room for the main office. Frank Ishmael and Max Schwartz were seen pushing a truck with a load of posters, which goes to show how much versatility a couple of good film salesmen can possess.

A. L. Selig, publicity director for Tiffany-Stahl, was in town last week regarding to George Jessel’s picture “Lucky Boy,” which opened at the United Artists theatre. While in town Selig pulled a publicity stunt that attracted quite a lot of attention at Dearborn and Randolph Streets.

Jack Baker took a trip this week to Danville to exploit “Uncle Tom’s Cabin,” which is playing the Palace theatre there.

—and Joe Lyon tells this one. Back in 1912, when Joe was operating a theatre in Evanston, he put on a vaudeville show called a talking picture. The projectionist flashed a button and the victrola on the stage would start up. Joe says that many a time a woman would be singing on the screen, and the “noise” from the victrola would be a dog larking.

Tom Mix, the noted cowboy, passed through Chicago last week, enroute to Detroit, where he was to appear in vaudeville.

** * *

DeForest Phonofilm have signed E. W. “Red” Johnson, who is known throughout the film industry, to cover the northern Illinois and Indiana territory. Johnson was formerly employed with the F R O exchange for 7 years, and more recently employed with Tiffany-Stahl exchange.

** * *

William L. Baron, vice-president in charge for R K O producing Radio pictures, passed through Chicago last Saturday on his way to the coast in interest of the following Radio Pictures: “My Boy,” “Hit The Deck,” “Gold Coast,” “Dance Hall,” “Upperton.” In addition to these the acquisition of “Rio Rita” will keep Le Baron busy there for some weeks.

** * *

A new 8-story building is planned to be erected by Warner Brothers on 1307-13 South Wabash Avenue in the near future. The building will have the offices of Warners, Vitaphone and First National.

Dr. Lee DeForest is making a round of the territories and of course Phonofilm is mentioned occasionally. Following an address at Detroit he came to Chicago February 10 to guard of honor at a dinner at the Stevens. (Herald-World photo.)

Taking Musician’s Job
(Special to the Herald-World)

DESMOINES, Feb. 12.—Sound picture devices are branded as “monsters that will deprive the musician of employment, stiffle art and substiti- tute machinery for the human being,” in the introduction to a series of three articles in a survey by “Singing and Playing,” musical magazine.
A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your “talkie” prints are on Eastman film — famous for uniformity — your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

Hollywood Turns Back to the Horse Opera

A Page of Movie Reviews by FREDERICK JAMES SMITH

In the following reviews the photoplays are rated by stars. One star preceding a review means fairly good; two stars, good; three stars, excellent; and four stars, extraordinary.

THE wonders of the newly created stop, look, and listen drama never will cease. The Fox Movietoners moved their synchronizing equipment out into the Utah hills and then to the Mohave Desert, producing an exciting melodrama played to the obbligato of braying mules and hoof beats on the mesa. This first big excursion of the audibles away from the home studios results in a superfilm you are going to hear a lot about—In Old Arizona.

Based on O. Henry's A Caballero's Way, In Old Arizona is a rich and racy thriller of the Southwest. A dashing bad man, known as the Cisco Kid, and a rough-riding cavalry sergeant fall within the wiles of a Mexican Jezbel. The trickster retribution provides the kick of the tale.

Bear in mind that all this is told in sound and dialogue—and sometimes with exceedingly rough and ready repartee. Probably it is told with too much gusto and tang for some parts of our land. The adobe siren, Tonia Maria, is a torrid young woman of general cussedness. The cavalry sergeant, Mickey Dunn, is a profane, lady-loving, and sure-shooting forerunner of the immortal Sergeant Quirt of What Price Glory. The bandit is a fanciful Don Juan of the Southwest, a singing, guitar-strumming, and romantic ancestor of the present effete gent who flash machine guns.

In Old Arizona tells a colorful melodramatic tale; it presents superb sweeps of arid desert and ornery mountain country; and its background of cracking stagecoaches and cracking whips is something new.

The film has a trio of fine performances. Warner Baxter is excellent as the gallant Cisco Kid who is as ready with a ballad as he is with a bullet. Edmund Lowe gives a corking performance of the sergeant from New York's Bowery. And a newcomer from the stage, Dorothy Burgess, sears her way into a tempestuous hit as the bad baby of Guadalupe.

In Old Arizona was started by Director Raoul Walsh, who was also to play the Cisco Kid, but a jackrabbit crashed through the windshield of his car, cutting him...

Set the Standard in Theatre Floor Coverings

WITH the Roxy and Fox Theatre achievements tucked under its belt, the shattering of records by Mohawk, in weaving rugs of record breaking dimensions, no longer assumes importance as a news item.

Rather does the big news feature lie in Mohawk's ability to meet any requirement of size and shape on its vast and almost human chenille looms—the facility with which its designers can prepare a pattern for any specified or original need and the efficiency of its weavers in producing the rug in a given time.

Mohawk, alone among rug and carpet manufacturers, produces every modern weave for theatre requirements: Chenille, Wilton, Brocade, Axminster and Velvet.

75% of the Nation's Largest Theatres Are Equipped With "American" Chairs

The country over... in 20 of America's largest cities... an official census discloses that 75% of all theatres are "American" equipped. And a roll call of the acknowledged large-scale exhibitors would show an even higher percentage. For it never has been disputed that the preeminent operators... those at the very top in the field are exclusive users of "American" chairs. These figures speak for themselves. They tell a story of built-in quality, beauty and comfort that theatre owners and managers are daily turning into a profit.

Illustrated above is Chair No. 6146, of which 2610 were installed in the Universal Theatre, Brooklyn, John Eberson, Architect. trust C-H experience

CUTLER-HAMMER Simplicity Dimmers have merited trust ever since electricity was first used in moving picture houses. Thus they are preferred by long established showmen...those who have seen less worthy products come and go.

C-H Simplicity Dimmers have earned and maintained this widespread preference because of mechanical and electrical excellence. Constantly improved to keep pace with modern demands for better, more beautiful lighting...C-H Simplicity Dimmers guarantee velvet-smooth control of lighting effects on all circuits. They are easily and economically installed in any theater whether it is still in the plan stage or already open—and are adaptable to any future need.

Consult your architect or electrician regarding C-H Simplicity Dimmers—but do not overlook writing for the informative booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

To those who seek the unusual in theatre decoration Bigelow-Hartford carpeting offers dramatic possibilities.

Whatever your decorative scheme may be, classical or modern, Bigelow-Hartford's skilled artists work out appropriate, exclusive designs of rich, colorful, exotic grandeur that perfectly interpret the spirit of the modern theatre. This is carpeting, too, that withstands hardest usage, for the quality is all that finest yarns and expert workmanship can make it, while underfoot it is soft and luxurious.

When you seek the distinctive in floor coverings, bring your problems to experts in color and design. The name of the nearest Bigelow-Hartford merchant specializing in contract work will be sent on request.

PALACE THEATRE, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit, Chicago, Ill. This new house is protected against sudden darkness by Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries.

SUDDEN DARKNESS can cost money

Guard against it as the Palace Theatre does with Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries

GOOD will is the lifeblood of your business. Protection for your patrons is your primary consideration. Endangering good will can cost money.

That is why so many up-to-date houses, such as the Palace in Chicago, guard against the risk of sudden darkness of the exit-lighting circuit with Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries.

With these on guard, there is no sudden darkness, no confusion, no possible panic—and no loss of good will. Current for the lights and projector can also be furnished by Exide Batteries... instantly and automatically. The show can continue for two hours if necessary. And the devices necessary to control and charge Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries are not complicated. Your present staff can readily care for them.

These batteries are available in sizes to suit your needs and budget. Why not consult an experienced Exide representative from one of our seventeen branches? This entails no obligation on your part. He will be glad to tell you about Exide Battery installations in other theatres and estimate for your own problem. Just write.

In the 1929 Film Daily Year Book, John Eberson advises exhibitors to reconstruct and re-equip houses to increase box office receipts. This practical advice, coming from such a capable and outstanding architect, applies to reseating as well as reconstruction.

Hundreds of exhibitors all over the country have selected Heywood-Wakefield theatre chairs for reseating because of their scientific construction, their beauty, and their unusual comfort. Pantages, Balaban & Katz, Publix and a host of others have used Heywood-Wakefield theatre chairs in reseating during 1928.

We can help you bring your house up-to-date in 1929 with a modern, comfortable theatre seat, designed from a box office angle. Just drop a line to the nearest Heywood-Wakefield sales office and ask for detailed information on the advantages of reseating.

For construction engineers, for manufacturers and distributors of equipment and for all others concerned with the theatre as a physical entity, there is waiting a chest of at least $300,151,312, which will be devoted to new buildings, remodeling of theatres now standing, new equipment, replacements and refurbishing.

This huge amount is based upon the annual survey of The Architectural Forum and upon the subsequent building projects which develop and are reported monthly in Better Theatres.

Building Activity to Continue on Large Scale in 1929

By C. STANLEY TAYLOR*

The Architectural Forum and its companion publications of the National Building Group have just completed what is the most detailed and exhaustive survey of potential building activity ever made in this country. If the deductions which have been drawn from a great array of dependable facts and figures are correct, it is quite probable that the year 1929 may prove to be the greatest of building construction years.

In order to explain the basis for some of the usual phases of this forecast, it may be desirable to describe briefly the investigating facilities and background which have been employed to develop the figures presented here.

For the past seven years The Architectural Forum has presented an exhaustive study of work under way in the architectural offices of the country for the ensuing year. The predictions which have been based upon this annual survey have proven to be unusually accurate in view of the ultimate contract figures developed.

This year new facilities were offered for research work because The Architectural Forum has recently been grouped with Building and Home Builder's Catalog, Heating and Lighting, Good Furniture and Cement—Mill of Quarry, to form the National Building Publications Group of National Trade Journals, Inc. This grouping of publications has presented the opportunity to establish greatly increased research work in the building industry. It has opened countless contacts with contractors, architects, engineers, speculative builders and building material dealers, in addition to the coverage of the architectural field. The present forecast is, therefore, based upon individual reports from the offices of 2,057 architects throughout the country, giving in detail the work now on their books or in definite contemplation for contract letting in 1929, plus the information derived through the general building field as gathered by other publications in this group. A total contact of this group includes well over 500,000 individuals and organizations who are directly interested in various phases of the building industry and a cross-section of whose opinions must have a bearing on future activity.

In view of the fact that this confidential information from architects has been gathered by the Forum for seven consecutive years, it is highly significant to realize that this carefully contemplated work indicated in this eighth annual survey is greater than ever before in the history of the industry. The accompanying tabulation shows in detail the amount of work estimated to be on the boards of architects for building in the year 1929. This work does not include public works and utilities, but covers only actual building construction as contemplated by various types of owners who make up the clientele of the architectural profession today. Added to this there have been developed figures covering the types of buildings which are not planned by architects but which in large measure are developed by contractors, engineers and speculative builders, as explained in detail in later paragraphs.

Thus we find that the first significant fact is the unusual amount of new construction reported by the architects of the country.

Conditions have so changed, not only in the building industry but in our entire commercial life, that the establishment of historical forecasts cannot be carried out in exactly the same manner as in previous years. The building industry can well be compared to the situation on the stock exchange. Bankers and brokers have given up attempts to forecast the speculative and investment movements of the public by applying measurements of the past, and the reason for this is that so many new elements have entered the picture that past performances are not sufficient.

Similarly we find that new elements have crystallized in the building industry—factors which must change the methods of anticipatory measurement. For instance, the financing of building projects has been placed upon a much better basis of public relationship. There are not only tremendous undertakings of individual building projects being carried out by bankers in our various cities but building operators have established securities of an investment nature which are even traded in on the stock exchanges of the country.

We find the year 1928 showing in the New York real estate market an actual securities exchange where real estate and building issues are actively traded, making a liquid market for such securities which for many years have carried the aspect of frozen or torpid investments. We find a tremendous number of municipal and state bond issues or other business of public financing being established for the carrying out of school, hospital and public building programs and for the development of airports, which in themselves promise to contribute mightily to the building volume of the future. This may be found in evidence also the consumption of a number of vast development projects and improvements which are opening up tremendous territories for active building construction. The subdivision builders of the residential field are undertaking housing projects almost beyond imagination in their scope. There is under way the most extensive modernizing and remodeling program ever known in the history of this country. This program is being deliberately developed by extensive educational work through building material manufacturers who realize the tremendous size of the potential new markets created. Money, while handled in a manner more intelligent than formerly, is more plentiful than ever before and so many new methods and sources of financing for the building field have been established that no constructive program has to seek very far for its banking facilities.

Coupled with all these factors we have an increasing urge toward building construction by the public whose pocketbook was never so fat. We have a national administration which is known to have a constructive attitude toward developments which involve building and in which there is definite confidence on the part of all elements of the business world.

We face several years of obvious prosperity and with no dark clouds threatening any disturbance of a program which promises more comfortable and efficient housing for all types of commercial, industrial and domestic activities.

In January, 1928, we advanced the theory that the several preceding years of great building activity did not represent a "boom period" but that the country and the building industry had arrived at a relatively new normal augmented by a growing population; the desire for better housing and better buildings for commerce and industry; and by the ability to pay for these facilities.

The actual contract record of 1928, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation, was approximately 5 per cent ahead of the total for

The type of design conceived to augment the photography in carrying us out of the work-a-day world, has found its way to Australia. These views are of the atmospheric Capitol in Sydney, which was built from pans by John Eberson of Chicago and New York. His theatre is also described in an article elsewhere in this issue.

The "Atmospheric" Motion Picture Theatre Is Introduced in Australia

Union Theatres, Inc., enteringprising and powerful circuit of the Antipodes, has imported from America John Eberson's ideas for new houses in Sydney and Melbourne, of which the Capitol in the former city is typical in its design.

It is significant, perhaps, that the Capitol theatre in Sydney, Australia, inspired a poem—and still more significant, perhaps, if the poem was called "The House of Tears." Dream theatres—architectural fictions of bright and airy splendor removed from reality—are what the so-called atmospheric theatres intend to be. They are an illustration of the philosophy—the artistic dogmatics, if you please—of their creator, John Eberson, architect of Chicago and New York. Eberson, designer of many American theatre houses, believes that the structure and environment should carry out the principal theme of the play, which he feels is to afford medium of escape from toil and everyday life.

The Capitol is one of three new atmospheric theatres built in Sydney and Melbourne Union Theatres, Ltd., a powerful Australian circuit. The other two are the State in Sydney, and the Capitol in Melbourne. The Capitol in Sydney is typical of them in design. Projecting these theatres, Stuart F. Doyle, managing director of the circuit, toured the United States investigating American styles and methods. He adopted the Eberson idea—his philosophy—and the atmospheric theatre was brought to Australia. The theatre is designed from sketches by Eberson whose associate architect in Sydney was Henry E. Faine.

The theatre seats 3,000. Its exterior design is rectangular and more classical than Mediterranean Renaissance, which is the motif of the interior. The interior design is thematically medieval Florentine. This theme receives its full emphasis in the auditorium, but the foyer, rest rooms and other chambers similarly imitate the styles and manners of Medici Italy. Works of art play an enormous part in the execution of the decorative scheme. The Capitol is something of a museum of period art besides a motion picture house.

At the left side of the staircase is a reproduction of the statue, "The Suppliant Boy," which is in the Berlin Museum. Opposite it is a figure of Venus—there are several different attitudes of Venus among the figures—and beyond it, statues of Danaid and Hector and Andromache with Infant. The Danaid is a copy of a Vatican work, while the latter two are from the Berlin Museum.

As one approaches the left dress circle, one comes upon a figure of an Amazon, and beyond it, a figure of the idealized Antinous, legendary youth and many-sided god of Roman decadence. The panorama of another world—unreadable to us if indeed it was ever real—continues. Here in the auditorium a faun holds up the Infant Bacchus, there is the Venus of Capua, in imitation. There is also an Augustus Caesar taken from an original now in Italy. Minerva, an Apollo Belvedere, the celebrated She-Wolf of Rome, a Diana of the Louvre, a Mercury—these names redolent of a day and life almost legendary, continue the effect of phantasy.

Opening into the auditorium on the left side is an elaborately grilled iron gate. Above it is mounted the shield of the noble "family" whose "garden" this is. At the entrance is a figure on a pedestal of a Venus Genix. This decorative feature is one of the most notable in the theatre. The auditorium presents in general the effect of a Florentine garden, enclosed in highly decorated walls worked out in art plastic, under which run stairs and against which, blending with the general design, are mounted the art figures. The ceiling imitates the clear vaulted blue of a Mediterranean sky.

The rest rooms depart somewhat from the Florentine motif in their furnishings. The women's suite on the mezzanine floor, for example, is done in the period of Louis XV of France, with a few pieces representing still other countries and periods. The main men's lounge, called the Continental Club room, is modern as to smoking utensils, with a touch of Spanish among the decorative accessories.

The State theatre, also in Sydney, is a section of a building comprising shops and offices. The building is 14 stories high and contains 130 shops which may be entered through an arcade. The entire structure will have cost, when it is ready early this year, about $5,000,000; it is said. The State seats 3,000.
1929—a Year of Theatre Construction or attention is directed to the national building forecast for 1929, which is published elsewhere in this issue of Better Theatres.

In this forecast, which is an annual one prepared by The Architectural Forum, the motion picture industry and kindred businesses may find ample cause for rejoicing. This forecast presages continued prosperity in the exhibition field and in those other branches which depend upon the prosperity of the theatre for steady and normal business growth.

The theatre ranks high as a source of revenue to those concerned with construction and equipment. In the forecast of The Architectural Forum a total of $163,559,000 will be spent in 1929 in theatre construction. This figure does not take into account the new projects which naturally develop during the course of the year, and generally bring the total near to the $300,000,000 mark.

"Better Theatres" Welcomes These New Advertisers

Arctic Nu-Air Corporation, Northwestern Terminal, Minneapolis, Minn.

A system of theatre ventilation, improved and up-to-date, is being announced by this corporation.

The product of this company is a fine lobby display, which they call "Hy-Lite."

Dayton Safety Ladder Company, 121 West Third Street, Cincinnati, O.

This firm says work around the theatre can be done more safely, faster and better with their safety ladders.

W. M. Dutton & Sons Company, 10th and Douglas streets, Omaha, Neb.

This company announces a sound reproducing device, called Q-Phone.

International Register Corporation, 21 South Throop street, Chicago, Ill.

This firm manufactures "Cutawl," a machine for making exterior displays and stage settings.

"A horn for every theatre purpose" is what the head of this firm says about their product.

LePilote Radio Laboratories, Union City, Ind.

A new non-synchronous sound reproducing device is the product of this firm.

Mcauley Manufacturing Company, 554 West Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

The new Peerless automatic reflecting art lamp is being announced by the foregoing.

The Mohawk Carpet Mills, 295 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Floor coverings for all theatre uses are being made by the above.

Moviephone Corporation, 724 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Both synchronous and non-synchronous sound reproducing devices are the product of this manufacturer.

Qualitone Corporation, 5360 Melrose avenue, Hollywood, Cal.

Qualitone is a new sound reproducing device being offered for theatre use by this firm.

Radio Receptor Company, Inc., 106 Seventh avenue, New York City.

Manufacturers of amplifiers for use with all sound reproducing devices.

Scoredisc Service Corporation, 701 Eighth avenue, Room 103, New York City.

This firm has developed a specialized cueing service for sound reproducing devices.

S & S Enterprises, Inc., 46 Church street, Boston, Mass.

Cine-Tone, a sound reproducing device is the product of this firm.

Synchronized Music Company, 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

This firm announces a complete cueing, record and sound device service for theatre owners.

United Cue Service, North Vernon, Ind.

A complete cueing and record service for non-synchronous sound devices is offered by this organization.

A Tokyo Film Palace from the Western World

It is to have 4,000 seats—be luxurious—modern—and, apparently, American

It was not long ago as time goes in the development of peoples and nations, that Pears made his vigorous visit to the shores of Nippon. The Japanese noted the hand of the Occident at their door. They wished to follow the honorable footsteps of their forefathers. But old Commerce pressed its rights to the es and minds of all peoples, and the tiny spire acquiesced in the inevitable. More than that, the Mikado and his counsellors seem to have said, “If we must meet other peoples, let us prepare to meet them with assurance that not all the advantage will be theirs.”

And so we have, after a relatively few years, the world power that is Japan today. Tokyo is a curious blend of the provincial past and the international present in Japan. Ancient customs are continued along streets fed by traffic copy and dominated by steel and concrete buildings. Thus far the monumental motion picture theatre, the huge dIXE "film palace" of the Western world, seems to have been slighted in the modernizing of Japan. But not for long. Tokyo is to have a theatre to be patterned after the famous United States theatres—this notion being from the Japanese promoters of the venture themselves.

The Tokyo theatre, an architect’s perspective of which is reproduced in conjunction with this brief article, is the first venture in the plans of the newly formed Nihon Eiga Kigyo Company, Ltd. This firm intends to erect first-run theatres of large capacities in the principal cities of Japan, as well as to handle the management of film enterprises, promote motion picture projects in the empire and distribute films. The concern is being financed by leading Tokyo bankers, and the capital of 2,500,000 yen has already been subscribed for by the promoters, which number no less than 92, also by others interested.

The site for the Tokyo theatre has already been secured in the center of the business and amusement section of the city. All the present capital will be invested in this initial house. The plans include provision for a special passage between the basement of the theatre and a subway station which is to be established. It is expected that the theatre will be completed early next year.

The first Tokyo theatre will seat 4,000. Two types of screens will be used, one for silent pictures, the other for sound films. The promoters point out that the site is particularly desirable because of the width of adjacent streets, which will permit the parking of “numerous” automobiles.

But perhaps it would be interesting to learn of this theatre “in which the twain shall meet,” from an official of the company.

“The theatre will have all the latest comforts obtainable and the improved equipment of the famous United States theatres. The latest improvements for heating, lighting, refrigeration and ventilation will be adopted and will be supplied by a famous American specialist in this line.

“One of the finest pipe organs of a United States make will also be imported to enjoy the Japanese audiences who never heard before this wonderful music, which surely will be one of the features and a new drawing power.

“The seats will be supplied directly from America. Half a million yen will be spent to obtain the maximum of comfort, but these features will surely increase in big proportion the annual box office receipts.

“For the first time in Japan, the theatre will give a two-and-a-half-hour or three-hour performance three times a day or week days and four times a day on Sundays [sic] and holidays.

THE new S-M 690 Amplifier embodies the concentrated experience of the Silver-Marshall engineering organization in building to the requirements of numerous manufacturers of synchronized and non-synchronized systems—as well as of hundreds of individual exhibitors. In the typical modern motion picture theatre of 600 to 2000 seats, it supplies a sufficient volume of tone to insure positive enjoyment to every patron in the house—and of a quality whose realism cannot be excelled at any price. Full fading control is provided on the panel, and a three-point switch for record, microphone, and radio input. The list price, without tubes, is only $245; the seven tubes required total $46.50 (list prices).

Or If You Don’t Need Quite So Much Power

Here is tone quality every bit as good as the 690—and at a cost which looks mighty attractive to the showman confronted with the problem of operating profitably a 1000-seat house.

Plenty of power for three or four dynamic speakers; microphone can be connected as easily as record pickup, or radio. The S-M 679 amplifier lists at $125.00 without tubes. The four tubes total $28.75.

A Speaker Built Up to the Quality of S-M Amplifiers

In the new S-M 850 and 851 dynamic speakers no effort has been spared to produce an instrument ideally suited for theatre use, where continuous heavy-duty service with the utmost reliability is an absolute requirement. Every S-M speaker has been built into the unequalled S-M 229 output transformer, with taps so that connections to the speaker can be instantly altered to match whatever tubes are used in the amplifier—and thus preserve unimpaired tone quality with one output tube (as in the S-M 678PD) or with two in push-pull (as in the S-M 690), or with tubes of other types.

A cluster of four to six or more S-M speakers, mounted on a suitable baffle, is the last word in sound equipment for 1000 to 2000 seat theatres.

For Big Houses

The largest theatre, or the largest auditorium or amusement park, can be equipped with S-M sound amplifying equipment sufficiently powerful for every requirement, and at a cost surprisingly low when compared with competitive equipment of comparable quality. Most theatres of seating capacity exceeding 2000 will require “PA” installations of the rack-and-panel type, each of which is individually designed to meet the exact requirements of the house. Descriptive literature and photos of S-M “PA” equipment sent on request.

It costs nothing to get the S-M recommendation on any sound installation. Our thoroughly experienced engineers will gladly discuss with you any sound problem. Representatives in all principal cities. Catalog on request.

SILVER-MARSHALL, Inc.
874 W. Jackson Blvd.
CHICAGO, U. S. A.
A GREAT many have asked me about the relative merits of the disc and the film-on-the-sound methods. I can see no good to be served by publishing my own opinions on such a matter. Most of you who are installing sound at all are putting in installations which will accommodate both the disc and the sound-on-film methods, and that will needless continue to be the practice at least or some while to come.

I might remark that projectionists, taken as a whole, still lack very greatly in the matter of doing perfect reproduction of either method. Also I receive a great many complaints concerning faults in equipment, in films, in records and other things for which the producer of each method is directly responsible. Doubtless these troubles will, in due time, be ironed out. I may say that I have already been able to secure the rectification of a few of them, but things are being gradually but surely improved.

It would seem as though the disc itself cannot be further improved, but certainly several other things in connection with that apparatus are not suitable to betterment. Needles, for example, are by no manner of means what they should be. In almost any lot there is sad lack of uniformity in several respects. The give-all-records-one-half-turn" instruction issued by the producer is "all wet." I have found some records which had to as many as four turns, it a dark screen was to be avoided. It varies from half-a-turn to four turns. In one case I know of, the projectionists were obliged to re-mark every record for Home Towners, and in this case one record required four full turns. Another required three-and-a-half turns. Yet the flat instruction is, if I remember rightly, "Half a turn for each record." I mention these two items because there are others.

As to the sound films—well, they too often reach the projectionist in a not-so-good state. They have their faults. Oil is one of their tangle-and-almost-all-down-blocks. Abuse in rewinding quickly set up trouble by scratcheting the sound band, which is very bad in its effects upon one system and, I think, not so bad on another.

Then, too, any error in development of positive prints makes for projection troubles—and so it goes. However, when we consider the short life of sound, one cannot but feel amazement at the progress already made toward perfection. The production, "Home Towners," was one example of almost absolute perfection in results when the projection itself was well done, and the theatre conditions as to horn settings, etc., were right. Also it was a living proof of the importance of perfect projection. Sound here is concerned.

I saw—and heard—"Home Towners" in the Park Plaza theatre in New York City, where projection was without appreciable fault, and the theatre conditions (which really are an integral part of projection) were as nearly perfect as the present equipment will permit. It was nothing less than amazing in its perfection. I saw the same production in another theatre where projection was what we term "not-so-good," and the horns were not well placed—at least the sound distribution was bad—and the difference was enlightening.

"Home Towners" was in the latter theatre, "just fair." It was nothing to rave over. When it was finished in the Park Plaza there was a burst of applause. When it was finished in the other theatre I heard maybe half a dozen claps, their hands a few times. I have been told "Home Towners" was also put on in a most excellent fashion in the Strand in New York City. It that is true, I compliment the Strand projection staff and manager.

Both projection staffs had exactly the same equipment in the two theatres—the Park Plaza and the one where "Home Towners" was not so good. Both theatres did NOT, however, have the same staff of projectionists. There is a REAL manager at the Park Plaza. He not only wants the projectionists to give high grade service, but also he demands that they do so. They have a projection room of generous dimensions. Both it and its equipment is in "apple pie order." You will not find the interior of the projector mechanism smeared with oil. The batteries are kept scrupulously clean. The records were tested and the "half turn" instructions checked up and corrected before the records were used for a show.

In the other theatre I cannot say the same. Things were not what they should have been in any of the points named—and in many others. In the Park Plaza, the projectionists have taken an interest in the auditorium sound distribution, and I'm telling you it is GOOD. In the other theatre, it was too high in the middle center; poor at the sides; punk under the balcony; and too high in its center.

Why am I telling you all this? To point out the fact that when you buy your discs, equipment, and all concerned combine to insist upon the very best possible in projection, they are all going to suffer for failure to do so. The silent picture producer and all concerned, suffered for years through their supine indifference to projection quality. It cost them many, many millions of dollars in lost business. Some of them are just now beginning to open their eyes to the truth of that statement which I have been making from time to time for twenty years. Had they awakened to its importance twenty years ago, conditions today would be vastly better, and millions would have flowed into theatre box offices where it remained in the pockets of those who stayed at home because the badly projected picture was not sufficiently attractive to get them out, except when some particularly attractive production came along.

But the results of projection faults with sound added will be multiplied. "Home Towners" is an example. Perfectly projected, it was a knockout—it was better to me than had the real actors been present. But—it was imperfectly projected, it was unconvincing. It failed to "click." It was just a fairly good show.
Announcing an Unprecedented Musical Cue Service

A Sensational Music Tie-up with Every Picture for use on Non-Synchronous machines for

ONLY $1.00 a WEEK

Here's a Sample—The First Half of our Musical Cue Sheet for Universal's super-special—"The Man Who Laughs."

You can readily see from the above that this is REAL service—devised by musical and dramatic experts from the greatest of all classic This is a complete service—including the number of each record, the exact time it to be played and the expression of each record.

With such a cue sheet the most dramatic and startling sound effects just the same as with the highest-priced synchronized equipment—can be reproduced at a mere fraction of the co;

And it can be done best with the Duotone Reproducing Outfit which is complete in every respect. For full particulars see opposite page.

A trial will convince you. Sell us your picture schedule for any week, but two weeks in advance—with $1.00—all we shall send you complete cue sheets for each picture.

Manufacturers of these Important Sound Accessories and Their Product

WHAT they said in Hollywood was one thing, what they say in the theatre may be quite another. It depends on what happens along the route of the theatre's sound equipment—and so very much on what happens toward the end of that route, in the speaker!

The rapid growth of sound has produced such a variety of horns and speakers that the prospective purchaser of sound equipment has a pretty wide choice. What he is after, of course, is the type of horn and speaker best suited to his theatre, and inasmuch as there are so many types of these accessories, he may not be completely informed. It is for this reason that "Better Theatres" presents the following descriptions of horns and speakers, as submitted by the manufacturers. The latter are also named, so that those interested may make specific inquiries directly to them.

And in subsequent issues other descriptions and sources of horns and speakers for theatres will be thus presented.

Kersten Radio Equipment Co.,
Kalamazoo, Mich.

Horns and speakers of 50 different types include a Large or Double Dynamic horn, model A2506; Four-Dynamic horn, model 4101; a small horn designed especially for small theatres, called model 301; a special large Jumbo model; and model B2907.

MODEL A2506—Measures five feet square and three feet long. Type for large theatre.

Can be suspended back of the screen in medium-sized theatres.

MODEL 4101—Carries four dynamic units. Measures in inches, 30x60x54.

MODEL 301—Bell has a diameter of 16 inches, and is 6½ inches deep. Made in three sizes, referred to as A, B and C.

JUMBO (senior)—Measures 45 inches square. Bell depth, 42 inches. Air column, 20 feet.

MODEL B2907—Measures 31½x33½ inches. Bell depth, 29 inches. Air column, 28 inches.

All models are built so that they can be used with the Dynamic or large-sized unit specially designed for large halls and for theatres.

Junior Demonstrator of The Utah Radio Products Company. This is a bell of 24 inches.

Wright-DeCoster, Inc.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Two models of horns are made specifically designed for theatre use. One has only a bottom flare, the other, an exponential flare has a flare on two sides. The former is called by the company more directional than the latter, carrying considerably farther. The other model, the company declares, covers a much greater space and is as good in reproduction for inside work as the horn with the smaller sides. The maker advises the use of the horn with the double flare when a solid screen is used and when it is possible to place the horns in the center of the stage a reasonable distance from the floor, either below or above the screen. When the bent screen is used, it may be necessary to use horns of both types so as to eliminate dead spots.

BOTTOM FLARE MODEL—Length of all, 51 inches. Length of horn, 39 inches. Width of opening at bell, 21 inches. Height of opening at bell, 21 inches. Bottom is cut from speaker to bell.

DOUBLE FLARE MODEL—Dimensions same as for model described above, with the exception that the width at the bell is 26 inches.

In both models the speaker chassis is closed in a sound-proof, weather-proof compartment.

This company also manufactures a floor foot baffle, which is used either in the front of the stage or just behind the screen.

Utah Radio Products Co.,
615 S. Michigan Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Models of speakers specially designed for theatre use are the junior and senior Demonstrators.

These models are equipped with Utah 1-volt, 60-cycle AC dynamic speaker unit, complete with Westinghouse rectifier and transformer. They also may be had for a 220-volt current. It is pointed out by the company that the combination in these models of special air column and dynamic speaker is designed to operate off of extreme volume, and thus is adapted to give perfect reproduction in large auditoriums.

Model B2907 horn which is also made by Kersten. Bell depth of horn is 29 inches.

Bottom Flare Model of the Wright-DeCoster horn. The length overall on this horn is 51 inches.

Your Sight-Sound Policy

A cue sheet for every picture you exhibit—a complete library of exactly the right accompaniment records to make your programs more entertaining.

The above is yours—complete—when you subscribe for the United Cue Service—made possible by the cooperative efforts of three great companies interested in the solution of the sight-sound problems of theaters which have not installed sound-synchronizing equipment. This new service solves your cuing problem completely.

It not only gives you a cue library of approximately 150 records—but it shows you how to cue your pictures in the most realistic manner without going outside of that group of records—a special cue sheet for every picture you show during the year.

Many of the records were played by one of America's greatest symphony orchestras from scores especially written to fit moving picture situations. Others available at slight additional cost, give you the incidental sounds you need—crashes, shrieks, trains, airplanes, etc.

The service was inaugurated and is endorsed by Cameo Music Service Corporation, makers of Thematic Music Cue Sheets; The Phototone Company, and the Gennett Record Division of the Starr Piano Company.

A whole year’s cuing—complete with thematic records—only $228.00. Less than year service, if desired.

I HAVE hesitated some while before attempting to explain the action of that intriguing little queer looking little doodad that is able to pick up your voice and set into action powers which will hurl it thousands upon thousands of miles through thin air, so that it may again be literally picked out of that same thin air and made intelligible.

Finally, however, I came to the conclusion that I might as well follow the Swede and "yump in," even though I might get all nicely drowned in the process. So, here we are, and I hope you can understand it, for I'm not altogether certain that I do myself. Oh boy, but those chaps who doped it all out have my respect in great big chunks!

Figure 1 represents a microphone circuit diagrammatically. Of course, there are a lot more frills to it, which I've not shown, but the main features are there and that's what you and I are concerned about.

A represents a microphone diaphragm, which is a metallic plate of suitable composition — if a metal disc only one-thousandth of an inch thick may be called a "plate." B is an air gap about three-thousandths of an inch wide or thick, and C is a metal plate of any convenient thickness. D is a 100-volt (about) storage battery and E is the amplifier giving the first stage of amplification.

And now, gentlemen, we run right smack into difficulties in the matter of description;

if I am to use non-technical, and therefore understandable terms. If any of you imagine this is an easy job, just sit right down and take it over. You're welcome, I say to you!

First let me say that no current flows in a microphone circuit in the usual, ordinary sense of that term, because it is not a direct circuit. Air gap B is the answer to that. I just the same here is an open circuit in which current does flow. Roll that around in your mental sawdust for a minute!

This is made possible by the peculiarities of the thing we call a condenser, which has the "capacity" to store up electrical energy which means both voltage and amperage. This is a day, when a condenser charges, it accumulates in its plates a voltage equal to that of the circuit to which it is attached. When that voltage is released (the condenser is discharged) that voltage has the ability to create amperage or current, and thus we have a condition in which current may be made to surge back and forth if the condenser is made to charge and discharge.

To explain this matter, let us revert to the examination of the action of our old friend water, which has served us so well on so many occasions in the supplying of understandable analogies for electrical action. In figure 2 we have piston A in a cylinder driven by wheel B and the connecting rod (Continued on page 35).

Kersten makes 50 types of successful Horns and Speakers . . . an excellent one for every possible Theatre use.

KERSTEN HORNS are known all over the world for their perfect acoustic properties, wide variety of uses, tone quality and long life. They are all manufactured under our own exclusive patents.

All Kersten Horns are made of a non-fibrous composition of our own creation. Holes can be bored and nails driven into them without injury—making it possible for users to attach them to any surface.

Another reason for Kersten sound superiority is that all horns are made of one piece which gives a particularly smooth inside surface so that sound waves come through without any obstruction giving perfect reproduction qualities.

Kersten Horns are constructed so that they can be used with the Dynamic or with the Kersten large size unit, which is designed for satisfactory sound reproduction in the largest theatres and halls.

For fifteen years we have specialized in this field. We maintain a completely equipped research and development department.

Write us for complete descriptive circular covering our entire line of more than 50 types, or tell us just what installations you are considering. We then can offer our recommendations for your proper requirements. We make a specialty of building horns to your specifications.

shown. We also have rubber diaphragm C, which is tightly stretched in a second cylinder. These cylinders are connected as shown, and filled, on both sides of piston A and diaphragm C, with water.

Examining this layout, it is readily understood that if driving wheel B is set into motion so that the piston is driven toward the left, then diaphragm C will be bowed as indicated by dotted lines, but when the crank has passed center the water will of necessity be set into motion in the opposite direction, the diaphragm will be relaxed until straight again, and then bowed in the other direction.

In other words, the water will be driven in opposite directions alternately, and if the length of the stroke of piston could by any means be constantly altered, the amount of water movement would be altered in concomitance therewith. Under this condition we would have a constant surge of water as long as piston A moved, though there would be no actual flow in the ordinary sense in which we use that term.

What's that? The same thing would occur were the rubber diaphragm removed? Certainly! That is very true, but if we could go a step further with water, as we can with electricity, and attach a second piston rod and crank wheel E, to our rubber diaphragm, we then could reverse the action, so that by turning wheel E the diaphragm C, the water, and the piston A would in turn move back and forth resulting in power being obtainable from wheel E. And that is, in effect, exactly what our kindred heart condenser enables us to do.

In the condenser we have an electrical condition very similar to that shown in figure 2. In fact we might almost say it is exactly similar. Air gap B, figure 1, substitutes electrically for rubber diaphragm C. Storage battery D impresses 100 (about) volts pressure upon the circuit. Air gap B serves to insulate diaphragm A from plate C so that no current at all flows between them. If therefore is what is termed an "open circuit," nor will it be closed when in operation. But any alteration in the width of air gap B causes an electrical unbalancing effect, and then there will follow a momentary flow or surge of current around the circuit, into one plate and out of the other.

And now comes the meat in this particular nut. The "capacity" of the condenser means that its plates will actually take up and store that current surge, which will be discharged again. But when the distance between the plates is again changed in the opposite direction. I then follow that if the distance is constantly altered, there will be continuous surges of current back and forth in the circuit, which flow will be in exact proportion to the change in plate separation.

Note: Remember, we are dealing in thousandths and fractions of thousandths of an inch. The two plates are separated by oil and air about three miles three-thousandths of an inch. If you were looking at a microphone diaphragm when it was picking up the most violent sound, you would see absolutely no movement at all. It would look to you as rigid then as it ever does, but the vibrations would be there—thousands of them per second, make you no mistake about that.

Examining what has been said we see that an alternating current will be set up in the microphone circuit if the plate distances can be continuously altered. Remembering that as the sound waves strike this one-thousandth-of-an-inch-thick microphone diaphragm, it is set into vibration, and that the amount of vibration, hence the amount of alteration of distance between plates A and C, figure 1, will be in exact proportion to the violence (volume) of the sound waves and that the rapidity of vibration will be exactly in accordance with their frequency, it seems to me the action is pretty clear.

Pew! There, gentlemen, that is as near as I can come to explaining the action of a microphone, and avoid the use of terms the non-technical man could not understand at all. But if any of you guys can make the matter any more clear, you have my entire, free and enthusiastic invitation to stand forth, grab a microphone, and get as busy as the shade of the Eternal Pink Toed Prophet, you most certainly have.

The Heart of Sound Reproduction

If you have or contemplate installing any electrical reproducing device for furnishing music as an accompaniment for motion pictures, you should be vitally interested in what amplifier is used.

The amplifier is the heart of any such equipment

Not only is quality of reproduction, and by “quality” we mean reproduction like the original, important, but freedom from breakdowns with the attendant interruption of programs is paramount.

Most manufacturers of such equipment use SAMSON “PAM” amplifiers, although they cost more, because back of each “PAM” amplifier is a manufacturing organization of 46 years’ experience, of which the last 30 years have been devoted to the design and manufacture of electrical sound transmitting and reproducing equipment. Theatre Managers who now own equipment (and there are hundreds of them) using “PAM” amplifiers will confirm these statements.

As an assurance of uninterrupted performances and quality of reproduction such that your patrons wish to come and listen again, be sure when you make your purchase that the name “PAM” and SAMSON appears on the amplifier.

For special amplifier problems of all kinds our Engineering laboratories are available and will apply to your particular requirements the results of varied amplifier experience.

Our illustrated bulletin MPW-1, descriptive of the different amplifiers we manufacture is yours for the asking reproduce sound with consistent precision and clarity!

Theatre owners know that quality of sound reproduction plays an important part in present-day success—and when quality is lacking they cater to a dwindling audience.

The Powerizer, manufactured by one of the oldest concerns specializing in power amplification, represents not only investments of large sums of money but also years of research by our engineers who have made power amplification of sound their life study.

If you are contemplating the installation of sound or if you are dissatisfied with your present equipment, it will pay you to get in touch with us. Our engineers are at your service and will be glad to advise you.

WATCH Your Volume

Is your sound only volume? Do patrons complain of headaches? This is what Joe Well, director of advertising and exploitation for Universal theatres, has asked the managers in his circuit. Apparently he asks these questions for good reason, for he has declared to the managers:

"There have been quite a number of complaints against sound pictures by patrons who claim they get headaches when seeing one. There have been other complaints that the talkies are not perfect—voices all sound the same—too many 'surface noises,' etc."

Well, are these complaints justified? And is there anything to do? They are and there is, believes Well, and he has told the managers this:

"Most of this fault-finding is justified. The trouble, however, in 90 per cent of the cases is not with the pictures themselves, nor is it with the equipment and reproduction. The real trouble can be laid to lack of proper supervision of the sound reproduction by the manager of the theatre."

"While the operator in the booth is responsible for the running of the picture, we want the manager to be responsible for the volume at which the picture is run. We want the manager to make a check at least twice during every performance and, preferably many more times than that, of the way his sound is filling the theatre."

"With an empty house you need less volume. With a packed house you need more. The poor reproduction in most theatres that have attended is due to an inclination to use too much volume. Human ears cannot stand the tremendous volume of sound being sent through the horn. Surface noises are amplified a million-fold. The dirt on the film or on the records almost blasts through the horn."

Headaches result. Complaints pour in.

"The remedy is to cut down on your volume so that the sound coming over will have a natural effect. You will find with less volume in most cases, that all your troubles are do away with. Then music comes over over voices sound natural, and each voice sound differently. Headache and 'noise' complaints disappear."

DUPLEX-O-PHONE

The feature of having six turn tables adds to the scope of the instrument. The four center turn tables are worked automatically—no operator being necessary, which feature alone is worth the price of the instrument. The instrument is also equipped with the two single turn tables, for cueing the picture.

On the DUPLEX-O-PHONE, you can play six different records within a second's notice, fading out one and bringing in the next tune instantaneously.

MASTER CONTROL

By this device, you can control the volume from the softest to the loudest tone. The DUPELEX-O-PHONE is also arranged to handle from one to four Dynamic Speakers, and each can be controlled individually from the other. This is a very important feature. By this control, the sound can be modulated to suit the show house. The instrument is equipped with a powerful amplifying unit, built to handle four speakers.

KINOTONE

The most complete synchronizer on the market. Two volume controls—two push buttons—master switches—nationally known parts. Kinotone has ample record space, allows full vision ahead, simple to operate. Installation is easy—only eight well marked connections to make. The tone quality of Kinotone is unsurpassed, say those who have heard it. We offer most for your money—our price is only $324.50.

Photophone's New Sound Studio Ready:

Takes in 2 Buildings

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—RCA Photophone soon will open a new sound picture studio just completed in line with the expanding problem announced by F. Buehler, executive vice president, and called the most complete studio in existence. The new studio, to be known as the Granner Studios of RCA Photophone, will occupy two buildings from 24th to 25th street, n. Lexinton.

In addition to the main stage, which is 160x170 feet long and 70 feet wide, there will be a stage about half as large for product of shorts. A "Little Theatre" will take place of the usual projection room. In center of the main stage a great swimming tank has been built. With the flooring lift and the water drained off, the huge pit formed will make a stage within a stage, allowing for unusual photographic and sound effects. Surrounded by the two stages in studios will be a series of individual dressing rooms and "mob" dressing rooms; score rooms, cutting rooms, property rooms a dark rooms, as well as executive and department offices.

All recording and projection equipment will be of an entirely mobile character. The pit has been adopted as having all recording apparatus in wheels, sound-proof booths.

A carpet of felt, three inches thick, every inch of the walls and ceiling.

A completely equipped synchronizing laboratory for applying sound effects to any vision picture will be available.

Talking Pictures Develop New Technique of Insulation would be well to pause in the recording of the many and rapid developments in the taking and exhibiting of sound pictures, and give credit to the men and the companies who are meeting the physical problems with construction of the building and the soundproof stages. To them is due much of the advancement made by the exhibitor who knows the problems met and conquered also appreciate the high place of the audience.

Sound insulation is taking on a new technique as a result of the supercritical case of synchronized picture production, as a writer in The American Contractor, St. Louis, reported wherever two units structure meet.

To article follows:

The talking movie opens a new and viable field in building construction in.

General contractors are tackling the hard problems in an endeavor to rapidly develop absolutely soundproof stage walls. In Northern California alone nearly 100 studios were completed simultaneously demanded soundproof structures. Among movie people the competition was keen, and to produce one production meant that no sound leak remain in a structure.

Buildings which had been considered soundproof in the ordinary sense of the word were found to be useless for the new use, and intensive research and experimentation became the order of the day. As structure, some are built of brick, some of steel, and some of concrete or steel with insulated sheathing. All worked in harmony with the principle of two separate sets of walls with air chambers between such walls being lined with layers of sound absorption and sound reflecting materials.

“Out of it all grew a more or less definite technique in the matter of sound insulation. The outer shell had to be covered with sound reflecting materials, while sound absorption materials applied to the inner shell afforded additional protection. Foundations had to be vibrationless, and joists, trusses, and roofs had to be insulated. Columns had to be insulated from foundation. In short, wherever two units of structure met insulation must be used.”

“Scofield-Twaits Company, general contractors of Los Angeles, built a number of soundproof stages for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. The size of these stages was 74 by 100 feet each, and the method used here was the covering of the two eight-inch concrete walls, separated by an air chamber, with acoustic plaster and many layers of balsam wool. This unit is comprised of two complete sets of walls with roofs, one within the other. I-beams braced with angle rods, then covered with metal lining, formed the structure.

“The Austin Company of California, general contractors, constructed the stage unit for the Metropolitan studio. This is considered one of the most successful units built and is comprised of two stages 76 feet, 106 feet, a monitor building 63 by 63 feet, and a recording building of the same dimensions.

“Practically the same construction used in walls is carried up over the roof. The Howe trusses supporting this heavily insulated roof are capable of carrying 6,000 pounds, handling the load from each panel point, in addition to the roof load. To avoid vibrations entering the building from the top, the roof is allowed to set on heavy felt saddles resting on the trusses, no bolts or nails being used. The doors are 18 feet high and have six layers of insulation material besides the heavy paneling.

“At the plant of the Universal Pictures, also constructed by the Austin Company, four inches of air space separated the inner wall from the exterior shell and no ties between. It was necessary to apply insulation to both sides of the inner walls. These inner walls were built, cut and pushed into place on skids. They were built simultaneously in sections to fit between twelve inch columns. The end sections also were built out and made to conform to the contour of roof, the purlins resting on the inner wall.

picture cue sheet, this expert works up his score and then delves into his library of records for the exact music to be played.

The result is that when an exhibitor receives the library of records which we will supply he will have a repertoire which will suffice for his needs. In cases where the picture record called for on the sheet is not in his library, it will be supplied by us without extra charge.

"All that is necessary is that the non-synchronous machine operator check from his Scoredisc before the run of the picture, picking out those records called for by number on his Scoredisc. Having arranged his records in order, the only requirement is that he follow the numerical order called for on the Scoredisc.

The arrangement of these discs includes cutouts into which is inserted the needle. These cutouts are of a size corresponding to the amount of time the particular portion of the record is to be played. At the start of the picture the operator places the Scoredisc over the regular record, places his needle in cutout No. 1, and follows through in his cutouts numbered consecutively from that point. In addition to the cutout and positioned needle, also is a description of the scene to which the selections are to be applied.

The cutouts for these records are supplied as part of the service and can be destroyed after the picture has been played. The question has been asked from several quarters. "Will not the Scoredisc be a card in the case of cardboard, not fray or the cutouts become jaggèd after having been used several times? I have used one for over 200 times and it still gives perfect reproduction each time a demonstration is made."

Production of Scoredisc is now under way and it is estimated that distribution can be started within six weeks to two months.

Sound Stage of a New Type Reported Devised For Bristolphone Corp.

(Special to Better Theatres)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—From the office of Charles R. Rogers, general manager of Bristolphone, comes the information that Fred E. Pelton, one of the industry's leading sound engineers, has recently associated with United Artists and First National, has designed a new type of sound-proof recording stage, embracing a new combination of acoustical principles for engineering an improved acoustical and ventilation. The design is for the new West Coast studios planned by the Consolidated Bristolphone Corporation.

This development, which provides for the installation of the Bristolphone recording apparatus and system, was worked out by Pelton in consultation with the John Manville Company and the Carrier Engineering Company.

The new studio will be laid out and the stages designed in such a way that, by the operating cost of recording is cut in half, it is said, and much greater freedom of activity permitted the recording stages.

The acoustic treatment is planned to be the finest yet devised. The problem of noiseless heating, ventilation and refrigeration has been solved, said by the pressure envelope system, developed by Pelton and the Carrier Engineering Company. This layout and design is not to be found in any present or former recording stage, but can be adapted for all recording, it is pointed out.

The Shock Absorber

The third and concluding article in a series on the underwriting of business hazards

By RAYMOND Q. DALTON

Former director of theatre construction and operation

I

The two previous articles on business "shock absorbers," I endeavored to make out the necessity for the accomplishment of a consequent tragic death of the partnership or corporation, and also its equally serious effect upon the surviving shareholders of a corporate enterprise. But to the deceiving as in the salvaging of a shrunken estate, the elimination of all these hazards with the proper kind of shock absorber can be applied as soon as it is gone, else, why go to the trouble of building up a substantial living estate, only to have it literally kicked out and mutilated beyond recognition the moment his watchful eyes are closed? When you have much less trouble and less effort, a much steadier accumulation properly protected with a "shock absorber assurance" would have more of his dollars intact and at par, and if further protected by a trust provision, would provide definitely, a larger and absolutely assured income for his dependents.

THE QUESTION OF TAXES ON INCOME AND INHERITANCE TAXES

The question of taxes on income and inheritance is a very technical and fully specialized one. It is a field which is constantly changing by statutes or by court decisions. For this reason, the average business man has been inclined to avoid the subject as long as possible with other matters to attend properly to the matter of safeguarding his income against liability for excessive taxes. Death taxes are divided into two main classes: 1st, the taxes levied by the state, known as "inheritance taxes," commonly levied by the federal government as "estate taxes." Some states also levy a tax similar to the federal estate tax in addition to their inheritance tax. Other states have no inheritance tax.

Both forms of death taxes are predicated upon the transfer of property. One might mention here that the stock purchase plan, so far explained, apply particularly in small partnerships and close corporations, as the forms of ownership are most common, and, while another form of corporate ownership wherein the stock is widely held will require a much different treatment, it will not be discussed in this series.

Once the shock absorber application, as applied to business enterprises, was fully explained in the previous articles, only sections as pertinent to a sole ownership and the estates of individuals will be discussed specifically.

Regarding the sole ownership of a business, it will generally be found that upon the death of the individual, the item of good will is absolutely irreparably lost, and as the cost of the capital asset to the one-man business, this living asset should be turned into dollars and cents as together with the other administered assets of the deceased, go to make for a substantial income in trust for his dependents who survive. This is done by covering the living value of his good will by a like amount of insurance, together with an additional amount to entirely cover all his outstanding obligations, and with sufficient insurance to meet all taxes levied at his death.

It may be mentioned here that estate and inheritance taxes are not alone responsible for the enormous losses sustained at administration of estates after death, for when an individual dies, his property interests must often be liquidated in order to meet not only the various taxes assessed but also all debts, notes and obligations of all kinds owed by the deceased, together with sufficient and necessary administration expenses.

A survey of estates probated in Cook county, Illinois, last year, a few of which are illustrated here, nicely testify to that fact.

The above list takes in 17 estates both small and large and it will be found that the average shrinkage was nearly 20 per cent.

This shrinkage is due to certain factors, many of which are beyond the control of the individual. Some of these, however, can be minimized by taking the proper steps during life and making provision for the absorption of cost of liquidation and transfer to heirs.

An estate needs protection against this shrinkage in the great many cases the business requires reserves against the depreciation of property and periods of depression. When an individual dies, his property interests must be liquidated. The foregoing charges must be met at once and paid in cash. When cash is available, a portion of the estate itself must be sold for its own carrying charges. The market may be unfavorable or unfavorable, but the sale must be made just the same.

As this is written, "the market for real estate in most sections is poorer than it has been in many years," National Service Publications states. The securities market too is uncertain. Unlisted securities, stock of closed corporation, partnership interests and other forms of property are a recognized market, of course, always an uncertain quantity. Any business man knows that where the seller knows that the buyer makes a large proportion of the income enjoyed during the owner's life.

So let me here, as in the previous articles, make these recommendations:

1st—Enlist the services of an expert in business and life underwriting who will provide the SHOCK ABSORBER of the proper type and proportions;

2nd—Engage a competent attorney to safeguard the legal angle;

3rd—Cooperate with a reliable trust company to complete the program.

Then, when you have accomplished this you have the peace of mind and the personal satisfaction of knowing you have provided against all contingencies, to be met at death, assured that the SHOCK ABSORBER will carry the business over the bumps on life's highway without damage or loss and that what you have so ably gathered together during your years of effort, will continue as full value and go on working for your dependents unhampere d just as you yourself are working for them now.

In ending this series on business and personal assurance, I might say there is much that might have been said on the subject but it is so extensive and involved, that it would require volumes to go into details, in fact, an entire volume could have been written on each of the many kinds of BUSINESS SHOCK ABSORBERS—

Volume 1—the Partnership Shock Absorber.

Volume 2—the Corporation Shock Absorber.

Volume 3—the Valuable Man Shock Absorber.

Volume 4—the Sole Ownership Shock Absorber.

Volume 5—the Individual Estate Shock Absorber.

Not a word as to the cost of the above. The term cost should not be applied over a long term of years, if at all, as the shock absorber contract becomes self-supporting beyond 7 to 13 years, depending upon its kind and class.

Perhaps one or more of the above models may be necessary to fit your particular needs, or, if any additional information is desired, it will be cheerfully given if addressed to EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD.

ONLY DeForest Device
Phonofilm, Is Warned

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—Reports received at the executive offices of General Talking Pictures Corporation, that salesmen other than those authorized by the company, or offering devices to exhibitors which are claimed to be DeForest Phonofilms, o manufactured under licenses of patents of Dr. Lee DeForest, has caused the sending of legal warning to all theatres in the country that instant prosecution will follow the use of any such apparatus without the express written license of General Talking Pictures.

The warning states that no other company or individual has any authority to contract for or deliver DeForest Phonofilm equipment or to grant licenses for its use on the use of any of the DeForest patents in connection with sound-on-film in the United States. "

Executives of General Talking Picture Corporation refused to discuss the detail of the claims, which were reported to be made by salesmen for other devices in various territories.

RCA Photophone Recording

By F. H. Richardson

This time I have decided to switch a bit and give you an account of how RCA Photophone recording is being done. And upon its films. I believe it will be both interesting and informative. True, it may be of no immediate benefit to the projectionist in his practice work, but just the same it will, I am quite sure, be welcomed.

The method of recording employed by RCA Photophone, Inc., is different from that used by Photophone. The resultant sound tracks of the two processes are different. RCA Photophone uses two films, and films of two different sorts of kinds, in two separate machines, one a standard motion picture camera such as is used for silent pictures, and one a sound recorder. The camera uses the usual negative stock film and, because of its finer grain, positive stock film is used in the sound recorder. It has been found that the final positive, resulting from this combination of negatives, is superior to film that has a negative density equal to it and has less grain noise than the two negatives are used.

The sound recorder is a device in which the motion picture, as has been said, is taken in the usual manner just as though it were a silent picture, insofar as has to do with the camera, except that the camera aperture is 125 of an inch as wide as the aperture of the silent picture camera. It is developed and finished exactly as though it were a sound film, as it had already been imaged; in fact, it is an optical negative, being a blank space 125 of an inch wide between the pictures and the sprocket holes on the right side of the film as it is threaded into the projector.

But that is not all the story. As the picture is being made, a device called a "sound recorder" is running in precise synchronism with the camera, and recording sound on a strip of standard width (35 mm.), this film being, as has already been intimated, positive instead of negative stock.

The sound recorder and camera are both equipped to operate at the same speed (90 feet per minute) because they are driven by synchronous motors, and, as you all know, two synchronous motors built to operate on a sin current frequency will run at exactly the same speed so long as they remain connected to current supply of the same frequency. Whatever possible variation in speed there may be will be caused by variation in frequency, and that, of course, will affect both parts exactly alike.

The two machines, the motion picture camera and the sound recorder, all hinged and ready for the director's "chairs," whereupon the switch will be thrown, which puts both into operation at precise times. Here is shown a part of the sound track as recorded by the RCA Photophone process, illustrating the "variable area" record of sound on film. The width of the illustration is many times the exact width of the sound track. Some of the sharper peaks extend almost across the entire width of the track, indicating a high percentage of modulation. By use of this type of sound track, development of the film is not critical as far density of the record is concerned, though holes are, so to speak, of the right side of the black section of the sound track.

The width of the illustration is many times the exact width of the sound track. Some of the sharper peaks extend almost across the entire width of the track, indicating a high percentage of modulation. By use of this type of sound track, development of the film is not critical as far density of the record is concerned, though holes are, so to speak, of the right side of the black section of the sound track.

RCA Photophone, Inc., employs a condenser microphone, described elsewhere in this issue, to transform the sound waves into electrical vibrations or waves. The exceedingly weak current emanating from the "microphone," representing the sound waves in electrical form, is first amplified through two stages, and then is carried forward to the main recorder amplifier.

Located on this amplifier is what is called a "mixing panel," by means of which circuits from several microphones may be combined, and where there may be more than one in use—just as there is. The current from the microphone or microphones first passes through the panel and thence passes directly to the main amplifier, where it receives four additional stages of amplification successively before being passed along to the loudspeakers.

How weak the original current induced by the microphone was you may guess when I tell you that it has now been amplified approximately one million times. Sounds incredible, true, but the technical chaps tell me it really is a fact. The current now is connected directly across the "oscillograph galvanometer" in the recorder.

And now let us take this darned "oscillograph" thing apart and see what makes it go! Anyhow, they've wished a fine bunch of names onto us poor, humble writer chaps. "Oscillograph!" Gosh! And more to come! The oscillograph galvanometer consists of a molybdenum (what did I just tell you?) wire loop, through which the amplified microphone current circulates. A small mirror is cemented to this loop and the loop is suspended in a magnetic field. A lamp very similar to the ordinary automobile headlamp provides illumination for making the photographic record on the film sound track. The light from this lamp passes through a small condensing lens and is focused upon the galvanometer mirror, by which it is reflected through a second condensing lens and focused upon a slit formed by the microscopic adjustment of two knife edges, so that an opening .002 inches high by .280 long is formed, on the opposite side of which we then have a light beam of the same dimensions.

This tiny beam is next passed through a small projection lens to the sound track of the film, being in the process optically reduced in dimensions until at the film it is only .0005 x .090 of an inch.

And now we are getting down to what the tairo player calls "cases." This tiny beam is so adjusted that when the current is "off," and the mirror therefore at rest, it covers exactly half the sound track.

However, when the current is switched on and the microphone is in action, the galvanometer molybdenum loop to which the mirror is cemented begins to do a shimmy—to vibrate, and those vibrations are in exact proportion to the electrical energy at or during any instant which same is governed by the vibrations of the microphone diaphragm, hence the loop and mirror vibrations are an exact duplication of the sound waves which created the current which—my gosh, I'm getting dizzy, thinking this out and writing it!

Well, anyhow what happens is that the light beam is made to move back and forth across the sound track of the film, and in so doing traces what amounts to a "graph" of the sound wave upon the film, the graph being the line of demarcation between the dark and light portions of the sound track after it has been developed.

When the sound film has been exposed it is developed until the record is opaque. That is one reason why two films are used in this system. The sound record after development is opaque, while the picture negative is developed separately to its proper density. In other words, the time of exposure must be different for the picture and the sound track.

When both the picture and sound track are finally finished they are placed in contact in the printer together with a regular positive stock film and the positive print is made.

Oh, yes, I nearly forgot. It is, of course, necessary that there be a mark by means of which the two may be threaded in the printer in correct relation to each other, else the sound would not be in synchronism. This mark may be photographically imprinted simultaneously both on sound and picture films in any one of several ways, but the usual one is to have a push button which the director can press at the beginning and at the end of each "shot," by means of which the edge of the film is exposed to a beam of light from a lamp provided for the purpose. Thus, of course, shows up as a black mark after development, and since the exposures are made by one push button, no error is possible, and in threading into the printer the two marks are placed in their proper relation, and that's that.

In R.C.A Phonophone the sound is advanced 14±5 inches ahead of the picture, which is standard.

There, gentlemen, that is how R.C.A Phonophone is recorded. If anything is not clear, you are at liberty to ask questions.

Oh, yes, you will want to know what molybdenum means. All right. Cmere, Mr. Webster. Let's see. Um um um—here it is: "Molybdenum—In chemistry, an element unusually found in molybdenum or in wolfinite, and obtained as a hard silver-white metal having a very-high fusing point."

EUROPE’S LARGEST AND MOST PALATIAL MOTION PICTURE THEATRES SHOW THEIR THE “SIMPLEX WAY” — AND HOW!

Special Exclusive Article to the “American Projectionist”

By PETER H. GRIFFITHS
British Representative to the “American Projectionist”
(Member Society of Motion Picture Engineers and Projection Advisory Council)

The opening of the “NEW EMPIRE” and the “REGAL” Theatres, London’s latest and luxurious “Super Cinemas” marks the advent of a new era in projection installations in Great Britain and the Continent.

The projection rooms of each of these theatres holds a battery of FOUR “SIMPLEX” projectors equipped with high intensity lamps.

The “NEW EMPIRE” Theatre is controlled by Loew’s, Inc., and will be their premier European house, since they have disposed of the “TIVOLI” to the P. C. T. Circuit. The “NEW EMPIRE” is modeled closely on the lines of Loew’s State, New York City, and Metropolitan, Boston, and is lavishly decorated and luxurious in its appointments.

The “REGAL” is privately owned, but in comparison there is little to choose between the two theatres, both are magnificent theatres and have been built and equipped at a huge cost which will set a standard and form an example for other exhibitors who contemplate new super to follow.

The erection of both houses commenced within a few weeks of each other and both have in turn set the pace. During the last three months of completion, work has been carried on in feverish haste in the race to be the first to open to the public. In spite of this rush nothing has been skimped and no expense spared in their efforts to out-do each other, especially with regard to the electrical, stage, and projection equipment.

The choice of “Simplex” projectors was the “EMPIRES” from the commencement and it was this predominating factor which led the “REGAL” management to ultimately choose “Simplex” also, for they realized that if this projection equipment was the choice of the “NEW EMPIRE” then it must be the best for nothing but the best was good enough for the Loew house; and so, the “REGAL” became “Simplexised” in spite of the fact that a few months before it had been stated that all British equipment was to be installed and used in every section of the theatre.

To shorten an otherwise long story and deal with the projection end of it, suffice to state the “NEW EMPIRE” opened first featuring “Tretaway, of the Wells,” “Sandy” McPherson at the console of the gigantic “WURLITZER”, Don Albert and his orchestra and “Movietone” items.

The “REGAL” opened two weeks later with the premier European presentation of “The Singing Fool” a la “Vitaphone” for which it is fully equipped. With regard to the projectors, whereas the “EMPIRE” houses Model “M” Simplex those installed at the “REGAL” are Model “A”.

The “EMPIRE” is equipped for “Movietone” presentations and the “REGAL” fully equipped for both “Movietone” and “Vitaphone” presentations.

The accompanying photograph shows the excellently equipped projection room of the “REGAL”. The battery of “Simplexes” are fitted with latest automatic high intensity lamps; two of the four those in foreground of photo are fitted with “Vitaphone” and “Movietone” apparatus. The photograph of the “REGAL” equipment should be of great interest to American projectionists in that it will give them an opportunity to compare high class British cinema installation work with their own.

The “NEW EMPIRE” and the “REGAL” projection room installations convincingly testify to the superiority of the “Simplex” projector in theatres where the demand is for perfect projection and performance of outstanding merit.

In theatres where nothing but the best is good enough, for silent picture projection or for sound film presentation “Simplex” are the choice of the discriminating exhibitor—in the U. S. A., in Canada and now in Great Britain.

And so two more “super” are added to the long list of London’s “Simplex” super shows, which include the “Piccadilly,” “Astoria,” “Tussard Rialto,” and “Broadway.”

mists that they visit the Park Plaza and inspect its projection room. It is an excellent sample of what a projection room should be. I would also recommend to the officers of Local Union No. 306, New York City Motion Picture Projectionists, IATSE and PMO that they visit this room and see practically ideal projection room conditions. Of course in this I am assured that Manager Lewis LaRocca will welcome such inspection.

One other point: I sat through the presentation of the Movietone news reel, and can testify to the fact that the sound projection was in keeping with the excellence of what had been seen in the projection room. I also noted that we should compliment manager LaRocca, who must be a theatre manager par excellence. It is a truth to say that everything about the Park Plaza was in keeping with what I saw in the projection room.

Air Mail Service

Those who are at great distance from New York and who wish to submit projection problems, sound or silent, to the editor, may do so with assurance of at least a fairly quick response, provided such queries be sent airmail, and a self-addressed envelope, stamped with a FIVE CENT STAMP, be enclosed.

Letters may be sent airmail from any post office in either the United States or Canada. Stamp your letter with five cents for the first ounce and ten cents for each additional ounce, mark it plainly “airmail” and drop it to any post office in Canada or these United States of America. Canadians may use Canadian stamps for sending, of course, but it is wise to inclose return postage in Canadian stamps. I suppose I’ll have to be the first in that.

If you are in a small town, your letter will be forwarded to the nearest airmail pickup office, which, of course, will take some while in the sections, but I think if you are located within more than 100 miles from New York the time will be shorter the regular mail time. Of course if you are on or quite near an airmail route, then the time will be even shorter.

Unquestionably the saving in time from the East Coast of Canada and this country will be measured in days. Time from Texas will be much quicker too.

Address your letter: F. H. Richardson, 319 Riverside Drive, New York City, N. Y. and don’t forget the stamped return envelope if you live in this country and want an airmail answer.

Remarkable Theatre and Installation

Recently my good friend M. D. O’Brien, assistant supervisor of projection for Loew’s, Inc., invited me to go with him out to Jamaica, Long Island, and visit the Valencia Theatre, concerning which I had heard considerable, all of it, as I thought, just plain thing. For how could Jamaica “rate” (as “good” puts it) any such theatre as they did to make me believe there was. Well, it was NOT “raving,” at all. The theatre was all it had been cracked up to be— at then a lot.

After backing traffic through a part of Manhattan, we crossed the Queensboro bridge, got the splendid new Queens boulevard—splendid complete stage equipment and a Board that is, I think, about the proverbial last word in such equipment. Very simple (when you know how) manipulations ten light

The Prometheus Organ Heater keeps the organ always “in tune” and free from damage due to excessive cold, dampness and sudden temperature changes. The heater requires no attention. It has automatic thermostat control and is easily installed by “plugging in” in an ordinary electric outlet. There are no exposed heating parts. Heater is made of cast iron throughout, aluminum finished, and occupies only 14½” x 4” of floor space. Send coupon for complete description.

The Prometheus Organ Heater is scientifically designed to deflect the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises, providing a constant, unvarying degree of temperature throughout the organ chamber.

An Important Announcement

We take pleasure in announcing to the theatre owners that we have made arrangements with the Electrical Research Products, Incorporated, the well known manufacturer and distributor of Vitaphone and Movietone Sound Equipment, whereby that organization will handle exclusively for us, the new Da-Lite Da-Tone X Sound Screen.

THE DA-LITE SCREEN CO.
922 West Monroe Street Chicago, Illinois
EXHIBITORS WILL SAVE THOUSANDS

For the first time, DA-LITE SCREENS are now available to the individual theatre owner direct from the manufacturer. This includes all types of metallic and white surfaces listed in our 1928 catalog. The quality is identically the same, Tear-proof and Seamless, up to 24 x 32.

FIFTY CENTS PER SQUARE FOOT

50 cents per square foot NOW, will buy exactly the same screen you have paid $1.50 for heretofore. What your screen shows makes your theatre what it is. At these prices there is absolutely no reason for dirty, cloudy, inferior screens. This tremendous saving takes the screen out of the luxury class. It no longer pays to recoat a screen. Get a new one that will permit you to cash in on your film rentals by showing them to best advantage.

Measure that old screen and tell us whether you are using. High intensity, Hi-Low, Reflector type, Straight arc, or Mazda, and we will furnish a surface to fit your requirements. Our catalog is yours for the asking.

commodating all speed indicator connecting is equipped to take care of the push-button and buzzer system from and to stage, orchestra, etc. This panel was designed by Assistant Supervisor O’Brien. It is one of his pet hobbies. He may justly feel a bit of pride in it.

The rewind room is fitted with the usual flanneled rewind shelves and two Kalamein storage shelves and an American film safe with a capacity of fifteen 2,000-foot reels. There is an additional sectional cabinet holding 10 additional 2,000-foot reels. There is a rewind rewinder, a Griswold splicing machine, duplex film measuring machine and, in fact, everything you would expect to find in a modern rewind room, including a small metal cage can with a foot operated lid to receive film reels. Incidentally, in the main projection room is another one to receive hot chen butter.

The ventilation system is very complete. There is a fresh air intake of ample area, two inlets, located near the ceiling. The air is pumped out by an exhaust fan, in addition to which a separate exhaust fan serves to ventilate all the lamphouses, which are connected to it by flexible metal piping six inches in diameter.

Over the spots a large hood is installed, with also is connected to the lamphouse exhaust fan. Dampers are provided. I was informed to criticize the installation of fresh air vents near the ceiling, but was assured by O’Brien that a near-the-floor position had been tried and found not only to set up drafts which interfered with the arcs, but also gave projectionists that most unpleasant thing, scold. I withdrew my objection.

In addition to the usual type of port drop shutter, on the outside of the front projection room wall are mounted heavy, hinged drop shutters, painted and decorated to form to the auditorium interior. These may be dropped individually over any port not in use.

The entire planning and installation of this remarkable projection suite was done under, and the maintenance is now under the direction of Loew’s, Inc., projection department, of which Lester Isaac is supervisor and M. D. O’Brien assistant.

I compliment Loew’s, Inc., upon the remarkably beautiful Valencia theatre. I compliment Lester Isaac, supervisor, and M. D. O’Brien, his able assistant, upon the excellence and completeness of the projection installation. I also congratulate Chief Projectionist Jones and his assistants upon the excellent projection I saw at the time of my visit. It is a far cry from the calico walled “booth,” with one spindle-legged projector with a barrel of boiling water serving for resistance, and the film running into a gummy sack or a basket, which constituted the projection “suite” and equipment just a few years ago, and the Valencia installation. I’ll say it is!

I feel I would not be doing justice did I close this article without a word of commendation and praise for the work Supervisor of Projection Lester Isaac has accomplished in the relatively short while he has held his present position. Out of pretty nearly nothing he has built up a department in which both himself and Loew’s, Inc., may justly feel pride. And mark you, that is no idle jumble of meaningless words either.

Isaac has more than proven himself to be the proverbial “right man in the right place.” I am told the Valencia projection installation cost about $18,000, only of which the fact is in itself mute evidence that Supervisor Isaac has “sold” projection to his employer. Even great corporations do not expend any such sum of money upon a single installation unless well convinced that it will pay to do so. Supervisor Isaac is an able, conscientious, hard-working official. May his tribe increase.

The editor has an occasional inquiry similar to the one just received from F. L. May, chief projectionist of one of the theatres operated by the Strand Amusement Company, Owensboro, Kentucky, which in part reads as follows: “I have read of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, what it is, does and stands for; I would really like to belong to it as an associate member, but it seems that

A necessary adjunct to application for membership is that the applicant be recommended by one or more active members. You as the only active member of that body with whom I have had correspondence, or whom I know or have even much more than heard of.

"My interest is of course in the transactions, since it does not seem likely I would ever be able to attend meetings. I understand the transactions are available to non members at a relatively nominal sum, but their purchase the better way, as compare with membership, in the long run."

I take the risk of offending Brother M. by publishing this, to the end that I may not only answer him, but through him answer many others who wish to know the same thing.

My own reaction to the associate membership is that there are such a membership men who may, for some reason or other, not be eligible to active membership (which same is properly closely guarded) may have affiliation with the body, and at the same time perform a duty by giving financial support to the highly beneficial work carried on by it.

I do not seem to have by me at the moment anything which sets forth the requirement for associate membership, but as I remember motion picture projectionists of experience, who are men of good character, are eligible to apply for membership of that grade which incidentally gives them all the right active members have except that of voting.

I personally can see no possible objection to admission of such men, provided they can furnish competent evidence that they are at least reasonably progressive projectionists. I see no possible objection to membership.

I therefore am willing to recommend fo associate membership any motion picture projectionist who can supply satisfactory evidence of three things, namely (a) That he has been employed in motion picture projection for a sufficient time to justify the assumption that he is an experienced projectionist; (b) that he is a progressive man of good character.

How may he do that? Well, I don't quite know myself, but would suppose a detailed statement of his employment—theaters is which he has worked as projectionist and approximate time in each—would satisfy the first requirement, while a list of the books he owns and the sources he has made use of in the study of the technique of projection, plus a satisfactory letter as to progressiveness, ability and character from his present employer, ought to satisfy the last all right.

And now as to the advisability of joining as associate member. It is quite true that the projectionist will gain immediate advantage through such a membership, except since only ambitious, progressive projectionists may hope to be admitted, such membership automatically provides, at least to some measure, a preferable rating, which I believe will gain it value as time goes on. Also he of course will receive the record of the transactions without cost, as they are provided to all members both active and associate.

Then, too, you will have the satisfaction of feeling and knowing that he is doing his part in giving both his financial and moral support to one of the very best, most valuable organizations in the entire industry, and such pride and satisfaction as comes from being affiliated, even though it be only in an associate capacity, with such a splendid body of men and engineers.

Whether that last is of worth to you depends upon how much value you place on such things. Were I again a working projectionist I am sure I would get ten dollars worth of satisfaction each year, merely in being able to hang a certificate of membership in such a body on the wall of my projection room.

Really, however, a member gets more than the worth of his money back in the transactions, or rather he will if he is the type of man worthy of membership in such a body.
There, gentlemen, that is all I can say in a matter, except that I have submitted foregoing to L. C. Porter, president, M. P. and E., and he has approved its publication.

Any projectionist who may desire to apply associate membership may send me for application blank, which I will be glad to forward to him. Also if he will supply satisfactory evidence to his experience, character and progressiveness, I will be glad to recommend him, and to secure other recommendations. Remember, however, that in this letter I owe a duty to the Society as well as you, therefore I cannot make recommendations unless you put me in position to be at least reasonably certain of my grounds.

Handsome Lobby Display FREE!

Don't waste valuable space in your lobby! Put it effectively to work by installing a HY-LITE Lobby Display.

You will want this lobby display because it is more than "just another display". Nobody can pass it without a second look. Your advance announcement is squarely in the middle of the display and brings patrons back to your theatre again and again. You get five hundred interchangeable letters, sixteen color screens and thirteen hand-lettered artistic running heads for this magnificent display. The central announcement is lighted in four colors, and flashes automatically on and off.

HY-LITE is a handsome display which we are installing free of charge in a limited number of select theatres. It is nine feet long by six feet high, and has about a dozen spaces of varying size for posting your advance shots.

The HY-LITE Lobby Display comes all set up. Just plug the wire into a socket and it is ready to operate. The frame is handsomely gilded, and the background for the advance shots is of grey, beautifully-patterned, washable Sanitas. The most beautiful lobby sign any theatre can get today.

All this is FREE to one representative theatre in each community. Endorsed by actual use in the theatres of Warner Brothers, Fox Film Company, and hundreds of other representative theatres the country over. A real business builder. Get full particulars by sending in the coupon TODAY.

$17 a day, I believe it is—yet he is so totally IGNORANT (it is the only term that fits the condition) of a highly important part of his work that he does not know that any alteration in loop size alters the amount of film measured in inches, between the two apertures, and that any such alteration throws the sound out of synchronism with the action in exact proportion to the amount of fault. Gentlemen, I am really sorry, very sorry to have to write thus, but when a union man deliberately fails or refuses to equip himself with the knowledge, necessary to do work creditable to the union he represents, and so doing, works injury to every one concerned in the making of the productions he is intrusted with to place before audiences, and to the theatre in which he works and to the audiences which gather there, I really think it is a DUTY to set the matter forth where all who run may read. It would be plenty bad enough were the man merely an individual. But when men disgrace a reputable organization (union) by such utterly inexcusable lack of knowledge and such punk work, it is time to call a halt. I believe it is but reasonable to presume that when any union supplies men to project sound it should, and in common fairness must, supply only men who have at least a fair workable understanding of the elements of sound projection. The knowledge has been made available, hence there is no good reason why projectionists cannot equip themselves with it if they wish. If they don't, then surely they have no right to expect to be placed in sound theatres, or to be permitted to handle sound equipment until they do.

Of these two new West Coast houses, the Riverside is highly interesting for its Hispano-Californian charm, while the North Park is specially planned for synchronized pictures.

By MAURICE HENLE

In January West Coast Theatres opened two new houses, each of which presents features of special interest in theatre construction and design. The North Park in San Diego is specifically designed and constructed, from the ground up, for the showing of sound, synchronized and talking pictures. The Riverside in Riverside, Cal., is one of the most charming of the picturesque structures inspired by Hispano-Californian culture.

The North Park theatre, specially created for the new voice-and-vision product has extraordinary acoustic properties in its auditorium, and the results have more than repaid the builders for the painstaking care with which this "talkie-built" theatre was erected.

Erected from plans by Quayle Brothers, prominent San Diego architects, the new North Park is housed in a modern two-story theatre and business block in the heart of the rapidly-developing suburban district. B. O. Larsen, general contractor, was in direct charge of the construction, and he and his sub-contractors spent six months in the work of carrying out the complex and unusual specifications. Emil Klicka, head of the San Diego branches of the Bank of America, financed the new structure and leased the theatre to the West Coast organization.

In facade and decorative motif, the North Park closely follows the style of the Spanish Renaissance. The exterior trim of cast cement carries out the decorative scheme in bas-relief, and a note of color is added by the spacious lobby trimmed in veined quarry tile.

An enclosed inner lobby opens into a tastefully decorated foyer-lounge, which in turn gives access directly to the auditorium. Additional lounge and restrooms are provided for men and for women on the mezzanine landing.

In the auditorium nothing meets the eye to indicate that the house was planned along unusual lines. The room is of conventional pattern. There is no balcony, and the walls and ceiling are not "ginger-breaded" with ornate decorations. The two organ grilles, the proscenium arch, the design of the ceiling vents, the modern metal chandeliers, the exit door lintels and the wall sconces carry out the decorative scheme, but on the whole a restful simplicity of decoration has been observed.

Comfortable chairs are provided for 1,186 patrons. In the parquet proper there are three sections with a total of 970 seats, and in the five-row sections at the rear of the house there are 210 loge armchairs.

Ventilation and heating are both provided for by a unit equipment planned on the bypass planum system. Fresh or heated air is introduced into the auditorium through mushroom grille, and foul air is drawn through the four ceiling vents by a fan-and-blower installation. The two furnaces, with by-pass equipment for fresh air, are located beneath the organ grilles.

It is in the provision for acoustic qualities, however, that the skill of the architect and the contractor become apparent. The auditorium has been planned in such dimensions that the acoustics are easily controlled, being 86 feet in width, 96 feet in length and approximately 36 feet in height to the peak of the ceilings. Walls and ceiling of a special pliable acoustic plaster and heavily-carpeted aisles prevent reverberation. The acoustic properties of the room are best appreciated when the organist removes his fingers from the keys. On the instant, the room becomes as still as death; not the slightest reverberation follows the cessation of the sound.

As may be imagined, such acoustics lend themselves to flawless projection of the new talking pictures. Whispers from the horn towers on the stage are heard clearly at the last row in the house, and the absence of echo and reverberation does away entirely with the confusing thunder of fortissimo music or sharp sound effects from the screen.

A full-height stage, 23 feet in depth, allows ample room for prologue presentations. Two screens and the usual tormentor, drops, curtain and asbestos are handled from a 20-by Armstrong-Powers counterweight grid.

An orchestra pit of generous proportions provides plenty of room for a large musical be. Also please send information regarding the Bluebook of Projection.

In the first place, brother, why not call your motion picture projectors by their right name— projectors—instead of designating them by the general title of "machines"? Your motor generator, if you have one, is a "machine," but you would not call it that in writing. The piano is a machine, but you'd think me crazy if I called it that. The camera is a machine, too, but we don't call it one. Just why everyone wishes that particular title on the projector? I'm sure I don't know, but suppose it, like Topsy, "just grew" during the days when but one projector was used in connection with projection. You are a new man in the business. All right, start right by using correct nomenclature, which is a (deleted) sight more than a lot of old timers do.

And now as to your query. First of all, take my advice and send six dollars and twenty cents to the Chalmers Publishing Company, 516 Fifth avenue, New York City, immediately, and secure a copy of the two-volume 1,100-page Bluebook of Projection. If you are not thoroughly satisfied with your purchase I'll undertake personally to refund your money. Fair enough, what? During the past nineteen years tens of thousands of Bluebooks have been sold. There has yet to be the first dissatisfied buyer, so I guess I'm at least fairly safe in making the offer.

It would be impossible to say what causes your projector trouble. It might be one of many things. It would take an entire issue of the department to explain them all. Check the following: Measure (a) the exact distance from light sources to the surface of the mirror at its center. (b) Exact diameter of spot on projector mechanism cooling plates. (c) Exact free diameter of projection lenses. (d) Exact width of blades of projector rotating shutters.

If these measurements are all the same, then the trouble lies deeper and I would have to have further information. If, however, any of these measurements differ, then you should readjust the projector giving the low screen illumination so that it is the same as the other one in the above respects, remembering that if the arc distance (distance arc center to face of mirror at its center) is different, then you will have to move the lamphouse ahead or back when you change the arc distance. In this I am assuming the mirror curvature and diameter to be the same in both projectors.

If the projection lens diameters are different, then, first having carefully put away all film, remove the ring covering the light beam between the aperture and projection lens, if one there be, and with the projection lens so located that the picture is in sharp focus upon the screen, or would be in sharp focus, rather, were a film being projected, blow smoke into the light between the aperture and projection lens and ascertain whether or not all the light is entering the lens. If it all does enter the smaller diameter lens, all right. If not, then it is up to your manager to get a larger diameter lens for that projector, and right there is at least a portion of your trouble.

Of course there are other ways of ascertaining the light beam diameter where it enters the lens, but that is easiest and simplest. Have all film put away before you do it, though, since where there is smoke there also is fire, and fire and film—not so good!

If it is found that the shutter blades of one projector are wider than those of another—not likely, but possible—remove them both and, using the one having the most narrow blades as pattern, trim the other down to fit it. In this I assume there is no travel ghost present now; white streamers up or down from, for example, white letters on black background titles.

The Bluebook will explain all these various matters to you, though it does not include details of the Gardner reflector arc equipment. However that does not matter, because all reflector arc operators are taught the same general lines, so that once you understand the basic principles involved (Bluebook, pages 816 to 963) you will have no trouble handling any make successfully.

As to "printing in next issue," why, brother, that is not always possible, but I always send a carbon copy of my matter written for publication where information is desired, so that the questioner has his questions answered without undue delay.

Saenger to Erect $200,000 House in Hattiesburg, Miss.

(Special to Better Theatres)

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Feb. 12—The Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans was granted an extension of an option from the city for some property adjacent to the new nine-story Forrest hotel now under construction here. The option stipulates that ground must be broken on a theatre, planned by the amusement corporation, not later than March 13. Contracts for the erection of the theatre, which is to cost $250,000, have been awarded to a Meridian firm, but the theatre people asked the city for a little more time before starting actual work on the building.

Motion Picture Theatres and Studios Are Creating Unique Displays with the Cutawl

Stage Presentation—Publix Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, designed and executed by James R. Roy, New York City

Over 200 of the leading motion picture theatres in all parts of the country are using the Cutawl daily to produce striking, original, "attention-getting" displays. Exterior work—such as posters, signs and theatre lobby features—interior work—such as scenic backgrounds and stage settings.

Studios are using the Cutawl for cutting unusual scenes that would be practically impossible to produce with any other tool. The new Cutawl is entirely portable and can be operated at any angle. It has a variable cutting stroke up to 3/4 inch and is convertible for sawing by substituting saw-blade for chisel. It is simple and easy to operate and cuts quickly designs that would ordinarily take hours to produce.

HE OBJECTS TO THE WASHED AIR COOLING SYSTEM

An announcement has just been made of interest to theatre owners by the Supreme Heater and Ventilating Corporation of St. Louis, in which a stand is taken against washed air systems for cooling theatres in summer.

According to Victor Hugoniott, president of the corporation, the washed air system using sprays of water at ordinary temperature defeats the purpose for which the equipment is installed. He declares:

"Supreme Heater and Ventilating Corporation was perhaps the first organization of manufacturers to adopt the washed air principle for the air conditioning of theatre, and we are among the first to discard it as impractical, except in isolated cases in which arterial well water or connection to a central station refrigerating pipe line is accessible.

"Warm air has a great affinity for moisture. When the temperature of the air is high enough, it will absorb its own weight in water. Therefore it is very apparent that in passing summer air ranging from 85 to 110 degrees through a water spray, excess humidity is added. Excessive humidity is not comforting, and if we stop there the intent of the cooling system is defeated. To complete the process requires de-humidifying, which can be done by passing the air through a second spray of cold arterial water or one cooled by refrigerating coils. This de-humidifying of the air is the process used in the mechanical refrigerating systems of cooling our largest theatres.

"The air washer in general use with water at ordinary temperature (icing the water does not help) is a detriment when used with the blower system of cooling, because it deposits additional moisture in the air that already contains large quantities of moisture. The result is anything but comforting to the occupants of the theatre.

"In discussing this subject with others than engineers, I am always reminded that schools, hotels and department stores are equipped with air washers, but it must be understood that in these installations air washers are intended to clean the air of dust and not to act as cooling agents.

"For those who can afford great expense, mechanical refrigeration is the finest summer cooling system available, but in the case of the majority of theatres in which this is prohibitive there is nothing better than the blower type of equipment to move large volumes of air and to accomplish a sufficient number of air changes in the building to maintain a constant circulation.

"After all, the most nearly perfect cooling system is the one that distributes fresh air evenly over the auditorium at high velocity. This is the practical and most comforting because it cools by evaporating the body moisture and removing the high humidity from the sitting space."

Phototone Machine, Fifty Records Stolen from House

(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12—Detectives are looking for thieves who broke into the Prospect theatre the other night and took a Phototone demonstration machine and fifty records belonging to the Phototone Company of Missouri.

A sign that has won considerable comment. It is on the Paramount theatre in Los Angeles, and has changeable opal letters, an exclusive line of the Crystalite Company.
Developing New Lighting Effects

WITH the growing vogue for stage presentations in motion picture theatres, new and novel lighting effects are being developed constantly.

The most successful theatre operators are those who keep in close touch with this steady progress in scientific lighting as produced by Hub Switchboards.

Many of these enterprising operators use the famous Hub lighting studio at our factory as their experimental laboratory. This studio takes the form of a miniature theatre, and it is fully equipped with all the latest devices for reproducing those pleasing light effects which contribute so much to the success of the general ensemble.

You, too, are cordially invited to use this laboratory. Bring your lighting problems to us. Our engineers will gladly give you the full benefits of their wide and varied experiences, and to show you just how you can improve your theatre lighting. Of course, there is no obligation on your part. It will be a pleasure for us.

If it is not convenient for you to come to Chicago just now, write us. We will gladly help you by correspondence.

Modernism Celebrates the Triumph of Woman in the Motif of the Boyd

Immensely logical, this association of the New Woman with Art Moderne—as logical as their association with the motion picture. All three have achieved a monument in this interesting Philadelphia theatre conceived in the spirit of our times by the Hoffman-Henon Company for Alexander R. Boyd, who has just sold it to Warner Brothers.

TRIBUTE to modern woman has been paid in many forms, but it has remained for the Boyd theatre in Philadelphia to memorialize her in a structure dedicated to the motion picture.

There is no levity intended in these words, not a syllable of satire meant in presenting the so-called "emancipation of women" as a major theme in the motif of the design of the Boyd. The Boyd, after all, is only as modern as the woman of today. Its design is worked out in simple, efficient lines, in material of metallic substance. It is an expression of the modern urge to make beauty serve the purposes of utility—an expression of modern candor—modern hardness, if you will. Modernism is the whole motif of the Boyd. That its design includes the "triumph" of woman as a theme, makes especially interesting this new temple of the modern art of the motion picture.

The Boyd is one of the most luxurious houses in Philadelphia. It may be said that among that city's new screen theatres, none excels it in the richness of its ornamentation, brilliancy and harmony of color, or lavishness of furnishings. It was built for Alexander R. Boyd, who formerly was vice president of the Stanley Company of America. It is located on Chestnut Street above Nineteenth. The Hoffman-Henon Company were the architects and also the builders.

The modernism of the Boyd follows the French manner. Thus it is less severe than the German and Russian, and even of the American, so far as we have developed a modernistic treatment strictly of our own. The curve is used prodigiously, and in many places there is a tendency to retain the more historical concepts of design and only modify them so as to be more in keeping with the decorative values which have grown out of today's mechanistic point of view.

Those parts of the decorative scheme which express the "triumph" of women are the murals, stained glass ornaments and various furnishings. Over the proscenium arch is a large allegorical mural representing the defense of an Amazon queen against the hordes of Africa and Asia. The same theme is continued in a succession of murals down the sides of the proscenium arch and along the walls of the auditorium.

The ladies, God bless 'em, are also paid exquisite modernistic tribute in a series of six silhouettes, which are placed in niches along the walls of the auditorium. These figures are finished off in neither crimson nor statuesque white, but in black and gold, proving that the moderns, though their prayers may be uttered in the live language of today, are true believers in the cult of beauty. These silhouettes are of metal—silver Monel metal—and representing the women of a number of different nations, bring their theme to a climax in a figure of a modern American girl, than whom, of course, there can be none more modern—indeed, none more modernistic.

The stage and cinematic facilities are of the most up-to-date character, and both elaborate musical productions and sound pictures may be presented. Every detail of the construction had the personal consideration of Boyd, whose long career in exhibiting and his former association with the Stanley circuit have given him an intimate insight into the requirements of a theatre answering adequately the needs and aspirations of the motion picture.

The corridor leading from the entrance to the theatre proper is handsomely furnished, and the ticket seller's booths are of hammered wrought metal with glass fronts. The walls of the lobby and foyer are of marble, with handsome pilasters and marble pedestals for lighting fixtures. The spacious foyer contains richly ornamented glass and metal fountains and is equipped with luxurious furniture. Broad stairways of marble with railings of beautiful wrought iron and bronze, lead to the balcony. On the floor of the foyer is a specially made rug of great beauty, measuring 40 x 26 feet, woven in one piece and harmonizing in coloring and design with the decorative scheme of the interior. The rug was woven in Czech-Slovakia, the order being given at the time the building contract was placed. It required six months to complete it, and as the opening day approached, considerable anxiety was felt lest the rug should not arrive in time for the opening. However, it arrived safely just the day before the theatre was presented to the public.

Stairways lead from the foyer to a lower mezzanine floor in which there is a combination lounge and smoking room. From the latter open rest rooms for men and for women, and also a special room for the women. A promenade in the rear of the balcony looks down upon a handsome marble fountain. The main auditorium, which measures 154 x 125 feet, has been so constructed that a full view of the stage and screen is afforded from every seat in the house. This too is modernistic—making beauty serve a useful end. The seats are specially designed for comfort. An unusual feature, said to be found in no other theatre in the East, is five rows of specially constructed leather arm chairs in the rear, which are slightly elevated above the floor and also more widely spaced than the orchestra seats. These chairs are large, roomy and deeply upholstered, with wide arms and high backs, and are the first of the type installed in any Philadelphia playhouse.

Looking around the auditorium one is impressed by the rich beauty of the decorations, modern French style being used harmoniously throughout. The ushers are fittingly garbed in French uni-facilities for all manner of spot and flash lighting. The Brinkert is equipped with eight sets of lenses, six iris, an automatic color wheel and an improved lamp house focusing device, making it possible to project any shape of light, any size of spot and a wide variety of flood effects.

Four control panels enable the operator to control all the projection room apparatus from either of the four. Two Fader volume control boxes are located at convenient points. The amplifying panel is set against the rear wall of the room and all house lights are wired to the separate projection room board. Amplification is wired directly from the projection apparatus to horn towers on the stage, each tower equipped with two horns, and current is provided by Westinghouse generators and rheostats housed in a separate room adjoining the projection booth.

The Riverside has been created to carry out to the letter the most up-to-date Spanish-California type of architecture and to typify the atmosphere of the historic Southland.

Located upon an important corner of Riverside's business district, its tower dominates the nearby skyline. Arcades over the side walks along two sides of the building give the delightful perspective which was characteristic of many of California's old missions and the red tile roof makes charming contrast with the light exterior walls. Tile is also used upon the lobby floor—tile of the sort laid in the early days of the Southwes by devout padres. Of gayer pattern is the tile used in the lobby walls, along the stair cases and in other well chosen places. The sidewalk beneath the arcades has been stained with acid, lending the cement a rectangle, in appearance of weathered color. The use of art stone around the lobby display case is another effective touch.

Entering the foyer, one's attention is once held by the harmonious restraint of the decorations. Concrete and staff work, under the brushes of artists, have been made to look like aged old beams and wood. Brought iron in designs patterned after the handiwork turned out at the forges of ancient Spain makes the stair rails and balus trades.

The main lounge is situated below stairs. Soft carpets, the glow of shaded lamps, luxurious furnishings and a huge fireplace these entice the theatregoer with a few moments to spare. Restrooms are located a either end of the lounge, and there are other reiter rooms on the mezzanine lounge reached by wide and graceful staircases from the foyer. On the mezzanine, too, is an alluring little niche, attractively furnished, to be gazed upon by the visitor. More daring in its color scheme of reds, yellows, blues and greens, in perfect taste, is the mezzanine, and a to instill note of color is cleverly avoided both here and in the foyer by the choice of carpet in rich maroon, without design.

Attractive as is the beauty found in lobby foyer and lounge, it is but supplementary to that of the auditorium. Truly Spanish is the design worked out in the concrete and its work of the walls and ceilings, and the Moorish influence is seen in the lines of the proscenium arch, with its decorative feature above the center of the stage hang three grot mission bells similar to those found in ancient missions. It is these bells which provide the dominant note in the decorative plan of the auditorium. Graceful stairways carry the organ lofts. Over their iron balustrades are hung colorful, shield-like drapes. Other draperies and the lighting fixtures are gay in keeping with the atmosphere of Old Spain.

The organ in the new Riverside theatre a Wurlitzer, and its console is placed up an elevator in the center of the orchestra pit making possible many delightful and unusual effects during the presentation of programs. Located at the rear of the balcony is the projection room. Here are to be found lendid installation of Western Electric and equipment, a Brinkert effect machine, or spotlights, two Simplex machines with high intensity Ashcraft lamps, and other modern devices. Along the front wall of the projection room are five control panels, with dials controlling all motors, dissolvers and apparatus. By means of the thoroughly modern equipment of this projection room, the operators may obtain effects limited only by their imagination and ingenuity.

Large enough for the presentation of the most elaborate road shows is the Riverside Theatre stage. A counterpart system is provided with 40 sets of lines. There are tress and a bridge with spots for illumination by any sort, in addition to the usual footlights and I embeds found on every stage. Modern safety devices, including an automatic sprinkler system, are to be found here. Dressing rooms are located in the L-shaped store and office section of the building, which flanks the main theatre structure. They are to be found on the second floor and are reached by a stairway from the stage. Disturbing noises from the dressing rooms, or indeed from any part of the other portion of the building, thus cannot interfere with the presentation of shows.

Other safeguards against unwanted noises by water sprays, motors, generators, etc., is found in their installation in the basement of the office part of the structure.

Remodeling of the Riverside theatre is accomplished by washed air, distributed through carefully designed system. Heating is by gas furnaces. An unusual feature is a well, which was drilled beneath the building, this furnishing water 12 degrees cooler in that in the city mains, and which is devoted to the huge sprinkler tanks.

The new Riverside theatre demonstrates conclusively that it is possible to make a playhouse ideal both from the practical and the aesthetic standpoints. Already this theatre is a new place of the Orange Belt, that part of Southern California in which it is situated.嬉, truly one of California's most artistic havens.

Stanley to Open Two New Theatres in Feb.; Equity House in Debut

HILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—The Stanley Company's new Uptown theatre at Broad and Susquehanna avenues will open to the public this month. The seating accommodations are for 2,500 persons. The play will be shown daily, presenting to North Philadelphia first-runs direct from the downtown central houses. The interior decorations are East Indian and Cambodian motif, with iron, glass and polished metal throughout. In the foyer there is a large mural. "The Chase," painted by Paul Donville, a young Philadelphia artist, which has been pronounced by critics the blent piece of art.

Equity Theatres, Inc., opened their new Pickler theatre at Darby, Pa., yesterday. Parker has a seating capacity of 2,500 persons, rangeing in price from 10 cents to $1.00 dollars. The architectural design of decorations are modernistic. Theofferphone will include stage attractions as well as the talking and synchronized pictures. It was announced recently that an agreement has been reached between Warner Brothers and Equity Theatres under which the former will take over the entire Equity Circuit. A finishing touches are rapidly being added the Stanley Company's new Mastbaum theatre at 12th and Market streets. This theatre was erected as a memorial to the Jules E. Mastbaum, former president of one of the founders of the company. The indication of the magnitude and dignity of the Mastbaum may be gained from the fact that it was erected and finished at a cost of $3,000,000 and will accommodate 5,000 persons.

A NEW RKO HOUSE IN A SUBURB OF NEW YORK

Views of the new Keith-Albee theatre in Flushing designed by Thomas W. Lamb
The grand foyer of the Keith-Albee, a strikingly sincere reproduction of a patio in some 12th Century Castilian dwelling.

THE new Keith-Albee theatre on Northern Boulevard in the heart of historic Flushing, N. Y., is the latest, and one of the finest, achievements of modern theatre building as exemplified in the new present-day standard of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. No metropolis in the world now can boast of a more scientifically constructed theatre than this which now adorns the main thoroughfare of Flushing, renowned as a residential community since Colonial days and now one of the most populous Long Island suburbs of New York.

The Flushing, which was designed and completed by Thomas W. Lamb of New York, under the personal supervision of E. F. Albee, carries in its exterior the architectural motifs of Spanish Renaissance. Its facade is in grayish-white cast stone, with projecting bay-windows trimmed with ornate bronze. The marquee above the main entrance enters into the composition of the facade as an essential part of the architectural conception as a whole. Contact with the immense interior of the theatre, its atmosphere and spaciousness, begins in the lobby where element and detailed ornament of Iberian origin and tradition is carried out in projecting loggias, crowned arches, decorated colonettes, and a ceiling of figured sculpure in polychrome.

The grand foyer, which is oval in shape, possesses a splendor of appointment and luxuries decoration emphatic of the cohesive plan of structure and decoration. This space is of vast size and is surrounded with a mural and fresco-adornment redolent of the sunny land of Spain. The central incident in the grand foyer is the free-standing fountain and pool, topped by a figure of Cupid and with many dolphins at play in the streams of water, downpouring from the central vents. The pool itself is illuminated from below with beams of varicolored lights. In recesses of the grand stairway are other miniature fountains, in polychrome niches.

The concave and curved ceiling, is provided with atmospheric and cerulean effects, every resource of electric lighting being utilized to provide the illusions of daylight and moonlight and the midday sweep of the sun. Two spacious, winding, marble stairways lead to the mezzanine promenade, from which a broad vista opens into the main foyer. Sculptures, carvings and period furnishings adorn and punctuate these intervals.

The great proscenium arch is generally decorated with features of Spanish art. It towers to the skyline ceiling of the auditorium. The curtain is of embroidered silk and gold.

The auditorium walls abound in historical coats of arms, Iberian escutcheons, flowered balconettes of old Granada, tiled mansards, pergolas and mediaeval lanterns (electric), and very suitable embellishment in keeping with the leading motif of the theatre's construction. The dome above this vast auditorium is "a sky" with moving clouds wind-driven and cumulous. The theatre is equipped with RCA Photophone.

forms. The proscenium arch is 30 feet wide and 30 feet high. Above it is the beautiful modern mural depicting the defense of the Amazons previously described. The ceiling decorations represent outdoor sports throughout the ages, in rich colors upon a soft gold background.

A distinctive feature of the theatre is the size of the stage. While the theatre is primarily intended for the presentation of motion pictures, its stage is capable of accommodating all sorts of theatrical presentation. Its width and depth may be augmented by an orchestra pit, which may be raised to the stage level and used to form a stage apron. The organ console is also on a lift and may be brought up into full view of the audience. In this way the stage may be extended feet. Four large hanging flood lights illuminate the stage, and in addition there are 20 spot lights in front of the balcony.

The house is equipped with apparatus for the presentation of sound films. The heat and cooling apparatus is of the most modern type. The air may be heated or cooled within a few minutes, the engineers claim.

Many congratulatory expressions have been offered to Boyd for the arrangement of the auditorium because it affords a free and unobstructed view of the stage from any seat. The convenience of ingress and egress and many other comforts provided for patrons have brought laudatory comment. The house seats 2,500 persons, or 2,300 on the ground floor.

The theatre stands on a site of historic interest. In 1830 the mansion of Jacob Ridgeway was situated here, and later the Aldine house was erected on the same site.

Decorations of the interior are by the Robert Bush Company of New York. The organ is Kimball. Other leading contractors are listed below:

You Must Do
WHAT YOU INTENDED TO DO
Says the Court

For example, can a municipality conduct motion picture shows? Is that what its charter intended it to do? These and other questions are answered according to recent judicial decisions in a new article on The Theatre and the Law.

By LEO T. PARKER

The court held the trustees without authority to lease the auditorium for the show business and issued an injunction against the continuance of the show under the lease. Afterwards, the municipal trustees began giving educational shows in the auditorium, contending the injunction against the theatre operator was not effective against the city which they represented.

The state brought suit against the city requesting the court to issue a second injunction prohibiting the city from exhibiting educational motion pictures in the auditorium.

The lower court held the performance of the shows permissible, but the higher court reversed this verdict, saying:

"Since memorial buildings may not be leased to private parties to carry on private business, may they be used by the city or its trustees to carry on a commercial enterprise such as a picture show or theatrical business? It is conceded that there is no express authority for the city to engage in the moving picture business or any other commercial enterprise in the building. A moving picture show is a well-recognized kind of private business, carried on by private parties in most of the cities, towns, and community centers of the state. It is now almost as well recognized and common as the grocery and clothing businesses. A vast amount of money is invested in them, and a municipality engaged in the business will necessarily meet with sharp competition ... Municipal corporations are creations of the law and can exercise only powers conferred by law and none by implication ... It is argued that the giving of these shows in the auditorium will be of some educational advantage to the community, but it cannot well be said that moving picture and road shows are educational in purpose or effect ... We think it is beyond the reach of municipal powers, in that it is repugnant to our state policy as evidenced by the constitutional, statutory, and common law of the state."

Director Liable for Secret Profit

Generally speaking, a director of a corporation is expected by law to render faithful services, and he must not conceal secret profits earned by sale of real estate or other merchandise to the corporation. For instance, in Witter vs. LaVeque (221 N. W. 131), it was disclosed that the Northern Theatre Company was organized with an authorized capital of 3,000 shares of preferred stock of the par value of $100 per share, and 6,000 shares of common stock without par value.

The theatre corporation entered into a contract to purchase a lot for $5,000 from one of its directors named LaVeque, on which it was intended to erect a theatre. After $2,000 had been paid on the lot, another agreement between the theatre corporation and LeVeque was made, by the terms of which the latter deeded the lot to the corporation and retained a mortgage for the balance $5,000 which was due.

New stockholders and directors had become interested in the theatre corporation and they investigated the transaction between the theatre corporation and LeVeque. These new stockholders then filed suit against LeVeque, contending that he had received an excessive price for the lot. LeVeque argued that he was not liable for any fraudulent deal between himself and the theatre corporation, and the transaction had been ratified and approved by the majority of stockholders and that he had not concealed the details of the transaction relating to the purchase of the lot.

However, it was shown that LeVeque had informed the stockholders that he had paid $25,000 for the lot and that he would sell it to the corporation at his cost price. The court held LeVeque liable for the secret profit he earned on the lot, but refused to invalidate the sale, saying:

"There is nothing in the record to indicate that there was any fraud or concealment.

in the transaction relating to this purchase. The price paid was undoubtedly more than the property was fairly worth. But LeVeque was under no obligation to sell, and after a lapse of such a period of time and the many times the transaction relating thereto was before the board of directors, the integrity of the majority of whom is not questioned, we are with the trial court that the record does not justify interference therewith. It is apparent that they [stockholders] placed implicit confidence in LeVeque [director] and rely on all that he said relative to the affairs of the corporation. It clearly appears that the stockholders acted under the belief that the property was turned into the corporation for the price LeVeque paid for it.

Damages Allowed to Patron

In the very recent case, Fane v. K (280 S.W. 445), the court held the proprietor of an amusement place liable in dam for injuries sustained by a patron. The medical examination and X-ray pictures disclosed that a permanent injury was a result of the patron being playfully pushed by an attendant.

The lower court entered a verdict for $4,000 in favor of the injured girl, and the high court sustained the judgment, because the defendant had failed to exercise ordinary care to prevent injuries to patrons.

Therefore, it is quite apparent that the owners legally are expected to exercise "ordinary" care to prevent injury from any source to patrons. Sometimes, the exact meaning of the term "ordinary" care is not readily understood. Generally, it means that degree of care that would have been exercised by a reasonably prudent person under the identical circumstances.

The court in a very recent case (109 282), defined the term as follows:

"Ordinary care is greater care than we be exercised by a negligent person."

Another common source of litigation involving "ordinary" care is where an employer is injured while in the service of his employer. An employer is expected to exercise "ordinary" degree of care to protect his employees from injury. Also, a thea proprietor is liable for the acts of his management.

For illustration, in a very recent case (Cap. 262) it was disclosed that a stage hand was accidentally shot by a stage manager who jokingly pointed a pistol at the former. Testimony proved that the stage manager did not know the pistol was loaded. Here the higher court held the injured employee entitled to recover compensation for the injury sustained.

Injuries Not Arising Out of Employment

On the other hand, a theatre owner is liable for injuries sustained by an employee who is not acting within the scope of employment when the accident occurs. For instance, in White City Amusement Corp. vs. Industrial Commission (163 N. E. 337), was disallowed that an employee left his regular employment and undertook, without the authority, to assume more dangerous work. This court promptly held the employee entitled to compensation, and said:

"To entitle a claimant to an award under the Compensation Act, it is not sufficient that the injury occurred in the course of employment. It must also arise out of employment. It has long been the established rule that, when an employee places himself in a dangerous place where his employment does not necessarily carry him, and when he is a danger of his own choosing outside of the reasonable requirements of his employment.

In the other hand, in the recent case of Kim & Cherry Shows vs. Dinmore (164 N. 502), a travelling show owner was held liable for damages in a large amount for injuries sustained by patrons as a result of defective bleacher seats falling down.

In this case it was proved that the proprietor was negligent in failing to know that his employes properly repaired the seats, although he had them to do so. This court exacted the law or damage:

On the day of the injury he [proprietor] repaired the seats about 12 o'clock, and he had water standing on the ground near and that the jacks which supported the seats, to a depth of about five inches. He found some of the blocks under the jacks loose, and replaced them himself, and gave directions to two men in the employ of Ringens to watch the water and see that the blocks did not wash out. The collapse of the seats which caused the injury was brought about by the water loosening the blocks supporting the jacks, and thus in turn the jacks moved out of place and permitted the whole seating arrangement to fall. . . . It was the duty of appellant [proprietor] to use reasonable care and to see that the bleacher seats in all of its shows were so constructed and maintained as not to risk doing injury to anyone attending the aggregation of shows which appellant was exhibiting pursuant to its contract with the Indiana state board of agriculturists. He is required to use care and diligence to keep the place safe for those in attendance and, failing to do so, he may be held liable for injuries occasioned by his negligence. His want of knowledge of defective conditions which by the exercise of reasonable care he might have discovered will not excuse him.

Not Entitled to Payment for Extras

Since many new theatres in various localities are in the course of construction and repair, it is important to know that contractors are not entitled to payment for extras, unless the terms of the contract are followed. For example, in Mansfield vs. Cape May County (143 Atl. 379), it was disclosed that a contractor and the owner of a lot entered into a contract which provided:

"The work to be performed under this contract will consists in furnishing all tools, implements, machinery, labor and all necessary materials. And it is hereby understood that the contractor in accepting the contract agrees to furnish any and everything necessary for such construction notwithstanding any omissions in the drawings or specifications . . . ."

The specifications provided, "The contractor must at all times comply with the requirements of the specifications and shall not on any pretense, save that of a written order from the contracting parties or the engineer, deviate from the intent of the specifications . . . ."

During the construction work, the contractor discovered that certain materials not specified in the specifications were required to satisfactorily complete the job. He consulted the engineer, who verbally ordered him to procure the necessary items. Later the owner refused to pay for these extras and the contractor filed suit to collect the value of the extra materials and labor cost of installing the same.

It is interesting to observe that the court held the contractor not entitled to recover payment for these extras because he had obtained a verbal instead of a written order from the engineer. The court said:

"No rule of the law is more firmly established by a long train of decisions than this: That where a party, by his own contract, creates a duty or charge upon himself, he is bound to make it good, if he may, notwithstanding any accident by inevitable necessity, because he might have provided against it by his contract. . . . Where persons contracting with each other regarding what shall be their course of conduct with each other, regarding a certain subject matter, and declare that there shall be no change in the agreement, which shall vest an additional liability in favor of or against each other, without authority to do so in writing, the mere performance of an extra service without such written authority will not give rise to an implied waiver of the provisions of the contract in that respect; so without proof of waiver of its terms, the plaintiff [contractor], in order to recover, was bound to Westinghouse Expands

Advertising in Trade
Papers for This Year
(Special to Better Theatres)

EAST PITTSBURG, PA., Feb. 12—A greatly expanded program of advertising for 1929 in the technical, trade and business publications is planned by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, according to a statement issued by J. C. Mc-Quiston, general advertising manager.

"The increase," states McQuiston, "in the number of products from year to year which we manufacture, has made it advisable for us to change our technical advertising to keep step. Leading industries are now so thoroughly electrified that each one offers a market for a large variety of our products.
In order to meet this situation, in addition to our usual advertisements covering a single product, we plan to make extensive use of group advertisements in which we will call to the attention of the executives in an industry the whole line that Westinghouse is equipped to offer that industry.

"Furthermore I am convinced that in our technical advertising not enough attention has been paid to telling the industries a more complete story of Westinghouse service, and this year we will present a number of broad institutional messages in the technical magazines.

"Our advertising policy aims always to expand the electrical industry by informing the public continually of the vital part that electricity plays in modern civilization. We aim also to be of direct service to the distributors of electrical products by direct advertising cooperation with such distributors."

The list of business and technical magazines selected by the Westinghouse Company is well over 150 covering practically every American industry.

1,706,614. MULTICOLOR CINEMATOGRAPH AND OTHER FILMS. John Edward Thornton, West Hampstead, London, England. Original application filed May 5, 1924. Serial No. 711,251, and in Great Britain May 18, 1923. Divided and this application filed Nov. 3, 1925. Serial No. 66,482. 4 Claims. (Cl. 95—1.)

A multicolor positive cinematograph film comprising a double width transparent support divided into two longitudinally parallel portions, of which two partial images are photo-mechanically printed directly upon one portion in two different colors and upon the other portion in two other different colors, the support being severed longitudinally to form two halves which are superimposed and adhesively secured together to form a four-color single width film transparency.

1. In a device of the character described in combination with image control means including an image bearing member, a source of light adapted to project the image from the image bearing member, a screen adapted to transmit light and to retard heat sufficient to prevent the image bearing member from igniting and movable in a single plane transverse to the light rays into and out of line of the light, a member secured to the screen and extending outwardly therefrom in the plane thereof, a second member pivoted to the first member and pivotally supported by a pivot removed from the first pivot, and means on one of said members engaging the image control means.

1,706,632. OPTICAL SYSTEM. Harold N. Cox, Glen Ridge, N. J., assignor to Cox Multi-Color Photo Company, a Corporation of Delaware. Filed Aug. 7, 1926. Serial No. 157,776. 1 Claim. (Cl. 88—24.)

An illuminating system for the projection of multiple images including in combination with a source of light, a condenser, and a plurality of objective lenses, of a corresponding plurality of positive lenses arranged between the source of light and the objective lenses and cooperating with each of said objective lenses, and a concave lens element associated with the condenser and the plurality of positive lenses.

26. A sound-reproducing machine including in its construction, in combination with a series of spaced rotatable record discs, a support capable of moving in a line parallel to the axis of rotation of the discs, means for guiding the support in its movement, a sound box and needle carried by the support, operating mechanism to adjust the support for locating the needle arm oppositely a disc, means operatively connected to the needle arm capable of moving the latter across the disc in either direction and means for lifting the needle arm out of the record groove and for permitting it to enter the same.

1. A cinematograph positive film material comprising a strip of waterproof material of double standard width and half standard thickness, a layer of colored collodion in two parallel differently colored stripes on one side of said strip and a layer of differently colored collodion in two parallel stripes on the other side of said strip and running in the same direction as said first named stripes, said strip adapted to receive four component image impressions and to be severed into two and to have its two portions cemented together to assemble and superimpose the four component images in one picture space.
Pepping Up Your Lobby Displays with The Proper Color Schedule

"Say it with color," advise the advertising experts. Black is easy to read, but it takes a bit of the rainbow to make 'em want to read. That's especially true of posters, which must catch people on the run and make 'em pull up short.

By AL P. NELSON

MR. THEATRE MANAGER, have you been wondering about getting different color schemes for your theatre lobby that would make the crowds stop and look? Black is ordinarily so dead. Yet it can well be used with colors, such as purple, yellow and red. That's the advice of Lawrence MacDonald, poster artist of the Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee, who has made some new interesting displays, some of which are shown here.

MacDonald has plenty of original ideas on the use of color in lobby displays. Since articles on his methods in a previous issue of "Better Theatres," he has received many letters from theatre managers and poster artists interested in learning more about his ideas on color work. Regarding the use of black, he has the following to say:

"When you have been using solid color schemes in red, yellow, blue, purple, green, etc., it is a good idea to use a black color scheme idea occasionally. You have no idea how attractive black can be if you use a little white in with it. Just a couple of weeks ago when we played "Man, Woman and Wife" at the Alhambra, I made up black posters, shaded the black so that it became real glossy, and then made the picture and the lettering in white. The background of the insert pictures was done in charcoal, and the pictures themselves were hand drawn. This further added to the snap of the entire ensemble."

If a theatre manager and a poster artist cooperate and talk over color schemes for the lobby, there are wonderful opportunities to put a picture over in a bigger way, according to MacDonald. Color means a great deal in the present age.

"If you use red one week, yellow another, blue another, purple another, and green another, then it is an excellent idea to use the black color schemes once in a while," said Mac. "It will give you contrast, and it pulls, too. Before we used the shiny black background, we were a little bit dubious. We knew black was supposed to be a dead color, but we doctored it up by making it glossy. And we are going to use it regularly now, in rotation with the colors."

MacDonald says that a white background with a black picture effect and lettering can also be employed. He is planning to use this in the very near future and is confident that it, too, will meet with approval from the theatre-going public.

"The theatreposter artist must get his ideas from a morgue," he said. "Whenever I run across an attractive picture, I file it away in a big chest, which is my morgue. Then, when I want an idea I can always adapt one from one of those pictures. When a poster artist turns out a lot of pictures each week, he can't sit around searching for ideas and making up only one original drawing per week."

ON A SITE FAMOUS FOR PLEASURE

F. F. Proctor has built his Fifty-Eighth Street theatre in New York on a spot long dedicated to amusement

F. F. PROCTOR'S new Fifty-Eighth Street Theatre, the recent opening of which marked the fortieth anniversary of Proctor's career as a metropolitan manager, stands upon the historic site of the famous Pleasure Palace which he completed 32 years ago at Fifty-second and Lexington Avenue, New York, where for many years, with its palm garden, its grand ballroom, its splendid stage and its elaborate dining hall and roof garden, it was the favorite pleasure haunt of social, artistic and sporting celebrities and one of the pet show places of New York.

Mediaeval Spain supplies the motif of the new theatre. Concrete and terra cotta both conceal and ornament the steel framework of the fireproof structure, and in the incidental ornamentations most of the polychrome tendencies of the Iberian genius are carried out most effectively.

Tunneled, arched and pillared lobbies give easeement to both Lexington Avenue and Fifty-second Street—genuinely Spanish corridors and colonnades, leading to the grand foyer, which is in effect a spacious patio. This indoor plaza, which is characteristic of the ornate chambers of the palaces of Castile and Aragon in the middle ages, is innocent of Moorish incongruities and the garish arabesques which are so often mistaken for truly Spanish art.

The auditorium seats 3,000 persons, yet acoustics are excellent. The Fifty-Eighth Street is the first theatre in the metropolitan district to be completely fitted with RCA Photophone as inherent in the actual structure and an essential part of the plant itself.

The electrically operated grand organ, concrete and plate-glass projection booths, motion pictures, the elevator orchestras perform and organ console are also inherent parts of the harmonious structure itself. Various apartments set aside for the use of the public are furnished and ornamented in conformity with the palatial character of the house. The smoking lounges for men and women, retiring and dressing rooms are luxurious. The same completeness and harmony characterize the back-stage appointments for visiting artists and employees.

The policy of the new Fifty-Eighth Street will be continuous performances from 8:30 until 11 p.m., of standard Radio-Kodachrome vaudeville and motion pictures, brilliant and in sound, and international novelties.
PENCER is a small town. Its population is merely 3,000. And it didn’t have a modern motion picture theatre. There was a theatre, yes—one reminiscent of those first days when people went around talking about the art that was “just in its infancy.” That infancy having long since passed, this theatre had also passed—at least the minds of many citizens. There were splendid new theatres and not so very far away as the motor car travels. The two college cities of Bloomington, where Indiana University is situated, and Greencastle, were by 20 miles or so away. Spencer got into the habit of seeking its entertainment out of town.

This is scarcely a condition that looks good to the members of a chamber of commerce. And, of course, it isn’t a good condition for the theatregoers themselves. It is not always convenient or pleasant to drive 20 miles and back for an evening’s entertainment.

Then E. M. Viquesney decided to build a first class theatre for Spencer. Viquesney was a theatre man. He was a sculptor. It is Viquesney who designed the statue, “The Spirit of the American Doughboy,” which stands in Lincoln Park in Chicago and is duplicated in other cities. It is a statue that Viquesney, at a time when there were being lured away from Spencer, expressed the opinion that not only must this be stopped, but that Spencer could attract theatregoers from the cities of Bloomington and Greencastle. In other words, the condition could be reversed, he believed, and he had enough faith to plan a theatre to do this!

His faith has been justified. The Tivoli has been open but a short while, but already it is looked upon as a fine home of motion picture entertainment by the people of Spencer, and as a place to go to by the inhabitants of the surrounding territory. It seats 700. It cost $45,000.

The architect, Horam Callender, Jr., of Greencastle, Ind., selected a Spanish motif for the architecture and interior design. The exterior is done in light buff stucco, with green window and door trims. The marquise is of antique copper, a material used also for the exterior balconies. The stucco is splashed with red and green and its surface is left rough. On either side of the lobby is a shop, while on the second floor above the shops are two kitchenette apartments, separated from the theatre section by heavy fire walls.

The ticket booth, which abuts on the sidewalk, is finished in marble. At the windows are silver curtains and draperies. The lobby is finished in cream stucco with tints of rose and extremely light green and is lighted by composition figures of ornate design, containing varicolored lamps. It is a rule of the management that no lithographs or printed advertising shall be displayed here, and all the panels are hand-painted in colors. The panels are recessed, and over each is a fretwork grille lighted by hidden lamps, which cast a soft glow over the surface. The effect, which has proven very attractive to patrons, was achieved at extreme cost.

Entrance to the foyer is by double swinging doors. The foyer is long and vaulted. Silver cloth curtains drape the doors leading from the lobby. On the floor are deep soft carpets in red and black. The walls of the foyer are done in stippled stucco sprayed with blending colors, which fade out to a soft cream color at the ceiling. Playing on the surfaces of this chamber are amber lights supplied from perforated metal wall brackets. The foyer is furnished with large overstuffed chairs and couches.

The women’s and men’s lobbies are off the foyer. These are finished off in light green enamel. At the inner end of the foyer is a heavily carpeted stairway leading up to the loges. The loges are lighted by floor lamps and ceiling fixtures, and seating is by mahogany chairs.

Two arched passages lead into the atmospheric auditorium, which is designed to represent an enclosed Spanish garden. The entrances are draped with heavy red and gold curtains swung from twisted antique poles. Along the walls of the auditorium, which are of rough stucco, are niches in which pieces of statuary—remember that the owner of the Tivoli is a sculptor—are placed. Also in the niches are decorative baskets from which droop and twin foliage and wisteria, carrying out the garden effect. The niches are hand-painted, and seen through the foliage, the (Continued on page 94)
DESIGNED TO MEET OUT-OF-TOWN COMPETITION

The Tivoli in Spencer, Ind., was E. M. Viquesney's answer to nearby larger cities. It cost $45,000. And it more than serves its purpose. This theatre, which seats 700, was designed by Horam Callender, Jr., of Greencastle, Ind. It is of Spanish design.

Thordarson Increases Factory Space, Opens a Branch in Cleveland

In order to take care of the constantly increasing demand for its transformers for radio and other electrical purposes, the Thordarson Electric Manufacturing Company of Chicago, has announced the acquisition of an additional building adjoining its present factory, thus increasing its manufacturing space over 100 per cent. The combined factory site now occupies half a city block, facing on Huron, Kingsbury and Larrabee streets. The seven floors of these two buildings represent a total manufacturing space of a quarter of a million square feet.

The Thordarson organization is engaged primarily in supplying radio set manufacturers with power supply and audio transformers. In anticipation of the present expansion, the management department has been actively engaged in constructing many special full automatic coil winding machines and other manufacturing equipment on which the company holds exclusive patents. It is stated that production in the original plant is not being disturbed during the process of establishing the new factory.

Chester H. Thordarson, president, has announced the appointment of Merwyn Head as chief engineer. This appointment is in accordmence with the policy of the management to select men for executive positions from within the organization. Prior to Head's activity in the motion picture and research laboratory of the Thordarson plant, he was retained by the Robertson-Davis Company of Chicago as chief engineer. His engineering department was later transferred to the Engineering School of Northwestern University, where he was awarded membership in the honorary scientific fraternity Eta Kappa Nu and in Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity.

As a means of establishing more intimate contact with its manufacturing and order customers in the Michigan, Ohio, Western New York and Western Pennsylvania territory, the Thordarson Company has opened a branch office in Cleveland. C. M. Hendricks, who has been serving the greater part of this territory for the Thordarson organization as a sales representative, has been appointed branch manager with offices located at 520 Citizens Building, Cleveland.

New York Office Opened
By S. & S. Enterprises
(Special to Better Theatres)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Harry Segal, president of S. & S. Enterprises, Boston, announces the opening of offices in New York City, at 729 Seventh avenue, Suite 510, for the sale and distribution of Cine Tone, non-synchronous sound machine.

The machine is made entirely of steel and is operated electrically. It is portable and is installed by merely plugging in on a light socket, just as one does with a radio. The S. & S. Executives, who were promoters of the machine, claim, for it a tonal range that is unsurpassed, while its tonal quality is considered equal to the best. David L. Shoolman is treasurer of the company.

Bartola Company Name Becomes Maxcy-Barton

The Bartola Musical Instrument Company, of Chicago, manufacturers of the Barton organ, has changed its name to the Maxcy-Barton Organ Company. The Barton organ will continue to be built and manufactured by the Maxcy-Barton Organ Company, W. G. Maxcy, of Oshkosh, Wis., president of the company; Dan Barton, general manager, and Al Stoll, superintendent of the factory, which is located at Oshkosh, Wis.

What Kind of a Fellow Is John L. McCurdy?

WITH 22 years of theatrical experience behind him, despite the fact he is only 36 years of age, John L. McCurdy is truly one of the youngest veteran managers of metropolitan theatres in America.

McCurdy hails from Fort Wayne, Ind. He went to public school there and then came east to Heightstown, N. J., where he attended Peddie school to prepare himself for college. Attending prep school and college is an expensive process and, although he was only 14 years of age at the time, he started to work in a theatre to earn his expenses. Not only did he succeed in sending himself through school and college, but he accumulated a lot of experience which was immensely useful to him later on.

Upon leaving college, the flair for writing which he had acquired through his theatrical contacts, developed into a definite impetus, and he began work with Collier's Magazine, where he spent two years, first in the editorial and then in the advertising department. Then the whirlwind seized him and he sailed for off Singapore to work with the Singapore F. M. S. Motion Picture Exchange.

Returning to this country in 1914, McCurdy continued in the motion picture line, spending four years in the distributing departments of the World Film Corporation, Fox and Pathé. Then he became house manager of the Circle theatre in Indianapolis and remained there two years.

Evidently it was he that he found the medium he was best adapted for. So successful was he in conducting the theatre that he was made general manager of the F. J. Gregory Theatrical Enterprises of Indianapolis, and one year later, was taken into the home office of Universal, where he spent three years in the theatre management department.

Just about that time, Douglas Fairbanks was looking for an enterprise special representative, and McCurdy was selected for the job. After one year with Fairbanks, he became general manager of the S. J. Gregory Theatrical Enterprises of Chicago and Indiana, and it was from there, one year later, that he entered the employ of Publix.

McCurdy's first position with Publix was as city manager of the Newman and Royal theatres in Kansas City. Shortly after, he was brought East to fill the position of managing director of the Metropolitan theatre in Boston, stepping off to the Olympia theatre in New Haven, for a few weeks on the way.

When Publix began building its Brookl hospital, Sam Katz, president of the organization, picked McCurdy to head the new job. Commenting on his choice, Katz said he selected McCurdy because he was "the last word in showmen to match the last word theatres."
REDECORATING—WITHOUT CLOSING FOR EVEN A DAY

SOMETHING new in the way of ingenious resourcefulness is shown in the successful manner in which the Bijou Keith theatre in Ottawa, Canada, was redecorated and made over in the midst of a busy season without darkening the house and without interrupting or maruing a single performance. The interior of the theatre, not having been painted or decorated for almost eight years, was in the greater need of re-decoration than was the case with most of the great increase of patronage and popularity this season.

Not wishing to close even for a week, a plan was evolved by which the work of the painters and decorators could be completed at night; and carried on in a manner that would not interfere with the next day's matinée or with the convenience and comfort of the audiences. A crew of expert painters was added to the payroll of the theatre. These men started work immediately after the close of the night show, used an extra quantity of “driers” in their paint and worked five hours. In harmonious conformity with the tapestries and fixed decorations of the theatre, the painters symmetrically covered the panels, plasters and other wall spaces so that they would appear unfinished, or out of harmony, even for a day. For the backgrounds, apple green was chosen as the most effective color, but this was relieved by cerulean blue, a combination much approved by interior decorators of large auditoriums. In the Keith Ottawa theatre, dark velours and brocades are likewise used in tapestries and mural effects, and the new painting harmonizes most effectively with the textiles of the upholstery and tapestry.

Upon the opening of the theatre for the matinees, it was found that the paint applied during the previous night was quite dry and unaffected. There were no indications of a temporary or unfinished job. The effect is that of a wholly transformed interior. Green parchment wall shades for the electric brackets were also installed during the night, and the entire undertaking was completed at a cost and with a rapidity which no outside contractor, perhaps, would have guaranteed.

Theatre Bandit Captured;
Manager's Clothes Taken
(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 12.—A man giving his name as Tom Pappas was overpowered by a bystander as he was attempting to escape with $50 in cash which he had taken from a motion picture theatre in Danville, Illinois. Pappas is said to have admitted that he is wanted in a $25,000 bond for the robbery of a bank in Kansas City, Missouri.

Two bandits forced Maurice Stuhl, manager of the Wellston theatre, Wellston, Missouri, to disrobe on February 4 when they discovered he was carrying but $35 in cash. He was left shivering in his underwear and overcoat, the robbers escaping in his automobile with them.

The garden effect is still further heightened.

Crowning heavy stone pilasters along the "garden" wall are large marble vases filled with foliage and flowers, on which play lights from lamps concealed within the vases. The ceiling is painted a dark blue and is dotted with silver stars. The only ceiling lights are four white bulb lamps on unobstrusive fixtures. These are used only for general house lighting.

Near the stage the design takes on the form of a cove, which rise almost to the ceiling. These are in relief, and behind their tops are concealed blue lights. One "castle" houses the organ pipes, the other contains the heating and ventilating ducts. All openings are heavily gridded, and over the upper openings are swung awnings of silver and green striped cloth supported by lances. Two large bronze gates, on either side of which are antique bronze lanterns shedding a soft amber light, serve to blend the castles and garden walls into one continuous decorative scheme.

The proscenium arch continues the Spanish architectural effect presented by the castles, a massive stone arch and pilasters framing curtains of heavy velour. On each curtain in a golden wreath is the letter "V." The stage opening is 27 feet wide and 18 feet high. The stage has a depth of 18 feet. Equipment includes a variety of scenery, dressing rooms and modern stage lighting.

The heating and ventilating plants are located beneath the stage, enclosed in a fireproof casing. The shops and apartments are heated by steam, the theatre by hot air. It has been demonstrated that in zero weather the theatre can be comfortably heated in less than 30 minutes.

The logs at the rear of the auditorium serve decoratively to break the continuity of the wall. Over their sides are draped Spanish shawls. Between them is the projection room, which is so designed that sound equipment may later be added. The booth equipment includes two Simplex machines and a spotlight.

The seats are designed according to the motif of the interior, upholstering being in red and black leather. The standards likewise are finished in red and black with gold highlights. The auditorium measures 85 feet long, 47 feet wide and approximately 30 feet high.

The structure as a whole is built of concrete and hollow tile.

The policy calls for pictures with vaudeville every Wednesday night. Sunday shows have been run with little opposition reported from the townpeople, who at last have a theatre which enables them to get the entertainment they want without taking a cross-country journey.

C. C. Cassidy is manager of the Tivoli. At the organ, which is a Wicks, William Blanchard presides. Hugo Hauck is projectionist.

Here, then, is an economically constructed theatre in a small town which has changed a bad theatrical atmosphere in the town. Not long ago—but why speak of what was? The Tivoli has justified its owner's faith in his town. For example, during the period of the worst weather conditions that Indiana has known for many years and till the influenza epidemic raging, the Tivoli continued to play to a constantly increasing number of patrons. Spencer is too small a place to furnish all the results noted. Some of the people must have come from beyond Spencer. And that was what Viquesney expected they would do when Spencer was given an attractive, modern theatre.

He's got to keep a file and use some of the ideas.

"If a poster artist will work up a regular color schedule he will be able to shoot out some displays that really pull. He won't be using the same colors too often. And if they are rotated in a right order, many years, and if they are rotated in a right order, many years...."

"I used a green background for the picture 'Lonesome,' and this worked out wonderfully well.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly to old poster artists the importance of playing the mystery picture with color. With right use of black to depict shadows, etc. and white to depict ghosts, one can work very suitable posters. And it is this kind of painting, in my opinion, that helps get people into the theatre. Get those kind of post in the lobby, and the pulling power of a picture cannot help but be increased."

"MacDonald keeps in touch with many post artists in other theatres throughout the country. They exchange ideas and in that way I each other, and I am told the trade dyes that experience has shown him that this idea change is extremely valuable.

British Skepticism Over Audien
Shots Producers Using Sound for Shor

LONDON—By Edward—War Bros have been packing the Piccadilly for months past, first with the "Jazz Singer" followed by "The Home Towners" and Fa dre Frederick in "On Trial." The Regal, newly built, super, has been playing to capacity with unheard of waiting lines. "The Singing Fool," of course, has already set up a new record with "Lonesome." Huge crowds have besieged the theatre at all playing hours.

Critics are divided as to the relative merit of the sound films shown at the Plaza, Pem, and Regal and Universal's Rialto. The former two, it is said, have broken down the earlier prejudices of some of the leading critics, a great section of the industry. Several British producers are using sound for short features and for effect.

In Kings Beach Division of the Highiv London, Herbert Wilcox Productions, Lc don, brings an action against First Nation Pictures, London, alleged an breach of con greement regarding the distribution of the film "I Only Way," in which Sir John Martin Harvey stars. Under a settlement date March 20, 1925, Wilcox alleged that First Nation agreed to distribute the film and now block-booked instead of being exploited individually.

Welded Wire Reels Are Made for Sound U.
(Special to Better Theatres)

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A new line of welded wire reels, especially designed for in connection with the new industry, is being manufactured by the Universal Electric Welding Company, 90 Webster avenue, Isl. City. The wire, galvanized, has eliminated cramping, screws and pins. The reels are available in four sizes, as follows:

10-inch reel—2-inch drum for 1,000 feet.
11-inch reel—5-inch drum for 1,000 feet.
14-inch reel—4-inch drum for 2,000 feet.
15-inch reel—5-inch drum for 2,000 feet.

A FINE EXAMPLE OF MEDIUM-SIZED THEATRES

West Coast even plans to use it as a model for others in the Circuit

The California theatre in San Bernardino, a West Coast house, is in design, furnishing and equipment an excellent example of the fine medium-sized theatre in thriving cities. It serves as a model for others under construction or being planned.

The California seats 1,850. The balcony is given over to loges. The California is decorated in a modified Spanish motif, with elaborate plaster work in festoons, panels and borders. Open grilles, finished in dull gold, hide the pipes of the organ on either side of the proscenium arch.

Rich furnishings in the foyer, mezzanine floor and ladies' and gentlemen's restrooms, also carry out the Spanish motif.

One of the features of the California is the installation of a Carrier Centrifugal refrigeration and heating system. This is one of the few of its kind on the Pacific Coast and aids in the warm weather of the Southern California summers to keep the temperature at the lowest possible figure consistent with health. It can be controlled from the booth.

The stage is one of the largest of any house outside of metropolitan cities.
THEY SHOW HOW THEY LIKE THIS MODERN THEATRE

THAT all seats were sold out for the first week of operation, with prospects that they would be sold out each evening for at least a month, is the reception given the new Fitchburg theatre of the Maine and New Hampshire Corporation, which was dedicated the evening of February 7. The new theatre replaces the Lyric of the same corporation. The general construction is of steel girders and brick, with white granite outer walls and polished granite marble-effect interior. Frank W. Hollis, formerly of the vaudeville team of Kenney and Hollis, well known in the East, is manager of the new theatre.

The seating capacity is 1,750. When the building was designed, it was found possible to seat 2,000 but more space was given in the interest of comfort. Publix deluxe leather upholstered, spring-bottom seats were installed by Heywood-Wakefield. All corridors and floors are heavily carpeted. Lighting is modernistic, with fixtures similar to those in the New Boston Gardens. Hy-lum lamps of 75 amperes are used in the booth, and it is said they give better results than the 125-amperes lights. The spotlights in the booth are set in gelatin frames, controlled from the rear. Stage lighting towers, modern footlights, deep purple curtains with an admixture of red are among the appointments. The stage has a 40-foot opening and 25-foot depth. Tapestrys are red and gold; and the carpeting, red and blue.

It is the second theatre in New England to have installed the Photophone system of reproduction, the other installation being in Providence. Equipment includes a $15,000 Wurlitzer organ.

The interior is built on the stadium plan without posts or obstructions. The policy will be to reserve the orchestra circle. The marquee contains 400 individual lamps of the gelatin type. The display frames are of the latest type, separated by long mirrors.

A feature of the construction is the double circuit lighting system. One circuit is on the city current, and another on a battery system. There are two heating ducts, one direct for taking the chill off, and another for warming the house. The latter is indirect heating. The operation is automatic, with an air mixer maintaining an even temperature. There are two intake fans and two exhaust fans, giving a change of 25 cubic feet a second. The state regulation is but 15 feet.

HOW TO REDECORATE

CONWAY, N. H.—To the Editor: First I would like to say that I find your "Better Theatres" issues very helpful and interesting. I have noted that you have helped other exhibitors in giving valuable information about building and equipping theatres and am writing in the hope that you will suggest some way of fixing up the interior of my small theatre at not too great a cost, still making it attractive to the patrons.

I am enclosing a plan of the theatre. The color scheme at present is as follows: Woodwork and chairs are dark walnut. Walls are papered tan, like sample enclosed. The paper is in good condition. The ceiling is a flat surface with a five-inch gold moulding along the edge and is painted a dark green. These were the colors when I bought the theatre, and I want to make a change. Would an ivory painted ceiling give it height, and would you recommend paneling squares on the present wall paper? Would you place double or single candle light fixtures on the walls and what colors? At present I have six white 12-inch bowls hanging by three chains from the ceiling.

There are seven windows in the building, with ordinary green window shades. What could I put over these windows or what color of shades? It has to be something to keep out the light.

I will be very grateful for any suggestions you make.—J. C. Boudreau, Bijou theatre, Conway, N. H.

REPLY.—Your sketches show that your ceiling is low. By all means remove the dark green from it and repaint it in a light color. It must give a closed-in effect now. Ivory might be used—even a flat white. On the other hand, you have seven windows to contend with. They are unusual in an auditorium and furnish quite a problem. Any light ceiling, of course, will reflect a great deal of light. Yet a light ceiling you must have. Now, you say that your woodwork is walnut. Why not, then, a golden tan ceiling? This, of course, would be a richer and more theatre-like color than ivory or white—and much more easily kept clean. The tan would also harmonize with your paper, which has tan in it. Be sure, however, that the tan is bright, golden—not muddy! Another color might also be effective, blue—a light tint. This would be harmonious as tan with the paper.

The windows will always be an alien p of your auditorium design, but since they are there and until you see fit to remove them, you will have to be considered. Better to ignore them than you can't, to frankly include them in your decorat scheme. But you want to do this in a way which does not interfere with the rest of the room. Dark drapes would carry each window to stand out prominently, would even heavily draped windows if much contrast to the surrounding part. Yainscot is walnut, your paper essentially mixture, of tan and blue, the third color is the foundation of the room itself as well as r. Light blue is a rather sickly color for a theatre auditorium wall where emotions are likely to be experienced and dissipated. It might, therefore, use brown drapes, being that the material has a glossy surface. Oak drapes also ought to be heavy—of an im frame. Traditional decoration should be done in a ch, or the effect would be worse than decorative treatment. It is possible to completely modernize the display of which would fit the window frame concealing them entirely. These should be used for one sheets, but could contain an in which are pronounced and announcing coming attractions. If possible, these could be a hand-lettered. Otherwise, they should be carefully printed words, should be mounted on a gray background. Let the tinge be in dignified black. The cards will not come to less than three inches from frame itself, perhaps just a few words; such as "John Garbo—Colleen Brow in All About L—Thursday, Friday." Place a small light side or overhead and reflected against the card, if such lights do cause a disturbing glow out into the auditorium. The lights to be used are similar to those employed in art galleries or on music stands. They are of brass, long and slender, and the shield almost encloses the lamp. It is possible these could be used in this manner no lights need be used.

It is not particularly desirable to panel your walls. This has been done so much that perhaps you would gain in originality what you would lose in effect, to leave the walls plain. And after all, perhaps the effect to be gained by paneling is not more ordinarty than is achieved by simplicity. In your case pane is especially not to be suggested because your high wainscot. As to the use of single or double walls, that depends on how much you want to pay. Double lights would be a little richer than single ones. Center one in the 9x10 space between each window. These lights have are well adapted to your paneling, decoratively at least.—Exhibition St. DEPARTMENT OF BETTER THEATRES.

AUSTIN GETS NEW PARAMOUNT CONTRACT

NEW YORK—Edward Sedgwick, who has been a successful director for the past two years on M.O.M. shows, has signed a new long-term contract with the organization. Sedgwick's latest signed was on "Spive Marriage."

Sound Merchandising of Theatre Equipment

May 11 will mark the sixth anniversary of "Better Theatres."

It is an important date in the motion picture industry. Prior to the late Spring of 1923, manufacturers of theatre equipment had no means of backing up their sales efforts with advertising on a sound and economical basis.

Only a handful of equipment manufacturers used trade paper advertising at the time. Their copy was hopelessly lost in a maze of motion picture advertising.

The "Better Theatres" idea opened up a tremendous new service to them. It made national distribution possible and practical for scores of manufacturers. Trade names and trade marks of worthy product could be popularized nationally with reasonable advertising appropriations.

"Better Theatres" today is an institution. It has never wavered from its original purpose of advocating sound merchandising through consistent and informative advertising. This issue—and every other issue—is the best proof of its intelligently realizing the needs of the field and meeting them.

...and please keep all those M-G-M folk in the best of health...so that they may turn out more pictures that bring happiness like Ramon Novarro in 'The Flying Fleet,' John Gilbert and Greta Garbo in 'A Woman of Affairs,' William Haines in 'Alias Jimmy Valentine,' 'The Belamy Trial' and all those glorious successes which have brought us abundant profits this season. Amen.

It's a pleasure to report, as we go to press, that "THE BROADWAY MELODY," playing twice daily, at 2, as broken every existing record, with tremendous advance sale, at the Astor Theatre, N. Y. and at woman's Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles. There has never been anything like it in all picture history.)
Whether it be in the magnificent "New Loew's State" in Providence, or in Central America's theatre beautiful - "The Cecilia" in Panama City, or in the luxurious "Pantages Theatres" in California - in fact, wherever enterprising showmen demand the best, you will hear enthusiastic endorsement of the Robert Morton Unit Organ as a musical attraction.

No other organ approaches Robert Morton in quality, volume, distinctiveness of tone, orchestral resources or variety of effects. Exclusive process of manufacture, structural improvements, and patented features found in no other organ, make it distinctly different from all others.

WHERE ON THIS EARTH CAN YOU match this most amazing collection of box office values in any one entertainment?

FIRST, EDNA FERBER'S best-selling novel "Show Boat." (a)

SECOND, FLORENZ ZIEGFELD'S musical stage production of "Show Boat." (b)

THIRD, JEROME KERN'S EXQUISITE music. (c)

FOURTH, OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN's
2d's, heart-touching lyrics. (d)

FIFTH, HARRY POLLARD'S DIRE-tion. (e)

(a) MISS FERBER IS ONE OF THE GREATEST LIVING
AUTHORS. Every book she writes is a best-seller. "Show Boat" topped them all in sales and the royalties from it still pour in upon this gifted young woman.

(b) FLORENZ ZIEGFELD IS EASILY THE WORLD'S greatest producer of brilliant musical shows. Paying as high as $25 per seat to see one of his productions is nothing startling to New York. And now, for the first time, the cream of his best is sent out to the whole world to be enjoyed at popular prices within the reach of all.

(c) MR. KERN IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL LIVING composer of music for musical comedies. He is a multi-millionaire as the result of royalties from his world-known music hits.

(d) MR. HAMMERSTEIN, A MEMBER OF ONE OF THE most illustrious stage families in America, adapted Miss Ferber's book for Mr. Ziegfeld, wrote the lyrics and produced the London engagement of "Show Boat."

Straight Ahead,” and others which have fattened your bank account.

(f) THESE NAMES SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES. MISS LaPlante, Mr. Schildkraut and Mr. Harlan have always been associated with successful pictures.

(g) MISS MORGAN IS THE GREATEST LIVING SINGER of crooning love songs. She has “it” and she puts it into her work.

(h) MR. BLEDSOE IS THE GREATEST LIVING NEGRO singer. He is now singing in concerts. I don’t suppose any one thing contributed more to the success of Mr. Ziegfeld’s show than Bledsoe’s rendition of “Ol’ Man River.”

(i) THE PLANTATION SINGERS WILL DELIGHT YOU with their rich, mellow voices, such as are found only within the negro race. They are a terrific hit on the stage. They will sing for you in “Show Boat.”

A HARRY POLLARD PRODUCTION

Movietone Direction by Harry Pollard and Arch Heath

The grandest show ever put on! As a novel it took the country by storm... as a Ziegfeld Musical Comedy it was a sensation... as Carl Laemmle's Movietone Triumph it's the biggest thing that ever happened in motion pictures.

That's glittering, gorgeous, glamorous Show Boat.

Seats sold for as high as $25.00 each at the Ziegfeld Theatre, New York. Now as a motion picture it marks a new era in entertainment.

This is the first time in show business history that the smallest towns, villages and hamlets can see and hear the highlights of a big $7.70 per seat musical comedy hit on the screen while the Broadway production is still running.

The brilliant Universal cast of screen stars including Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan, Alma Rubens, Emily Fitzroy, Jane LaVerne and hundreds of others.

That's SHOW BOAT with the greatest array of stage and screen celebrities ever identified with one picture.

Dismiss forever the worries associated with securing the product after sound equipment is installed. Theatres large and small are cashing in on the public demand for sound pictures by installing Pacent Reproducer Systems.

Pacent Reproducer Systems are designed right, built right, sold right, and serviced right. Producers know the merits of Pacent equipment. They know that our reproducer systems reproduce their product as it should be reproduced. Extensive tests made before the first Pacent Reproducer was installed convinced producers of the worth of our equipment.

ADVERTISEMENTS

A Spirited Rivalry

THE quickening of rivalry between the proponents of the sound-on-film method of reproduction and the sound-on-disc bespeaks healthy competition in the production of audiences. Undoubtedly, it will play its part in the advancement of pictures made with sound.

It is healthy that the argument between these two schools of sound reproduction should have as its most important point the matter of quality. Other considerations are minor, relatively unimportant, as compared with the one vital question of quality.

Sidney R. Kent, of Paramount, fired one of the opening guns. Upon his return from Hollywood recently, he stated it as his conviction that quality sound reproduction comes best from the film system, rather than the disc, and that the tendency in future productions will be to lean more and more to the film system. Mr. Kent cited the superb reproduction of “Interference,” made by Paramount, as preparation for what may be expected from the sound-on-film method of reproduction.

Lou B. Metzger, general manager of the Universal Pictures Corporation, came out this week with strong support for Mr. Kent’s contention. He not only insists that the sound-on-film method of reproduction is the best, but is so enthusiastic that he insists the industry adopt it exclusively.

Mr. Metzger asserts that the industry cannot support both. “Anyone who thinks that the screen can hang on to both systems simultaneously is kidding himself,” is his cryptic way of putting it. He points out that two methods of sound reproduction forces the industry into an annoyingly uneconomical duplication of production: producers, to take full advantage of the possibilities before them, will have to make three styles of prints, one sound-on-film, one silent, and one with discs.

It is obvious, of course, that such important factors in the industry as Warner Brothers and First National would vigorously dispute any claims of superior quality made by those who advocate the sound-on-film method. They believe firmly in the advantages, including quality, of the disc method of reproduction and are ready to point to the success of so many of their products.

That the sound-on-disc method of sound reproduction has a growing circle of admirers may be gathered from the recent alliance made between the enterprise Columbia organization and the Victor Talking Machine Company to join hands in the production of short pictures. Certainly neither of these two companies is willing to give even an inch of ground before the advancing phalanx of sound-on-disc supporters.

The competition between the two energetic groups, as I said before, is a healthy sign. It seems that both groups will press their claims of superiority in the field of quality reproduction, which will do more than anything else actually to improve the quality of reproduction and therefore advance pictures made with sound.

Quality in reproduction is the most important factor in the making of pictures with sound.

The Selling Season

ALTHOUGH no announcement has been made of the fact, it is common knowledge among producers that the selling season has been postponed from the first of May until the middle of June.

This emphasizes, more than any other recent happening, the importance sound has assumed in the motion picture industry. It is no secret, of course, that the postponement of the selling season was caused by unavoidable delays in getting out sound product.

Fortunately, producers realize that sound pictures are well out of the novelty stage. The public is no longer satisfied to see a sound picture just because it is a sound picture. It must first be a good picture; as Adolph Zukor so ably stated, in his recent interview in the Herald-World, quality is uppermost in importance in the production of the modern motion pictures.

The delay in the selling season will succeed in bringing better pictures to the exhibitor, and this is always a consummation devoutly to be wished.

More Unfair Advertising

THE attention of the industry was called last week, on this page, to a particularly pernicious and objectionable type of advertising now seen through the country. It was advertising on behalf of a patent medicine known as Grove’s “Bromo Quinine” and it intimated that theatres were unhealthy places and that their patrons needed protection from ills. It featured the head of a person wearing a gas mask and was entitled “dressed for the theatre.”

Unfortunately, not all the unfair advertising comes from without. This week it becomes necessary to point out that certain theatres advertise a picture as being shown “for the last time” when it is known to all interested that the picture will soon appear again at a neighborhood house. This is manifestly unfair and can have no other effect than to weaken public confidence in pictures.
Demand for Better Films Met, Federal Census Bureau Finds

Big Gain in Production Costs Points to Higher Standard Set

Biennial Census for 1927 Shows 43.5 Per Cent Greater Outlay in Picture Making Than in 1925

By FRANCIS L. BURT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Some idea of the money which is flowing through the motion picture industry may be gleaned from figures just compiled by the United States Census Bureau as a result of its biennial census of manufactures for 1927, which show that 142 studios and laboratories providing data reported a total cost of production for the year of $134,343,360.

The 1927 total clearly indicates the efforts of the producers to meet the demand for better pictures, since it is 43.5 per cent greater than the production cost total of $93,636,348 reported for 1925.

The figures compiled by the bureau cover silent pictures only, sound films not having become an important factor in the industry in 1927, but it is anticipated that in the next census, covering 1929, some attention will be paid to this new development in the art, if census officials find it possible to segregate costs of sound and silent films.

Covers All Production Angles

The bureau's survey of the motion picture industry covers all processes and activities in connection with production, such as the photography of scenes, the development of exposure films, the printing of projection films, and other studio and laboratory work necessary in connection with the preparation of films for projection, but does not cover distribution of projection in theatres.

The 142 establishments reporting for 1927 were an increase of 10, or 7.6 per cent, over the 132 reporting for 1925. Seventy-eight of them were located in California, 21 in New York, six each in New Jersey and Ohio, five in Illinois, four in Pennsylvania, three each in Massachusetts and Michigan, and the remaining 16 were scattered among 10 states.

Incidentally more people were engaged in the industry in 1927 than in 1925. The number of salaried officers and employees increased from $945 to 7,850,117 per cent; while salary payments increased from $35,950,778 to $56,298,560, or 56.6 per cent. The number of wage earners increased from an average of 5,573 in 1925 to an average of 8,415 in 1927, or 51 per cent, while aggregate wage payments increased from $13,065,756 to $18,637,005, or 42.6 per cent.

Other costs also increased, the total paid for materials, supplies, fuel, and purchased power jumping from $33,258,368 to $34,867,472, or 4.8 per cent, while the amount paid for contract work, included in which was the rental of studios, together with the necessary electric power, stage settings, labor and minor role actors, rose from $3,368,593 to $15,476,348, or 483.3 per cent.

Other Expenses Almost Doubled

In addition, in 1927 there were other expenses, such as story costs, home office overhead, stars' expenses, insurance, etc., totaling $9,063,775, compared with $5,992,843 in 1925.

In preparing its figures for 1927, the Census Bureau has broken down the total production cost so as to show the amount expended for each class of films, which was not done in making previous censuses. Thus, it is shown that in 1927 there were 1,347 theatrical films completed at a cost of $92,593,732, this being the only class for which the number was obtained, while $2,499,600 was spent on news films, $817,466 on advertising films, $337,159 on educational films and $615,262 on other films, a total of $96,663,692, against $64,506,985 in 1925, an increase of 50.9 per cent.

Laboratory Outlay Grows

A total of $13,267,338 was expended on productions not completed during the year, against $7,451,652 in 1925, an increase of 78 per cent, and $24,412,743 was spent for laboratory expense, against $22,147,891, an increase of 10.2 per cent. The 1927 laboratory figures were broken down by the bureau, showing $12,491,088 spent for positive films and $11,921,665 representing laboratory work done for others.

Analysis of the figures for the production cost of theatrical films shows that an average of slightly over $687.40 was spent per film, but this figure, of course, is of little value, since some films were produced very inexpensively while others required the expenditure of huge sums of money.

Mysterious Fire Razes $250,000 Southern House

TUPELO, MISS., Feb. 19.—Fire of undetermined origin early last week destroyed the new $250,000 State theatre, entailing a property loss of $275,000 to mercantile concerns. The building, which occupied half a block, was a two story structure with the theatre occupying the ground floor.

Photoplay Launches Fan Competition for Dialogue Film Name

And now the fans are being asked to think up the “right” word to express with the proper accuracy and dignity the new type of screen play, talking pictures. The fans publication, Photoplay Magazine, has joined the Herald-World in the hunt for a better word than “talkie.” In announcing the contest, Photoplay states:

“Your will be interested to know that one of the leading trade film papers, Exhibitors Herald-World, has been trying for some time to locate a suitable word with which to christen the newly devised talking pictures. This paper has canvassed all the shrewd minds of the industry and prefers the word, Audien.”

An award of $500 awaits the person suggesting the name that the Photoplay editors like the best.

M P T O Protests Free Show Ads of Auto Firm, On Theatrical Page; Wins

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 19.—Placing of teaser ads of free shows to be presented by an automobile company, on the same newspaper page with the theatrical advertising, was the subject of a protest by F. J. Woods, business manager of the Ohio M P T O, and as a result the ads were thereafter run on some other page.

The ads are part of a national campaign conducted by the Studebaker Motor Corporation, and invite the public to see Moviemone showings of vaudeville performers, the teasers not naming the place of exhibition.

Theatre Tieups with Boys’ Week Urged

Exhibitors are asked to join with the National Boys’ Week Committee in the observance of aotive from April 27 to May 4 as a move for special activities for boys. It is expected that in many theatres programmes of special interest to boys will be presented. More than 3,000 cities and millions of boys will participate in Boys’ Week this year, according to Walter W. Head of Omaha, chairman. Headquarters of the committee is at 211 West Wacker Drive, Chicago.
NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The Warner Brothers are extending their influence on Broadway. It became known here today that they will construct a huge theatre on the site of the present Strand and that they have plans, furthermore, for another big structure opposite the present Warner theatre and the Capitol. Plans for the structure that will replace the Strand have been definitely announced. This will be a skyscraper office building and theatre to rival the great 52-story building planned by the Fox Theatre Corporation, directly across the street. For this purpose the Stanley Company of America, controlled by the Warners, has acquired a 99-year lease on Broadway extending the full block from Forty-seventh to Forty-eighth Streets.

Just when the Strand will be torn down to make room for the new skyscraper has not been decided. Al Jolson, who has the Strand theatre, something of a landmark in New York, will not be torn down for at least another year.

Skyscraper Structure Temporary

Plans for a new Warner theatre further uptown on Broadway, on the site occupied by a low store and office building just near the present Warner theatre, have not yet been made public. However, it was learned from a source close to the Warners that the structure now nearing completion is more or less of a temporary proposition awaiting such a time as the Warners decide to build. When the new skyscraper and the giant building of the Fox Theatre Corporation are built, Broadway will have three huge buildings, motion picture interests within five blocks. The Fox building is to rise at the southwest corner of Broadway and Forty-seventh street. The Paramount Building on Broadway, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets, completes the trio.

Strand First Big Film Theatre

Announcement that the Warner interests would add a new tower to the Broadway view held double interest to many. In the first place, it meant the addition of another theatre to that Theatre District. The Strand, opened in April, 1914, was the first of the large motion picture houses. A second point of interest was the fact that the Warner Brothers—Harry, Albert and Jack—have in a little more than two years time risen from a precarious start to eminence in the motion picture world. For 25 years they have been in the business as exhibitors, distributors and producers.

Faced with two business crises, the brothers managed to recoup their forces each time. On Oct. 6, 1927, when their Vitaphone singing pictures were declared a failure, the Warners did not lose heart. "The Toast Singer," opened at the Warner theatre, they met their first spectacular success.

Strength Shown by Merger

The strength of the new organization is indicated by the merger effected last October, when Warner Bros. pictures, Inc., the Vitaphone Corporation, the Stanley Company, the American and First National Pictures, Inc., were brought under one control. The combined assets were then listed at $100,000,000 and the combined value of the business of the companies was more than $100,000,000.

On the program of the Strand when it opened in 1914 was an announcement relative to the moving picture which was then only rising as a legitimate means of entertainment.

"Within the last few years it has become convincingly demonstrated that motion pictures have come to stay; that they are yet in their infancy and have untold possibilities for further development. The evolution from the storeroom picture house to the small theatre and then to the regular theatre, and finally to palatial buildings like the Strand is but the natural growth of progress."

Moe Mark and Mitchell Mark were the builders of the theatre. It has a frontage of 135 feet on Broadway, beginning at Forty-seventh street, and extends to within 50 feet of the corner of Forty-eighth street. Its depth along Forty-seventh street is 227 feet. The property has become so valuable that the owners felt that it should be improved to keep up with the pace of the street.

Coast Bank Appoints William R. Fraser of Lloyd Firm, Executive

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 19.—Announcement has been made of the appointment of William R. Fraser as vice president of the California National Bank, Beverly Hills. The announcement was made by A. E. Hunt, president of the Beverly Hills institution.

Fraser has been general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation since 1922 and has been prominent in financial activities in Los Angeles, serving on the board of directors of the California Trust Company, as well as the California National. In addition he is also director of the American Grain Cross, foremost in national conservation of timber lands, director in the Association of Motion Picture Producers, vice president and director of the Central Casting Corporation, and director of the Hollywood Athletic Club and Masquers Club. Fraser started in the industry after 15 years in the government forest service, where he yearly handled numerous big timber and other deals. Since the financial affairs of Lloyd, as well as of the Lloyd organization which he formed.

Audit Confirms Supremacy of Herald-World in Circulation

2,150 Pages of Ads;
3,126 of Text in '28

It is interesting to note what the 12,865 paid subscribers to Exhibitors Herald-World received in return for their money during the first year of the merged publication.

Retaining the best features of both the Herald and the World, the fifty-two issues during the year of 1928 contained a total of 5,276 pages—an average of more than 100 pages per issue.

Of these pages, approximately 2,150 were devoted to advertising and 3,126 to text and illustrations.

For convenience in binding, it was necessary to divide the issues of the year into four volumes—\( \frac{2}{3} \) inches thick and one 4 inches thick. The total weight of the four bound volumes, containing the complete file of the Herald-World for the year of 1928, is slightly in excess of 41 pounds.

One of the most remarkable facts disclosed is that the Herald-World circulation today is not only larger than any previous circulation in grand total, but it sets a new mark in all of the various divisions of the country—east, south, central and west—and a new mark for foreign circulation.

A. B. C. Audit Thorugh Audits, as conducted by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, leave little room for error in reaching the totals. Not only is the mailing list thoroughly checked but individual subscribers are traced back through cash books and to the original orders. If any doubt exists as to the validity of subscriptions, questionnaires to the subscribers are mailed by the Audit Bureau.

To further guard against either error or fraud, invoices are carefully checked for the entire period. Printer's invoices verify the total number of copies printed each week.

One of the final steps is checking up with the United States post office, examining the receipts from the government for the money paid for the magazines mailed second class during the year.

Classification of subscribers is established in the same painstaking way, publishers being asked to produce letter heads, business cards or signed questionnaires from subscribers indicating their connection with the industry.

Despite the thoroughness of the audit, membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations is no burden, as the records which must be kept to comply with the bureau's requirements are only those which any efficient publishing company would want for its own information—basic records in fact which would have to be kept if any intelligent analysis of the subscription list was to be made for any purpose.

Without these records, the publisher would have no accurate check either on the efficiency of his circulation department or upon the reader appeal of the magazine's editorial text.

Cost of membership for trade publications is slight, as the major expense of maintaining a membership is paid by all of the leading national advertisers and advertising agencies and the leading daily newspapers and magazines of general circulation. The dues of the Herald-World are $3.00 per year. For trade publications having circulations of less than 10,000, the cost is $1.00 per week, and for those under 5,000 the cost is $0.50 per week.

Two Points May Surprise

People in the motion picture industry, who have not made a close study of trade paper circulations during the past eight years, will undoubtedly be surprised at the eastern and foreign circulation of the Herald-World as revealed by the audit statement.

An analysis of the December 29, 1928, issue reveals that the Herald-World has a paid circulation in New England of 881; in the Middle Atlantic states (New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania) of 1,948 even in the South Atlantic states (Delaware to Florida) of 914.

The uninforme have from time to time uncritically credited the so-called "Eastern" trade papers with a predominance over the Herald-World in these three sections. The analysis shows that the Herald-World has approximately 350 more paid subscribers in eastern territory than was shown by any other paper in the field in the last available audits. It is reasonable to presume that its lead today in that territory exceeds 1,000.

The analysis also shows that outside of the borders of the United States, the Herald-World has more than 1,000 paid subscriptions. (Continued on next page)
Veidt Sees Both Sound and Silent Film Growing but Dialogue Fading

German Film Star, on Way Overseas, Says Music Has Everything to Do With Film Drama But Spoken Word Nothing

(NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Conrad Veidt, German film star, believes that in a year there will be a very sharp division between sound and silent pictures and that dialogue pictures, except in very rare instances, will fall by the wayside as not wanted. Veidt, who speaks with a decided accent, said this Saturday in a HERALD-WORLD interview in his suite at the Hotel Warwick an hour before he sailed for Germany on the Deutschland. His statement has an added significance coming after his completion of an exceptional dialogue film, “The Man Who Laughs,” which was made in Hollywood by Universal.

“DIALOGUE,” Veidt said, “has nothing to do with a film drama. Music has everything to do with it. Music helps to set the tempo of the film’s dialogue disrupts it.

“You go to the pictures to see. You hear only incidentally. I do not think that the film is the proper medium for the spoken word. Soon we shall have better silent pictures than the ones T. H. [Thomas H. Ince] has dreamed of. Soon we shall have better sound pictures than we now imagine possible. But, except for musical comedy stuff, we will probably have very little dialogue. It just does not fit in.

“Veidt will attend the German opening of “The Man Who Laughs” at the Universal Theatre in Berlin. It is the big new UFA house and the opening, to come with the Veidt picture, has been postponed till the arrival of the man himself.

“Veidt thinks his best picture is the “Cabinet of Dr. Caligari.” He hopes to get a producer to do Leon Feuchtwanger’s great story, “Power,” in which he will take the role of Jew Suss. Later he expects to star in and direct what he calls an artistic sound picture. So far, he believes, all the work with this medium has been largely mechanical, has been done with too little feeling.

“Veidt has in his pocket offers from British International, several Hollywood companies, four German producers and an Italian. He probably will accept one of them by radio before he reaches Hamburg.

“Veidt is not Hollywood is one of the most beautiful spots in the world and that most of the good pictures are made there. It is so beautiful that it makes him creatively lazy, he said, which is why he stays there only six months at a time. He expects to return there in seven or eight months.

“And he was so surprised at the spontaneous applause of an old foreign film that he rushed out to the lobby with tears streaming down his cheeks. Today he apologized for having been so emotional. ‘It surprised me so,’ he said.

A. B. C. Audit Confirms Herald-World Supremacy In Circulation in Industry

—68 in Alaska and U. S. possessions, 407 in Canada, and 561 in foreign countries.

The entire audit statement is of special interest to companies of advertising space, and to the student of trade journalism.

It is revealed that exhibitors represented 82.85 per cent. of the paid subscribers who received the December 29 issue—a total of 10,136.

No premiums were employed to obtain circulation. No clubbing offers were made with any other magazine.

Of particular interest is paragraph 26, stating that each copy of each issue was uniform as to contents and quality of paper stock.

It is stated that 2,665 duplications were eliminated prior to the consolidation of the HERALD-WORLD with The January 7, 1928, issue, and that all duplications discovered after the consolidation have been deducted from the net paid and set up under the unpaid total.

All of the information on the circulation of EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, of course, applies to A. B. C. Audit to “The World,” which is published each four weeks as a second section of the regular issue and mailed in the same wrapper with the HERALD-WORLD. It is a part of the regular service to subscribers and all subscribers of EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD receive it without additional charge.

“No Warner-MGM Merger On!”—This Time from Mayer

(HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—A statement issued by Louis B. Mayer, vice president in charge of the Metropolitan Pictures, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, denies the rumored Warner-MGM merger, reported in certain publications.

“Starting a motion picture rumor is one of the most popular of all indoor sports,” the statement reads. “There are, I believe, one or two motion picture companies with which MGM has not as yet been linked in merger rumors. However, I want hourly to hear that MGM is to affiliate with these remaining companies and then the circle will be complete, and we will have Jews merging with every company in the industry. This same situation applies to other important companies in the motion picture business.”

“Once again, I would like to deny a statement recently issued by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew’s, Inc., and of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and which reads as follows: ‘“There is not a particle of truth in any rumors that any of the interests that bear the name of Loew or that are connected with the great business built up by the late Marcus Loew, are for sale, or that they are a party to any merger.’

“Let me state with all the emphasis in my power that there are no banking interests authorized to speak for the Loew company (which controls M.G.M.). Our interests are our own. We are self-controlled and have no representatives.”

World Wide’s “Moulin Rouge” Is Given Trade Showing in R. C. A. Studio

“Redeeming Sin” Lovely For the Lovely Dolores

(NORTH YORK, Feb. 19.—The new Warner Brothers picture, “The Redeeming Sin,” which came to Broadway last night, was distinguished solely for some magnificent photography of the lovely Dolores Costello. The picture itself was not a complete success, but too uneven to warrant a Broadway showing.

The Warners’ theatre was jammed for the opening, as the Warner Brothers pictures of this company have become Broadway events. However, the picture was developed so curiously that the average theatre patron with an average curiosity will take in the picture and the comments of patrons and critics alike were surprising and surprised.

U Signs Harry Jolson

(NORTH YORK, Feb. 19.—Harry Jolson, brother of Al Jolson, has signed a five year contract with Universal, according to an announcement by Carl Laemmle. Jolson’s first picture will be written especially for him.

2,500 Give Up Seats as Union Ban on Sparks Theatres Stops “Rio Rita” Show

(ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 19.—The union classification of the Sparks film theatres here as “unfair” to organized labor prevented the performance by a road company of “Rio Rita” at the municipal auditorium. About 2,500 persons had arrived for the show when W. T. A. Webb, manager of the house, announced that “labor difficulties” made the performance impossible.

The situation arose when a “road call” from the New York headquarters was received by the scene shifters and musicians traveling with the company forbidding them to perform their duties with the company in the auditorium. The theatre has always used union help and is not allied with the Sparks properties, but the union declares that the Sparks circuit is nevertheless interested.

Many of the patrons had come from miles around to see the show. George H. Wiantz, owner of the company, said he could not stage the performance with non-union help because he could not use a theatre classed as “unfair.”
Industry’s Prosperity Shown

In Profits of Two Companies

Paramount Estimates Net at $8,700,000 for 1928, Increase of 8 Per Cent—M G M Lists Net Totaling $5,396,717

For Fiscal Year Ended August 31

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Healthy business status of the motion picture industry is reflected in emphatic terms in the profits of two of the largest producing and distributing companies as shown in their annual financial statements.

Paramount estimates its net for the year ending December 29, at $8,700,000, an increase of 8 per cent over the total of $8,050,000 for 1927, best previous year.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lists its net profits at $5,396,717 for the fiscal year ending August 31. The M G M total includes its 100 per cent owned subsidiaries.

In the Paramount figure is included its 63 per cent undistributed share of earnings of Balaban & Katz. Since then B&K has increased its holdings in B&K to 87 1/4 per cent.

The net profit of Paramount for the year 1928 is equal to $4,232 a share on the common stock entitled to dividend Dec. 29, 1928. The profits for the fourth quarter are estimated at $2,725,000, a new record for the fourth quarter of any year, the prior record having been the first quarter of 1924, when profits were $2,500,000.

Fourth Quarter $1.32 a Share

The profits for the fourth quarter of $2,725,000 are equal to $1.32 a share on the common stock entitled to dividend Dec. 19, 1928. Comparative figures for the year are $6,800,000. Comparative figures for the year are $6,800,000.

Fourth quarter earnings have increased as follows: 1926, $1,900,000; 1927, $2,400,000; 1928, $2,725,000. Annual earnings show the following growth: 1926, $5,000,000; 1927, $8,050,000; 1928, $8,700,000.

On Dec. 28 and 29, 1928, the company issued an additional 100,708 shares of its common stock in exchange for additional common stock of Balaban & Katz Corporation, of which the company now owns a total of approximately 87 1/4 per cent. This additional 100,708 shares did not receive dividends on Dec. 29 and therefore is not considered in the calculation of the per share earnings. In the calculation of earnings for the year, the company has only included 65 per cent of the earnings of Balaban & Katz Corporation, although it is now the owner of approximately 87 1/4 per cent of the stock of this subsidiary.

M G M Assets $33,305,000

The M G M consolidated balance sheet showed assets totaling $33,305,343, and a surplus of $13,188,643 after payment of $332,028 in dividends declared on preferred stock. This surplus included a total of $8,823,954 surplus from April 1927.

The statement showed $7,767,662 capital stock outstanding including $4,665,662 in 172,876 preferred shares at $27 par, and $5,100,000 in 620,000 common shares.

Net operating income was given as $24,905,499, the total income being $25,354,243.

Hoffman Leaving

Tiffany-Stahl; His Holdings are Sold

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Tiffany-Stahl, today announced that he had sold his holdings in the company and would never have his name in the near future.

The amount of the transaction, which was handled by Grant L. Cook, secretary and treasurer, was not disclosed. When interviewed, Hoffman said: "I am not leaving the company immediately and will remain until it will be convenient for all parties to have me go. I do not intend to retire. I feel too young, too active and have too many friends in the business to do that. It would not be fair to state my plans now while I am still with the company. But I will probably take a vacation, possibly a trip to the Orient. My health is excellent and I am rating to go.

RKO Organization Is in Business To Stay,

Says Hiram S. Brown Denying Merger

[Picture of Hiram S. Brown in Pictorial Section]

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19.—Hiram S. Brown, chairman of the board of directors of RKO Productions, Inc., making Radio Pictures, and president of Radio Keith Orpheum theatres, on his arrival here issued a general denial of the rumors that Radio Pictures was to be merged with other film or that the RKO circuit theatres are being operated by other chains.

"We are in this business to stay," Brown told reporters who met him at the Santa Fe station. "There are true and false rumors we are to submerge our corporate identities with those of other companies or that the RKO circuit theatres are operated by other chains.

"We have changed the entire production policy of RKO Productions, Inc., which is to make Radio Pictures. With the advantage of the great scope of our facilities, we feel sure that we can make the best there is in talking as well as silent pictures during the coming year.

"Our RCA Photophone apparatus will soon be in active service recording the important attractions we have correlated, such as 'Rio Rita,' 'Hit the Deck,' 'Upper world,' 'Gold Coast,' Sampson Raphaelson's sequel to 'The Jazz Singer,' called 'My Boy,' and others."
The Very Versatile Mr. Lane

ASTONISHMENT as well as laughter may well proceed from Educational's, "Only Me," which turns out to be only Lupino Lane. For in this two-reel comedy, he runs gamut of comic characterization, as these scenes show. Naturally, only a few of his ingenious burlesques are represented here.

Speculators

THOSE fortunate few producers who get smash hits in legitimate theatres on Broadway ought to keep a wary eye on the speculator evil.

There is no question but that the hijacking of speculators has contributed largely to the dog days of the dramatic stage. People don't want to pay outrageous prices to see stage plays or musical comedies; a speculator within a few doors of the Astor, for instance, is asking $15 each for seats down front at the musical comedy, "Follow Through."

Just now speculators are hounding people who want to see "The Broadway Melody." Obviously, this is not trumped-up ballyhoo, as the speculator racket sometimes is, but interference with the public's desire to see this good picture.

Metro would be smart not to take this buzzing of speculators as a compliment, but as the nuisance it is. In the long run it will pay to keep theatregoing easy.

Singing Acts

I THINK producers of sound shorts are on the wrong foot entirely when they present singers in action or orchestras playing.

Some singers are fine to listen to, but there isn't an operatic or a concert gullet in all the world that's worth looking into. Some orchestras are pleasant to listen to, but none is worth watching. Nine out of ten leaders make pretty dull inspection. Ten out of ten saxophone players are awful to look at. And eleven out of ten drummers are not funny.

PETER VISCHER.
Adopt Film Method of Recording Now, Urges Lou Metzger

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Immediate adoption of the sound-on-disc method exclusively is urged by Lou B. Metzger, general manager of Universal. In a statement of his views on the matter, he said: "When I departed for New Orleans to join Carl Laemmle, head of the company, he called the division between the film and disc methods costs and advantages of one system against the other."

"It is high time the motion picture industry made use of its mind whether it wants to sing to itself, or to use its voice as a source of sound equipment," he said. "This business of sound-on-disc is the most important problem that has faced the industry in many years. Whoever thinks that the screen can hang on to both systems simultaneously is kidding himself. Right now, there are a lot of manufacturers, producers and exhibitors kiding themselves in this way."

"Even should the disc method become as popular as theatre to cost $100,000 will be required in on-film method, it will only serve to complicating matters. It will mean that producers will have to make not one, but three or four films. The cost will be enormous."

"There are many reasons why the film sound track method is best. Principal among them is the ability of sound film in cutting and editing pictures. Also, there is the simplicity in distribution, with no bulky and fragile discs to ship and handle. Then there is the great advantage to exhibitors of simplicity in synchronization in ease of breaks during projection. Unless the industry buckles right down and solves this problem first, another six months, or so will bring chaos."

$100,000 House to Go Up in Waynesboro, Va.

(Special to the Herald-World)

WAYNESBORO, Va., Feb. 19.—A motion picture theatre to cost $100,000 will be erected here by the Waynesboro Theatre Corporation, according to C. C. Loh, treasurer. It will seat 1,100. C. H. Hinnant of Lynchburg is the architect.

Other officials of the company are Max Patterson, president; D. T. Conner, vice-president; and E. MacDover, secretary.

Hippodrome Not to Close; Sound Films Start Soon

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Radio-Keith-Orpheum's playhouse, the Hippodrome, is not to close as some suppose, but will be going better than ever. Recent improvements and installation for sound pictures will be completed.

The first attraction on the new program will be Paramount’s “The Intolerance,” starring Doris Kenyon, Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent.

Shifting Chain Theatre Staffs Benefits Houses, Say Managers

Necessary to Meet Emergencies and Prevents Staleliness, Declares One—Keeps Moss Off Their Backs, Another Holds, Calling System Fair to Both Managers and Owners

If the boys who "get the ax" so frequently are to be believed, the changes in the personnel of producer-owned theatres not only are virtually compulsory, but are for the best interests of the theatres involved.

The managers of two large chain theatres in one large key city thus expressed their attitudes to a correspondent of the Herald-World. They desired their names be withheld.

"In chain theatre operation it frequently becomes necessary to switch a capable manager from one city to another to meet an emergency," said the first manager. "Then, too, when a man is left on a job for an unlimited period he becomes 'stale' and loses the vigor and aggressiveness that a new man coming into the job would display. Keep the man moving about at regular intervals and he realizes he must hit the ball or make room for someone else. That is the way I regard the situation, at least.

"As to the type of pictures I would like to see produced, the theme dealing with modern social problems is the big drawing card today. That is a subject constantly before the public and one in which everybody is interested."

Changes Called Fair to Managers

"Material should be placed where it is most needed, regardless of the frequency of changes," said the second manager. "This will make up his mind that he is not going to grow any moss on his back in any one city. The man who produces with the same results as a manager of a house in the chain in a smaller city, then switch them and better results will be forthcoming. It is only fair to both the managers and the operators of the chain.

"It was one of the best pictures we had seen produced. Anything but war pictures! I've had critics scoff at so many war themes in my theatre lately, and heard similar sentiment expressed by patrons, that I would welcome any type of picture that would produce such results."

What of Organ Program Made Up in New York?

Chain operation and its effects in the program of a theatre are indirectly the subject of a letter last week from a patron to a newspaper in another large key city.

The theatre is a beautiful new structure; the organ is a splendid instrument, and the organist is one of the best in the business; on these points the public is agreed. The organist's programs are sent to him from New York, where he does not determine them for himself. These facts are stated in advance, in view of the following excerpts from the letter, and any names are withheld for obvious reasons:

"There is a very fine organ, but the music is almost wholly such as appeals to morons."

He Keeps Police at Bay With a Court Permit as He Runs Theatre on Sunday

(Lakeewood, N. J., Feb. 19.—A permit signed by three justices of the peace was the weapon of Barney Ferber, manager of the Palace theatre here, when he decided not to close February 10, while conducting a motion picture show with an admission charge. The permit was provided for in the old laws.

The permit was attested by three county justices of the peace, none of whom lives within ten miles of the theatre. It was stated that the evidence against Ferber would be placed before the prosecutor for presentation to the grand jury.

Film Fire Razes Village;

One Dead, Several Hurt;

Big Nitrate Loss to Firm

SANTIAGO, CHILE, Feb. 19.—Fire, due to the ignition of motion picture film, destroyed the small village of Caleta Buena. The fire caused the death of one person and several were injured. The principal damage was to the Agua Santa Company, which suffered heavy loses of nitrate.

Stanley's Uptown Opens;

Mastbaum Nearly Done

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19.—The Stanley Company's Uptown theatre was opened to the public on February 16. There was a press showing on February 14, which was attended by a notable group.

Arrangements are rapidly nearing completion for the inaugural of the Stanley Company's new $5,000,000 Mastbaum theatre, 20th and Market streets, which will take place on February 24. The mastbaum is expected to be finished. The last word in theatre construction and decoration, will accommodate 5,000 persons.

RKO’s Production Program Points to Big Sales Year, Says Schnitzer

Radio Pictures Including First-Rank Film Musical Shows, Declares President, 26 Dialogue and Sound, with Silent Negative for Each
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The huge producing program which RKO now has under way points to the certainty that Radio Pictures will be right up in front in sales for the coming year, Joseph J. Schnitzer, president of RKO Productions, declared today in reflecting the confidence of other officials of the organization. Showman instinct is the secret, Schnitzer said:

"With the first successful advent of talkers, RKO Productions went in wholeheartedly, and to a man it was declared, "talking up to what we have found by experience to be a great and satisfactory method for the recording of sound and dialogue. RCA Photophone, RuCA has come through like a million dollars and exhibitors who have already had experience with it are for it, and I can tell you that 'Syncopation' is going to be a sensation when released."

Big Musical Film Shows

"I note that the entire industry is now turning its attention to musicals since the advent of a recent Broadway film musical hit. Well, let me tell you it didn’t take us that long to get started along the right road. When we heard those first rushes in ‘Syncopation’ of Morton Downey’s golden voice and Fred Waring’s peppy Pennsylvanians we commenced to burn the wires. We went after the biggest shots the stage afforded and we got set for Florence Ziegfeld’s ‘Rip Van Winkle’ and Vincente Minnelli’s ‘Hit the Deck’ and Ben Hecht’s ‘Upperworld’ and Charles MacArthur’s ‘Gold Coast’ and Samuel Raphaelson’s ‘My Boy’ and Vina Delmar’s ‘Dance Hall’. "We’ve given William Le Baron carte blanche to make the biggest film musical show that the public has ever been called upon to witness. They’ll get there first and they’ll clean up for exhibitors.

Silent Negative of Each

"This to me is showmanship—anticipating the demands of the public, the trend of an industry. We are not neglecting the silent phase of our program, however. There is an impression extant that RKO Productions are to make only all-dialogue pictures. It is utter nonsense. ‘Rita’ and ‘Hit the Deck’ are to be of road-show magnitude and all-talking, all-singing, all-melody, all-dance shows, with the love stories clearly defined and retained. It is necessary to be able to talk and show pictures, with a silent negative for each of these."

"And we are going to back them up with the biggest tie-ups and exploitation. This is one phase of the industry that must not be neglected. Exploitation, advertising, seat-selling and all must continue to be foremost in the plans of all who are to participate in the unprecedented prosperity facing the motion picture field."

“Will the Public Wait for Sound to Reach Its Full Power?” Asks Woodhull

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—In an age when the miraculous is the commonplace, when the unheard of becomes the customarily accepted, it is a question whether people will stick to the sound phase of film making once its full development is reached or demand still more astonishing media for their amusement," R. F. Woodhull, president of the M P T O A, told the Herald-World today.

"Is the novelty going to wear off? Are the tremendous prices that exhibitors have to pay for sound equipment going to last? And will

A Correction

In the Picture section of the February issue, a caption beneath a picture of Bruce Gallup stated that he had been appointed director of advertising for the recently formed Artists by President Nicholas M. Schenck. Joseph M. Schenck, of course, was meant, Nicholas M. Schenck being president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

“Broadway Melody” Opens in Cleveland at Stillman, March 2

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—“Broadway Melody” will open at the Stillman theatre in Cleveland at top prices for an extended run starting March 2. This is the first engagement announced for MGM’s all-talking, all-singing and all-dancing “Broadway Melody” which the company has decided to make a sensation by opening at the Stillman necessitate a revision of admission prices to a roadshow scale, procedure made possible only by the fact that the picture has proved a smashing success.

"Broadway Melody” will play at the Stillman twice daily with three performances on Saturdays and holidays.

Cameras 38 Feet Underwater Take Safety Test Made by Submarine Crew

Using artificial light, photographers recorded on films the action of the men conducting safety tests aboard the submarine S-4, seen in 38 feet of water.

The photographers were enclosed in a steel box with glass windows and lowered alongside the submarine where they obtained pictures of the men testing the submarines door seal safely from the undersea craft by use of a "lung" or safety device, resembling a gas mask.

16 Theatres Closings Laid To Film Rental and Sound

(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Feb. 19.—Motion picture theatres in the small towns of New York state continue to close. In one section in northern New York alone, 16 theatres in as many towns, have closed during the past two months.

A number of reasons are given for the theatre closing. Some owners say that they cannot pay the prices charged for pictures and make money, while others, who are located but a few miles apart, say that the first run houses in the cities that are equipped for sound pictures are drawing heavily this winter with a resultant loss to the small town exhibitors.

Theatre Manager Finds $250 for Indecent Show

(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 19.—Joseph P. Deo, manager of the Lyric theatre, small downtown house of Kansas City, was fined $250 in the North Side Municipal court on a charge of presenting an indecent stage program. The program was an all-singing one and it could be found in a dozen or more theatres, but the testimony of several members of the Society for the Suppression of Commercial Vice went against Deo.
Paula Gould, who resigned from RKO Productions' publicity department to take a position in Hollywood. She had been press representative with the former FBO company for seven years.

Jacques Haik, French importer of films and producer of "The Soul of France," which Paramount is to distribute here, has been made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

In Hollywood for studio conferences. Hiram S. Brown, chairman of the board of RKO Productions, and president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, is shown arriving in Los Angeles from New York, to talk over the new Radio Pictures and (incidentally) to deny reports of another RKO merger.

"At home" in New York. Harry Beaumont, director of MGM's first all-audience production, "The Broadway Melody," and Mrs. Beaumont, who went East for the opening of the production at the Astor, where it scored a bit as one of the most adept "musical shows" the screen has presented.
Friendly enemies, the enemy part being for picture purposes only. Billie Dove and Gwen Lee are these chummy gobs, who were "snapped" between scenes for First National's "The Man and the Moment."

Proof—and doubtless he'll need it! Myron S. Marks, head of the Marks Brothers circuit in Chicago, is shown with the sailfish he and William Brown, Chicago hotel operator, landed off Miami shore. Besides sailfish, they caught five bonita, seven dolphin, two mackerel and three kingfish. The rest got away!

A tense moment in Columbia's new sound production, "Trial Marriage," a title which represents a modern phenomenon affording considerable dramatic discussion on the screen of late. The story is given a rich production by Columbia, with both sets and cast of outstanding character. The players shown in this scene from the picture are Jason Robards, Thelma Todd, Norman Perry and Sally Eilers.

Mary Nolan, whose revelation yet elsewhere than above, of charm as well as talent, has brought her stardom in Universal's Ray Taylor production, "Come Across."
What's the difference, if any? And there isn't, so there you are. For they're twins—all except the famous Gus Edwards on the left, who employs five pairs of twins, including these, in his "Twin Revue," which he is producing for M.G.M. with both sound and technicolor and featuring Charles King. noted tenor.

Texas Guinan (believe it or not!) in a scene from a Western of days gone by. Then the cabarets. And now she stars in Warner Brothers' talking picture, "Queen of the Night Clubs." Give her a hand!

Know her—or we mean, him? Yes, that's right—Chester Conklin, all dressed up, as it were, for First National's "The House of Horrors." He's doubtless one of 'em.

A modernistic scene from M.G.M's first all-audien, "The Broadway Melody," which is playing to enthusiastic audiences at the Astor theatre in New York. It is a story of stage folk, and the musical numbers are thus brought into the story very naturally. Charles King and Anita Page are the principals in this scene, while the picture also features Bessie Love. Harry Beaumont directed.
Woodhull Answers Hearst with Plea For Unity Against Censorship

Says Neither Press Nor Screen Requires Federal Censor System—
Hays Office Declares Offensive Film Cannot Succeed

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A plea that Press and Screen stand united in opposition to meddling under the form of censorship is the reply of R. F. Woodhull, president of the MPTOA, to William Randolph Hearst’s editorial advocacy of federal censorship of motion pictures.

An expression of the Hays Office protest against censorship as un-American, issued just before the editorial appeared in the Hearst newspapers, also has just been made known.

“The broadest range of freedom should in the public interest be granted to literary and pictorial agencies of expression, limited only by the statutes prohibiting indecency, immorality and slander,” said the statement of the office.

Censorship Would Include All

“To depart from this principle in the case of motion pictures is to enter upon a course which would subvert to censorship of all other forms of thought expression as is the press, the radio and the platform.

“No picture can be successful which is offensive to a large percentage of the American people, because it must have almost universal appeal to attract the necessary number of patrons. No picture should be condemned on the basis of what some individuals may believe are occasional lapses from high standards... Some people in looking at the sun see only the spots on the sun, and would appoint a censor for it. It cannot be in the jurisdiction of our government.”

Woodhull, in his protest against the Hearst editorial, charged that if national censorship of the screen press were instituted, the day would come “when official censors will be in the office of the Hearst Publications and that of other newspapers telling the editors what to do and how to do it.”

“An editor in jail now in Pennsylvania for having offended a political leader there, Woodhull wrote to Hearst.

“What would become of the newspapers if a more complete political thoroughfare was imposed on them as you advocate for an equally important and potent division of the press?”

“The motion picture business can and will stand on its own feet. You have had enough experience with its varied phases and personalities to know that it is sufficiently stable to do this and that its integrity compares favorably with any other medium of expression...”

“The motion picture industry has demonstrated that it is just as capable of self-government as other newspapers. I am keenly appreciative of the great and ever-increasing value of the service of the newspapers and the public also fully appreciates the service rendered, now under way and what may be expected from the screen in relative elements of public activity.

“The motion picture does not need the patronizing suggestions of editors, great or otherwise, with respect to the conduct of its business. They are unwilling to tell you or any other editor tell us just what we ought to do. We will accept your cooperation and accept your advice and we hope to merit your kind consideration. But please do not bootstrap yourself into a position of affected superiority and "big brother” us into the position of looking up at you for advice we do not need.

“The Hearst Publications need no beneficent National Censorship.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—The PCT theatre circuit, which has about 120 halls, announces a new directorate, composed of Lt. Col. A. C. Bromhead, R. C. Bromhead, Isidore Ostrer and Mark Ostrer. They take the places of Lord Ashfield, Lt. G. Scott, F. Scarf and A. P. Holt, who have resigned.

A. C. Bromhead is named chairman; and R. C. Bromhead, vice chairman. Will Evans apparently retains his managing directorship.

“Whitehall Films, formed in November, 1927 when a public issue of £100,000 was heavily over subscribed, is prominent in the eyes of the trade just now as a result of notice issued by a firm of solicitors inviting shareholders to get in touch with them with a view to setting up a special shareholders committee. It is said this represents an effort on the part of the directors which has not hitherto been supplied the shareholders. Recently three directors, Sir Nicholas Gration Doyle, Sir Basil Clarke and H. E. Hill, resigned, and J. W. Pickering and Alan Thompson, the latter general manager of the company, were appointed.

Supremacy Films, Ltd., will make a public issue February 25th, of £250,000. The directorate will consist of the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Lytton, chairman; Col. Cullingford Hughes, managing director; Viscount Coke, the Hon. Monagua Parker, Clayton Mutton and A. S. Woodger of the power—ful Woodger Trust, which is backing the issue. C. M. Woolf of W. F. and J. will join the board later.

Wiring Mark

(Detail to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Western Electric installations are reported made at the rate of 250 a month, bearing out the promise made by J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., a year ago when installations were being made at a rate of 20 a month, that the company would be equipping theatres to the number of 60 a week by 1929. Total installations of film or disc, or film and disc, in the United States had reached the 1,232 mark on February 2.

Barrimore Directs from Bridge of Monitor Room
And Uses the Switchboard

On the stage, before the camera, sits his assistant, Harry Buquet. Buquet gives the signals for starting and stopping action and camera, looks out for camera angles, and in fact, handles the details of the production seen by he eye, while Barrimore handles all the details heard by the ear.

The director,"said Barrimore, "is of far more use in talking pictures at the switchboard, watching the lines and regulating their proper recording, than he would be on the stage, where he can only signal starts and stops.

Between scenes he rehearses his cast on the stage.

Kolstadphone Installed in Four More Oregon Houses

(Fortune Herald-World)

PORTLAND, ORE., Feb. 19.—Manager J. J. Fleming of the Kolstadphone Corporation reports a number of new installations, which include the following theatres in Oregon.

"Arcade theatre, LaGrande; Edward, Redmond; McLean Wallowa, and Hiland, Myrtle Point."

DALLAS, Feb. 19.—More than 90 per cent of motion picture patrons prefer all-talking productions to silent ones, but between part-talking and silent pictures the patron-interest is equally divided. A majority of theatregoers, despite reports to the contrary, prefer synchronized music scores to theatre orchestra accompaniment.

These interesting conclusions—not final, but based on 60 replies from the first replies to a questionnaire survey now being brought to a close by the Greater Palace, Publix de luxe house, with the co-operation of the Dallas News and the Dallas Journal.

Tremendous Interest Shown

The survey, which is being taken in the form of replies written upon ballots to a series of nine questions covering the field, started in the Tuesday, February 5, issue of the Evening Journal, and has been running daily in both the Morning News and the Evening Journal.

Ballots have been run in the papers every day, together with a story on the resume of the reports received. The final counting and classifying of the ballots now is being made.

The number of people interested in the box is astounding, owing to the fact that no prizes of any kind are offered in connection with the survey.

500 Ballots in Two Days

On the first two days, over 500 of the ballots had been filled out, from the paper, or in the lobby of the theatre, where cards were available. Of the number of people filling out the questionnaire, over 90 per cent of them prefer all-talking pictures to silent ones, while the percentage of those desiring part-talking to silent is about 50-50.

One interesting development is that a majority seem to prefer synchronized scores to theatre orchestra accompaniment.

Pictures Listed Daily

The attractions of the Greater Palace are listed in all stories, as examples of all-talking or part-talking pictures. The results are to be published in the newspapers, together with editorial comment on the reception of talking pictures and their destiny as an entertainment medium of the future.

Here is how the contest was announced in the Journal:

"A survey of the Dallas public to determine its sentiments in regard to synchronized motion pictures will be conducted by The Dallas Journal, The Dallas News and the Greater Palace Theatre. Arrangements for this survey were completed independent of numerous other investigations planned throughout the country.

"Herewith is published a questionnaire designed to make the indication of one's opinion in regard to the new art. Questionnaire blanks will be published daily in The Dallas News and The Dallas Journal and will be distributed in the Palace lobby and elsewhere.

There are three types of synchronization. The first is a silent drama with synchronized music score. The second is a semi-talker, part silent and part dialogue. The third is the all-talker, virtually a spoken drama on the screen. There remains the totally silent drama, for which music must be supplied by the theater's orchestra or organ.

The Journal-News-Palace questionnaire seeks to arrive at the prevailing sentiment in Dallas. Those desiring to take part in it are asked to send their filled-in blanks to the Amusements Editor of The Dallas Journal or the Amusements Editor of The Dallas News. Blank may be obtained by clipplings from the two newspapers or in the Greater Palace lobby.

Varied Pictures Shown

"The Greater Palace Theater" this week offers a semi-talking picture, "The Shopworn Angel." Beginning next Saturday it will present "The Wolf of Wall Street," an all-talke, thereby giving its patrons an opportunity to attend pictures that represent two of the three types of synchronized films.

The questions asked in the survey were as follows:

1. Do you prefer all-talking motion pictures?
2. Do you prefer pictures that are part talky?
3. Do you prefer silent pictures with synchronized musical score?
4. Do you like sound effects, such as shots, knocks, etc.?
5. Do you like stage stars of experience in silent pictures?
6. Do you prefer good looking actors, regardless of talking ability?
7. Do you like talking motion pictures made from stage hits?
8. Do you like the short all-talking comedy skits?
9. Do you prefer synchronized music to the theatre orchestra?"
Laemmle Prefers Silent Film
For Himself, But Public Rules

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 19.—"Personally," said the veteran leader of Universal, fidgeting like a boy, "I like the silent pictures. I work hard during the day and when I go to see a motion picture I want rest and relaxation, and the silent pictures give it to me. They help me to forget my work and rest my mind and body. There's another angle to the matter also. I have trouble with my hearing, and I have to strain to hear the talkies."

Then Carl Laemmle smiled. He fidgeted about as he spoke, on the couch in his room in the Roosevelt hotel, a restless, nervous little man, who is so much smaller than the pictures of him indicate.

"However," he continued, "as president of Universal Pictures Corporation, we strive to please those that like the talkies, and those that like the silent pictures. The greater number of theatres show the silent pictures. But Universal makes both types of pictures to meet the desires of all the public."

Attends Mardi Gras

Carl Laemmle, Mrs. Laemmle, his brother, Siegfried Laemmle, of Munich, Germany, the latter's wife; Samuel Van Ronkel, producer of Gump Comedies; and Jack Ross, secretary to Laemmle, arrived in New Orleans Friday night, February 8, to see the Mardi Gras Carnival. They left last Wednesday for Hot Springs, Ark.

Laemmle aimed a blow at "sexy" pictures. He said there were too many of them. "Pictures should be such that any member of the family could see them," he added.

The president of Universal declared American producers had nothing to fear from foreign pictures. "They are catering to their own market," he said. "The pictures they are making won't sell American people, for the most part. When they learn to cater to the American public then their pictures will be pleasing. Personally, I'll buy any kind of picture, foreign or American, if it is the type that the American public likes."

Stands Pat on Dr. Marston

Laemmle said Universal will have finished by April two big pictures, "Showboat" and "Broadway.

He declared that Universal will stand pat on the decisions of Dr. W. M. Marston, psychologist at both Columbia and New York universities, signed by Universal, as arbiter of which pictures shall be shown to the public.

If Dr. Marston doesn't like a picture then it won't be shown," said Mr. Laemmle. "We've already bought a lot of stories, but if he doesn't like 'em, they won't be filmed."

Stewart Is Named
Chief Recording Engineer of PFL

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—George E. Stewart has been appointed chief recording engineer at Paramount's Long Island Studio, succeeding Ralph H. Townshend, resigned. Stewart has been in the sound department since the studio reopened last summer.

Stewart has been a specialist in sound engineering for about ten years. He came to the Paramount studio from the National Broadcasting Company, and before that was with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. He is a graduate of Union College.
Silence of the Tomb Is Bedlam
Beside Silence in Sound Studio

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—There is no better way to describe silence than to say “as silent as a sound studio.” The silence of the tombs is bedlam beside that of a sound studio. Silence ceases to be silence when it remains silent, for there is no contrast between noise and silence. In the sound studios you have silence supreme one moment and the next all is noise and bustle.

If you want to know how silent silence can be, go out to the Astoria Long Island studios of Paramount. When you step in the studio everything is noise. The carpenters are busy making new sets and tearing down old ones; electricians and scene changers are changing the incandescent lamps around; visitors are roaming around getting in the way perhaps.

Then all of a sudden a bell somewhere in the building is heard ringing three times. It must be a magic bell, for everyone freezes in his tracks. Silence descends like a great cloud. It hangs heavy in the room. It is a great sound proofing drapes which surrounds every set. You can feel it as definitely as you can feel a log.

After an interval another bell rings once, and the silence is dispersed by a thousand noises, each of which stands out for a moment in separate detail. You hear every carpenter’s hammering, every noise from every part of the building fall upon your ear as distinct units of sound, until gradually the sounds again merge into one sound stream or symphonic sound pattern.

Nerve Racking Contrast

This contrasting of sound and silence is almost nerve racking to a visitor. Is it so little in touch with a real jerk?

That magic bell which rings three times is just the studio method of calling for silence. It means that a picture sequence is actually being shot or is in its final rehearsal. If the laws of our commonwealth could be enforced as is this law of silence we would have a publican pushing a truck of waste when the bell rang out. He stopped dead in his tracks and remained frozen in an uncomfortable position until the bell was rung again.

“Fix That Squeak!”

I saw a sequence of “Gentlemen of the Press” in its final rehearsal. Walter Huston, the star of the picture, entered the front door of a cozy apartment. He was met by Betty Leighton who plays the part of his daughter, and together they walked through the living room into a nursery and then back to the living room again. Halfway through the living room, the floor squeaked. When the sequence was completed the director shouted to a carpenter, “Fix that squeak.”

Ordinarily that little squeak would have gone unnoticed, but here it assumed major proportions. The delicate microphone hanging above would have picked it up and marred the dialogue. The carpenter put many nails in the floor and then walked back and forth testing until the squeak was eliminated.

Recently a courtroom scene was in rehearsal in the studio. Rehearsals are tiresome business; after an hour of it an extra fell asleep in the jury box unnoticed. The bell rang three times; cameras began to grind; actors spoke their lines perfectly; the sequence was almost shot, when nature decreed that the super should snore! Film and precious time wasted—the sequence had to be reshoot.

Dialogue rehearsals are repeated until they are letter perfect. I saw a sequence being rehearsed on another stage for Richard Dix’s first talking picture, “Nothing But the Truth.” Four men were speaking in a drawing room, and Schertzing, the director, made them go over and over their lines until he was satisfied with the inflection of every word. The procedure was exactly that of a stage rehearsal.

This business of sound and dialogue is a tremendous business. So many little things can bring such disastrous results. The other day something went wrong with the microphone leads to the amplifier in the recording rooms. The instruments in the monitor room warned the studio before they used them again where the difficulty was. It took almost a day to find and repair the trouble in the lines.

Pantages B. O. Grows
With First Sound Show

(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 19.—The Pantages theatre, first run house of Kansas City, inaugurated its newly installed sound equipment last week in presenting “The Man Who Laughs,” Universal’s version of Victor Hugo’s famous story, with a synchronized accompaniment. It had been the intention of Louis Cherninsky, manager, to hold back the sound premiere for three weeks, when the Pantages will present “In Old Arizona,” the first outdoor all-audien, but Universal refused to release “The Man Who Laughs” as a silent picture. Hence the change in the theatre’s plans. There was a marked increase in the weekly attendance, according to Cherninsky.

Dialogue Is Restored To Vilma Banky Picture

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—After eliminating dialogue which already had been recorded for Vilma Banky’s “This Is Heaven,” Samuel Goldwyn has decided to restore it, with the most dramatic scenes in full dialogue, following requests from fans and exhibitors.

Seven Grand Operas Coming to Screen as Pathé 2-Real Audiens

Grand opera is coming to the short feature. This unusual development in the field of short product—and the audience—is signified by the announcement of Pathé that it will produce for next season seven grand operas as two-reel "Film Operas," the work to start at once. Thus the short feature, with the talking picture, pushes out into a new field, and grand opera is made available to everyone.

The seven "Film Operas" will be "Pagliacci," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "La Fauve," "Martha," "Tales of Hoffman," "Carmen" and "Aida."

Among Most Popular Operas
"Pagliacci" was composed by R. Leoncavallo, and was first presented at the Teatro Del Verdi in Milan, May 21, 1892. "Cavalleria Rusticana" is the best known composition of Pietro Mascagni, and its first public performance was at Rome May 17, 1890. "Faust" was the work of the celebrated French composer, Charles Gounod, and its premiere was at the Theatre Lyrique in Paris March 19, 1859. "Martha" was the masterpiece of F. von Flotow, and was presented in a court opera in Vienna, November 25, 1847. "Tales of Hoffman," written by J. Offenbach, saw its premiere at Paris Feb 10, 1881. "Carmen" was the work of another French composer, G. Bizet, and was first presented at the Opera Comique in Paris March 3, 1875. "Aida" was composed by the Italian musician, G. Verdi, and had its premiere in the Opera House at Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 24, 1871.

Made Available to All
These operas are among the most celebrated and popular musical works extant. Their popularity is enduring, and year after year they are presented in the opera houses of the leading cities in Europe, South America and North America. The greatest artists of this and past generations have gained fame through their work in the production of these grand operas. In selecting these operas for production as musical short features, of "Film Operas," it was felt that grand operas would be made possible for the masses through the introduction of sound on film. While the radio and the phonograph have blurred the trail by carrying to almost every home selections from these great operas, hitherto it has been impossible to bring them in toto to music lovers outside the largest cities. In the story, the music, both orchestral and vocal, and the personalities of the singers, enhancing the famous roles, will all be put within the reach of everyone. These "Film Operas" will be produced under the supervision of Josiah Zuro as director general of musical production. Zuro has already begun the preliminary work upon the first. The casts will be chosen from the best available operatic singers.

Salzer Heads N. Y.

Office of CineTone

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Max H. Salzer, Brooklyn attorney, has been placed in charge of CineTone, the new sound equipment company established by Joseph P. Salser, president of S. & S. Enterprises of Boston, manufacturers of the non-synchronous sound device.

First National
Will Service Bristolphone

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Warner Brothers and First National have agreed to service Bristolphone users with their pictures, Budd Rogers, sales manager of Bristolphone, announced yesterday. We called a conference at the opening of "On Trial" at the Palace in Danbury, Conn., and "Lilac Time" and "The Barker" into the Embassy at Port Chester, N. Y.

Theatre owners using Bristolphone had played First National pictures with satisfactory results before the Warner-First National affiliation. It then became a question whether First National pictures would be made available to users of independent sound equipment. This question resolved itself into a determination by the producer that the equipment would have to pass the test of operating quality on a par with the company’s own re-producing systems. That test has been passed.

Films All-Talking Or All-Silent, Is Theory of Brabin

(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Feb. 19.—Motion pictures in the future will be either all-talking or all-silent, with no halfway station, says Charles Brabin, now directing "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" for M G M.

“No longer, even at this early day,” he said, “are we putting in sound just for the sake of sound. And the moment we began to back upon talking picture production as an art.

“THERE will not be a word spoken in the tropes beyond this, that moment did we embark upon the San Luis Rey’ that is not necessary to make the audience always conscious that these people are living characters. Too much talk might destroy the illusion, by calling attention to the machinery of it. This is a delicate point that, of course, will require experiment. In other words, we are going to try to get the maximum effectiveness of both eye and ear in conveying to the audience-consciousness that which the author has written.

“Another picture will be handled in another manner; every picture with sound has its particular psychological problems. And it is only by watching for these that we can advance. For we are dealing neither with the art of the screen nor the art of the stage, but a new one that we know, as yet, almost nothing of.”

MGM Program in Full Swing; Seven Units Busy, Five All Set

Cecil B. DeMille Making His First Audien Special, "Dynamite" —Eddie Dowling Launches Sono-Art Picture—New Process in Natural Color Used in Universal's "Broadway"

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—With seven companies shooting on feature pictures and five other units rehearsing or preparing to get into actual production, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new program of activity is in full swing this week.

Edward Sedgwick is at work on William Haines' new starring vehicle, a picturization of an original navy story, as yet untitled. "Our Modern Maidens" is under way as Joan Crawford's first starring picture with Anita Page, Rod La Roque, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Josephine Dunn heading the huge supporting cast.

Cecil DeMille is making his first audience special, "Dynamite," with Conrad Nagel, Charles Bickford, Kay Johnson and Julia Faye in the leading roles. Charles Brabin is winding up the picturization of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey.

King Vidor's all-colored picture, "Hallelujah," is nearing the finishing sequences on the sound stage and Lionel Barrymore is busy at work on the directorial end of "Madame X.

Wood Starting Football Story

Sam Wood is about to begin a talkization of an original football story, and Gus Edwards is rehearsing a feature-length musical extravaganza in which Charles King of "Broadway Melody" fame, Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards and Joyce Murray are featured.

Norma Shearer is preparing to begin on "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" as her next talking picture, and John Gilbert is to make his dialogue debut under Fred Niblo's direction in "Redemption.

While the studio production force is running at full speed, W. S. Van Dyke is getting ready to leave for Africa, where he will film "Trader Horn," taking with him a huge store of supplies and equipment to last more than six months.

Hill Directs Chaney Again

"The Bulldog Sound's" is to be the next starring vehicle for Lon Chaney. This was disclosed yesterday at the studio, following an announcement of the filming in person of the most mysterious fighting unit in the world. George Hill, who directed Chaney in "Tell It to The Marines," is to direct the production.

Hill last year was sent to Africa by the studios on a secret mission. Now it is disclosed that this mission was with the Legion and film, in detail, its activities at the front. The director was accompanied by Commandant Petheshoff, who is now on a leave of absence from Africa and is in California aiding in plans for filming the story.

Chaney will play a veteran sergeant in the Foreign Legion in the new picture, a vivid chronicle of intimate life in service in North Africa. It is the first time that actual Legion activities have ever been recorded on the screen.

With the film made in Africa as a background, detailed scenes will be made in America with a notable ease, as soon as Chaney finishes his present vehicle, "Where East Is East.

Eddie Dowling Starts Film

With Eddie Dowling, the well-known Broadway musical comedy star, starring and with the supporting cast all set, Sono-Art's unique all-talking and musical picture, "Broadway Bound," has started filming and recording at the Metropolitan Sound Studios with Fred Newmeyer, former Harold Lloyd director, staging the production.

Since Dowling has been one of the outstanding musical comedy stars and producers for the last ten years, full advantage is being taken of his singing and stage experience in "Broadway Bound," and the musical numbers which Dowling will sing in the production are all new numbers which will be published prior to release of the picture.

Although Dowling's singing and some of the episodes of the picture have stage atmosphere and a theatrical flavor, the story of "Broadway Bound" has been written with typical motion picture technique. This is shown in the fact that the scenes are laid in a wide variety of locations and sets, 33 in all, some of which include a vaudeville theatre and dressing rooms, street scenes and opera house of a southern town, with minstrel parades and show, hotel interiors and streets in New York, various interiors of an old fashioned Southern hotel, and a large sequence in the audience and on the stage of another theatre where the story concludes.

This screen arrangement policy has been adopted for "Broadway Bound" in order to give the typical movement and action of a real motion picture, in addition to the dialogue throughout and the musical numbers which are closely knit into the plot of the story.

Gibson Buys "Points West"

Hoot Gibson, Universal's Western star, has purchased the screen rights to B. M. Bower's novel, "Points West," and this will be his next starring vehicle.

Production began February 10 under direction of Edward Killy and the picture will be taken either in Wyoming or Nevada.

Mrs. Bower is the author of several other Gibson vehicles, including "Chip of the Fly-

Miller to Remain in Charge Under New Regime of Carthay Circle

"Iron Mask" to Open in Fox West Coast House—Cohn Succeeds Loughborough as Assistant Hi Hatter—Billie Signs

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—Fred Miller will remain in charge of the Carthay Circle Theatre following change in the house's management, it was announced today. West Coast Theatres will take entire control of the theatre within a few days when "The Man with the Iron Mask" is opened there. The picture stars Douglas Fairbanks.

The Carthay was opened in May, 1927, with "The Volga Boatman" as the premier attraction. It was promoted by the J. Harvey McCarthy Holding Company. One of the most beautiful theatres in this part of the West and to some it represents the most attractive place of enjoyment in the country, Fred Miller has had the management of it from the opening until the present time. * * *

The Hi-Hatters elected Sam W. B. Cohn Assistant Chief Hi-hatter at a meeting this week; the vacancy being made by the departure of James Loughborough.

Roy Miller was named secretary of the organization when Perk Swope tendered a resignation due to pressing business affairs.

Upon his return to this country he will take up his old post in the business office of one of the Culver City lot.

Estelle Taylor left February 16 for Miami to join her husband. She will stay until after the Sharkey Stribling fight, returning to Hollywood to enact a role that Harry Cohn has assigned her.

The town is filled with successes and failures. Lots of Iowans. One of them works next door to my office. Three or four years ago he was the possessor of three million dollars. Through poor investments and a panic he lost it all and is now struggling to get another start. He is receiving $25 a week to answer the telephone for an insurance agent.

Billie Dove, who is probably the most beautiful big time star on the screen—at least to my notion—has signed a new contract with First National Vitaphone. It abrogates the old one and provides that she shall receive several more dollars per hour than formerly, and also that her pictures will be all in color. Her voice test proved extremely satisfactory.

Seven MGM Companies Busy; Five More Ready

"I Willing U," the photoplay which Gibson made in Canada several years ago and which is still considered one of the most popular pictures.

"The Winged Horseman," Gibson's most recent picture, is now in the cutting room. Arthur Rosson, the director, and Ruth Elder played the lead.

New Process in Color

Besides being photographed simultaneously in black and white, "I Willing U" will contain many scenes sequences done by a new process in natural color.

The method of the studio, nothing much yet is being said about this innovation of both sound and color in the roadshow film.

But it is known that Dr. Paul Fejos, the director, Carl Laemmle, Jr., the producer, and Hal Mohr, the cameraman, recently very quietly shut themselves up in one of the projection rooms at the big lot to look at a test of the spectacular Paradise Night Club set done in both color and sound.

Only Glenn Tryon, the star, Merma Kennedy and Evelyn Brent, the leading women, Robert Ellis, the heavy, Billy Rellert, Fejos assistant, and a few studio executives were invited to the showing, which was run within locked doors.

T-S Signs Virginia Bradford

Virginia Bradford has been signed by Tiffany-Stahl for the lead in "The Midway," a romance of the sawdust ring, starring Joe E. Brown, once a circus dealer, vaudeville performer and now a star, whose phenomenal success in pictures shatters all records. Albert Ray is directing the production, which is scheduled for March release.

Other important players signed for big roles are Wallace McDonald and William Davidson. The picture will have sound and dialogue throughout.

A German stage play has been chosen as the next vehicle for Billie Dove. It is titled "Cajun." It is said to provide one of the most dramatic roles she has yet undertaken. This play was a success on the stage in Germany and was translated to pictures, and was written by Rosenhayn and Schirokrauer.

"Cajun" will be directed by John Francis Dillon, and a fine supporting cast will be chosen in support of the star. Miss Dove is now enjoying a vacation following the completion of "The Man and the Moment."
Academy Announces Winners Of 15 Merit Awards in Films

Practically All Receiving Honors Were Affiliated with Pictures That Drew Heaviest Grosses in Box Office Returns of Past Year—Thousand Candidates Named

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—The central board of jurors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences today announced winners of fifteen merit awards for outstanding accomplishments in acting, writing, producing and other feats. In its findings it will be noted that practically all the winners were affiliated with pictures that grossed most heavily in the past year's box office returns.

In order to determine the winning people and companies, questionnaires were sent to each of 370 members of the Academy. They were returned to a board of 25 judges. Approximately 1,000 candidates were named. The board eliminated 800 of these and submitted the remainder to a central board of judges consisting of Alec B. Francis, Sid Grauman, A. George Volck, Frank Lloyd and Tom Geraghty.

Borrazo Wins First Award

William Russell Dies Of Pneumonia; Was In Pictures 20 Years

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 19.—William Russell died early Monday morning of pneumonia in Hollywood hospital. He was taken ill four days ago and Elmer Ferguson, his wife, who was filling a vaudeville engagement in San Francisco, was notified of his condition Sunday. She came home at once but reached him after he had died. He was 44 years old and had been in pictures since 1909.

Russell entered the motion picture field after a long career on the stage, in which he had been leading man with Ethel Barrymore and Blanche Bates and had appeared with Chauncey Olcott. He started on the stage at the age of 5 years.

Among the many pictures in which he appeared are: Sands of Sacrifice, The Midnight Trail, Hearts or Diamonds, Sporting Chance, Brass Knuckles, The Law, Racket, The Undercover Patrol, State Street Sadie, Midnight Taxi.

Texas House OK's Bill for Repeal of Blue Sunday Law

(Special to the Herald-World)

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Feb. 19.—A bill repealing the Sunday closing law has passed the Texas house of representatives by a vote of 75 to 42.

The vote is a testimonial to the long fight waged by exhibitors in Texas, including H. A. Cole, president of the Texas Theatre Owners' Association.
Short Product Wins Even Rank
With Long in Theatre Billing

When a theatre devotes an entire 24-sheet to a short feature, there is evidence enough that this kind of product is being recognized in the proportion it deserves in billings and exploitation. The fact also shows that theatre men are becoming more and more aware of the exploitation possibilities of short productions. To the manager who has overlooked the attraction-drawing potentialities of short features, there is a lesson in what is taking place in connection with the new educational comedies.

All of a 24-sheet was devoted to advertising "The Old Barn," when this Mack Sennett Talking Comedy played the Hillstreet theatre of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuit in Los Angeles. (See cut below.) This first-run house also devoted as much space in newspaper ads to it as to the feature picture.

"The Bride's Relations," another Mack Sennett Comedy, was advertised in the marquee of the Royal theatre, Kansas City, first-run downtown house, as strongly as the feature picture.

Played Up with Long Feature

"The Lion's Roar" was advertised by Loew's State in Los Angeles, both in the 24-sheet displays and in the newspapers. The newspaper ads played up this Mack Sennett all-talking comedy bigger than any other added attraction, and as previously related in these columns, when the picture was played at three Balaban & Katz Chicago houses, the Uptown, Tivoli and Paradise, it was given a prominent place in the advertising; while it was given more space than the feature at the Uptown in Wichita, Kan.

The Grand theatre, Topeka, Kan., used more inches advertising "The Lion's Roar" than it did the feature, although the longer feature was a talking picture.

When the same comedy played the Regent, Muskegon, Mich., half as much advertising was used on it as on the feature, and more than the other added attractions combined.

The Earle in Washington, D. C., gave an equal break with the longer picture in advertising matter. The State in Detroit advertised it as an extra added attraction.

A third of the advertising done by the Strand, Cincinnati, was on this Mack Sennett Talking Comedy.

When "The Eligible Mr. Bangs" played at the Newman, Kansas City, Mo., it was given greater space in the newspaper advertising than any other added attraction on the program.

Harmonica Contests Go Over

One form of publicizing Educational short product that seems never to lose its effectiveness is the Juvenile Comedies-Harmonica Playing contest. When this was held in three theatres at Waco, Texas, it proved so popular that L. L. Hinton of the Crystal theatre in that city began planning to stage a number of intercity contests with five neighboring communities.

The Lyric, Crystal and Gayety theatres in Waco, under the management of J. A. Lemke, conducted harmonica playing contests, through the cooperation of Educational and M. Hohner, Inc. Four displays and two talks at the public schools on the organization of harmonica bands were included among the special angles of the campaign.

Hinton then arranged for contests in Mart, Temple, West, Hillsboro and McGregor, Texas. It is planned to have the winners in the contests in these communities go to Waco and compete against the best harmonica players there.

The contestants are to have their transportation paid to Waco and will compete for a special medal and $20 in gold in addition to other awards.

Stage Shows

Chicago Paradise

Week Ending February 15

The Paradise symphony orchestra played Victor Herbert melodies as an overture with Victor Young directing. A trumpet solo of "Gypsy Sweetheart" won quite a hand and the outstanding arrangement of "Sweet Mysteries of Life" was worthy of mention. Temperatures were bracing and directed and received quite an enthusiastic hand at the finish.

The stage show was called "Grab-Bas" and celebrated the return of Mark Fisher. Both the Merry Music Masters and the Uptown stage band were united into one for this show.

The show opens in front of a drop curtain with a huge clock head and hands holding a grab bag with a large hole in the center, so as one of the ballet girls induces the rest of the dancers to come out from this hole.

In the rear of this drop hot music strains come forth as Mark Fisher enters at the finish of the dance routine and after receiving quite a reception, introduces Pauline Gaskins. She sang "It's Just Because It's You" and then went into a high bid musical comedy dance routine. Pauline is a local girl who graduated from safe shows and is a little dancer. Her voice, though not bad for a dancer, would leave her in better grace if she would eliminate the song and stick to her dancing.

She was followed by Ward and Van, two men in extreme loose fitting outfits, more of a a polo type, who tried to emit comedy from the harp and the violin. For while their antics were funny but then it got painful.

The harpist managed to play one good number which proved that he could play the harp but his partner still continued to be funny. This was a typical vaudeville team that had no place in this show. However the audience seemed to enjoy them so it proves the old adage, that if the public wants holium give it to them.

The next specialty on the bill was Jack "Peacock." Kelly, popular member of Mark Fisher's band. who took over the bass for a while and directed the boys through a series of war tunes and then offered for the first time at this theatre, his famous "pea-cock" strut, which made him popular during the war when he was drum major for the Great Lakes Naval Band. There is no question in anybody's mind that Jack is very popular and probably the only one at this time who could substitute for Mark in a pinch.

Pauline Gaskins came out again after this number singing "Bing, Bing, Ding" as she led the band through a novel routine adapted from the show "Blackbirds." A young man called Frank Masters followed this with an eccentric tap dancing number that won him a good hand. In fact he was the only specialty artist on this bill that was worthy of a good hand.

Mark Fisher next stepped up to the footlights to sing "Down Where the Shy Little Violets Grow" and repeated a second chorus as the ballet pranced up and down in typical musical comedy style while he sang to one of the girls. The finish of this number was novel as the girl formed a vehicle with their special positions and used their parasols as the moving wheels. For an encore Mark sang a brand new number called "When the Curtain Comes Down" with a recreation. There is no use talking, when Mark sings this type of ballad and uses his lithographic ability in a recitation. It just gets you for the time being and that is the reason for his tremendous following wherever he appears.

Sincere Efforts, Requirements to Greater Task

Those with Vision Get Ahead—Others Are Forgotten

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

It is high time that the organism should dispense all ridiculous fears from his mind and settle down to brass tactics. By that we mean the time will soon be at hand when the organism will again be called upon to assume the responsibility of supplying music to a picture. If you are not prepared to take on this added assignment then you have none other to blame than yourself. Instead of going along with a half-hearted desire of doing things you should get a hold of yourself and make up your mind to either make something of yourself in this field or get out of it.

Motion pictures with musical accompaniment synchronized is slowly but surely passing out of the picture and it will only be a matter of a reasonable space of time when theatres will again be compelled to return to the orchestras and organists for assistance in supplying the necessary human element that is now missing from the screen entertainment. Just because you may be able to play community solos or put on some sort of a novelty does not necessarily mean that you are equipped to also play appropriate music for pictures. That requires practice under capable instructors.

Many theatre organists have completed a course in harmony and theatre music before they attempted to play an organ in front of a public, but there are numerous other organists who merely picked up the art on a spare time basis and in spite of the fact that some of them have been sincere in learning all there is to know about the organ a great many of them still think they can go on without learning more about it.

Organ playing, like any other profession, is an art and requires study as well as talent. Naturally it requires first of all, talent, and then considerable study, in order to perfect it.

Only Few Have Foresight

There are approximately 5,000 organists in the country and I daresay not over 100 of them have made a name for themselves nationally, and less than 25 per cent have spent a few dollars of their earnings for special music and other material necessary to improve their work. This sounds impossible but PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I take this pleasure to write you about a clever organist enjoyed at the Bijou Theatre, Chicago. I am sure you will think highly of him. Mr. Carl Beaudreau is the new organist that has come to the Bijou theatre, Marinette, Wis. I met him here at the Bijou and his name is nothing together, while the weary hours pass by these wintry nights.

Mr. Beaudreau came from the Retlaw theatre, Fond Du Lac, and was transferred up here. They have no "sound" pictures, but during the picture of "Wings" my organist friend had connected up several devices with press buttons to the organ and played that picture with the most perfect effects of atmosphere, machine guns, sirens, battle scenes, etc. Together with his playing at the organ the picture was put over as well as with Vitaphone. The theatre played to a turn away business every night. I also heard him play "Mother Marthe" and heard people remark about the music fitting in to every change of scene. He gets a good laugh on aing comedy numbers by being the first off of a screen and catches every little detail. Mr. Beaudreau is the only organist I have heard here as feature solo organist, and we all wish him lots of power and success. I hope you will publish this article as I am leaving town and don't want to let him know of it. He will do a little wondering. Very truly yours,—Doc Mitchell, Hotel Northern, Marinette, Wis.

"We're on the Stage Now" Boast Former Film Favorites

This must be the season for the moving picture stars. At least one would imagine that since the talkies took hold in Hollywood, a number of its former stars have tried to get even with the mechanicals and are now doing a turn either in combination theatres or in musical or dramatic shows.

The latest recruit from the land of celluloid in Leatrice Joy, former wife of John Gilbert and at one time a box office sensation. Miss Joy is the headliner at the Chicago Pantages. Last week William Desmond was in town and two weeks before that, three other screen stars were on the boards. These were Blanche Sweet, Constance Talmadge, and Robert Warnekro. Pauline Frederick is still in town in the play called "The Scarlet Woman."

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending February 9

The Publix unit entitled "Cheerio," deriving its name from a song of the same name, the lyrics of which were written by Mayor Walker of New York, is a colorful and entertaining offering here this week.

At the opening a huge head with moving eyes is shown. Arma Jackson sings "Cheerio" to the head. Below the platform a pitch the head rests the Gamby-Hale girls appear in beautifully colored costumes. The girls do several colorful dance ensembles. Especially clever is the one wherein each girl wears on white stocking and one black stocking. Wally Jackson does an extremely funny and clever eccentric dance. He does a short skit in Dutch dialect, and also directs the stage hand in a burlesque manner. This fellow is really very funny, and should be given more to do.

Helen McFarland plays the xylophone with four hammer, and while playing also does a tap dance. Her offering is peppy and she goes over big.

Graeme and Marie Eline in a short comedy dialogue went over nicely, as does Dorothy Neville, soprano, with a classical offering.

The offering closes with a flashy finale, wherein glass pillars at back of set revolve with changing colored lights reflecting therein.

Elias Breskin, orchestra director, offered "The Evolution of Dixie," wherein the great old number was played as it should be played, then as a waltz, as a fast offering and finally as it would be played in grand opera. This goes over great.

Chicago Stratford

Week Ending February 16

What the Stratford theatre should have presented many months ago was introduced this week and it proved a success. The surprise was "Cookie," who is a young band leader with a pleasing personality. Cookie sang a little, danced, and ran away with the cake. Bob Hope and "M. G. C. goes for the White House" between the two they ought to keep the Stratford packed.

Glen and Richards opened the show. The pair offered some very fine dancing and the male part of the two received honors for hot steps. They got over.

Carl Dobinson and Company were the winners of the night's honors. The trio was the all time in week with Mark singing a special song called "A Hollid-day" written especially for the holiday week and served the purpose of introducing each member of the cast to the audience as a national holiday, attired in costumes entirely appropriate for the occasion. The costumes of July 4, designed by George W. Harrison, were in prettiest white outfit, seated in white broadcloth throne that descended from the sky. The entire cast assembled around the band, forming a beautiful tableau.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending February 9

After several months of an all-round policy, the Howard theatre this week returns to stageband shows. "Lo Everybody," produced especially for the occasion by Emmett Rogers, inaugurates the new regime, and how! The Howard takes on new life; its capacity is taxed, the newspaper reviewers are generous in their praise, and what is much more important, the public is responding nobly at the box-office.

"Lo Everybody" gives a great send-off to Lou Lowry, the Howard's exceedingly personable stageband leader, who more than lives up to advance notices. Then it brings to the fore Lowry's Merry Musical Men, a well-chosen group of stageband favorites who swing into the spirit of the occasion and delight their audiences enormously.

The show is just settling under way when Harry Lowery breezes in, and it finishes a few seconds after that wise-cracking comedian brings the house down for about the twentieth time. In the language of the native, Harry is a FIND. He scores as master of ceremonies, he wields an effective baton; he is an accomplished banjo player, and equally effective on the guitar, and he has a pleasing singing voice. Aside from that, he is "cool hand Luke," has an engaging manner on the stage, and otherwise takes the "Aye, Aye" vote of Howard patrons.

New Orleans Saenger

Week Ending February 15

It is interesting to note that the Saenger is continuing off the honors in the current bill—Ben Black and his stage band, "Bittersweet Blues," the Publix unit, or the "Savoy Band," in combination, this week with an entertainment worthy of notice, assisted by the following acts.

"Bittersweet Blues," the title, has nothing to do with the presentation as there remains no bitter taste after the event. These were some of the best features of the show. The three Firemen in regulation costume dance and sing together. Their hats and coats are thrown aside, and the three, make up as old men, with white hair and beards, do band turns and jigs in a manner that brings bursts of applause.

The Twelve Fox Comediennes stage a very smashing finale. Three girls in evening circle are lowered from above while below the rest of their costumes are witnessed, with large opalescent heddresses and arm bands outstretched, with droppers falling in straight lines, fill the stage from side to side.

The whole was interesting and colorful but there was nothing of exceptional or outstanding merit.

Diagram of contact board wiring by Francis S. Farney, showing the hookup for his portable console, which was described in the February 16 issue of "Better Theatres." In that article occurred a typographical error, causing the directions for tracing to read, "the lower octave for pedals must be cross-wired, starting with the first key." This should have read, "starting with the first C." some time. They danced and sang, cut up and in all were clever.

The band number "Everybody Loves You" was played by the orchestra and Cookie sang with them. The novelty number they played clicked and one should be offered every week like this. Cookie calls his band boys, Gingersnaps.

Harry Dowling, a fellow with the voices of a female nearly stole the honors from the show by his clever jokes and songs. Dowling did to offer another song. Moore and Moll, a couple, had a good line of jokes that kept the audience laughing. They hit with the crowd.

Bob Hepe received a nice band when it came time for his turn to sing. Bob is billed better now than before and with the new band combination should get popular.

The orchestra then played and the entire cast came out on the stage with Cookie. It was a nice opening show for Cookie and his Gingersnaps.

San Francisco Warfield
Week Ending February 14

This week’s stagework opens with the orchestra in the pit and Jan Buhni leading Horace Heidt’s musicians through a fantasy of airs from Gounod’s “Faust.” This is followed by a violin solo by this artist, with organ accompaniment, the offering being a special arrangement of “The Rosary” made by Fritz Kreider.

The musical treat is followed by "Flip Flops," a Panchon and Marco idea, the act being divided into three parts, each given over to sleeping. The first part is the bunk, the real army variety, the curtain going up on a scene showing a tier of bunks, each occupied by a Sunkist beauty, with a girl singing a nice little song about army life. The girls then come out and do a cape drill and pleasing evolutions.

A xylophonist offers a medley of popular airs, dancing as he plays, and Horace Heidt next introduces three of his boys, Charles Bradshaw, Warren Lewis and Jerry Bowen, the "Three Rhythm Rascals," who play on the mellophones, then on the trumpet and who finally sing.

Then there is a little song about a French hoddlor and the Sunkist Beauties are disclosed in one of those intimate rooms taking their morning exercises. Betty goes through a variety of poses and is joined by Ramon, the two offering a difficult adagio.

Ted Ledford, in the role of a dandy comes on singing "Ragtime of Paris," following with "Under the Spell of the Blues." He has a splendid voice and a good personality. Then on comes Richard "Limerlips" Edwards whose nether extremities do about all that legs are supposed to do.

The final scene in the stage act represents an old-fashioned room in which there is an immense four-poster bed. The Sunkist Beauties, in pajamas evidently fashioned from crazy quilts, frolic on the great bed, the springs of which bounce them high in the air. They leap high in the air, coming down in all sorts of odd positions, only to bounce up again.

This turn flip scared out of the audience and the act takes its name, and all seem to have a lot of fun.

The audience is divided up into parts on the stage and the most proficient flip floppers doing their most rapid-fire stuff.

Detroit Fisher
Week Ending February 1

It seems that Public added a new showroom to their chain—somewhere down Rochester way—and a brand new stage show had to be gotten up to care for the addition.

So Bertie Petroff, his staff and the cast selected for the show came to Detroit where it was whipped into shape and given its premiere. The show is titled "Monte Carlo" and it’s a darn good one. You can bet on that.

Fred Behrens, new to these parts but billed as a composer and violinist of note, was master of ceremonies. The opening number was a dance routine by six men and six girls in dress suits and the girls in white gowns. During this number the show song "Monte Carlo," designed to show that you can’t gamble and win, or something like that. Shades of the late "Tex" Rickard!

Then the drop in back of the orchestra went up and there was a roulette wheel and crounder. The men and girls trudged up to the wheel and showered down three bets, the crounder again售, as he scooped in the wade of stage bills, a little ditty entitled "Gamble With Me."

Next was a novelty billed as "Miss Ampico." A player piano was rolled out on the stage—apparently it was played by Miss Ampico herself into music without anyone being at the keyboard. Behrens engaged "Miss Ampico" in conversation, the piano responding with tunes, and ended by playing the violin accompaniment to "Miss Ampico’s" encore. A dance routine followed, little trick, but quite light and draggy to be effective. The running time could be cut down without impairing the flow of the act.

"Monte Carlo" was rolled off the stage and the stage hands brought in two large, fancy boxes. They flew open and out jumped two Gollywogs in the persons of Lewis and Kiddie. In blackface, and with the tremendous bushy wigs which are associated with Gollywogs, this pair did a bizarre dance which much intrigued the patrons.

Joseph Griffiths, a sweet voiced tenor, obliged with "Song of Songs," and then Mario and honda, the former an exceptionally limberlegged hoover, presented one of the most stately and dashing acts ever seen on stage. The team was back a few minutes later with another dance number, while Griffiths, in the back ground, sang a song designed to show what happens to the poor losers in a gambling den.

The dancing troops was on next. This time the girls were clad in white escante, on which were fastened metal ornaments of red, white and blue, each of which was adorned, after the picture, with playing cards. To top off their outfits, the girls wore gigantic feather shakos of a brilliant orange. At the conclusion of their dance they threw playing cards out to the patrons in the front row.

Then there was Harry Bow, the jester, with his song about "Humor Pots," and a dramatic recitation, with gestures, about the adventures of "Rod" in the "Polo"arf." After sandwiching in some admirable fooling, all of it new, he finished with "Poor Little Glad Rag Doll."

For closing, the girls paraded on in elaborate and varied costumes, reminiscent of the fashion parade in the "Polo." Each of them carrying a metal staff topped with a gold dollar sign.

Then the back drop went up again and there was a gigantic roulette wheel spinning around, with six girls, three in red one-piece bathing suits and three in black, posed as if mining. As we said before, you can bet on it being a good show.

Omaha Riviera
Week Ending February 14

With Jay Mills on the slick list, Dee Jones is stagemanager at the Riviera, directing "Mission Belle." The presentation is book on a solid base. On the bill are Brown and Bailey, dancing boys; Cy Wills, crystal gazer; Inez and Dewey, demonstrating show; Prentice, "Do," doing charming bagging; Alice Roy, singer, and Billy Meyers, jolly singing entertainers. And the dancers—Altahn and girls.

Chicago Oriental
Week Ending February 15

Will Harris produced the stage show here which was furnished with its music from the pit for most of the time with Art Larkfield directing.

The show got its start in a scene representing a front of a delicatessen shop with an old man telling Brooke Johns that he is going back to Hol-land and that he can’t afford to admit a chance to rest while an illusion effect took place in less than 15 seconds. Brooke Johns, from sitting to a young lady a special number called “It Happened in Holland.” This chap has a very pleasant and severe voice and is quite popular around town. In fact he saved the scene from getting too tiresome.

The next scene showed the Kurnick ballet doing a Dutch dance with wooden shoes and all to the tune of “Blue Danube.” Up to this time Brooke Johns merely appeared on the scene for a second or two probably to let the audience know that he hadn’t come home and introduced Harm and Nee as the next specialty. These boys, who have appeared here before, possess pleasant harmony voices and have always had a sure fire routine. However, lately they have assumed an air of over confidence which may have detriment to them if they do not curb it before it is too late. They sang “Down Where the Sky Little Violets Grow” and were given a chance to show their ability to the audience. Then appeared the last number and merely proved that he belonged to the show. Your reporter has been一周以来 several times whenever the last number was performed.

Brooke Johns and a chap who was some eccentric dance master from a show company offered to take the place the routine and ended up by playing a few strains on his banjo while the other did his stuff. The result was a complete success in every way. The biggest applause of the audience. When the band boys, who in the meantime, returned the stage during the finality of Johns and the comic, whose name we are sorry we could not get.

The show had a neat entertaining single attraction that ever played this theatre is Grace Doro, a young lady who played piano and told stories in rhyme. Her performance was a model of the sort of entertainment that she knew a thing or two about the ivories. Her routine was a tour de force. The finality of film pianola playing “There’s a Rainbow Round My Shoulder” in various styles, was unique.

The last and most entertaining runway at this house now which enables the principal members of the cast to run out and greet the spectator every so often. This is a novel idea in burlesque theatres, but does not seem to work in a deluxe house.

The talent in this show was very good but poorly arranged, and the finale fell despair than the proverbial doorknob. The Oriental is not what it used to be any more.

Minneapolis Minnesota
Week Ending February 15

"Blue Revue" is an uncommon fine production. Not a dead number in the entire presentation. Frank Stever opens with "Blue Melodies," a medley of blues songs that have been popular during recent years. He is assisted by the Gamby-Hale girls, who in several-ticked, high-hat costumes, entirely of blue, get off a "blue" number. Towards the end of the act, the lights are changed to a deep green, giving a shadowy, bluish atmosphere that is very effective.

"Deep Blue" is the first offering of the Minneapolis Sirens, led by Al Mitchell. "Whirlwind Blues," as interpreted by the nimble footed Small Brothers, is on next. This act gets several encores and des-erves it.

"A Study in Blue" follows. This is getting down to more serious things. Wolfe and Cole open assisted by the Gamby-Hale chorus in filmy blue tulle. Later Wolfe and Cole do an individual act with some very original acoustic dancing.

"Spirit of the Blues," with Irene Taylor, takes the audience by storm. After singing a number of solo's the Minneapolis Sirens collaborate with Al Mitchell in telling Miss Taylor how much they like her act.

However, they use only their musical instruments to talk.

"Everybody Loves You" is what the Sirens claim in the next number. The "Blue Danube," the most famous of all blues, cannot be neglected in such a blue production. The Gamby-Hale chorus, dressed in long loulount blue dresses and frilled trimmed hats, offer a toe dance that is beauti-ful.

Bob LaSalle, "The Cure for the Blues," is on next. Between a mixture of songs, some of which go back to the days of song, and the rest of which are newly written, this act follows the same line as the first. It is pleasant.

Arthur Knorr's first stage production, "The Miami Nights," has received so many favorable reports, that it is to be held over for another week. This show is in a beautiful winter scene in which Dave Schoeller and the Chester Hale Girls, in hope for coming in the introductory song. This scene fades and changes to an ideal summer scene, in which Dave leads the orchestra in a special ar-angement called "Miami" while the ballast does a novel "Bathing" routine.

Dave and the boys then played "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby." First in its original form at a great deal of applause. Singer and pianola and as a merrily-rount wound up the act. It is a fine arrange-ment and was received well.

Schoeller then played two special numbers for that the charming little personality singer, Evelyn Wilson. She received a fine hand too.

The Chester Hale Girls (40) dressed as bellhops, followed this with a pleasing routine. The Ramawon Four then offered comedy songs and dances. Their tumbler earnings them an encore.

Evelyn Wilson in a full dress suit, stopped the show with her good characterization of a drunk, singing. Evelyn is very popular at this house. This is her third return engagement.

Stone and Vernon, adagio quartet (girl and three men) received a very fine reception for their unique and daring dance interpretations. In the finale, Gertrude Shefield led two beautiful Russian wolf-bound at the entire cast formed a pretty picture around her.

St. Louis Missouri
Week Ending February 8

Eddie Furbelows in "The Big Follies" and featuring Senator Murphy and the Edgecombe Four of St. Louis was on the stage. Others headlined in this feature were Grace Johnson, singer of blue airs, and the McCune Sisters.

"Vieenese Nights" was the grand orchestral production conducted by Charles Previtz. He was adslated by the ballet and choir. Albert Roth was the solo-virtuoso while Robert and Marjorie Altin danced. Milton Stroser presented one of his fine soloists at the organ.

Salt Lake City Pantages
Week Ending February 8

One of the most unusual acts ever to be shown in vaudeville, headlines the present bill here. "The Three World Wonders," comprise Europe's latest attraction. The trio consists of three men with abnormalities.

First in the order of their introduction are the pin-head twins; second comes "Gorilla" the ape-man who is claimed by the explorer to be the nearest approach to the man-ape ever found, and the final of the trio is "It," half woman and half man, possessing a dual physique and maintaining that he or she has two personalities. The remainder of the vaudeville bill is made up of a series of fine and entertaining acts. Plesser and Klaiss bring one of the best fun making teams seen here in a long time. Florence Micarema and Company offer a classical revue. Billy Small, be-tween chewing gum and feeding his fiddle, makes up a full fifteen minutes of entertainment.

The major attraction of the show is the opening act billed as Maxine and Bobby. Bebby prove to be no other than a beautiful little fox terrier pop which has no possibility to have as much fun from the entertaining as does his master, and is really remarkable.

The screen offering in this connection is "Beau Broadway," and the house has been packed to over-flowing throughout the week.

Arthur Knorr's first stage production, "Miami Nights," has received so many favorable reports, that it is to be held over for another week. dave goddard's first production, "outside of 1923," had three beautiful scenes with fine dancing and three featured headliners. He deserves credit for the fine way he was starred and served. Paul Ash opened the show with an introduction of "A Ladies Fan" which was a scene of an enormous fan, surrounded by the Goddard Danse, and a couple who sang the song, pleasingly. The girls then did a final "Fool" story.

Cunningham and Clemenot followed with a well arrangement of 'Me and the Man in the Moon,' Paul Small sang the chorus. The Goddard danse then dented a mellow routine.

Johnny Perkins, that round comedian, then fol-owed with gags, that were a bit suggestive and was left at the door. "I Carried Her" was done. Johnny always goes over well, this time being no exception, first a shame that he relies on smutty rass and songs, when there are many good, clean ones to be had.

The curtain little set then changed into a Roman set as the Goddard dancers in Roman costumes do a clever and well routed dance. Cunningham and Clemenot opened, to go goodly applause, as the entire ensemble enter and form a beautiful picture.
ORGAN SOLOS

Preston Sellers (Chicago, Oriental) presented “Yocal Valentine” as a week contributing feature. The solo had many humorous slides and clever lyrics that offered a comical revue from the Stone Age to the present day. This was in the form of community singing and the following songs were sung with much zest: “Coralina Moon,” “I Faw Down,” and “The Art of All My Dreams.” “Let Me Call You Sweetheart,” “Sweethearts That Never Sleep,” and “Sally Of My Dreams” were extremely funny, and several hearty laughs. Preston is still the good player that he always was and is growing more popular each week at the Broadway theatre.

Henry E. Murtagh (Brooklyn Paramount) played a company solo program which he called “Around the World in Ten Minutes.” Murtagh had everyone singing songs of Ireland, Switzerland, Turkey, Arabia, California and for the final number he played “Streets of New York” with special lyrics.

L. Carlis Meier (Chicago, Terminal) played a company solo that embodied the following songs: “You’re the Cream of My Coffee,” “My Inspiration Is You,” “Down Where the Sun Goes Down,” “Sally Of My Dreams” and “High Up on the Hilltop.” Many clever gag slides were interspersed between each number. With the last song listed, Meier is now in his second year at this theatre and it is evident of the fact that he has to change his solos several times a week on account of the house policy, he still manages to get a novel idea in his selection, and lures a lot of the regular players that he was when he first came here.

Annie Mae Norton (Atlanta, Ga., Howard) turned out a pleasing solo featuring “Happy Days and Lonely Nights.” This proved to be a fine novelty with slides and won a fine hand.

Dick Liebert (Pittsburgh, Pa.) had some slides urging the audience to cooperate in community singing. He also played a fine program. It is the only solo that proves in the musical business, one never knows where the next hit may come from.

Musical business is being threatened with a se-crity of arrangers. Arthur Lange, considered one of the greatest of this line, has left the coast to be musical supervisor at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. This leaves a but few remaining experts in the Frank Skin, W. Polla, Bob Haring, Henri Kliekman, and one or two others. Needless to say, the other companies have been watching the music publishers. Fifty more good arrangers could be used to good advantage, and what the ultimate outcome will be is hard to predict. It may come to pass that a song writer will be compelled to make his own dance arrangements.

The hotseat games in New York are seriously endangering the business of the legitimate and picture theater. Many of my forces have been pressed into the games are jammed three nights a week, and are taking away from the other entertainment about 25,000 people. There is a time when some of the theatres on Broadway used to give a Sunday night vaudeville and everybody went. Now the hotseat games, they were forced to discontinue this policy. Personally I am for the hotseat games. I get to know my players, to see them from another point; I don’t know the player from the other, nor am I acquainted with the regular people, almost all the players. To see those minutes around the ice half the time on their side, half the time with their feet in another boy’s eye, and many of them with my heart in my mouth, I get a big kick out of it.

I have an idea that many of you organists who read this column have had very interesting lives and that the story of your life history would make very interesting reading to many of your brother organists throughout the country, and also readers in general. I would like very much to will this column in publishing the story of your life. How about sitting down, and sending me a short resume of your past history, and the sort of organ work you do, how you happened to take up the organ profession, what the sort of organ work you do; how you happened to take up the organ profession, what the sort of organ work you do, etc.

I hope this is clear to you, and that you will ship your autobiographies to me as fast as you possibly can. I can assure you that they will be used, and not only that, but that they will be printed in the order received, and will be printed as soon as possible. Should we have a lot of material, the issues of the organ work you do, how you happened to take up the organ profession, what the sort of organ work you do, etc.

THEME SONGS

Warner Brothers are producing “The Time, the Place and the Girl,” a Vitaphone special with Howard Brechtning director. This is an adaptation from the original songs of the original songs of the...
FRANKLY, and I never speak otherwise, I expected "Lucky Boy" to be the choice lemon of the year's screenings. It seemed inevitable.

You see, I had heard the story about Mr. Jessel's refusal to appear in "The Jazz Singer" and I had an idea that the young man was temperamental, at least. And it seemed natural to assume that "Lucky Boy" would be an eleventh-hour attempt to stage a come-back, a frantic effort to achieve what Mr. Jolson has achieved in the above named recital and its greater successor, "The Singing Fool." Hear, then, my unblinking. "Lucky Boy" is none of these dreadful things I expected it to be, nor is Jessel. The picture is good theatrical entertainment and Jessel sings it, talks it and gestures it to eminently gratifying success. (Such, as I have remarked before this, are the pitfalls of advance expectations. One should never indulge them.)

The story concerns a young man who may or may not be Mr. Jessel himself. Unaccounted for as I am with his upbringing and so forth, I cannot say. But the young man in the story is the sort of young man Mr. Jessel is in fact, so of course the acting is very natural and effective and all of that. (Great system, this, of casting stars in characters made to measure for them; I vote for more of it.)

The young man sings. He begins at the bottom of show business and works up. He has a mother. To and of her he sings "My Mother's Eyes" and I expect to hear it as much as I heard "Sonny Boy" or, considering the inimitable popularity of mother-songs, more. He sings it in cabaret, in vaudeville, and then again he just sings it. He even got me singing it—and I consider it no confession that this baritone of mine is practically constant proof against an eventuality of that kind. I conclude that the number must be good.

"BLACK ORCHIDS"

NOW we begin to get down to the bare facts about Greta Garbo. I don't mean that as double entendre, although it is quite accurate as such; I mean that in "Black Orchids" she is busy with just exactly the business of trailing sex appeal all over the lot and isn't that what she's all about? Anyway, the picture reveals Miss Garbo at the peak of her Garboism without cluttering impediments of one kind or another. And it reveals, of course, the fact that just this and this alone isn't an altogether sound reason for manufacturing a motion picture.

I saw the picture at a Chicago theatre where none of the audience is less than sixteen years of age and very little of it is over twenty-one. This audience is composed of the young people who go places, do things and—such is their grip on the so-called arts of modern existence—survive to tell the story. Not, of course, that they ever do tell it. Their sophistication is greater than this. They simply live it, look it and—apparently—like it. Wise, shrewd, competent young people who will be wiser, shrewder and more competent old people—those who live—for it. As I say, I saw "Black Orchids" with these keen youngsters and they laughed at it. I gathered that Greta and her boy friends lacked technique. My, my, my!

The story is about a fellow whose wife goes with him to Java to look at some tea plantations or something as the guest of a prince who has American ideas and built-in bath tubs for guests. For most of the picture he slinks along in the wake of the wife and toward the end of it he comes alongside. So does the husband, although neither the prince nor the wife know it until the gentlemen go lion-hunting, the husband first having unloaded the prince's gun. A sweet situation, this, for old fellows like me and you folks who run motion picture theatres, but a giggle for the youngsters in this audience. I suspect that these young fellows, in a similar situation, would blandly pour another drink and call another phone number. The giggle became a laugh when, a little later, the prince recovered his health and the husband his wife.

If this has become a thesis on the modern young person, as it quite plainly has, very good. Isn't it for these young people, who outnumber the old people so overwhelmingly, that pictures are made? Certainly it should be, if there is anything at all in this theory of making pictures to make money. And doesn't it follow, then, that the ladies and gentlemen who make the pictures and who believe they are up-to-date and modern and sophisticated and aware and all that sort of thing really ought to stay up late some night and find out what these young people do for amusement? I think it is. Consider this situation:

Here is Greta Garbo, famous for a certain type of clinging suggestion, and here are girls from Woolworth's and boys from United Cigar stores who amusingly dismiss her as old stuff. Here is Lewis Stone, than whom no dominant male was ever more dominant in the opinion of last year and year before, and here are two young men and two young girls in the row before me who talk the matter over in calmly expert consideration of the elements involved. Thus:

"Ain't that a laugh?" One of the girls refers to the prince's built-in veranda shower, demonstrated to the neglected wife.

"Crane bought it," one of the boys explains.

"Well, if this is Garbo what's the shootin' for?" The third young woman is inquiring.

"T'll tell you," the eldest of the four volunteers. He isn't more than twenty-two. "The reason the thing is funny is the basic error. The plot contends that this guy Stone is too old. After a laugh like that the whole thing's dumb."

Yes, I think something ought to be done about bringing the picture people and the pictures down to date. Hollywood is old-fashioned. A thrill on Hollywood boulevard is a yawn on any other Main street in the country. What we need is more Sue Carols and a few boy friends to go with them. And, of course, a few directors and writers of the same age.

STRAIGHT DRAMA

THE straight dramas from Paramount—I think especially of "Interference" and "The Doctor's Secret"—are doing things to picturegoers. These are practically direct recordings of stage plays. Neither of them would get by a censor board like the Chicago outfit in silent form. Both of them came through nicely in dialogue. Send up thanksgiving for that if you do nothing else today.

What picturegoers think of these dramas is still a bit uncertain. It is a little like giving a man who has ordered fish a good red juicy steak. My own opinion, which isn't worth more than any other, is that the man will eat it because it is set in front of him and will proceed to like it so well that he will care no more for funny provender. An afterthought is that those other gentlemen and ladies who have been going to the stage theatre these many years to buy their steak at the source will find the more economical purchase of it in the better motion picture theatres much to their liking. And that, my hearties, means new and better shoes for Junior.

Blind Patron Tells How Sound Solved All Episodes of Picture

DES MOINES, Feb. 19.—When Lionel Wasson, manager of the Des Moines theatre, extended the courtesy of his house to the blind of the city at a special showing of "The Wolf of Wall Street," he little realized that he was putting over an unusual trick with the news reel on his bill or that a review, written by one of his sightless guests, would broadcast so much favorable publicity for the auditors in general, and for his feature picture in particular.

Gordon Lathrop, one of the blind who acceptable invitation, is a cultured gentleman. For a time he had charge of the radio department on a local newspaper. He was often seen at the theatre when roadshows or stock companies were in town. His mind seemed to get much joy out of the stage.

Here is what he said after his first experience with the auditors, and important to the road show world are the reactions recorded:

"To the blind, the talking movie opens wide a new and precious channel through which road shows may be made again with the outside world.

Compensation for Blind

"I say 'be made again,' having in mind the sort of blind person I am, with a background of visual impressions formed in the years before eyesight failed and whose memory, holding these impressions, needs only to be stimulated a little bit to enable him to reform many pictures in his mind.

"The talking movie to such a one comes as compensation for what he will miss when television arrives.

"On my maiden voyage to a talkie I picked 'The Wolf of Wall Street' and met an old friend. My companion told me about the new reel which preceded the feature picture. I heard the roar of the transcontinental plane of the aviator, Hawks, who broke all records. I heard the young man's voice, and also the noise of the crowd which cheered him as he alighted from his plane.

"Something in the voice brought back memories of almost ten years ago. I was instructor of international telegraph code in the Marconi institute, teaching aspiring army aviators, signal corps and navy electricians.

Recognizes Hawks as Student

"One of my favorite pupils was tall, loose jointed youngster who answered to the name of Hawks. He had a wide smile, an irrepressible gaiety and an unswerving confidence in himself.

"He knew he had the feel of the air and was going to be a good aviator if he could only learn the fool's things such as the code, the charts and the mathematics required of him before Uncle Sam would take him as an air lieutenant.

"I described the lad as I remembered him. My companion said the description fitted.

"So there we were, Hawks and I, neither knowing what had become of the other since armistice broke up the school, face to face, yet he not seeing me and I not able even to see his pictured likeness. But I heard his voice and got the first thrill of my first trip to the talkies.

"Had it not been for the special interest attached in my mind to the voice of young Hawks, I should have recognized the voice of George Bancroft in 'The Wolf of Wall Street' as the high point of interest for me. His voice so clearly reveals the character of the part he portrayed that I had an easy and quick visualization of the plunger, Jim Bradford.

"The supporting cast, notably the Russian empress, was delightful in its way. Baclanova, the delightful Nancy Carroll and the finished performer, Paul Lukas, carried the drama to swift and certain climax and left no unsolved dramatic episodes in my mind.

All Episodes Solved

"It is a triangle play with Wall street as a background; an interesting drama and a clever character study of the gambling type. A man who somehow wants to be rich and so often fails to be also a she-man.

"The plot will please the majority of the audience. The work of the actors should please all and no doubt the scenes are stimulating, even exciting. It is said the Russian actress, Baclanova, is exciting enough merely to see. She sang interestingly, though not in a voice particularly well adapted to the recording apparatus. Bancroft's voice was better and Nancy Carroll's extremely effective in her spoken lines.

"The roar of the elevated and other sounds accompanying the piece were adequate to set the scene clearly. In my opinion I have heard the roar of the stock exchange and have seen the bulls and bears in action. I have worked in brokers' offices and I did not approve of the telegraph unreadable Morse. To the layman, however, it probably sounded bona fide.

Strange, Cracking Sound

"But who am I to quibble about sounds when so much else is given to me by the talking movie. As a matter of fact, I am not so well up in important noises as I might be.

"I had to ask my companion what caused the peculiar racket in the scene in Jim Bradford's house when the villain and the faithless wife were preparing to be wicked.

"It was a strange cracking sound such as is caused by some types of outside interference or occasionally by static. The noise, I was informed, was caused by the impact of cracked ice against the metal sides of a cocktail shaker.

"Many delectable vistas of auditory experiences should be opened to the blind by the perfection of the all talking movie.

"The drama, vaudeville, comic and grand opera, comedy skits and news events may become a part of the blind person's experiences much more clearly and understandably now than a few years ago.

"This means much to the sightless. I expect to be a talkie fan from this day on."

means exactly what it implies—"Superior Amusement." The name of Marks Bros. will always be identified with the incomparable amusement they present.

Marks Bros. is a smoothly working unit that is not affiliated with, nor influenced by, any other concern. Their leadership in entertainment is due to two simple facts: first, they are not forced to accept any pictures or stage productions that are not up to their high standards, and second, because the creation of artistic stage shows cannot be done on a factory basis. Shows that are stamped, labeled and shipped across the country, cannot stand comparison with entertainment that is originated with care and thought out by Chicagoans, for Chicagoans. Marks Bros. entertainment sets a standard for the whole world.

There is nothing complicated about the organization that makes Balaban & Katz for new ideas in entertainment.

"BALABAN & KATZ" MEANS ORGANIZATION

It means that 39 executives—a combination of brains and talent—concentrate their skill upon every item of entertainment that is created for our programs. Recognized experts in screen entertainment select the film productions from the output of leading studios. Experts in music, in stagecraft, in scenery, in costuming, in the training of ballets, in color-lighting combine to make our stage entertainment supreme. With production studios both in New York and Chicago, the Balaban & Katz production department brings you unrivaled entertainment. The next day number this is but one department in this vast organization.

Seattle Ad Fight

Keeps West Coast

And Publix Humping

(Special to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, WASH., Feb. 19.—The big advertising and exploitation battle between West Coast Theatres and Publix continues both here and in Portland.

The West Coast started its campaign with a big spread in the dailies at the top of which was a box with a 12-point border announcing the five big shows for the opening of Will King and the Fanchon & Marco revue. This catch was used: There Is No Substitute for West Coast Theatre Entertainment.

The next day Publix came out with a big spread and the same type of box reading, "Four Big Shows. So big that if we added one more you wouldn't be getting quality." Then this catch line was used: "Don't Be Misled; Where There Is No Substitute There Is No Improvement."

Then the West Coast publicity man took more ground on his advance, with a full page devoted by various firms and railroads giving a welcome to the Fanchon & Marco entertainment and Will King. Publix then saluted forth with the announcement that Billy Dooley, screen comedian, would be the stage feature with the remaining of Publix Revues.

Good Film Moves Soul

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—To the Editor: Entertainment for the soul is what talking pictures are. A good one stirs every emotion to the utmost, literally speaking, moves one's very soul to respond. It's like a new theology, a new form of worship. From the Address Star Music Co., 4837 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill.

"Big Pictures"

DOThan, Ala.—To the Editor: I'd like to say a few words on the question, "What's the matter with the movies?"

According to my way of thinking, and from the study I have given the situation for the past three years, and the money I have lost on the so-called big pictures, the first thing I will say is this, the "business" will have to come down to earth. It thinks it is away up; I can't find words to say just how high up. The producer thinks it is pleasant to the public by being so much for rotten pictures, trying to make the public think they are getting something and when you see it, it's altogether something else. It is up to us to spend a cent to see.

When I see a picture advertised thus: "Coming, a Million Dollar Production by So & So," right then and there I put that date down, so I won't see that picture, because it won't be anything like it is advertised to be. The public will be disappointed and the exhibitor will be sick, from the box office standpoint. Prices for all pictures are on the extreme. Stars expect too much money for what they do, producers want all you have or ever expect to have for any picture they make. They've got it all figured out. They know what an exhibitor will take in and he takes good pains to see that the contract calls for the amount the exhibitor expects to take in on a picture and a split of 50-50 of a dime if the exhibitor should be lucky enough to take a dime in more than he has charged for the picture.

The situation is alarming. I say there should be something done and quick to force the producer to make the pictures he wants to see, and make them good, clean and attractive, and not so long, and sell them to the exhibitors at a live and let live price. There is no one that really cares who made it, or who the star is—worth more than 33 cents to see. I'd never look at another picture before I'd pay 50 cents to see one. There are done worth 50 cents and after all's said and done pictures are all alike nowadays. When you've seen, say, fifty pictures you will have seen most everything that can be done on the screen. Some pictures I don't fall for them, and I can't blame my people for not falling. If I wasn't in the show business you couldn't pay me to sit through such a picture as "The Case of Lena Simich," "The Patriot," "Our Dancing Daughters," "King of Kings," etc. Not that these pictures are not all right, but just because they don't appeal to me.

"When I go to the movies I want to see something that will make me glad I am living, make me feel the forcefulness of the soul, that troubles or worries I might have, and I'd like to be able to take three or four of my friends in and not feel that I had spent a week's salary for the privilege. If people are the people who keep the picture shows open, and the salaries they make don't allow them to spend much on amusement such as the movies. Therefore, it seems to me that since this is the class that the movies appeal to, the producers should be appreciative enough to try and make pictures they'd like to see, and sell them so they could see the most of them at 25 cents.

A man with three or four children can take the whole family to the movies if he can get in for 10 cents and 25 cents, and all will be happy. If the family can go for 25 cents and 50 cents for the family he can't go, that's all there is to it. They'll just have to stay at home and maybe the old man will go for 20 cents this week's show for 10 cents and 25 cents the whole family would go. Now let's see, four children at 10 cents each is 40 cents and two for the mother and father at 25 cents is 50 cents. This totals 90 cents. They have all had a good time for 90 cents and they feel good over it. On the other hand, the old man went to the show for 50 cents, the exhibitor lost 40 cents and the balance of the family is mad, because Pa wouldn't take them. But how could he? Please tell me, how could he? If the exhibitors would all get together and refuse to buy the pictures at high rentals the producer would soon learn his lesson and come to see we need small exhibitors. The small exhibitors are the ones to get together and force the film rents down. That's where they get their money from. It's not the big fellows that pay the profits, but the poor little fellows. They pay the profits, you bet they do, because they have the exact amount figured out. I think the small exhibitor will take in, and see to it that this is drawn up in the contract. Therefore, the small exhibitors are all running their chances for the benefit of the producers, they can't care a scrap what becomes of the small exhibitors just so he gets his profits. I don't blame the public for turning their backs on the movies. I have a theatre and I haven't seen a picture in four weeks. I'm sick and tired of them. They all look alike to me, and to think that we have to pay such high prices for such entertainment. I'd like to see some other exhibitors who love the movie business as I do. The small exhibitor is the fellow who pays and pays.—HATTIE MIZZEL, Alcazar theatre, Dothan, Ala.

On Non-Theatricals

MONTEZUMA, IND.—To the Editor: Have a nice visit from our friend J. C. J. a few weeks ago and surely confirm his statement with regard to there is to be 5,000 less theatres in operation by 1931 and it looks as if it won't be. Although there are already two closed in our vicinity now and it looks as if I will be No. 3 in a short time. Don't be disappointed about talking pictures. With basketball, school plays, church plays and what not, how are we going to hold on much longer? We pay taxes and contribute to the supporting our churches if we are glad to do), but do not get consideration and support from them. We enjoy our theatres to them free of charge on nights when we are closed, but it seems there is but a jinx on the movie business. What can be done? Of course, better pictures would help a lot, but how are we going to get them in time to keep us open even for one more year? Mr. Hays sure sewed up the exhibitor. I was pooh-poohed when I bought M G M product as buying telephone numbers, but they are proving to be the best on the market as a whole and not at an insanity price. Give us a break please, some relief and make it snappy.—R. D. Young, Rex theatre, Montezuma, Ind.

From Scotland

ABERDEEN, SCOTLAND—To the Editor: To save further worry on the part of the great American motion picture industry over the right word to use instead of that awful word "Talkie," I am writing you to settle the point once and for all.

Going to your Latin roots, boy, the solution is mighty easy. Dialogue picture (s)—DICTON (s)—Talking film actor (s)—DICTOR (s); Talking film drama—Dictor Drama; Talking film comedy—Dictor Comedy; Talking film actress (es)—Dictress (es).

Your word "audience" is tri- syllabic. Mine has two and needs a word is capable of regional and international mispronunciation. In fact, even an educated person might be pardoned for wondering if you mean "aw- deine" or "audine," or "audine," or an uneducated party might call it "oh-dine!"

So I've settled the thing for you. And don't let me see you publish any more—W. W. FINLAY, Electric theatre, Aberdeen, Scotland.

COLUMBIA

THE LION WOLF’S DAUGHTER: Bert Lytell—80%—Sturdy “Lion Wolf” that went over nicely. Will be best received in houses that have played the preceding “Lone Wolf” pictures. A crook picture of the higher type and may be used on Sunday. None of the sordidness that is expected in most crook pictures. Seven reels.—M. D. Frasler, Empress theatre, Arma, Kan.—General patronage.

RESTLESS YOUTH: Special cast—This is one of the finest program pictures that any exhibitor could wish to show. The court room scenes are very well done, and when the verdict was announced in favor of the heroine, everyone gasped with relief. In fact, the whole picture holds interest from start to finish. One patron said that it should have been made into a “talkie.” Marceline Day is very charming in this picture and Ralph Forbes is a real box-office type hero. The entire cast does very well. Played 100 plus. Play it and boost it.—William F. Chilton, Colonial theatre, Salt Lake St., Salt Lake, Utah—General patronage.

STREET OF ILLUSION: Special cast—45%—January 18-20. Weak start and drugg. About the time the audience made up its mind that it was disgusting, the story takes on suggestive action. Partly tragiacal ending. Six reels.—M. D. Frasler, Empere theatre, Arma, Kan.—General patronage.

STREET OF ILLUSION: Special cast—Another real good picture for Columbia. I hope everyone that is on the way proves as good as this. Of course, it won’t appeal to those who crave Western type, but for the better class audience it’s the ideal program.—William L. Chilton, Colonial theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BABY: Alice White—66%—February 1-2. The best one I have had with Alice White. I pleased much better for me than “Show Girl” did. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

SYNTHETIC SINE: Colleen Moore—46%—February 5-6. Another good one. It is different from other pictures. It starts out rather tame, but soon makes it all up. She tries to be bad, all right. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE: Chester Conklin—January 11. This was well liked and drew a good crowd. The kiddies were so thrilled they held their tummies but all the king’s horses could not have pulled them away. Everyone left with a smile on his face. But honestly, we did not think much of it. It pleased, so why worry? Six reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—Fair pro- gram picture. Barthelmess not worth the money I pay for him. Might be better in other places, but not here. Seven reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patrons.

HEART TROUBLE: Harry Langdon—49%—February 7. One of the worst I have ever seen. Quite a few people walked out on this one. People knew too much about pictures to be entertained with this kind of stuff.—Wendell Werner, Opera House, Tell City, Ind.—Small town patrons.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—Give this girl good pictures and she will rival Clara Bow. Nice to look at if director will keep her from overacting. Acting is killing pictures anyway. Jannings, considered great, is poison to my box office. He could have stayed out of this picture. The ocean, so far as I am concerned. I predict that if Alice will be herself, she will be great.—R. S. Winger, Miami theatre, Union City, La.—General patronage.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—86%—January 27. This star is starting popular here. A little spacy for

A DELUGE OF VOTES

Ballots came in by the heaviest this week. Even from every section of the nation and from Mexico. And the effect was to put Richard Dix in the lead of the male players. Barthelmess in third place and to lunch others in the trail of him and Lon Chaney, who gave way to Dix. As for the feminine players, Clara Bow only increased her commanding lead, but Colleen Moore, after slipping back into third place last week, again headed Joan Crawford to retake second position.

This race for the penultimate honors reveals an interesting aspect of the vote. Both Miss Crawford and Miss Bow are “new” and never prominent for lo, these many years. But the "veteran" is proving a hardy competitor for the "youngster.”

As announced last week, the contest closes March 1. No ballots will be counted after that date, the final results to be published in the issue of March 9. So get your votes in, folks!

Sunday, but a very clever picture. It pleased—Wendell Werner, Opera House, Tell City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

CODE OF THE SCARLET: Ken Maynard—Ken Maynard’s are all good and this is no exception. A North woods mounted police story. Ken looks a million dollars in his mountie uniform.—Dismore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weiner, Ariz.—Small town patronage.

LADIES NIGHT IN A TURKISH BATH: Mackall-Mulhall—Extra good. Brought more business to any area we have played in a long time. No cause for offense any place, as the title indicates.—Dismore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weiner, Ariz.—Small town patronage.

THE HAWK’S NEST: Milton Sills—Liked better here than any Sills picture we ever played. Good material. They won't wait. Next stop or we will find our patronage gone some day. Eight reels.—M. W. Hughes, Colonial theatre, Arcadia, Ind.—General patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Special cast—January 31. February 1. One of First National’s most brilliant and unprecedented pictures in in two days just half what the picture cost me. Just a fair program picture. Eight reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villes, Mont.—General patronage.

THE TENDER HOUR: Billie Dove—90%. February 2. Personally, I did not care much for this, though I believed it would be good; but as the picture is so well made, it is worth seeing. I think it is just a little better than I expected. The acting is very good.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—General patronage.

THE CRYSTAL CUP: Mulhall-Mackall—Punk, rotten, terrible; weather ditto. Seven reels.—George H. Irick, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kan.—General patronage.

AMERICAN BEAUTY: Billie Dove—Pleased our patrons, even a few Barnes Bros., Central theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

HEART TO HEART: Mary Astor—49%. January 26. First week’s play; after that title for the picture will have to change. Heart to Heart must be in love. It’s a dandy comedy but the tilted boxoffice cold. They gave one look at the similar playing of one or the half million dollars it cost.—Seven reels.—M. W. Hughes, Colonial theatre, Weiner, Ariz.—Small town patronage.

THE PHANTOM CITY: Ken Maynard—94%. January 26. Played to capacity house. Personally do not think this is as good as many of his other pictures, but he is our best drawing card bar none. Six reels.—M. W. Hughes, Charkehrson Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

THE HAWK’S NEST: Milton Sills—Fairly good material. Well pleased.—Bought it right—enough said.—C. W. Becker, Electric theatre, Burwell, Neb.—General patronage.

KAY: Colleen Moore—70%. January 23. A good picture, but that title for "Kaye" was not enough.—C. W. Becker, Electric theatre, Burwell, Neb.—General patronage.

Up North—but not just now. This is how it will look around Detroit Lakes, Minn. next July—yes, sir, no foolin’! And Detroit Lakes, you know, is where the second annual convention of the Herald-World family is to be held, at the invitation of Andy Anderson of the State theatre there. This is a reminder. For further information see what J. C. Jenkins has to say over in his Columyn.

Business terrible. This star does not draw for me. Eight reels.—S. B. Keinney, Central theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—General patronage.

OUTCAST: Corinne Griffith.—Don’t believe I can give an impartial report on this one for the reason that I can’t see Corinne Griffith as a star. She’s a knock-out like Gloria Swanson, the Talman sisters, and a lot of others. That’s only my own opinion, understand. As to the picture itself, it’s okay. It did not draw. Seven reels.—F. C. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT WATCH: Billie Dove—25%. February 3-4. Good picture, but it did not draw a crowd. Do not get them in here when it is cold, only on a 10 cent show. Seven reels.—R. D. Young, Rex theatre, Madison, Ind.—General patronage.

FOX

CAPTAIN LASH: Victor McLaglen—95%. February 3. This is a good program picture but no special. Play it if you can buy it right. We paid the price of a special but had a bunch not to advance admission for which we were thankful, although the final figures were in red. Six reels.—E. B. Conant, Charkehrson Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

MOTHER MACHEE: Special cast—January 31-February 1-2. The exhibitor who fails to run this one is cheating his patrons. It is one of the sweet est pictures produced for some months. Everywhere in the cast good. Seven reels.—F. C. Stanley, Perkins theatre, Holton, Kan.—Small town patronage.

RILEY THE COP: Special cast—Fairly good attraction, not much drawing power.—Paul E. Anderson, Liberty theatre, Kalispell, Mont.—General patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Dolores Del Rio—39%. This picture sold for a special because those stars are in it.—C. C. Kaufman, Gem theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

LOVE HUNGRY: Frank G. Weir—Very. Why waste celluloid on such stuff. We would not call it a picture.—C. C. Kaufman, Gem theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

HOMESICK: Special cast—Not so good.—Hunsted & Becker, Princess theatre, Guttenberg, Ia.—General patronage.

MASTERED IN PARIS: Special cast—Very good, a laugh for everyone.—Paul E. Anderson, Liberty theatre, Kalispell, Mont.—General patronage.

BLINDFOLD: Special cast—Just another fair undistinguished picture. Would do, I suppose, but I would not think it as fair a program picture. Paid too much for it.—H. E. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

PREP AND PEP: Special cast—February 1-2. Just another fair program picture. Would do, I suppose, but I would not think it as fair a program picture. Paid too much for it.—H. E. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast—December 4-5. Very, very good. Consider this one of the best pictures I have seen in the past six months. I believe I should, but no fault of the picture, and everybody spoke very favorably of it. It’s a credit to any house showing it.—R. S. Wenger, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.

THE STREET ANGEL, FAZIL, THE AIR CIRCUS, MOTHER KNOWS BEST, FOUR SONS, SPECIAL CAST, all good pictures and all average pictures. But the gross was small, less than half of that anticipated. Several of the pictures rented on such pictures. However, I played them all, and Fox and I both lost money.—R. S. Wenger, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.
Mr. Rand complains.

A great idea!

A woman player in a contest in which a vote would be allowed for one player in each of the following categories: Misses, Lovers, Comedians, Actors, etc.—this is the proposal of W. F. Roth, Jr., the Palace theatre in Galena, Ill. And it sounds like a great idea. Says Brother Roth, in a letter accompanying his ballot:

"Enclosed find my vote in 'My Favorite Players' contest, but personally don't think that this does justice to any actor or actress."

For instance, I would vote for my favorite cowboy, and that would knock me out of voting for my favorite comedian, because he is the same actor.

"I believe that if you could vote for each in his own class distinction, it would be more accurate and fairer. What do you say?"

We say, "Thanks for the suggestion," and shall place this idea where it won't be lost, for reference when the next contest is being planned.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A woman of affairs: Garbo-Gilbert—$90, January 15—89%. An exceptionally well done picture, following closely Michael Arlen's 'The Green Hat.' Miss Garbo takes the picture and plays it. John Gilbert, Johnny Mack Brown, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth and Dorothy Sebastian all good and in the right parts. Ten reels.

—W. A. Shaw, Lake theatre, Clayton, Ga.—General patronage.

A woman of affairs: Gilbert-Garbo—$40, February 6-7. Man, what a picture! Patrons commented very highly. Best picture we have shown in months. By all means raise your admission. Ten reels.

—Orville G. Collins, Palace theatre, Becter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

While the City Sleeps: Lon Chaney—Wh- comment on a Chaney picture. He rings the bell for the biggest money of all time. These Chaney pictures are made for patronage. No one objected to me showing it at all—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—General patronage.

West of Zanzibar: Lon Chaney—January 31. This picture is right for me. Pete Harrison is against it, and while it didn't appeal to me as the silent fan I am, I think it has won them. No one objected to me showing it at all—H. E. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—General patronage.

Win That Girl: January 25-26. Nobody told me it was good when they came out and I did not like it. But when I showed it, I was surprised—P. C. Stanley, Perkins theatre, Holton, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Romance of the Underworld: Mary Astor—$45. Good entertainment, but not appreciated by our study Saturday nighters. We have made a better Sunday show. I still contend that Fox has good pictures and stories but their stars don't mean a thing where the quarters really count—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

Gateway to the Moon: Doloris Del Rio—$30, Wide screen, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Why Sailors Go Wrong: Special cast—February 2. RKO's first show Saturday and I believe I brought little better than average business. They all liked it. Six reels—George H. Koch, Gem theatre, Lundy, Ariz.—General patronage.

Street Angel: Special cast—$99, January 19. We most always play the big ones, then sit back and watch the little ones, for which we are duly thankful. Take away the large orchestra and all the fiddles that they have in the cities, replace it with a small orchestra and you have a good picture and your big pictures flop. The producers do not make the big pictures ever and that is why they lose money—Nine reels—C. B. Henry, Charkarben Hall, Lincoln, N. B.—Small town patronage.

Daredevil's Reward: Tom Mix—The usual mix. The Western were killed by two directors, who seemed never to get the spirit of the cow country on to the screen. We fully agree with Will Hayes who says that Europeans make better Westerns than we do. Western silent pictures, make them epic. And Will Hayes is right. Many times we have shown Westerns which made better business than some of the pictures we could get by the censors, stuff that ridiculed, burlesqued or insulted the intelligence of the Western people, especially those that were about crime and the open range. And next the squawkins must be endured, at least for awhile. Five reels—George W. Clark, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

White Shadows in the South Seas: Special cast—$75, January 14-15. Although this picture is made for sound, it went over well here. A lot of wonderful scenery in it, and good work by the stars—Wendell Warner, Opera House, Tell City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

While the City Sleeps: Lon Chaney—February 2. Best Chaney picture since 'Tell It to the Marines.' Cohesive story—L. M. Reynolds, Opera House, Elwood, Neb.—General patronage.

Our Dancing Daughters: Joan Crawford—January 15-19. No use for me to tell you that this one is okay, as you've heard before. It's a little 'dinner special.' It comes out all right, and it really has a good lesson in it. Your patronage, P. H. J. Reynolds, Opera House, Elwood, Neb.—General patronage.

Our Dancing Daughters: Joan Crawford—February 9-15. One of the most entertaining pictures seen here in the last year. Did big business for two days. Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian are the real big stars of this type and we'll all be sittin' pretty. Snappy musical score adds materially to entertainment value. Nine reels—A. B. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

The Cameramen: Buster Keaton—Our first Keaton picture and was well received. The Chinatown stuff was pretty farce comedy that was new and appreciated—Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Welner, Ark.—General patronage.

The Cameramen: Buster Keaton—49%. Feel that—An excellent comedy that was very well received and was liked by all who saw it. Good clean laugh for the family and a good film for the Children's Theatre, Hollywood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Cameramen: Buster Keaton—A swell little picture. Good for any house, general appeal. If they make them all as good as this, the business will be fine—Thanks, M. G. M.—C. W. Becker, Electric theatre, Burwell, Neb.—General patronage.

The Cameramen: Buster Keaton—December 21-22. I think I have played every Buster Keaton picture that he has made, and I class this one as one of the best. I consider Keaton in a class by himself and my patrons like him very much. Business has been as good. Don't be afraid of this one—step on it—J. M. Reynolds, Opera House, Elwood, Neb.—General patronage.

The Trail of '98: Special cast—February 2-3. This is one of the best pictures for a small town that I have ever played. It will stand behind anything you say about it. Ten reels—Leslie Hable, Joel Jay theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

White Shadows in the South Seas: Special cast—$75, January 14-15. Although this picture is made for sound, it went over well here. A lot of wonderful scenery in it, and good work by the stars—Wendell Warner, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Del.—General patronage.

Excess baggage: William Haines—January 15. Excellent. Halton not at his best. Zwephe Dunn was fine. Picture above the average and most interesting from every angle—Good entertainment. George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Del.—General patronage.

Brotherly love: Dane-Arthur—Another good one from Famous players team. A satire on the com-forts of some of the modern peplinettis, but ex-hibits such a spirit that one can't but admire it.
EXHIBITORS HERALD WORLD

Feb. 25, 1929

J. C. Jenkins—His Colymy

NELIGH, NEB. February 8, 1929.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

We confess it is nearly within the range of the truth to state that the crying need of a large majority of the theatres today is for Western pictures. Those of you who are familiar with the early history of motion pictures will agree that Westerns were the type of entertainment, more than any other type, that made motion pictures popular with the public.

At the present time, there have been hundreds and mainstay of thousands of theatres, without which thousands of them would have been forced to close. This type of entertainment has been the popular type with the rural communities, and it has been to these rural areas of the country that these theatres had to look for their support, in hundreds of instances, the Saturday night attendance at Western pictures has equaled, if not exceeded, the balance for the entire week.

Of late, producers seem to have lost sight of this important feature in arranging picture exchanges. Broadway's idea of entertainment does not seem to fit in well with that of Main Street.

The industry received a tremendous blow in the passing of Fred Thomson. Tom Mix is on a vacation. Buck Jones is off the reservation. He is reported to be contemplating turning his back on the Western range, while Ken Maynard is still trying to keep the industry intact by making popular entertainment for a lot of folk from New York and Hollywood.

Personally we wouldn't give a nickel for Western pictures, but the good Lord put more brains than we have in something like 75 million people who don't agree with us in our ideas of entertainment. Consequently, we are making a plea for Western pictures.

It isn't the size of the Western, but when a picture without a "triangle" basis was not considered by the New York "art critics" as worthwhile entertainment. We have seen more pictures of men making love to other men's wives than there is hairs on an airclad, and this class of entertainment was forced on the exhibitors until they revolted and refused these pictures for their screens. Then Tom Mix woke up and, until now, although it will take another eye-opener to get her fully awake, but that will come when they cut out Westerns and hundreds of theatres close.

Wal. Bradley of the Moon theatre at this place, says that Tom Mix or Buck Jones or any other good Western star, will draw more clear money at his box office on Saturday night than "BEN HUR" or "THE KING OF KINGS," and we predict that 999 out of every 1,000 small town theatremen will say the same thing. Our advice would be for somebody to go to making Western pictures—but then nobody has asked us for our advice.

We have no financial interest in any theatre, and it's none of our business what kind of pictures the producers make. We fully realize that, but what knowledge we have gained, if perchance we have gained any, has been gained in the "school of experience" and our diagnosis for the present school leads us to believe that we can recite "Mary's Little Lamb" as that mamama and papa and Uncle Jake and Aunt Lucy will be proud of. Sometimes argument is ineffective. We tried to convince a chap once by argument that we weren't the guy who swiped his watermelons, but we couldn't get away with it, so we took a hallstatt.

There isn't any moral to this, except that if the producers will give ten thousand exhibitors their car and tie the can on a lot of those wise boys down in N. Y., and start making Western pictures and other popular entertainment, it will lift a load off thousands of the thigs, and millions of people will forget that they have a war.

Those of you who have been long in the business will recall that many of the best pictures in the past have been accidents—pictures that critics said were lemons, and you can readily recall when the public said, "That's the movie that the critics told us was a dud and they can't telephone to us to get some more accidents." If we were to see another picture like "THE OLD NEST," we'd just "faw down an' go boom."

If it wasn't for the eternal vigilance of that boy, Eagle Eye Joe, we'd try and slip in 30 or 40 votes for Nancy Carroll in that "MY FAVORITE PLAYERS" contest now running in the HERALD-WORLD, but Joe keeps his eye glued to the ballot box like a hound pusses a track. The reason is that Joe wants to see his mother and her immediate families can vote, and that's equivalent to saying that the balance of the world can go lie down and lick their sore leg.

If Joe is as faithful to his "cherry pie girl" as he is to this contest, she need have no fears he will vote for her to the Alice at 467 Penn. Dearach Brown at 467 Penn, to the "directors meeting" (or something like that) of nights, even though he drops in at the Morrison cafe for a while to make whoopee with the girls.

We don't want to try and influence any of your exhibitors (Joe wouldn't stand for that) but we might be pardoned for suggesting that if you should send in a flock of votes for Nancy, it would be conclusive evidence of your good judgment, and you would be marching right up at the front in "THE BIG PARADE," which is soon to start in this contest. But if you get cooked for Nancy, VOTE FOR SOMEBODY—don't give the Democrats did at the last election.

We are just in receipt of a letter from Andy Anderson of the State theatre at Detroit Lakes, Minn., with reference to that gathering of the "Great Unwashed" to be held there sometime the coming summer.

Andy asks us to help him outline a program and suggest a time for the meeting, but he

HONEYMOON: Flash—95%. February 4. I cannot say much for this one, and my patrons said so too. It was a much better picture this time than last. I am rather surprised. — W. T. Briggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD: William Halas—99%. Very good and took well with my patrons. — C. C. Kaufman, Gem theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

BEAU BROADWAY Code—Fringer—Good. Title no good for small town, but we printed special billhead for this. What it was worth to the downtown crowd, Business very dull. —Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weiner, Ark.—Small town patronage.

SEND TO SINGAPORE: Ramon Novarro—A very good version of an old plot. Eight reels. — A. J. Sans, Star theatre, Willow Springs, Mo.—Small town patronage.

ACROSS TO SINGAPORE: Ramon Novarro—59%. Purely a waste of good talent to throw Novarro away in a little picture. — R. C. bachelor, Salvation Army, Mission, Mo.—General patronage.

THE FLYING SOT: Ramon Novarro—60%. February 4-5. This one is called the "ace of aipic." It gave 10 percent satisfaction. Will add a nice little one. Six inches of snow held my crowd down, but those who did come were delighted. Lots of flying, scores of planes, a clean love-story and excellent advertising for the government flying services. Novarro is good, Ralph Graves is excellent support, and Anita Page is beautiful. Unusually good photography. This is in every way a "big picture." — C. E. Jordan, 8th Street theatre, Auburn, Ark.—Small town patronage.

LADY OF CHANCE: Norma Shearer—49%. January 21. About the poorest Shearer we have used in some time. Eight reels. — W. L. Matheney, Alexander theatre, Alexander, Ark.—Small town patronage.

THE CARDBOARD LOVER: Marion Davies — It would hardly be possible to pick a title with less box office than this. A drawing card itself is a fair comedy-drama. Supposing you had a wife and things like that, how did you like this? You could choose from all within a 15 minute drive. Would you pick this one? Blah! Eight reels. — F. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—Myself and patrons very much disappointed. Sold as a special, and with these misses for your Valdez is directed, I was expected a real picture. To the contrary, it's a weak sister. Nothing to H. Eight reels. — P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Flash—A good real picture. Made some money. Favorable comments. Made the point. — S. S. Becker, Electro theatre, Burwell, Neb.—General patronage.

WHITE SHADOWS IN THE SOUTH SEAS: Special cast—10%. January 21. And what a picture! Which for pictorial beauty is hard to beat. The scenery is marvelous, and the underwater scenes duly description. There is a good story, yet the picture is more educational than entertaining. Monte Blue as the heroine—Howard Davies as the hero—Torrance makes a charming native girl. Business poor owing to severe cold weather. Nine reels. — S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Sylkirk, Minn.—General patronage.

QUALITY STREET: Special cast—January 20. The picture is rubbish and lots of walkouts on this. Why, oh why, do the exchanges with such pictures off on us when we are doing our best to help you? — S. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Special cast—49%. Very good mystery play. Brought out many comments. — S. B. Kennedy, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

BROTHEL LOVE: Dane Arthur—January 25-26. I guess I've played all of the Dane and Arthur pictures and, personally, these some exhibitors craved about "Baby Mine," but I played it and made a lot of money in good shows. I think it's a little better, and I think Dane and Arthur have found that it doesn't pay to make them too "auto.

J. M. Reynold, Central theatre, Silverton, Ore.—General patronage.

WHILE THE CITY SLEEPS: Leon Cheney—February 12. A very good Chaney picture, which drew exceptionally well. Patrons comments favorable. Business increases every exchange picture. — E. T. Davis, Lincoln. This in our opinion is his best picture since "Mr. Wu." Eight reels. — J. Kreider, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

FOREBIDDEN HOURS: Ramon Novarro—January 20-21. We placed most of our patrons. Fairly good middweek business. Renee Adoree and Ros D'Arcy also in the cast and we are very popular in this town. Five reels. — A. B. Kreisher, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

DETECTIVES: Daily's picture failed. to make a hit, it can be termed without fear of embarrassment as a success. Some even referred to it as a. "rotten." The contract. If they are all like this one, it will be necessary to replace them with other product. M.G.M. will be a special for what we paid for this wasted film—C.W. Becker, Electric theatre, Bur- well, Neb.—General patronage.

THE ADVENTURER: Tim McCoy—Heaven help and forgive us for presenting many Westerns that were not Western in truth and fact, and we are glad that Westerns are for the skids. Fine reels.—Glencoe Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

MAN MADE WOMEN: Loretta Joy—The nearest to a complete flop that we have had the misfortune to place on our screen for years. If you have it before you, don't let it catch you, and you will be saved. Mentions, however, seem pleased beyond reason.—Glencoe Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

SKIRTS: Eve Chaplin—Lots of laughter—the parons seemed pleased. Six reels.—Glencoe Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE FLEETS INS: Clara Bow—If the Bow fans don't think this is a disappointment, they will live to be disappointed. Clara Bow has nothing to do with this picture. If you think this is the gold you thought it was, you are mistaken.—E. H. Greenhalgh, Greenhalgh theatre, Ferron, Utah.—Small town patronage.

THE WEDDING MARCH: Special cast—No entertainment. Didn't please the high brows. Patrons all disappointed. Don't say special price.—Paul E. Anderson, Liberty theatre, Kallispell, Mont.—General patronage.

BEGGARS OF LIFE: Special cast.—January 28.
This is a fair picture sold to us as a special. Too many good films are being termed Specials these days. Eight reels.—Leslie Haskell, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE CASE OF LENA SMITH: Edwin Ralston—

J. C. Jenkins—His Colum

and Benfield of Morris. can't arrange these matters, then our judgment of the ability of these boys is clear out of plumb.

There is this to be said about them—when they invite guests to their city they can rest assured that service and entertainment will be their principal hobby from daylight in the morning until sunup the next day. Those of you who have never met these boys, hasn't never met nobody yet.

In connection with this gathering, we might make a few suggestions for consideration. We would suggest that the time be fixed for July 8, until as long as they want to stay (we expect to stay until the 20th). We are suggesting this date for the reason that most of the boys will be in the city for the 4th, and that would give them time to sober up and thus make driving of the highways more safe for the public.

We would further suggest that the gathering be open to all persons connected with the motion picture business in any capacity. We could have guardhouses for the film hounds, and a committee be appointed to see to it that the exchange moppets were in at reasonable hours of nights. Marked decks and loaded bones should be barred.

The HERALD-WORLD will undoubtedly open headquarters and have a staff photographer on the ground to make a visual record of all the doings, as it will bebehave all of you to watch your step. We hope to see this gathering open to every branch of the industry in this country and Canada, and since we can think of nothing better to offer as a premium, we will personally give a two-year subscription to the HERALD-WORLD to the one coming from the longest distance, another subscription for the youngest exhibitor, and still another for the handsomest exhibitor, to be determined by a committee of ladies, with Mrs. Trags-dorff as chairman. This, of course, will eliminate Trag from the contest, but then he wouldn't stand any show, anyhow.

We are without authority to speak for the HERALD-WORLD, but it is quite likely that that publication will hang up some valuable prizes for the best golf scores and the largest fish caught. The fish, of course, will have to be weighed, and those that got away would not be considered.

Knowing Andy and Benfield as we do, we wouldn't be a bit surprised if these boys arranged for a bunch of folks from Minneapolis to be there to entertain the gang, and if Nancy Carroll and Marie Prevost, Louise Fazenda and Polly Moran were there, we know one guy who will be disappointed. Just think what a line there would be out in front of the theatre if it were known that Richard Dix, Buddy Rogers and Dick Barthelmess would be there, not to mention those two Frenchmen, Joy Shreck and George Schatz, and that Swedish boy, Eagle Eye Joe.

Gosh, it will be the big time of 1929, and you fellows should start planning right now to be there. Write Andy Anderson at Detroit Lakes, Minn., in care of the State theatre, for any information relative to the programme, camping, picnics, cottages, hotels, etc. Get the names on the register early, so the committee can get better prepared to make the arrangements, for the bigger the attendance, the better the programme will be and the better the committee can arrange for your entertainment. Let this be your watchword, "Write Andy RIGHT NOW!"

It seems like when a new girl breaks into the films, the first thing she wants to do is to have her picture taken as nearly made as possible. We saw a picture of one in a recent paper whose costume consisted only of a pair of slippers. She held a large Valentine up in front of her—and it wasn't St. Valentine's Day, either! We presume that the only criticism the New York "art critics" would make would be that the heart was too darn big. Some photographers like to take

Some such scenery, it would seem;
And the only kick the boys would make
Is that they can't "shoot the scene."

A headline states that Publix has 150 theatres; they want to give away. It begins like the lemon market is being overstocked. If any of you boys want to get into the fruit business, look this matter up.

It has finally come to what we have contended in this column all along, and that is that the continental yapping of press agents about the "million dollar star salaries" and the "stars of to-morrow" pouring into the box offices has subjected the theatremen to attempted public plunder by legislative enactment. A little sanity, backed up with a pickhandle at the top, wouldn't hurt the boys at the foot of the class adumbrum.

The mercury went down last night.
To rise eight tonight.
The dull durn works are froze up tight.
We're covered up in snow.

If we could do just as we should We'd leave this frigid clime,
And go right out to Hollywood
And have a lovely time.

How They Voted

Following is the list of voters in the “My Favorite Players” contest, with their respective votes for male and female performers (in parentheses) and arranged by theatres. The first voter’s name is that of the exhibitor, the next that of his wife (except when conditions are otherwise), and the rest those of the children. No attempt has been made to arrange the list in any special order, although the position of each theatre is approximately according to the time the ballot was received.

Broadway, Brooklyn, 12—M. A. Fauer (Laura La Plante, Lon Chaney); Mrs. M. A. Fauer (Jean Crawford, Lon Chaney); Susan Fauer (Jean Crawford, Lon Chaney); Jack Fauer (Laura La Plante, Lon Chaney).

East, Chicago, 9—C. O. Faye (Dorothy Costello, William Haines).

Grand, Angelica, N. Y.—P. J. Lonsharney (Marion Nixon, Lon Chaney); Mrs. P. Lonsharney (Lillian Gish, John Gilbert).

Hannibal, Missouri, 12—Mrs. H. O. Brown (Dorothy Costello, Charles Searle).

Segreti, Wayland, Mich.—N. E. Frank (Jean Crawford, William Haines); Mrs. N. E. Frank (Jean Crawford, Richard Dix).

Lake County, Ill.—Mrs. L. C. Robinson (William Haines), Lon Chaney; Mr. L. C. Robinson (Charles Searle, William Haines).

Sun, Great Falls, Mont.—Mrs. C. A. Dillo (Garo Bove, Clive Brook); Gilbert Dillo (Glenn Tryon, Patsy Ruth Miller); George Dillo, Jr. (Laura La Plante, Richard Dix).

Alban Mills, Bath, N. Y.—H. B. Grie (Billie Dove, Harry Norton); Doris Grie (Dorothy Costello, Richard Dix); Carrol Grie (Greta Garbo, John Gilbert); Michelle Grie (Clara Bow, Conrad Nagel).

Gem, Crewe Burlington, Utah—Hulda J. Green (Bebe Daniels, Charles Searle); Green Gove (Clarke Bow, Charles Rogers); Moe Green (Clara Bow, Gary Cooper); Jesse Gove (Clarke Bow, Richard Dix); Lewis Green (Clarke Bow, Gary Cooper).

SOMEONE TO LOVE: Charles Rogers—70%.

January 23—Roxy Theatre, Hone, Maine; Colonial theatre, Farmersburg, Ind.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—February 5.

Just a fair program, nothing more. Six reels.—

G. Kline, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THREE WEEK ENDS: Clara Bow—Clara always does her stuff, and this one is as good as the others. You should see the results, it’s a fine piece of entertainment.—William L. Chilton, Colonial theatre, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt.—This picture went over for me and did as well as we could expect under conditions. Typical Holt story and will please those who like this type.—E. H. Greenhalgh, Greenhalgh theatre, Ferron, Utah.—Small town patronage.

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Bancroft.—Sorry, but I can’t endorse this from an entertainment standpoint, especially for the small town. Too sordid, and I don’t believe the average audience wants this red light stuff dragged out on the stage in an entertainment.—E. H. Greenhalgh, Greeshall theatre, Ferron, Utah.—Small town patronage.

THE FIRST KISS: WRay-Cooper.—49% Next show. Please our Sunday nights very much.
HE Fought FOR MARIAN

A real battle had A. E. Lund of the Club theatre in Viborg, S. D., but, be it noted, it was a battle with himself. And be won! As did Marian Nixon for her ultimate “King Kong” in the yet-to-open “The ‘My Favorite Players’ contest.” Writes Brother Hubbard:

"Here we are from snow-covered South east—love has set us free. I hope Marian in Nixon gets a lot more votes, as she ‘loves stuff’—even though my wife does see this, I mean it.

"If we like the HeraldWorld and someday soon will send a box office report.

"Here are experiencing some very severe winter weather here, and our attendance the last three or four weeks has been very small, although very satisfactory under the circumstances.

"You’ll hear again soon, as we feel it our duty to join the Herald-world gang. They can do big things for us, as we are still in the business.

And that’s praise enough for everyone of us to have a share!"

The FIGHTING HOMBRE: Bob Custer—Very good picture to fair business. Photography and scenery are to be commended.

The PERFECT CRIME: Special cast—Disappionted in this, as I was looking for a special. Only an average picture with, however, a little unusual acting in the picture. Richter was excellent in this from being a flop, but it is a little too slow in conclusion. No action in the picture. In the minds of the audience is hard to overcome.—E. H. Greenhalgh, Greenhalgh theatre, Ferron, Utah.

The HARVESTER: Special cast—60%. February 1-2. Best Stratton-Farner we have run. The story takes place in the barn, in the house. First night was fair. They did the advertising and the second night we had a good crowd. Selling $1.00 tickets. Eight reels.—G. H. Wright, Jr., Star theatre, Wendell, N. C.—General patronage.

WHEN THE LAW RIDES: Special cast—100%. Very good little Western, might even say it is somewhat above the average. Stars—M. D. Frazier, Empress theatre, Arma, Kan.—General patronage.

DANGER STREET: Warner Baxter—31%. January 31-2. A good picture, might get some notice, but not much. It is an attempt to show just how all the gangs in the world had to break loose. Almost a song picture. The story of this one was written by Robert Hughes, and the idea is all right but they had to bring in a “Thomson” machine gun and shoot up a flock of people. It is some action in this one, but it is still just a gang picture. Six reels.—Mr. Owen, The Victory theatre, Brooksville, Fla.—Small town patronage.

P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, la.—General patronage.

TRACED: Ranger—54%. January 5. Good picture, a good draw for country. Please all. Ranger does his work very well, and while he is not the flashiest star that Broadway has, he is still coming and very well worthwhile. Six reels.—K. D. Center, Western theatre, Killmanoou, Va.—General patronage.

Universal

HOME, JAMES: Laura LaPante—49%. Good entertainment and will please most of yours audiences.

NAMELESS REPORTS

Report from New Albany, Ind., have come in without any name or other means of identification. There are, on “Lilac Time,” “Runaway Girls,” “The Road to Ruin,” “The Whip” and “Come and Take It.” The report on “The Road to Ruin” stated, “Here is a picture that broke house record here. Played to 700 people in three days, etc.” Will the writer of these reports write his name so that they may be published?

An unusually large number of reports lately have been unidentified, and of course not worth publishing with the proper signature. Exhibitors are asked to make certain that their name and the name of the theatre and town are on each blank, in the space allotted for that purpose.

Exhibitors HeralD—World

of story. Go after it.—Frank Salin, Malabar theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

RIDING FOR FAME: Hoot Gibson—January 11-12. V. G. Held, Strand theatre, Hott, Print and photography good. Six reels.—P. C. Field, Strand theatre, Griswold, Neb.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH JUROR: Anna Q. Nilsson—January 22. While this is no special, yet it has its good points. People come in all the way through. Well acted and well directed. Good for a quiet night. —Reynolds, Green Lantern theatre, Claytonville, Del.—General patronage.

JAZZ MAD: Special cast—75%. January 9. Uncle Carl has a corner in "Nixie." But—he's not the type for the gal next door. Give her bright, snappy parts and watch the dear public approve. Appeal not so good. Seven reels.—C. C. Klutts, Glades Amusement Co., Moore Haven, Fla.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT BIRD: Reginald Denney—35%. The fact that the Faye Dunaway picture and, if they are all as poor as this, I surely am sunk.—C. C. Kaufman, Gem theatre, Colua, Col.—General patronage.

RED LIPS: Special cast. One of the nicest college pictures seen in some time. A real picture with a lot of popular appeal. A story of modern youth told in a way that is entertainment and yet that no one could call ribald. —Exposition, Special supporting cast. Seven reels.—E. H. Greenhalgh, Greenhalgh theatre, Ferron, Utah.—Small town patronage.

SILKS AND SADDLES: Marian Nixon—Here's a dandy of the ponies and just about as well done as any track story produced. Photography good and race shots will keep them off their chair's edge. Well balanced cast.—B. H. Greenhalgh, Greenhalgh theatre, Ferron, Utah.—Small town patronage.

FINDERS KEEPERS: Laura La Plante—90%. January 12. Very good picture, well liked.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

GRIP OF THE YUKON: Special cast—30%. February 1-2. Good picture, but the weather was so cold that people were "Grip of the Home" and a lot of them got the gripes at home. Anyway, poor business. Seven reels.—R. D. Young, Rex theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

GRIP OF THE YUKON: Special cast—65%. January 30. Ordinary program feature which drew better than expected. Not anything particularly original or unusual about it. Just a fair average. Miss Marlowe very sweet and glib. Print and photography just fair. Think the photographer missed out on properly showing up scenic backgrounds. Final dance out of our church programs helped the percentage. Seven reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Senior theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

ARMED YUKON: Special cast—70%. Same old story of two men and one girl in the barren gold fields during the rush of '98. Told in the same way, too. Seven reels.—M. D. Fraizer, Empress theatre, Arna, Kan.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH JUROR: Francis X. Bushman—January 20. This was a real clever picture and went over big. Six reels.—Glacosa Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Antor-Hughes—Very good clean comedy. Went over with a bang. Seven reels.—Glacosa Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE SMALL BACHELOR: Special cast—Here is a satirical comedy that might fall flat in the East, but ought to go good in the cow country. It certainly showed some promise, what darn fool ideas the Easterners as a class have of the cowboy and it's fully in keeping with the ideas that have been instilled in Eastern minds by the makers of Westerns. So many Western montorentals have been produced with wonderful stories by the Hollywood studios in the last few years that it is little wonder that the exhibitors and public rebelled and it is easily seen why so many everyday people become barbers and pony clerks again. It has been awful for a cow country exhibitor to have to play most of these absurdities and so we thoroughly enjoyed "The Small Bachelor." Seven reels.—Glacosa Brothers. Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

United Artists

MY BEST GIRL: Mary Pickford—January 23-24-27. Worth playing if it is old. Would rather play a good old one than a rotten new one. and here is where I have gotten lots of good out of the receiver of you other exhibitors and one of the chief reasons I am moping along at it as a duty. Nine reels.—B. H. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

TOPSY AND EVA: Duncan Sisters—More divided audience on this than I ever heard. Some raved over it and others said punk. Brought just fair business. Eight reels.—George H. Koch, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kan.—General patronage.

Warner Brothers

THE SINGING FOOL: Al Jolson—Warner Brothers tell you in their trade journal advertising that these are two negro numbers which you may have either. My contract calls for silent, but I received the talker with song titles fitted in the wrong place, and it was noticeable by the customers that it was a jumble, therefore making unsatisfactory entertainment. The outstanding talkers such as "The Singing Fool" will not get over well.—W. H. Brenner, Coy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE SINGING FOOL: Al Jolson—February 5-4-4. A picture. Not any better than lots of others, but the talking started people to talk and it went over a little better than average. Average has been terribly lately, the smallest business I have ever played to since December 1, as it has been less than the "Singin' Fool," however, brought back business to about regular before December.—R. S. Wenum, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.—General patronage.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE: Special cast—Quite interesting from beginning to end. A very wonderful performance by Lionel Barrymore. May McAvoy and William Collier, Jr., did theirs about as well as in anything of the kind which has been done for a long while. It seemed real. Alex Francis and others as well are very good, but the subtlety of all is—not enough paid admissions in three nights to justify being an open card.—W. H. Brenner, Coy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE MIDNIGHT TAXI: Special cast—Triple picture program. Another underworld story, Considerable action. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

Serials

ON GUARD (Pathé): Colleen Lauda—Pretty fair serial. Twelve chapters.—Samuel Jackson, Jackson theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY (Universal): Special cast—This is what I call a real serial. Has created more inquiries concerning it than any so-called road show. You'll be surprised how many adults have read the Tarzan books and become interested in the picture.—E. C. Archart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

THE TERRIBLE PEOPLE (Pathé): Special cast—Very satisfactory, pleased and helped business. Ray and Miller are popular with our patrons. They both do good work. The mystery plot is interesting, exciting and makes them come back for more. Ten episodes.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Killmarkorn, Va.—General patronage.

HAUNTED ISLAND (Universal): Jack Dambury—We have run one episode and it seems as if it will go over big. Plenty of pep in opening chapter. Newspaper reports are good. Getting a lot of help to us.—G. H. White, Jr., Star theatre, Wendell, N. C.—Small town patronage.

THE MYSTERY RIDER (Universal): William Desmond—First three chapters very good. It keeps them coming back. Book it.—Orris P. Collins, Palace theatre, Rector, Ark.—Small town patronage.
VOTES FOR MEIGHAN!

The absence of Tom Meighan in the "My Favorite Players" contest has aroused the indignation of Brother E. J. House of the Oasis theatre in Marion, Kan., and well it might were it not for the fact that he has this to say:

"Have just been reading your February 9 issue and in the 'My Favorite Players' section I notice with much pleasure to notice that no one has vote for Thomas Meighan. This is all strong, I think, as I consider himself one of the very few in the industry who knows more than 100 per cent strong.

"As to the feminine stars, it surely would be a hard job to pick a favorite to suit every sentiment. The usual type is almost invariable to choose from as Colleen Moore, Billie Dove, Norma Shearer, Shirley Mason, Bebe Daniels, Sue Carol, Voila Dana and Clara Bow. Clara is my best money getter, but this little girl Alice White is soon going to be running her a race. As to personal appearances, however, I have to pick Bebe Daniels. I like her face, and she has been a success for me ever since she first appeared with Harold Lloyd in several comedies.

"While I am writing, would like to say that I agree with all that Mr. Jenkins has to say about Mr. Brodway. You are very, very much surprised in your issue for Feb. 9. It is certainly astonishing the way the producers make the pictures for the big towns, with no regard for the patronage of the numberless small town theatres the country over. These jazz, crime, underworld and Montmartre pictures are all right for big city showing, where a movie fan has a number of show houses to choose between; but they are all wet when it comes to showing them in the little country towns with one or two theatres. I don't know how it may be in the big cities, but I know that in the little towns the pictures are still being raised in their children and raising them right, and they don't want them going off to see the picture shows night after night to get the (I mean the produce) the salesmen and crime so artistically and alluringly portraying. Neither do they want to see such pictures as "West of Zanzibar." And personally, I think it is a crime to put such a talented actor as Lon Chaney in such a [-]

"[If one of the big production companies would pay some heed to Grandpa Jenkins' advice, I bet they would find it profitable]...
THE ladder of success is like any other ladder, after all—it starts from the bottom and continues to the top. And that is by way of introducing the fact that Walter Brown, RKO salesman, has been appointed district manager in the Middlewest for RCA Photophone. His territory consists of 19 states.

After his graduation from high school, Walter Brown some time later joined the FBO Chicago staff in the poster department. That was his introduction to the film business, only six years ago. Soon FBO promoted him to the booking department, and later to film salesman. His appointment to the important RCA post came last week.

And, of course, film row is happy in Walter's new position. Herbert Washburn, manager of the RKO exchange, stated: "I'm sorry to lose Walter's services, and I feel that RKO's gain is our loss."

Sam Gorelick, brother salesman at RKO, said, "I'll more than miss my old friend who worked with me for the past six years. Here's hoping he achieves the same success in his new undertaking that he did at the RKO office." E. L. Dickerson, office manager, put his feelings in these words, "Much success, old scout, and if there is anything I can do for you in my small way, just call."

E. L. McEvoy, assistant general sales manager of RKO, said, "I am very sorry to see Walter leave RKO, because he was a very efficient worker and was liked by everyone. I know success will follow him."

Len Ulrick, co-worker with Brown on the sales staff called the RCA position "a big job which will be filled in a big way."

To which Henry Salkin, projectionist, added, "I hope, Walt, that you are as big a success as you are in stature. And Walt Brown is an awfully big guy!"

In the new office Walter has two young survey engineers under him, Norman J. Forske and Samuel E. Murray. C. F. Baman, home office executive who came to Chicago to open the Photophone office, returns this week, leaving Brown to start his new undertaking.

W. T. Pierce and Son, operators of the Pierce theatres in Kewanee, have closed a deal with the local DeForest office to install the phonofilm device in two of their theatres.

Harold Siegel, distributor of DeForest Phonofilm in this territory, left last week for a conference with Dr. Lee DeForest in New York. While Siegel was away, Joe Lyon, "Red" Johnson and Robert Churchill officiated in the removal of the DeForest office to 810 S. Wabash Avenue.

Abe Fisher, who was manager of the United Artists office, is no longer connected with the company. Fisher's position has not yet been filled.

Dorothy Lee, who is appearing in "Hello, Yourself," is in the RKO picture, "Syncopation," as is the Waring band of the show. Mort Downey, a Chicago boy, is also in the picture and sings two numbers.

The Reed Yenney-Hayes circuit of theatres in Duquoin, Ill., has signed contracts for the installation of three DeForest phonofilm devices in their theatres. According to Robert Churchill, the DeForest device may be installed in the other theatres later.

"The Godless Girl" and "Strange Cargo," the two Pathe pictures to be released March 31, are getting big bookings, according to Harry Lorch, manager of Pathe. Hundreds of theatres have already closed contracts calling for the two pictures, he states.

Simon Simansky has gone to Hot Springs where he will stay for six weeks. This sojourn is an annual affair with Simon.

J. J. Clarke, country sales manager for Pathe, was appointed manager of the Milwaukee office last week by Phil Reisman, sales head. Clarke has been connected with Pathe for the past six years. The Pathe sales force gave a farewell dinner for Clarke and presented him a beautiful gift.

The Grayland theatre, located at Cicero and Irving Park, has closed. The space will be used for an Atlantic and Pacific store.

"The Singing Fool" still continues to pull 'em in. Last Friday night at the Capitol, lines were forming around the theatre. At 7 o'clock the theatre was loaded.

An unusually interesting screening last week was the showing of the latest talking "Spotlight," by and with Grantham Rice. Rice introduced the late Tex Rickard, questioning him as to who is to take the place of Tunney. Tex replied in his snappy way, "Harry Lorch and Tom North are highly enthusiastic over this release of Pathe's, and to Van Beuren goes credit for a scoop."

C. E. Marshall, cashier of the Pathe exchange for many years, was compelled to resign last week on account of ill health. Mrs. Kelgard, who has been Marshall's assistant for almost as long a time as he was cashier, was appointed to the position by Traveling Representative DeWall, who came to Chicago to make the change. It was a very popular appointment as Mrs. Kelgard (known to all exhibitors and to film row as "Kelly") is highly regarded.

"The Bride's Relation," two-reel Educational short that made a hit at the premiere showing of "The Barker" a few weeks ago, will be shown at the Roosevelt theatre when "The Barker" opens there. The comedy is an all-audience.

Mary Pickford's "Coquette" girls atop the Sherman hotel, while in Chicago to entrain for Hollywood as the United Artists star's guests. Shown are Virginia Broochampa, Birmingham; Herta Zimmerman, Toledo; Rosina Klimm, Baltimore; Eleanor Day, Memphis; Ruth Price, Youngstown, O.; Ruth Kue, Cincinnati; Dorothy Mason, Cleveland; Debra Loeich, Pittsburgh; Gertrude Brown, Syracuse; Victoria Speland, New York; Mae Everett, Atlanta; Mary Linnane, Boston; Catherine Ross, Buffalo; Matric Cooke, Indianapolis; Mary Philipps, Chicago. A higher premium than ever before

Today — in this new era of sound pictures — there is a higher premium than ever before on film uniformity. For sound quality is even more sensitive than screen quality to any variation in the film.

If your “talkie” prints are on Eastman film — famous for uniformity — your patrons are seeing and hearing the very best that this newest development in motion pictures has to offer.

EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY

"Whirls and Girls"
Sennett—Educational
A Wow

Type of production . . . . . 2 reel comedy
Mack Sennett has gone and done it again. In this laughology he sets such a fast and dizzy laugh-pace that the other boys have got to go some to stay in the same division. High praise? Yes, and there's a reason. We went in sick and dejected and forlorn, all choked up with a cold in the projector room as good as cured. We laughed so much we sneezed the darn cold right out of our bean. Harry Gribbon is the dizzy nut dressed up like a million dollars and acting that way. Andy Clyde is the henpecked husband who believes the nut is what he claims to be. So Andy chucks up a perfectly good job to take a position with the goofy one. And from there on it's just one belly-laugh after another.
They land at the seashore with the bathing beauties, and never have the bathing cuties acted as pretty background for more hilarious and side-splitting fun.
You'll laugh yourself goofy, even with your landlord or mother-in-law alongside.
Story and dialog by John A. Waldron, and directed by Mack Sennett in person.
You can't afford to pass this up. And if the salesman tells you this is worth a dozens ordinary comedies, he's not exag-gerating—for once. RCA Photophone.

Here's great reading for show men who are playing the Mack Sennett Talking Comedies, but if you let your opposition have you to them, you'd better read this review from The Film Daily. It might make you dizzy.

TALKING PICTURES

have you protected your sound installation?

You paid a lot of money to put sound-reproducing equipment in your theatres. You expect to get this money back and reap a handsome profit besides. You count on doing this through the box-office returns on talking pictures. Playing mediocre talking pictures won’t do it. The novelty of sound has worn off. Booking the product of a company with one or two outstanding talking attractions is no protection to you; you didn’t install that expensive apparatus to use for three or four weeks. No, you have only one surefire insurance for your investment: Deal with a company that guarantees you a continuous flow of quality talking pictures week after week. And that narrows your choice down to one company: PARAMOUNT.

Survey all the sound pictures in the field and the prospect for months to come. Look at the facts: PARAMOUNT, with current attractions like “Interference”, “The Doctor’s Secret”, “The Wolf of Wall Street”, “Abie’s Irish Rose”, “The Hopworn Angel” and “The Canary Murder Case” is the one producer whose sound and talking pictures are doing consistently great box-office business today. PARAMOUNT, with 23 big quality talking pictures coming between now and August, alone supplies your vital need of consistently the sound product for the coming months. And for instance:

"THE LETTER" Starring JEANNE EAGELS. The dramatic all-talking thunderbolt! Star and author of "Rain" re-united! Opening soon on Broadway at $2. Directed by Jean de Limur.

"THE WILD PARTY" Starring CLARA BOW. They'll hear as well as see "It" in an all-talking clean-up! By the author of "Flaming Youth". Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Another Clara Bow all-talker coming in June.

"CHINATOWN NIGHTS" ("TONG WAR") The thrilling all-talking drama of white women in Chinatown with Wallace Beery and Florence Vidor. Directed by William Wellman.

"THE CARNATION KID" Starring DOUGLAS MACLEAN. MacLean does sensational come-back in all-talker produced by Al Christie. Pre-viewed and pronounced a knockout. Directed by E. Wallace Hopper. McLean also in "DIVORCE MADE EASY", released in July.

"INNOCENTS OF PARIS" Starring MAURICE CHEVALIER, idol of France and now entrancing New Yorkers as headliner of Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic. All-talking, all-singing super-special. Directed by Richard Wallace, who made "The Shopworn Angel".

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL" Other mystery spine-tinglers pale beside this all-talking smash! With the stag stars, Claudette Colbert and Edward G. Robinson. Directed by Robert Flore.
IN-THE-FACE” and “THE BISHOP’S CANDLESTICKS” Three all-talking gems in one big show! With such stars as Fannie Brice, Ann Pennington, Raymond Hitchcock, Frances Williams, Walter Huston and others.

“GENTLEMEN of the PRESS” From the New York stage success. With Walter Huston and all-star cast. All-talking. The most gripping drama yet seen or heard. Directed by Millard Webb.

“NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH” Starring RICHARD DIX. They’ll see and hear a new Dix in this all-talking production of the well known stage hit. With Helen Kane, musical comedy star singing, Louis John Bartels and big cast. Victor Schertzinger Production. Dix also coming in all-dialog version of the famous stage success. “THE WHEEL OF LIFE”. With Florence Vidor, O. P. Heggie and others.

“THE WOMAN WHO NEEDED KILLING” The fiery Baclanova as a temptress, Clive Brook, Neil Hamilton and Clyde Cook. All-talking. Directed by Rowland V. Lee, who made “The Wolf of Wall Street”.

“THE MAN I LOVE” The all-talking sporting special with Richard Arlen, Mary Brian and Baclanova. Directed by William Wellman.

“THE STUDIO MURDER MYSTERY” A star is mysteriously murdered on a studio set. From the great Photoplay Magazine serial. All-talking, with Warner Oland, Neil Hamilton and Chester Conklin.

“BETRAYAL” Starring EMIL JANNINGS. With Gary Cooper and Esther Ralston. With magnificent music score. Lewis Milestone Production.

“YOUNG SINNERS” (tent. title) Starring CHARLES “Buddy” ROGERS, America’s Boy Friend. All-talker directed by Dorothy Arzner.

ADOLPHE MENJOU A revelation in his first all-talking picture. Directed by George Abbott, co-author and stage director of “Broadway”. Title and other details to be announced later.
In short talking and sound subjects also, Paramount has the class of the market. 35 Quality Sound Acts such as the already celebrated "That Party in Person", starring Eddie Cantor, which has played three months continuously on Broadway. To be followed by Eddie Cantor in "The Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic". 13 Christ Talking Plays, including the famous "Florian Slappey" stories of Octavus Roy Cohen. 6 Famous Composers musical shorts. (Ask your orchestra leader.) 5 Song Cartoons, novelties which let the audience sing too! "Far surpass any sound shorts yet made", says Exhibitor's Daily Review of Paramount's talking acts—and it's true!

You're a wide-awake showman. You know there nothing else on the market to compare with the quality and quantity of the Paramount sound product outlined on these pages. You're a business man. You have an investment to protect. You realize that the one company guaranteeing quality talking product in quantity is

8 FOX 100% DIALOG

Features now ready or in production

1 "IN OLD ARIZONA"
With Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe and Dorothy Burgess. First 100% outdoor talker yet made — did 400% over normal business at Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee, according to Motion Picture News tabulation—highest percentage in history of business. Raoul Walsh and Irving Cummings production.

2 "THE GHOST TALKS"
First 100% all-talking farce comedy with Helen Twelvetrees and Charles Eaton—jumps into record breaking class at Fox Philadelphia to the tune of $32,000 for week. Lew Seiler production.

3 "HEARTS IN DIXIE"
All-talking, all-singing feature of Dixieland with cast of 200 native entertainers—actors, singers, dancers, musical comedy stars and Billbrew Chorus of 60 voices. Now playing Gaiety, New York, twice daily at $2, to record breaking business. Paul Sloane production.

4 "SPEAKEASY"

5 "THRU DIFFERENT EYES"
100% dialog — with Warner Baxter, Mary Duncan and Edmund Lowe. Thrillingly different murder mystery. Trial is presented from three different angles— thru the eyes of the district and defense attorneys and as it actually occurred. John Blystone production.

6 "THE VALIANT"
100% dialog—with Paul Muni, star of the Broadway successes, "We Americans" and "Four Walls"—adapted from the stage play by Holworthy Hall. A hair-raising murder mystery of a condemned man who concealed his identity to save his mother from bearing his disgrace. William K. Howard production.

7 "BEHIND THAT CURTAIN"
100% dialog—from the Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers. Gripping mystery unraveled by the droll Charlie Chan. Directed by Irving Cummings.

February 15th, 1929.

Mr. Louis G. Pacent - President,
Pacent Reproducer Corporation,
250 West 39th Street,
New York City, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Pacent: -

A few days ago, I heard the installation of your Pacent Reproducing System at the "Lincoln Theatre" - Union City, New Jersey and can say that I think it is the best instrument I have heard to date.

In order to verify this statement, I am enclosing herewith my check for $3000.00 for the "Walker Theatre" and the "Senate Theatre", both in Brooklyn, as a deposit.

Wishing you success and asking for an early installation,
I beg to remain

Very truly yours,

"PATHE IS PREPARED"
(a forecast)

"The motion picture is committed to newness and the immediate Now. The Screen succeeds, not in yesterday's glory or tomorrow's hope, but in the facts of Today.

Pathe advances into the new season assured and prepared in terms of now."

(Pathe Announcement, May 26, 1928)

PATHE DELIVERS
(a fact)

Months have elapsed—comes the dawn:

It has become the custom of the motion picture industry to be flamboyant, to speak in large, loud words, hoping that some part of a whisper may be heard.

Pathe does not have to resort to extraordinary emphasis to register the plain truth and facts. Pathe's record for the current season is sufficiently emphatic in the minds of the box-office minded.

Let us now, however, reiterate what we said in that May announcement of 1928: "Pathe is a House of Honor, untainted of competition with its customers, rendering unswerving service and asking nothing beyond its proper due."

Onward in these pages you will read the story of Pathe's box-office victories, the only victories in which the exhibitor can share.
September Photoplay chooses two Pathe features in its six best of the month—"Craig's Wife" and "Power".

Film Daily poll places "King of Kings" in ten best of year, "Chicago" and "Craig's Wife" in roll of honor.

December Photoplay picks "The Spieler" as one of the six best of the month.

Cincinnati Times-Star chooses "Craig's Wife" among ten best. Honorable mention—"Skyscraper".

Washington Star puts "King of Kings" and "Chicago" in its "best of the season".

"Skyscraper" in the select class of the Cincinnati Times-Star.

"The Spieler" and "Craig's Wife" put in the "ten best" by Tamar Lane of the Film Mercury.

Motion Picture News says, "'The Office Scandal' is the greatest newspaper story ever screened—and it goes double or redoubled."

John S. Cohen, Jr. of the New York Sun, puts "King of Kings" in his list of the season's best.
Amusements, Minneapolis picks “King of Kings” as the best picture of the year.

Carl B. Adams, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, heads the Ten Best of the Year with “Craig’s Wife”.

Ex. Herald-World says—“‘Geraldine’ is one of the most entertaining and fascinating pictures this reviewer has seen for some time.”

“The Red Mark” barely misses being one of the ten best movies.—Regina Cannon, New York American.

Detroit Free Press—“‘Craig’s Wife’ is one of the chosen pictures of the year, placed on more selected lists throughout the country than can be counted.”

Variety says: “‘Sal of Singapore’ can play ’em big and small, silent or wired, and mean something. It’s first run material and a pip.”

Quinn Martin, in the Evening World—“Captain Swagger” is another picture out of the Pathe Studios, in which a noticeable rise in production merit has been going on for the last few months.

The Check-up, Motion Picture News for Dec. 10th, reports from exhibitors, shows Pathe leads at the box-office.

Phototone "Talkie"

A New Synchronous Disc Device that every house can afford

The same perfection of result and ingenuity of design which has caused the Phototone non-synchronous device to be installed in a greater number of motion picture theaters than are using any similar machine is back of the new Synchronous device by Phototone.

This device is offered after months of experience and research—a complete synchronous attachment, perfected in all its details; substantially built; and conforming to the Phototone policy of offering the best at lowest possible cost.

This new and better synchronous device is now ready for the market. Installations are being made. Get the details. Just use the coupon to indicate the type of equipment in which you are interested or get in touch with our nearest office.

Watch for Announcement of Phototone's Sound on Film

In about thirty days, Phototone will have ready for delivery a modestly priced Sound on Film attachment which can be applied to present Phototone installations.

GUTS!

—it's an ugly word but it says plenty—

SHOWMEN KNOW what the word means. You've got to have it to stay in show business. To cope with changing times, to hang on to a fickle public, to meet the overhead requires—guts!

IN THE PAST YEAR this industry has witnessed exciting and trying days. Theatres linked up with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product have stood like Rocks of Gibraltar, firm and foremost, secure and safe. Of all companies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has given a bold and uncompromising challenge to uncertainty by delivering its greatest product during a time of greatest need. M-G-M's unswerving answer to your need, Now and Forever, is Great Pictures enacted by the magnetic stars of popular favor. The past year has cemented more firmly than ever the bond between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the 15,000 theatres it serves. The past year, too, has been a lesson in theatre insurance to other exhibitors, who now finally recognize that the one safe and dependable source of picture supply is M-G-M. Day by day theatre-owners are switching from previous affiliations to M-G-M, convinced by sheer, outstanding, box-office performance.

LET US list briefly a few M-G-M releases of recent months:

PERFORMANCES OF COPYRIGHTED MUSIC

By Mechanical Devices,

"Vitaphone," "Movietone," "Photophone," "Bristolphone" Phonographs, Mechanical Organs, Pianos, Etc.

INFORMATION

In the rapid development and increase in the use of mechanical means of performing music, some exhibitors have received the impression that such renditions, in public performances, are not subject to license of the copyright owner.

The impression is entirely erroneous. License must be secured from the copyright owner, in respect of a public performance by means of any mechanical device just the same as if the performance were by a human orchestra.

The Copyright Law makes no distinction as regards the means used for accomplishing the rendition of copyrighted music; if it occurs in a public performance for purposes of profit, license of the copyright owner must be secured or an infringement of the copyright is committed.

Renditions by means of "Vitaphone", "Movietone", "Photophone", "Bristolphone", or any of the various synchronizing devices, or by means of phonographs, mechanical organs, or any sort of contrivance which will mechanically reproduce music, are subject to exactly the same conditions as regards license from copyright owners, as renditions by human players.

Exhibitors and others are therefore cautioned regarding the necessity of securing, or continuing in effect if they already have it, the license of this Society before effecting renditions by the above means or otherwise, of compositions copyrighted by our members. Infringements of these copyrights will be prosecuted.

Existing agreements between E. C. Mills, as Agent and Trustee of various copyright owners, and Electrical Research Products, Inc., and RCA Photophone, Inc., stipulate that renditions of copyrighted musical works by means of the latter's synchronizing apparatus shall occur only in theatres having license of this Society. Such license is available, in respect of such renditions, under the same conditions as if renditions are by human means. This Society is not a principal party to such agreements.

In all fairness this notice is inserted in publications of general circulation amongst exhibitors, to the end that they may avoid the commission of infringements through unlicensed illegal public performances of copyrighted musical works by means of any type of mechanical device, and thus become liable to the penalties provided by the law.

If you have a license from the Society, and intend to include compositions copyrighted by our members in your programs, you should be careful to continue the license in effect, regardless of the manner in which such renditions are effected, mechanical or otherwise. If you do not have such license, and desire to use such works in your programs, you should immediately apply for license, and thus avoid the hazard of suits for infringement of copyrights.

Further information, list of members, and address of our office nearest to you will be mailed promptly upon request.

"The Barker’ opened Saturday to tremendous business at the New York Strand turning away thousands. This picture was second only in gross to a shorter length Chaplin picture which ran two extra shows daily. Monday’s business was $3,000 over average. This attraction is the biggest gold mine hit for exhibitors."

(Signed) MOE MARK

"At 10:30 yesterday morning, the line at the Strand was expectantly draped around the box-office, down Broadway to the corner of 47th Street and along the latter thoroughfare for a goodly distance. The picture is ‘The Barker’... Merely more evidence that good pictures are known by their merits!"

Advent of sound is boosting short features, says Hammons, proving boon particularly to comedies; Has revived all the genius of Mack Sennett as producer, declares president of Educational; Finds new development in production of motion pictures is especially adaptable to comedy product while not appropriate for all types of long features.

ADVERTISEMENTS

More on Sound Pictures

The influence of sound upon the motion picture industry reaches a great deal further than one can appreciate from an inspection of the surface.

In a way, the controversy over sound pictures and silent continues. One can still hear occasional voices insisting that the new sound pictures, whether made with dialogue or music, are nothing more than fads. One can still hear evangelists of the new order insisting that the silent picture is doomed and that we will have a new era.

These are extreme views, interesting merely as marking the boundaries of the existing controversy. Obviously, the truth lies somewhere between, but we must nevertheless be grateful to the extremists as presenting the situation in such sharp relief that all may see and understand.

Whatever the future of sound pictures, close students of the industry have already noted one change. Sound has brought the short feature back to life.

At one time, shortly before the advent of sound, the Educational Film Exchanges had some 13,500 theatres on their list; this meant a lively demand for short comedies in many parts of the world. Suddenly, the list began to shrink. Big theatres in the larger cities were dropping the short features to make room for presentation acts. Smaller theatres in smaller cities began to follow suit. Mr. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, tells the story graphically on another page of this magazine.

This brought up a serious problem. It was a problem far more vital to the motion picture industry than a sudden slump in the demand for a certain set of pictures, or the product of any one particular company. It meant that motion picture theatres were drawing further and further away from motion pictures, to present an old hybrid form of entertainment in a new and fresher form. It meant that motion pictures were no longer strong enough to bring crowds into the theatres.

And motion pictures, obviously, form the backbone of the industry. Motion pictures are the industry itself.

With the advent of sound, the short features came promptly back into their own. Fox showed the way in unmistakable language when he showed Broadway the first of the talking comedies, "The Family Picnic." Educational promptly took the cue and today there is a livelier demand than ever for this type of entertainment.

Big theatres which dropped the short comedies for acrobats and singers, orchestras and masters of ceremonies, have come back to short features. Comedies are back in style. The shrinking list is on the mend.

Again, it is relatively unimportant to the industry as a whole that the product of any one company is back in favor. But it is highly significant that the theatres are coming back to moving pictures as against saxophones.

For what the short comedy has accomplished toward this end, the motion picture industry should extend its thanks and congratulations.

The Demand for Films

The staggering totals for motion picture production costs, just made public by the United States Census Bureau, show clearly how earnestly and how honestly the industry is striving to better its product.

The biennial census of the bureau shows that in 1927 a total of 142 studios and laboratories reported a total production cost of $134,000,000. This is nearly half again as much as the total spent in the corresponding period of 1925, to be exact, 43.5 per cent.

Inasmuch as these figures concern the activities of the industry before the advent of sound, it may be predicted with a degree of safety that the figures of 1929 will shame these in comparison. If the industry expanded its costs by 43.5 per cent in the course of normal progress, it will not be too much to expect that the costs for 1929 will represent an increase of more than a hundred per cent over the present totals.

Costs in themselves are, of course, nothing to boast about. It need not be a matter of pride that the industry is spending more money than ever before. Money, for all its value, is not an infallible gauge of success.

It is reassuring, however, that the huge sums spent are being used in a progressive and an intelligent manner. The industry has not been niggardly about its investigations of sound. It has not skimmed in its efforts to educate itself in this new medium. It has been generous, even at the risk of many mistakes, and costly mistakes at that.

The motion picture industry has learned that progress is expensive, but at the same time profitable.
Advent of Sound Is Boosting Short Feature, Says Hammons

Frank Keenan, Film And Stage Veteran, Dies of Pneumonia
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 26.—The film colony again is bowed in grief over the death of one of its most eminent and popular members. Frank Keenan, veteran of the stage and both a director and actor for the screen, passed away of pneumonia at his home here Sunday. He was 70 years old.

Keenan was born in Dubuque, la., and at the age of 22, began his stage career. He played in stock for awhile, then went to giving stage roles in many stage productions, including Shakespearean plays. Ten years ago he played his first part on the screen, and since then has also been a director. His last stage appearance was on his 68th birthday in Chicago.

He is survived by his widow, who was his leading woman prior to her marriage; by Mrs. Ed Wynn, wife of the stage comedian; and by Mrs. Frank Sloan.

At the time of his death his wife was beside him. Mrs. Wynn and Mrs. Sloan were on their way from New York to his bedside, but he died before they reached him.

The passing of Keenan adds another to the list of recent deaths which have robbed Hollywood of so much adoring and beloved film personalities as William Russell, Fred Thomson and Theodore Roberts.

Amkino’s “Krasin” Opens At Carnegie Hall After Address by Stefansson
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—A combination of jeering and cheering marked the opening at Carnegie Hall on February 20 of “Krasin,” the original film of the Soviet Expedition which rescued the crew of the wrecked Italia.

The film presented by Amkino and released by Sovkino, was preceded by an informative introductory address by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer who edited it. Stefansson was jeered by the Italians and cheered by the Russians, but preserved his poise and made his points unmistakably.

A little later at the Lyric theatre, the explorer made another speech before the premiere of “At the South Pole,” a picture made up largely of views taken by members of the ill fated Scott expedition. Stefansson had also edited and titled this film which will continue to be shown twice daily.

Electrical Financiers Predict Reduction Of Operation Costs for Sound Pictures
(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—“When the electrical companies manufacturing equipment for the presentation of sound films, determine definitely that the ‘talkies’ are here to stay, it is logical to expect that they will gradually reduce prices,” declares a report of financiers interested in the electrical industry, made upon completion of a tour of inspection of theatres in and around San Francisco.

“During 1928,” the report states, “there was a wild rush on the part of big and little exhibitors to obtain equipment for their showhouses. Those who were fortunate in being able to announce to the waiting public that they were now able to offer all the big ‘talkie’ hits, found that attendance immediately picked up.”

The financiers declare they found that operating costs have also gone up, which led to their statement that as soon as the innovation becomes a settled thing, the electrical industry will endeavor to correct this.
Famous Citizens of Dixie

YOU'VE met Mr. Florian Slappey, of course. And probably other Sons and Daughters of I Will Rise. For they are Octavus Roy Cohen's famous fiction characters. Now Christie-Paramount has incarnated them on the screen, in "Music Hath Charms," produced with an all-colored cast. Roberta Hysen, Spencer Williams, Harry Tracy, Nathan Curry, Leon Hereford and Harry Porter have the principal parts. Walter Graham directed.

Above: Octavus Roy Cohen, author of the widely read negro stories from which have come such celebrated expressions as "Is you is or is you ain't," and "That is something I ain't nothin' else but." With Cohen is shown Al Christie, who is producing the stories for Paramount release. They are shown examining a new type of Western Electric microphone.

Left: The eminent Mr. Florian Slappey of Birmingham, man about town and a leading light in the doings of Darktown.

Below: Mr. Roscoe Griggers overrules Miss Zenia Shrew, luscious manicurist, with a flock of judges pronouncing him a man of vast affairs.

Doug Fairbanks

DOUG FAIRBANKS has gone and made a swell picture in "The Iron Mask." To me, it was as good as any picture he has ever made, which is about all that can be said for any film.

This is great news, because Fairbanks has been a favorite of the films so long that it would be nothing short of tragic to be forced to record, regretfully, that anything of his showed any signs of sliding. "The Iron Mask" isn't just a good picture, or a good Fairbanks picture. It is a strong romantic story, played with fire and fervor, extraordinarily well done. Fairbanks himself is as dashing as ever he was; he is a rattling good actor who somehow transports you into the mood of what he is playing.

Fairbanks' ingenious method of employing the voice isn't terribly important. He secreted a brief recitation at the beginning of the picture, and again at the beginning of the second half. In the manner of the traditional Greek chorus he introduces the subject and comments briefly. You hear his voice, which is enough. He has the good sense not to make the lords and ladies of Louis XIV's day talk in Hollywood English.

RCA Makes New Terms for Initial Photophone Fees
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—New terms for exhibitors were placed in effect last Wednesday by RCA Photophone, Inc. Instead of a 25 per cent down payment required in former instances once the contract was signed, exhibitors can now pay only 5 per cent of the amount of the bill at the time the order is placed, with the remainder payable in five equal installments after the first of the month following the month of advance payment.

The move was made possible by the fact that RCA Photophone has opened offices in the following key cities:
- Chicago, 100 West Monroe Street, represented by Walter Brown.
- Denver, 817 Seventeenth Street, represented by Mortimer O. Smith.
- San Francisco, 235 Montgomery Street, represented by Mortimer O. Smith.
- Toledo, 430 Islington Street, represented by E. M. Smith.

Abbott Signed by RKO, Collaborates with Daab, Paramore on "Ringside"
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—George Abbott, famed director-playwright, is the latest to be enrolled under the RKO banner. Abbott will direct and, with Daab and Ted Paramore, will produce a forthcoming RKO production, "Ringside." Hy Daab, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for RKO, saw the glamour, the romance and turbulent life of the ring and transferred it to "Ringside." Ted Paramore, his co-director, directed the course of the play and contributed line and effective situations.

"Ringside" will be done in sound and silent and roars of the crowd in Madison Gardens will be caught with RCA Photophone.

Ken Maynard Signs with Universal, Will Make Six Pictures During 1929-30
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Ken Maynard, cowboy star, has signed a contract with Universal pictures covering the next three years. Maynard is a western player for many years. He entered screen work following his early days as a trick circus rider. Some of his recent pictures have been "The Wagon Show," "The Canyon of Adventure," "The Upland Rider," "The California Mail," "Cheyenne," and his current release, "The Royal Rider."

Detectives Employed in Quiz on Cutting of Wires That Control Sound Films
(Special to the Herald-World)

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 26.—Detectives have been brought here to make an investigation of cutting of wires that control sound pictures. It is a delay of nearly an hour. It was found that someone had climbed a telephone pole in an alley near the theatre. The house manager thought the act might be prompted by labor trouble that occurred while the theatre was being remodeled.

Two More Censor Bills Filed; Kansas Escaping Tax on Seats
Option Measures on Sunday Closing Introduced in North Dakota and Ohio—Michigan Pastor-Legislator Suggests Clerks Pay Admission Levy

Censorship, Sunday closing, and seat tax—the "triple threat" in the legislative footballing with the motion picture industry—went through more scrimmaging in several states last week. The final score cannot be determined until the playing time of the winter season is over.

In North Dakota a censorship bill has been introduced in the senate, while a proposal for county option on Sunday shows is up to the house. Oregon too has a newly introduced censorship measure before it. In Indiana, however, there was cheer for exhibitors in the killing of a censorship bill in the house, and at Greeley, Col., the city council passed a repeal ordinance.

In Texas, where the blue Sunday law was repealed in the house a week ago, it is understood that the bill is to be taken up in the senate. City operation is the objective of a new proposal in the Ohio general assembly.

A Missouri house committee killed the Wren censorship bill and the move to bar standing room sales. A 5 per cent tax on gross receipts is proposed in a new Wisconsin bill.

Both the censorship and Sunday option bills in North Dakota have been defeated at previous session, but only after bitter fights. The censor measure provides for a commission of three, $750 salary, the expense to be paid by a $2 tax on each reel.

On the admission tax issue, Michigan exhibitors are campaigning against a bill which would saddle a tax on theatre tickets. In Kansas, the efforts of R. B. Biechele and others seem to have borne fruit. Biechele suggested a tax investigatory commission be named, and the senate tax committee has suggested the indirect bills be laid aside for this session, which would permit exhibitors to breathe easily for at least two years.

Oregon Bill Denounced
(Special to the Herald-World)

SALEM, ORE., Feb. 26.—Exhibitors throughout the state are watching House Bill No. 408. The measure is practically the same bill that has been bobbing up for the last eight years. Dan J. Malarkey, leading attorney, has been retained by the exhibitors, and in the hearing it was shown there is no public demand for state wide censorship.

Malarkey, warren member has been in the state board has invested the powerful he the bill invests in the censorship board. He also called attention to the harm that could be done to the talking pictures by such autocratic power.

Mrs. F. O. Northup, who served on the censorship board for almost six years in Portland, condemned the state censorship plan.

Exhibitor Routs Censors
Worsens Censorship, the Herald-World
GREENEY, Colo., Feb. 26.—Repeal of the city censorship ordinance reveals how an up-and-usher exhibitor put the kibosh on a municipal censor board. Annihilation of the censor boards of Greeley began with the hearing of Warner Brothers' "My Man." Manager Dave Morrison of the Rex theatre invited represe nentatives of the motion picture firm to see the picture privately. All citizens expressed resentment against the ban and the board carried the issue to a public hearing of unfavorable result.

The board was composed of three. The chairman, wife of an educator, recently returned from a leisurely trip around the world, while the second member is with the Liberal Sherwood Eddy party, and the third member, another pastor, "has twice visited Europe."

The Greeley Tribune editorially denounced the board.

Sunday Option Proposed
(Special to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, Feb. 26.—A bill has been introduced in the Ohio state assembly by Senator Marshall of Cleveland, which would permit any village, city or incorporated town to vote on the matter of permitting Sunday shows. The bill is as follows:

"In the case of the news reels, censorship, unless of the most liberal and broad nature, threatens the enjoyment upon the sacred American principle of free speech," says an editorial in the Columbus Evening Dispatch. At the same time the Dispatch opposes abolishment of all censorship measures.

Would Make Clerks Pay
(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Feb. 26.—Theatre owners are up in arms over a proposal to place a state tax on employees. The proposal now is before the general taxation committee at Lansing. The tax would fall specifically on motion picture theatres, ball parks and on tickets up to $1 sold by legitimate theatres.

The trouble all began when Governor Fred W. Green declared he needed $22,000,000 for a hospital program. The tax bill was introduced by Rev. Andrew H. Harmon, who said he was in favor of the bill because it would make stenographers and clerks, "principal persons," help pay the cost of government.

The bill proposes a rate of five cents for every ticket costing from 10 cents to $1; a 10 cent tax on tickets from $1 to $2 and a 15 cent tax on every ticket costing from $2 to $3.

They're Digging Down
(Special to the Herald-World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 26.—The screen and stage theatre managers of the state are paying their annual state license fee of $3. The fees are to be paid to the auditor of the county in which the theatre is located and should not be sent to the state house.

Kansas Tax Doubtful
(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 26.—R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri and his forces again have triumphed against the encroachment of legislation. Just when it began to look as though Kansas exhibitors were to be burdened with a 5 per cent amusement tax. Biechele's suggestion that the legislature appoint a tax commission of five members to study the tax situation in Kansas was acted upon favorably. The senate state wide censorship, contrary to the belief that none of the indirect tax bills be passed six session of the legislature, which means Kansas exhibitors will be free from tax worries for two years, at least.
Union Forces Capture Sound Ballot; Outvote Champions of Audiences

Dallas Survey Starts 90 Per Cent Favoring Talking Pictures, Then Musicians’ Allies Get Busy with Pencils

[Dallas — Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

DALLAS, Feb. 26.—Something happened to the sound survey of the Greater Palace theatre! The result of the first 200 ballots showed 90 per cent of the patrons preferring all-talking pictures to silent films. The final tabulation revealed only 37 per cent favoring auditions. What was the answer? Investigation of the names of the balloters solved the riddle. Nearly 50 per cent of those casting votes were in some way connected with the musicians’ unions or had similar alliances!

The survey, carried daily in the Dallas News and Journal, ran for two weeks, drawing a total of 700 votes. There were no prizes, remuneration of any sort in connection with the survey, and the number who cast ballots did so because of their interest in the subject. In spite of the fact that the total count disclosed a majority in favor of the abandonment of sound pictures, the fact remains that the Greater Palace theatre is enjoying unusually excellent business on the all-audience, indicating that more individuals who were biased against auditions voted than those who favored them, hoping that through their vote they would be instrumental in casting talking pictures out of the Dallas amusement repository.

The questions asked in the ballots reveal some quite interesting data. They follow, with resultant counts:

1. Do you prefer all-talking motion pictures?
   - Yes—251
   - No—334

2. Do you prefer pictures that are part talkie and part silent?
   - Yes—239
   - No—544

3. Do you prefer silent pictures with synchronized music scoring?
   - Yes—251
   - No—446

4. Do you like sound effects, such as shots, knacks, etc.?
   - Yes—334
   - No—364

5. Do you like stage stars of experience in talking pictures?
   - Yes—341
   - No—358

6. Do you prefer good looking actors regardless of acting ability?
   - Yes—283
   - No—399

7. Do you like talking motion pictures made from stage hits?
   - Yes—266
   - No—434

8. Do you like the all-talking short comedy skit?
   - Yes—268
   - No—408

9. Do you prefer synchronized music to the theatre’s orchestra?
   - Yes—205
   - No—509

The first 200 or more ballots were almost unanimously in favor of all forms of talking and sound pictures. And then the dooms were upset. Ballots began pouring in to the amusement editor of the News, John Rosenfeld, Jr., by the score, deploring the day when talking pictures made their debut.

Injunction Upholds Rights of Tobis to Sound-on-Film Production in Germany

[Special to the Herald-World]

BERLIN, Feb. 16—(By Mail.)—The Bild-Syndikat (Tobis) has been granted an injunction against Klangfilm, prohibiting the importation and production of sound pictures in which the action and sound are separately made, to be ultimately united in printing. The court order followed a trade showing by Klangfilm of such pictures, which were of American origin and which used the RCA Photophone process. The injunction is based on the rights acquired by Tobis with the merger of this company and Tri-Ergon, original purchases of the rights. The order is applicable to both German and foreign productions. It is said in the trade here that this action gives Tobis practical control of sound-on-film production in Germany.

First National for Dialogue Following Audiences’ Success

[NY — Special to the Herald-World]

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—First National-Vitaphone is being favored by the public with pictures for coming months, according to an announcement by E. B. Dejarnette, general sales manager, who states that the first of the dialogue pictures, “The Barker” and “Weary River,” have been so successful that it has been decided to have talking as well as sound effects in the coming productions. Dialogue pictures either in production or at the present time or scheduled to go into work at the studios early date.

“Made the Goat” in Film Flop, Says Bainbridge

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Writing from New York to the Telegram, Capt. Bruce Bainbridge declared that he has been made the “goat” for the “failure” of the picture, “Carry On, Sergeant,” made by Canadian International Film Corporation. He asserts that the Canadian company still owes him between $6,000 and $7,000 in salary. Captian Bainbridge admitted in his letter that there had been extravagances in production but that they were not under his control. He stated that he caused the removal of Col. C. B. Needham to the position of general manager of the Canadian company, and asserted that he had saved the shareholders from further outlay. He claimed that he had requested that he be relieved, and that he had been handicapped in being forced to change his original story. It is said to have cost $300,000.

In the meantime, there is a stay in bankruptcy proceedings here against the company, for three months, to enable the company to effect a financial settlement if possible.

Theatre Watchman Freed

In Shooting of Youth

[Special to the Herald-World]

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 26.—In 1927 Dean P. Simpson, watchman at the Penn Valley theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, ejected John P. Volar from the theatre for creating a disturbance. Volar left to attack Dean, who shot and killed Volar. A jury in the criminal court of Jackson County, Missouri yesterday acquitted Dean on the grounds of self-defense.

World-Wide Film Censor

OHIO, Feb. 26.—The censor board has rejected completely the World-Wide picture, “A Woman in the Night,” claiming the theme is immoral. This is the first World-Wide picture to be released in Ohio.
Warner Stand on Interuse Subject Of Federal Probe

Officials of the department of justice are to investigate the attitude of Warner Brothers on interchangeability, according to a statement by William R. Benham, special assistant to the Attorney General. It was reported in the National Exhibitor, William Bethel, Philadelphia franchise holder of Biophone, and Benham have been in conferences.

Warner Brothers have sanctioned the servicing of Biophone at the Grant theatre in Philadelphia, but declare that this is no blanket sanction, but that approval will have to be given specifically for each theatre not having Western Electric equipment.

The Pennsylvania Eastern M P T O has declared that if he has not definite assurance of Warner Brothers' attitude on interchangeability, the picture men are taking radical steps to bring the issue to a head.

Bruce Gallup to Handle Ad and Sales Promotion Himself Besides New Job (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Bruce Gallup, now advertising and publicity director of United Artists, is not deserting his first love—advertising, it was announced here, and is organizing a system of individual authority and responsibility under his general supervision. Exposition is handled by Fred Schaefer, and Gallienne, by Warren Nolan.

R. Schaefer was connected at various times with the Louisville Courier-Journal Dispatch, and Post and Graphic, before starting his eight years in the publicity and exploitation department of United Artists. Finney has been a reporter and also an exploder, press sheet editor, and house organ editor in the film trade. Nolan has written United Artists publicity for three years and several years of experience with newspapers and magazines.

Caldwell to Do Technical Work on Prize Fight Film (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Fred Caldwell, who is not in Florida, at Miami, Florida, has signed a contract with Henry Sunshine, of the Good Art Pictures, Inc., to direct pictures for them, under the name of “Pictures” for the technical work and developing of the pictures of the Stribling-Sharkey boxing contest.

The work will take four days, Caldwell said, and will be done at the Fred Caldwell Studios near Miami, which he recently leased for production of his eight reel outdoor picture.

“Showboat” to Have World Opening in Miami March 17 (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The world premiere of "Showboat," Carl Laemmle's super-talking picture, will be held on March 17 in the Capitol theatre, Toronto, Ont. The picture will be shown in the Capitol theatre, in the downtown area, and in the Toronto theatre, in the downtown area.

Carl Laemmle and Florenz Ziegfeld both will be present and will associate in launching the picture. The picture will be presented at $5 top price. The final dialogue scenes are now being made on the coast.

Crowds Force Extra Showing Of Sound Pictures in Canada

Admission Prices Raised 10 Cents on Average—Theatres with One Exception Retain Orchestras or Organists—Short Features Now Are Used to Close Programs

[What has been changing in the introduction of sound? What have been the effects of program and pricing policies? The following is the first of a series of articles by Herald-World correspondents on changes introduced in theatres in different territories.]

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Introduction of sound and talking pictures in theatres of Canada has been accompanied by a marked development in managerial arrangements and certain definite policy changes on the part of exhibitors, among whom an increase of the number of daily showings in order to meet the demand for seats.

The first wired theatre in the Dominion was the Palace at Montreal and synchronized programs were introduced there on September 1 last. Since then theatres have been wired in every city and town of importance from Montreal to Vancouver.

There is a certain trend in sound program policies in these Canadian houses as follows:

1. In many instances, the first sound program was presented at special midnight performances as public preview presentations for which an admission fee was charged.

2. Admission prices have been raised 10 cents on the average with the introduction of sound screens.

3. The number of daily performances has been increased by two and sometimes three to accommodate the crowds.

4. Bargain matinees starting at 11 a.m. are now a regular feature at leading sound theatres in each city, the admission for which is 25 cents. Shows formerly opened at 1 p.m. or 1:30 p.m.

5. The admission scale has been drawn up in practically all instances to include a special low price for "supper shows" starting at 5 p.m. to encourage off-hour patronage. These supper prices vary slightly, but they help to keep the theatre continuously filled.

6. Times of presentation have been re-arranged in numerous instances to the effect that the long feature does not now close the show as formerly. Short features are now used for closing and they are presented in regular sequence from approximately 10:45 to 11:45 p.m., depending on the lateness of the "last crowd."

7. "Silence", signs, appropriately framed, are now making their appearance in theatre lobbies because of waiting crowds and also to prevent the disturbing of patrons already seated inside.

8. With practically only one exception, theatre managers in Canada have not dispensed with theatre orchestras or organists after a house has been wired, but their use has become restricted to overtures, accompaniment for stage presentations and playing for the news weeklies. Silent topical films are still much in demand; the sound weeklies now available have not drawn as well—outside of sound shows of world celebrities.

9. The bilingual situation in Eastern Canada early became a problem in sound picture presentations, it has been handled by Manager Harry Donald of the Capitol, Montreal, by the use of English-French subtitles which have been specially printed at considerable expense. Manager George Rotsky of the Palace, Montreal, has featured pictures, including shorts, in which the French language is heard.

Cine has been taken by all managers to state definitely in all forms of advertising the exact nature of a sound picture—whether it be aferial, synchronization, or all-talking arrangement. An indication of this care was seen when Manager Ray Tubman of the Regent theatre, Ottawa, was worried because he had announced dancing as a part of a "Talk over Edwards" Revue short subject which eventually there proved to be only singing and jokes.

These points show the general trend of the sound and talking picture situation in Canada and the following are the managers who have adopted these practices: George Rotsky, Palace, Montreal; Harry Donald, Capitol, Winnipeg; Harry Dahn, Capitol, Montreal; John Arthur, Uptown, Toronto; Leonard Bishop, Tivoli, Hamilton; Ray Tubman, Regent, Ottawa; R. S. Roddick, Capitol, London; John Haza, Capitol, Calgary; J. M. Robertson, Dominion, Victoria; B. C.; Pete Egan, Capitol, Regina; and also the managers of the Capitol at Winnipeg, Vancouver, Windsor and others.

Broadway Sees Another Good Film; "Iron Mask" Packs Rivoli

Douglas Fairbanks Maintains His Tradition with Exciting and Intelligent Picture—Extra Midnight Show Given

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Broadway has seldom been richer in good pictures than at the present time. One new picture of outstanding strength joined the parade last week in "The Iron Mask," latest work of United Artists and Douglas Fairbanks.

In "The Iron Mask" the incomparable Fairbanks holds up the splendid tradition he has set. It is his thirty-seventh film, according to his own confession, and it deserves to rank with his best. Fairbanks is still the most dashing of the romantic heroes of the screen.

Exciting and Intelligent Film

"The Iron Mask" had its premiere at the Rivoli theatre on Broadway and Thursday evening. There was a tremendous demand to see him. The lobbies were packed with a vast throng, indicating not only the leading figures of the motion picture industry but as well many prominent in the social and business worlds. Fairbanks' appeal is admirably universal.

Some of the New York critics pretended to be a little condescending about "The Iron Mask." They held it up, stating that the picture is swift, exciting, dramatic, believability, and above all intelligent. The story is a powerful one that should win Fairbanks even more friends.

Special Midnight Show

There was such a demand to see Fairbanks that a special midnight performance was held to accommodate the throng. On Friday, with a long line of patrons coming into the theatre, and the swanky premiere audience filing out, the Rivoli presented a sight of exciting activity.

Fairbanks, as promised, talked in the picture. He spoke briefly, in character, at the opening of the film and again at the running of the second half, somewhat in the manner of the traditional Greek chorus. His voice was strong, though the reproduction was decidedly blurry at times. The talking angle of the picture is not important.—P. V.

"Wolf Song" at Embassy

"Wolf Song," the new Paramount picture which came to the little Embassy Theatre on Saturday night, was billed as the "first musical film romance." It concentrates so heavily on the singing passages that two songs of Spanish antecedents by Lupe Velez that the story, and consequently the entire picture, sufficed. There was practically no action in "Wolf Song," despite the presence of such popular and energetic players as Gary Cooper and Louis Wolheim, and the film did not win many admirers as a result.—P. V.

Price Announces Three Series of Films for the General Pictures Lineup

Richard Talmadge to Star in Four Productions With Sound

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Oscar A. Price, president of the General Pictures Corporation, has announced that part of the tentative production program will consist of a series of four pictures starring Richard Talmadge, the "Bachelors' Club," which has been completed and synchronized on the sound track system, has a special musical score and a singing part by Erno Rapee.

The program also includes another series of four films, the first of which is "Back From Shanghai," a mystery melodrama, starring Vera Reynolds, So-jin, and Leonard St. Leo, and the second is "The Heroic Lover," starring Barbara Bedford, Stuart Holmes and Leonard St. Leo. There will also be a third series of individual productions. The first of these has an exclusively African locale.

"In making our productions for this year we have taken into consideration two very important problems," said Price. "The first is, of course, the need for synchronized pictures to meet the popular demand of the movie-going public. In our first Richard Talmadge productions, 'The Bachelors' Club,' we have spared no expense or effort in making it a perfect sound picture.

"In our enthusiasm for sound pictures, however, we have not overlooked those exhibitors who are not yet wired for sound pictures. All our productions have been made with a view of satisfying the demand aroused by the thousands of theatres yet unwired as well as those of first-run theatres which are fully equipped for sound and talkies. All our productions must have universal appeal and general adaptation to satisfy me before they are released."

Income Tax Called Big Blight on the Lives of Motion Picture Players

Hearst Writer Calls Uncle Sam Unfair in His Methods

Uncle Sam is the recipient of potent uppers to the maxillaries, otherwise known as healthy socks on the jaw, in a series of articles by Hearst, string of papers by Louella O. Parsons, film editor of Hearst's Universal service. The fus is aimed at Hollywood's "exclusive" income tax, which Mrs. Parsons declares is being unjustly administered with respect to screen players. In substance the trouble is due to the present state of the tax law.

A player may earn at the peak of his or her popularity, many thousands of dollars per week. Then said popularity wanes, and out of work, the player has to spend his or her savings, if any, to live.

The government demands back taxes, and the player hasn't enough money to pay them—or just about enough.

For example, declares Mrs. Parsons, Larry Semon was unable to work for quite a spell preceding his death. The government demanded $10,000 in back taxes. He could raise only $6,000. Then he died. And now his widow, Kitty Dwan, is being hounded for the $4,000.

Several players have appeared before officials in Washington, and last week Lillian and Dorosal Fairbanks of Universal Pictures, inc., also appeared. The republic wants over $65,000 in tax deficiencies. Lillian's contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer called for a salary totaling $80,000 during 1924 and 1925. Dorothy, in about the same period, was to receive from $1,500 to $2,500 a week for 15 months from Inspiration Pictures. The contracts were assigned to Players, Inc., to which firm M G M paid $223,000 on Lillian's account, and Inspiration paid $43,000 for Daisy's services. These amounts were not put in their returns, they testified, because they had not received the money. The commissioner ruled, however, that they had received these amounts.

Universal-Variety Chain

In Cleveland Broken Up

(Special to the Herald-World)

CLEVELAND, Feb. 26.—The Universal-Variety chain theatres has officially broken up in Cleveland, as follows: Universal receives the Cedar-Lee, Hilliard Square, New Broadway, Detroit, and Oriental. Jimmy Carrier is in charge of the theatres. A new policy is being inaugurated. Sound pictures will be played, and the admission price raised 10 cents.

The Variety chain is the Kinsman, Imperial, Homestead, Moreland, and Variety. Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer are in charge of these theatres.

Erle Kenton Signs New Contract with Columbia

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Columbia has signed Director Erle C. Kenton to a long-time contract. The contract calls for the immediate production of three films. Kenton's latest production for Columbia was "Trial Marriage."

Colvin Brown to Europe

Your Income Tax Return

The closely approaching "deadline" for the filing of income tax returns—March 15—finds individuals in the motion picture trade as well as owners and managers of other businesses facing once more the intricate problem of the proper filling out of schedules. To assist others in this task the "Herald-World" presents herewith some important information from Arthur E. Hall, income tax expert and certified public accountant, of Wm. E. Mason, Jr., and Company, Chicago. Mr. Hall emphasizes the value of a well kept set of bookkeeping or accounting records, no matter how simple they be.

By ARTHUR E. HALL
Income Tax Expert

TWO important questions confront theatre owners as well as others in the industry at this time of the year, with the filing of income tax returns mandatory by March 15. One of these questions is: Am I legally liable to file an income tax return for 1928? The other is this: If I must file an income tax return, what should I show as deductions from taxable income to arrive at my net taxable income? The answers to these questions cover the cases of both individuals on salary and theatre owners. Am I LEGALLY LIABLE TO FILE AN INCOME TAX RETURN FOR 1928?

(A) If your business is operated as an individual ownership or proprietorship, or if your principal income is from salaries, commissions, fees, etc., you are required to file an individual income tax return for 1928. Your Net Income exceeds $1,500.00, and you are not married.

(B) If your business is operated as a partnership, you are required to file a partnership return of income, irrespective of the amount of net profit or net loss shown for the year.

(C) If your business is operated as a corporation, you are required to file a corporation income tax return, irrespective of the amount of net profit or net loss shown for the year.

IF MUST FILE AN INCOME TAX RETURN, WHAT SHOULD I SHOW AS TAXABLE INCOME, AND WHAT MAY I DEDUCT FROM TAXABLE INCOME FOR 1928?

(A) Dividends on stock of domestic corporations.

(B) Interest paid on personal indebtedness.

(C) Dividends on stock of domestic corporations.

(D) Interest on income from Federal securities.

(E) Contributions to organized charities (this amount must not exceed fifteen per cent (15%) of your net income computed without the benefit of this deduction).

Your net income, in excess of $10,000.00, is subject to Surtaxes. Before computing normal taxes, you may deduct from the net income:

(1) Dividends on stock of domestic corporations.

(2) Interest on income from Federal securities.

(3) An allowance of $2,000.00 as a credit for each dependent.

(4) Personal exemption which is $1,500.00 if unmarried, and $3,000.00 if married, or the head of a household.

From your total surtaxes and normal taxes, you are entitled to deduct a credit of twenty-five per cent (25%) of the tax on your earned net income, income taxes paid at source (which usually means the tax paid for you by corporations issuing tax free convertant bonds), and income and profits paid to a foreign country or United States possession.

If you are operating under a corporate form of business, the items of income and deductions are practically similar to those shown above. You must show your individually owned business, with the exception that contributions to organized charities are not to be shown on a partnership income tax return. There is no tax computed on a partnership return of income, as it is an informational return, from which the individual partners are assigned their share of the profits, and which they in turn show on their individual income tax returns.

In a brief article of this nature, it is necessarily impractical to attempt anything more than a very general description of taxable income and allowable deductions, which has been attempted above. It has not been the intent to set forth every possible type of income and deductions, and it may be that you will have items not fully described above. The whole question of income and deductions is not a simple one, that is believed you will understand that this brief outline cannot be an exhaustive one.

There is one point desired to be stressed, and that is this: The last minute maintained set of bookkeeping or accounting records, no matter how simple they may be. You are often required to prove certain items of income or deductions set forth in your tax returns, and the best possible means at your disposal, for this purpose, is a set of records which disclose the facts as you have claimed them. A revenue agent is always fair, and if you have records which permit ready access to all figures set forth in your tax return for this time with you is greatly diminished, and the chances for additional taxes against you are also greatly diminished.

Predicts Pictures Over Air by Radio in 5 Years

(Special to the Herald-World)

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 26.—Edward Mayer, head of the department of education at the University of California, recently spoke before the Berkeley Lions Club and declared that within five years moving pictures would be transmitted over the air by radio. Before making this statement he displayed some of the first moving pictures made in the last five years and described the progress made from the first filming of incidents to the screening of the first narrative picture in 1903.

Pathé Consortium to Be Independent of Pathe

(Special to the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON—According to word from the Department of Commerce, an agreement has been reached by "Societe Pathe Cinema" and "Societe Pathe Consortium," according to this latter is to abandon the word "Pathé" in its name and the Pathé emblem, representing a rooster, press reports said, the Department of Commerce learns. It will instead be called "Paris-Consortium-Cinema," and will be entirely independent of Pathé.
Theatres Under Control of Fox Now Set at Huge Total of 619

Two Years of Rapid Expansion in Holdings, Starting with Roxy, Credited with Having Made Producer-Distributor Largest Individual Theatre Owner in World

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Theatres under the control of William Fox now have reached the huge total of 619, built or to open soon, and that makes him the foremost individual theatre operator in the world, according to data just compiled by the Fox Film Corporation.

The rapid expansion of Fox holdings in the last two years has been accompanied by a policy of owning and operating the theatres, whereas in several cases other organizations operate chains on a booking basis or through subsidiary corporations in which they maintain minority interests.

The Fox theatre growth follows an appropriation of $100,000,000 in 1927 for a five-year program of picture production. Competition by various competing theatres to booking the features scheduled on this list caused Fox to go out for theatres of its own when what appeared to be insured.

Started by Buying Roxy

This campaign of acquisition was signaled at the start by purchase of a controlling interest in the Roxy, the world's largest theatre. A few months after this, Fox announced acquisition of the Wescos and Midwestos, bringing 250 more houses under its control.

Subsidiary companies, however, own or operate 30 of its theatres.

Other developments were the purchase of the Poli circuit in New England, the procuring of a city-wide circuit and a first-run house in Philadelphia; the opening of deluxe houses in Brooklyn, Detroit and St. Louis; the building of film palaces in San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles, Newark and elsewhere, some to be completed; the purchase of sites in important centers like Atlanta, Boston, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, and the projecting of a huge skyscraper theatre and office building, 52 stories high, at Broadway and 47th street.

200 More Taken Over

The most recent milestone in this expansion has been the taking over by Fox of more than 200 theatres in the New York area, located in the metropolitan and adjacent territory in New Jersey and New York.

The new Fox holdings are exemplified by the lately opened St. Louis theatre, which seats 5,000 and is ranked in size and luxury with the Roxy.

The aggregate of 619 theatres grew out of the savings of $1,666 which William Fox invested a quarter of a century ago in a tiny Brooklyn theatre converted from a store.

Lollier Is Real Estate Head

(PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 26.—W. H. Lollier succeeded Louis N. Cohen as head of Fox's real estate department of West Coast Theatres. Lollier, head of the budget and statistics department, starts his duties March 1 when Cohen joins Universal as head of its real estate department.)

Hill Leaving Publix in Atlanta for Post with Publix-Saenger Circuit

(ATLANTA, Feb. 26.—Montgomery S. Hill, for the past several years district manager of Publix, is resigning from the organization to become affiliated with Publix-Saenger theatres of North Carolina. In the new connection, Hill will serve as assistant to L. F. Kincsey, general manager, in Greensboro, N. C. Less than ten years ago, Hill left the Southern Bell Telephone Company to join the S. A. Lynch Enterprises.

In 1920 he was brought to the headquarters, where he was assigned to the booking department.

Three Salesmen Added To Columbia Field Force

(NY, Feb. 26.—Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, announces three more appointments at sales offices of the company. The three new appointments were: J. M. Schwartz to the Chicago sales department; J. C. White to the Charlotte branch, and A. Berry to the Atlanta office.

Universal Promotes Leonard Fields

HOLLYWOOD—Leonard Fields, formerly Eastern story editor of Universal Pictures Corporation, has been appointed production supervisor by Lassalle.

Ad Calling Theatre Epidemic Peril Not To Have Successors, Sponsors Declare

(COLUMBUS, Feb. 26.—An assurance that no advertisement presenting the theatre as a source of danger during epidemics will be run in the future, has been received by P. J. Wood, business manager of the Ohio MPOO, from the Paris Medicine Company of St. Louis, which company recently circulated advertisements for bronchoe, and tobacco. In the illustration showing a person with a gas-mask reading a theatre program, the advertisement was reproduced in the February 16 issue of the Herald-World and was also commented on editorially.

In reply to Wood's protest, the company said, "We can appreciate your viewpoint and we are quite sure that this advertisement or any advertisement of a similar nature will not be used again."
NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Exercise of ingenuity and daring, which in the past has been the main attraction of newspaper work, is today the prime requisite of the men who handle microphone and camera in the fifty or more sound newreel crews throughout the country.

Fox, Pathe and Paramount all have crews covering the news events of the world in sound and film. The men are picked for their courage, for their ability to deal with unexpectedly difficult situations, for their willingness to take chances and for their expertness as photographers and sound engineers. They are self-reliant, non-commital and courageous and are half the secret of the success that the sound newreel has enjoyed with audiences the country over.

These sound newreel organizations function primarily like any other well-organized news agency, from district man to city desk. Fox Movietone News, the first to enter this spectacular field, covers routine news events in America, Europe and parts of Asia and has excellent facilities for spot news work, according to Edward Percy Howard, editor in chief.

"If the Graf Zeppelin flew overhead today," Howard said, "you'd be seeing our sound pictures of it on Broadway tonight." Half Dozen Trucks on Call

Half a dozen Movietone trucks are kept in constant call so that they can be sent to the scene of any big event within a hundred miles of New York at a moment's notice.

The editor is in constant touch with the European capitals by telephone. All messages and arrangements are transmitted by wire, cable, telephone or radio. Contact men are sent ahead of sound and camera crews to pave the way for a fast picture. When it is taken it is flown to ship and, near this country, sent ashore by plane and then expedited to the Fox headquarters at 400 West 54th street, New York.

The editorial staff is composed of a city editor, news editor, assignment editor, location editor, cutters, title writers and sound engineers.

Five Rows of Editorial Staff

The Herald-World reporter arrived as the edition was being made up. About five rows of the editorial staff were seated in the back of the small auditorium and each row worked on a combination desk and bench, each man had his own desk lamp and there was the hum of activity as event after event was broadcast from the screen.

Title writers wrote their stuff, cutters made their notes, sound men decided what was good and bad and jotted down instructions for the field crews so that they could get better effects.

The whole staff is under the direct supervision of Howard, who orders "takes" the whole world over without leaving his desk. When the Movietone News was established 14 months ago, Howard was the only sound newreel editor in the world. And he likes the job, says it is the most interesting, most colorful he has ever had. In his fifty years he has done everything in magazine and newspaper work. Among other things, he was managing editor of the New York Press and also of the Telegraph.

80 Men on Repertorial Staff

About eighty men comprise the repertorial staff in the United States and their number is being constantly increased as new trucks are fitted out. Fox has forty, Pathe is keeping its number a secret; Paramount has two and Universal will have several in the fall.

A Reo truck, complete with equipment and a crew of two, one for camera and one for sound, is called a field outfit. Most of these outfits are scattered around the country getting news events under the direction of the New York office. They report every day by phone and can be reached in the same way at almost any hour. Sometimes a crew will be out on the road for a couple of weeks without a letdown. Then, when they get in, they get a day or two of rest, before they are off again, going up in airplanes, riding freighters, taking chimpanzees in cages, shooting fires or doing quieter feature and human interest stuff.

Meanwhile their "takes" are shot in to the home office by airplane or any other speedy method of modern transportation.

Their entire equipment is portable. It is a real job to move it, though, when all the stuff has to be loaded into an airplane. The weight is about a ton, including the several batteries, and it is said that any but a three-motored job can get it off the ground. That exception is a single motored Douglas army transport.

How Unit Functions

To see how these units functioned, this reporter spent a day with field outfit number 23 of Fox Movietone News. William Storz was cameraman and Harry Neems worked on sound. They had to "shoot" Colonel Tim McCoy and General Hugh L. Scott doing a few tricks in the Indian sign language and then explaining it all.

McCoy is a second Buffalo Bill and the General is called the greatest living authority on matters pertaining to 100 per cent Americans. Even in this routine work Neems and Storz encountered a certain amount of difficulty and a sequence which will show for five or six minutes on the screen took more than three hours to shoot.

First of all McCoy walked out of focus, Scott did not talk loudly enough. Then the wind blew too hard and there was a lot of surface noise which drowned out the voices (when a scene is being shot the sound man takes notes and listens in and takes care of the amplification). Later the General’s daughter drove up with a screech of brakes, a little shrieked on the main road (it was near Princeton, New Jersey, on a private estate), a man began chopping wood not far away and then the magazine started to squeak and a new reel had to be substituted.

Movietone Method

Most exhibitors are familiar with the movietone process. The cameraman sets up his machine and the sound man places his microphone as near to the subject as possible without getting in camera range. In long distance shots the microphone may be placed as far as 300 feet away from the camera so that all the noise of a closeup can be obtained.

The sound waves are stepped up one stage in the microphone housing and five more stages when they go through the amplifier. When a shot is being made the sound man listens in and manipulates the amplifier to increase or decrease the volume as necessary. Leaving the amplifier the current travels to an Aerio tube in the camera. At the end of the socket in which the tube sits there is a little slit. When the tube lights a bar of light is photographed on the film. The width of the bar is determined by the intensity of the sound.

The photograph of the speaker and the photograph of his voice are simultaneous. In projection this process is reversed and light waves are turned into sound and are once more amplified.

Battery Charging Delay

One of the chief difficulties in sound newssheet work is the delay occasioned by the charging of the batteries. The Bell Laboratories are now working on a generator for the Reo to eliminate this feature which frequently interferes with a field outlet’s efficiency.

They are designing a 100-150 volt generator which will automatically change the two, one and one volt batteries of the truck while the vehicle is on its way to location.

The 18 volters are used to run the camera; the others work the amplification. The camera, with a thousand foot magazine, half a dozen lenses, a small motor and a rheostat nearly as large, and a few other control instruments attached, presents an imposing appearance. It is heavy and cumbersome. It takes an adept, muscular cameraman to shift it around and it cannot be set up as quickly as a silent machine. It is operated at 90 feet a minute, the standard speed for sound.

It has been predicted that with the advent of television in the home, the sound newssheet could take the place of the daily newspaper. It may sound like a wild statement but more "impossible" things have happened.

Portable Recording

Speeds Sound Films

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 26.—With the addition of the latest type of portable recording outfits from Western Electric, Metropolitan's Sound Studios have now broadened the range of making talking pictures to any outside locations. One of the first large exterior all-talking sequences is for Suno-Art's production of 'The Rainbow Man,' starring Eddie Dowling. Other exterior scenes being made are for Christie-Paramount's Octavus Roy Cohen stories.
Sound Must Be Used Sanely and With Good Quality, Says Powers

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Sound is here to stay but it must be used sanely and it must be of good quality, says P. A. (Pat) Powers. Music and sound effects should be used as adjuncts to action of a motion picture, and dialogue should embellish the theme, but the industry should not “embrace sound as the basis of a new art in which we may not achieve the world supremacy we now hold in the field of silent drama.” Powers declares.

And Pat Powers, whose perfected sound recording equipment, the Powers Cinephon, is now announced as ready for installation in studios, speaks from the experience of a veteran showman as well as a pioneer manufacturer and distributor of talking machines before 1906.

Warns of Stampingede

“The sudden popularity of the sound picture has stampeded producers,” he says. “They have raced blindly away from the art which we have developed to a point of world supremacy and in its place are attempting to set up purely spoken entertainment, an art in which some other nations equal and some excel America. Let us return to our art of motion pictures. Let us return quickly, before the world’s markets are lost to the American picture. Let us use sound that is faithful to musical notes, the inflection of the human voice, and accurately synchronized.”

“My experiences with the first of the talking machines made me appreciate the possibilities of combining sound with action when I first entered the motion picture business, more than twenty years ago. My interest in this possibility never waned. And three years ago I started active and intensive experiments tending toward the development of pictures with synchronized sound recorded on the film itself, which is, I believe, the logical system of recording sound pictures, and the ultimate standard to be adopted by the industry.”

Prefers Sound on Film

“The sound-on-film system is preferable and advantageous in handling pictures in the distributing offices, they are easier to handle in theatres, the sound synchrony does not depend upon the operator placing records properly, and better quality in sound is possible with the sound-on-film system.”

“I hope to see the American motion picture as an art, quickly returned to its high place rather than sound motion pictures, the quality included as an added touch of glorification, and to hear this sound faithfully modulated in pure tonal quality. And my contribution to this end is the Powers Cinephon.”

“We are all going to make sound pictures. And all of us should remember that quality in sound, like quality in pictorial composition, is the secret of success.”

Special Units for Exchanges

Powers has made plans to install special units of the Powers Cinephon in the exchanges.

The special “exchange” outfit is a single sound-on-film unit for one projecting machine, with speakers and an amplifier capable of sufficient volume for any sized private projection room. One synchronous turntable is included in the installation where required.

The first equipment for the studios is now on the way to the Coast in charge of Walt Disney. This is a portable type.

F. A. Leatherman has been named Southern distributor with headquarters at 150 Walton street, Atlanta. He will also have a branch office in Dallas.

Louis Gottschalk Signs

To Synchronize Music of Sono-Art Dowling Picture

(Special to the Herald World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—George W. Weeks, vice president of Sono-Art Productions, has signed Louis F. Gottschalk, composer and conductor, to synchronize the music and conduct the symphony orchestra for “The Rainbow Man,” starring Eddie Dowling. Gottschalk will collaborate with James Hanley, song writer.

Gottschalk was originally a conductor and composer for the stage, going back to the time when the “Tick Tock Man of Oz,” for which he wrote the music, was a success. He was conductor for nine of the Victor Herbert operettas, Lehár’s “The Merry Widow,” and many other musical hits on the stage.

First Anniversary

Of First Audien Is Feted by Warners

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The first anniversary of completion of the first all-audien, “Lights of New York,” was celebrated February 10 by Warners. This picture was produced with Vitaphone and directed by Bryan Foy. “Lights of New York” started out to be a one-reel picture, but its present showing was at the Mark Strand July 6, 1928.

Since that picture was made, the Warners have produced 25 films with sound, musical and talking parts. One of the latest, “Queen of the Night Clubs,” starring Texas Guinan, opens March 16 at 558 theatres as a pre-release, according to Sam E. Morris, vice president.

Leatrice Joy Will Make Four Audien Is For First National

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Leatrice Joy has signed for four First National Vitaphone pictures, following upon the acquisition of Irene Bordoni.

Miss Joy recently left the screen for the legitimate and vaudeville stages and returned to picture making.

Carroll Nye, who played the leading juvenile in “The Squall,” has been signed for the masculine lead role in “The Girl in the Glass Cage.”

Scientific Lecture in Audien Biggest Film He Ever Saw, Says Griffith

What is your idea of the greatest picture ever made? D. W. Griffith, who was in Hollywood on his way back to Hollywood, said a talking picture lecture, “Oil Drops on Water,” with Dr. Irving Langmuir explaining an experiment worked before the screen, was the greatest film he ever had seen.

Griffith emphasized the significance of a lecture, hitherto seen by ten students in a room around a screen and heard by thousands of them at one time. He witnessed showings of such films, not yet revealed to the public, when he went to Schenectady, February 10, to broadcast by television. Henceforth students in small colleges will see experiments on huge screens, in minute detail, said, and hear voices of famous professors explaining the scientific points, Griffith said.

Dick Talmadge Series

Purchased for Japan

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—Purchase of the Richard Talmadge series being produced by Oscar A. Price of General Pictures was made by K. Tanaka, of the Tozai Eiga Company, Tokyo, in New York last week.

Tanaka, on his way to New York and spent several days with Talmadge at the Universal Studios, where the action star was supervising the production of “The Bachelors’ Club,” first of a series in which Talmadge’s protege, Leonard St. Leo, stars. The first of these, “The Bachelors’ Club,” was synchronized by Erno Rapee and his Roxy theatre orchestra.

Sound and Dialogue to Play Big Part in World Wide Releases
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Sound accompaniment and dialogue will be important elements of several of the productions from Europe to be released by World Wide Pictures. Sound production is expected to become active in England following the visit of Herbert Wilcox of British and Dominion Films, and Victor Saville, managing director of Burlington Films, and the expected visit of John Maxwell, president of British International Pictures.

Mention already has been made of Wilcox's all-talking production, "Black Waters" which was made in Hollywood and will be ready for release the middle of March.

Then there is "Moulin Rouge," with sound and songs, E. A. Dupont's production of Paris theatrical life starring Olga Chekova, now ready for exhibitors with RCA Photophone synchronization and also a silent version.

"Kitty," from Warwick Deeping's novel, produced at Henley by Burlington Films and directed by Saville, is scheduled for April. This will be synchronized and have talking sequences. Also in April will come "Week End Wives," made in Paris and Deauville, which also will be synchronized.

Jameson Thomas, a foremost leading man of England, has the leading role and Monty Banks plays a principal part.

Then in May, World Wide will bring over Dupont's "Picadilly," with Gilda Gray and Anna May Wong, now playing at the Carleton, Paramount's long run house in London. This will be synchronized with music and songs.

With the completion of sound stages at Brighton and Elstree in May, other all-talking pictures are expected by World Wide for release in this country and Canada late in the summer and fall.

New Theatre Adds Sound Despite No Close Competition
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The Beacon, a Century Circuit theatre, at Port Washington, Long Island, opened with sound Sunday night. The picture was "On Trial," a Warner Brothers production starring Bert Lytell and Pauline Frederick.

The Beacon, which seats 1,800, has been equipped with both Photophone and Movietone apparatus, William A. Levey, manager, told the Herald-World. Weekly overhead was $3,000 and sound would bring it close to the $4,000 mark, Levey said.

The theatre has no competition within five miles. It was completed about six months ago at a cost of $300,000.

The new sound policy is expected to bring a handsome profit, according to Levey.

Electrical Research Makes Important Staff Changes, Organization Is Growing
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Important promotions in the staff of Electrical Research Products, Inc., were made known today by Western Electric in conjunction with provisions being made for the growth entailed by its increasing business.

R. M. Hatfield will sail to Australia soon to succeed J. W. Roberts as manager of Western Electrical (Australian) Ltd. Succeeding Hatfield as general service superintendent is R. C. Meeker, formerly Philadelphia service superintendent.

"Bachelors' Club" Preview At Philadelphia Is Given With Full Musical Score
(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 26.—The world preview of Oscar Price Productions' "The Bachelors' Club," independent movietone synchronized feature made with an entire musical score, was held here Thursday night at the Carman theatre. The score was composed and played by Erno Rapee and his Rosy theatre Orchestra.

Dramaphone Installs Two

Dramaphone has just been installed in the Ritz theatre, Chicago, and the Military theatre at Omaha.

26 Short Radio Pictures Coming from Darmour

Twenty-six short features will be made for R. K. O. Productions by Larry Darmour, veteran comedy producer, with H. C. Witwer writing 13 of them and the others to be known as "Mickey McGuire" comedies. This will be Darmour's third McGuire series, based on the Fontaine Fox cartoon characters.

Darmour, who makes his producing headquarters at the Cal-Art Studios in Hollywood, has ordered a complete RCA Photophone recording and reproduction apparatus for use in making partial sound versions of the comedies.

Lloyd Signs for System of W. E.
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Western Electric announces that the Harold Lloyd Corporation has been granted a license to record pictures by the Western Electric sound system. Previous licenses have been granted to the Vitaphone Corporation, Fox, Case, Paramount, M.G.M., U.A., F.N., Hal Roach comedies, Christie comedies, Universal, Columbia and Victor.

"Times Square," Gotham's Dialogue Film, Previewed
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Gotham's first dialogue and sound production, "Times Square," was previewed Wednesday at Meyer and Schneider's Clinton theatre. Besides the exhibitors present, Sam Sax, Bud Rogers and Mike Simmons of the Gotham executive staff also attended.

Audiens Increase Demand for Extra People, Says J. L. Warner

Big Change Noted Over 1928 in Survey; Leatrice Joy Goes to F. N.; Taurog Starts Movietone for Fox; Hilliard in DeMille Production; Boles Re-Signed

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 26.—Talking pictures have increased rather than decreased the demand for extras, according to a survey completed by Jack Warner. The survey shows that in the 1929 production program so far there has been a 400 per cent increase in the employment of extras as compared to a corresponding period of 1928.

Gloomy conclusions that audiens sounded the doom of the extra worker are contradicted by Warner’s conclusions. He states:

“The extras in Hollywood have been benefited rather than harmed by the production of all-talking pictures, in which our studio is now specializing.

“The records show that on the first four pictures of our program we have issued or will issue more than 5,000 daily checks to extras.”

In “The Gamblers” which Michael Curtiz directed with H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson, there were 1,100 checks issued. An additional 1,500 were issued on “The Hotspur,” which Roy Del Ruth directed with Edward Everett Horton and Patsy Ruth Miller, and another 1,500 in “The Time, the Place and the Girl,” which Howard Bretherton directed, with Grant Withers and Betty Compson.

In the making of a huge street scene of “The Sap,” with Edward Everett Horton, Alan Hale and Patsy Ruth Miller, several thousand more daily extra checks will be issued. “We are using a tremendous number of extra people in all our Vitaphone scenes and the demand for this sort of talent is just about four times as great as it was at this time last year,” Warner said.

Warner Brothers announced today the creation of a song-writing department that will be the biggest rival of Broadway’s Tin Pan Alley in the country. Ray Perkins, himself a song writer of distinction, has been placed in charge and under his direction eight writers have been placed under contract to furnish theme song material exclusively for Warner Brothers and First National studios.

The eight song creators are: Harry Askt, Joe Burke, Alfred Bryan, Grant Clarke, Al Dubin, George W. Meyer, Herman Ruby and Norman Spencer, all of them big-time figures in Broadway’s melody lane.

The Warner Brothers radio studio on Sunset boulevard, recently vacated, has been made headquarters for this aggregation of song-writing talent and for the present the writers are grouped into four teams, two of which are at Warner Brothers and two at First National.

Hilliard in DeMille Picture

Ernest Hilliard who has had a succession of interesting roles since he left New York and the cast of “A Pool There Was,” a few years ago, is the latest well-known player to be signed for Cecil B. DeMille’s production “Dynamite.”

Hilliard, dapper and debonair, takes a prominent part in an interesting “wild party” sequence of the first DeMille picture for M.G.M. Hilliard will be remembered for his work in “The Mattee Idol,” “When Dreams Come True,” “Out With the Tide” and “The Dude Ranch.” The principals in this Jeanie Macpherson story are Charles Bickford, Kay Johnson, Conrad Nagel and Julia Faye.

Boles Re-Signs

The contract for John Boles has been renewed and the former star will remain at Universal to play in talkies for at least another two years, it was announced this week by Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer.

Boles was placed under contract when Carl Laemmle, Sr., heard him singing between scenes of “We Americans.” Recognizing his value in audiens Laemmle changed his contract from leading man in the picture to that of a Universal featured player.

Ace Directors Sign with Burbank Firm—A Story About a Quaker with Vaselined Hair—Motion Picture Cycles

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 26.—In the announcement this week that First National has put under contract four directors is a moral of Hollywood: “Good directors are greatly in demand!”

The four that First National signed have been good directors ever since “The Birth of a Nation.” Some of them if not all know more about making entertaining pictures for the public than all the supervisors in California.

REGINALD Barker ranks as a veteran because he has been turning out at least one good picture every year for the past decade. He directed “The Great Divide” and “The Flaming Forest” among others. Irvin Willat is a pretty young man but his picture making experience dates from “The Zeppelin’s Last Raid” in 1916—which was a picture. Then in 1924 he turned out several others among which was “The Heritage” the last picture he made before being forced to leave Hollywood.

John Griffith Wray’s “Anna Christie” was enough of a picture to give him a lifetime of prestige. William Beaudine’s lack of an outstanding hit such as those named is compensated for by the fact that he has made so many good substantial box office pictures and so few failures.

But of the quartette Willat’s triumphs have assuredly been the most obvious. He has made for himself a lasting reputation as a pioneer type of director. It is his courageous initiative that has made nearly all his pictures unique in at least one respect. He has always endeavored to utilize a novel idea never tried before by picture makers.

It was chiefly Willat’s originality in the production of “Submarine” that made that film one of Columbia’s foremost successes. His production photographs that were later followed by Capra in detailed direction.

The talk about the Audien War (the phrase is my own—the idea is Hollywood’s) reminds Hal Mohr of a couple of other wars that were considerably more serious if less malicious. During the “patent war” when producers were guarding their cameras to steal a shot, Hal Mohr was about 13 years younger than he is now. He made a picture camera that was so good producers trailed him two weeks and finally took it away from him. He thereupon decided he should move to Los Angeles and get into the picture business.

Mohr is the fellow who is cranking the box on “Broadway” for Universal. He is the cameraman who is making the camera angle with the use of the 60 foot crane that the cameramen have installed. He takes pictures while travelling in eight directions at one time.

Dr. William Marston is probing the heart of the industry. He is finding out—or trying to—what makes the wheels go round. He is in a scientific state of mind in a thoroughly scientific way. He is studying the box office records of all the pictures Universal has made and most pictures that other companies have made. He is bent upon finding the “cycles” in picture production. He has found, for instance, that a “Coheens and Kellys” is not always followed by numerous Jewish-Irish comedies.

He intends to find what line Universal may follow in determining in advance what emotions will gain the most appeal in a picture.

today by Carl Laemmle, Jr., that he will next direct “The Devil,” a super-production. No date has been set although it will probably be filmed late this spring.

Although Schildt has still not cast the title role of Oliver Neckler.

Alfred Neumann, one of Germany’s most prominent writers at the present time and author of “The Devil,” has been chosen by Warner to write the novel. The novel has been translated into English and has run into 85 editions.

U Purchases Stage Play

Universal announces the purchase of “The Third Party,” New York stage success by Mark Swan. Reginald Denny will star in the screen version, which is to be made after “Companionship Troubles.” The story is based on a practice in the Cafe Royal in London, whereby a “third party,” a man, will sit in with a couple who are married but may not let the woman know that he may pose as the woman’s husband in case the man’s wife appears on the scene.

Leatrice Joy Signed by F N V

Learứcce Joy, one of the most popular and talented of the screen and stage stars, has signed with Universal on the Vitaphone Pictures for a series of four starring vehicles.

She will start work at the Burbank Studios on “Big” with Corinne More, Richard Barthelmess, Millie Dill, Corinna Griffin, Milton Sills, Alice White, Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill.

She will be the Vitaphone pictures with dialogue, and that Miss Joy, who is an accomplished vocalist, will sing in them.

Taurog Starts Movietone

Norman Taurog began work this week directing “The Medical Man.” Fox Movietone comedy starring Clark and McCullough, Sylvia Field, Gavin Gordon, Symona Boniface, Fred Graham and Clifford Demsey are in the supporting cast. This is the third of a series of comedy subjects with the vaudeville stars that Taurog has made. The first, “The Diplomats,” is now running at the Belle-Mark Theatre, New York, in conjunction with the Fox picture “The River.”

Taurog is also responsible for “Lucky Boy,” the Cottonseed film, starring George Jessel. Charles C. Wilson made the sound synchronization after the film was taken to New York.

“Trial of Mary Dugan” And “Voice of City” Win M G M Praise at Preview

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 26.—The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios are in an uproar over the “Trial of Mary Dugan,” all-talking version of the stage success of the same name.

At a preview attended by Hollywood correspondents the opinion was voiced that it was the new film. It is the first talktelling pictures. Norma Shearer’s voice is reported to be ideal for talking film work.

Enthusiasm at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios was due to the fact that Willard Mack’s all-talking drama “The Voice of the City,” took a Hollywood preview, and it is also Oliver农业科技

Hiram S. Brown Back in New York from Coast

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Hiram S. Brown, chairman of the Board of Directors of RKO Productions, and president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, has returned to New York from Hollywood.
"Booth," Lashed Ahead of Ship, Houses Cameraman on Byrd Trip

While Cameraman VanderVeer and Rucker are "getting great stuff" for Paramount on Byrd's exploration flights over the Antarctic, there is behind the adventure a story of hardship and pluck that is revealed by Emanuel Cohen, who arranged for the motion picture rights.

From a precarious perch on a little platform out in front of the bow of the ship, Joe Rucker takes shots of the crushing of the masses of ice. "With one arm around a stay, Joe grinds away unconcernedly and grinningly announces that he thinks he has a picture," says one press dispatch quoted by Cohen. "Every minute the platform threatens to let the bulky camera and its operator slide down to death in the crushing mass of ice below."

Precedes Byrd to See Pack

"I doubt if any cameraman has ever had a more unusual assignment than this one of VanderVeer and Rucker," says Cohen, "I know that no photographer has ever had a more difficult one. Cameraman VanderVeer has a dog team and driving on to his goal regardless of all obstacles and dangers. To get his picture, it is up to the cameraman to keep apace of the expedition's leader and generally a few feet ahead of him. Back shots are not wanted on a story where men daily risk their lives."

"When the City of New York finally ground its way through the bergs to its berth in the Bay of Wales, only one man preceded Byrd's cover of the ship's side onto the ice pack. That man was VanderVeer, who landed with a rope around his waist, struggled with his camera through the ice holes and then made the official picture of the landing while one leg was up to the knee in slush and his camera showed a constant tendency to freeze up."

"Once a landing was made, the real work of the expedition got under way. In order to cover all angles of the party's activities, both cameramen were kept busy very nearly 24 hours each day."

In Air Most of Day

"One of the other of them had to cover every detail of the various flights that Commander Byrd at once started. This meant that either VanderVeer or Rucker had frequently to spend the greater part of the day up in the air, in the most piercing cold, flying over and photographing great expanses of frozen wilderness. The other of the two would perhaps be out with the dog teams for the day, struggling through the drift snow for locations on the side of the trail, or hauling his heavy equipment up icy mountains for general views of the camp and the icebound harbor."

"Of equal importance to the picture that they are making are the many human interest sidelights that the cameramen are managing to catch. One time on a husky one of the dog teams had a big bull seal circling, growling and snapping at each other. Another time, it is nearly a dozen members of the expedition excitedly lumbering through the loose snow along the water edge to watch some tremendous herd of killer whales which have slipped into the bay, attracted perhaps by the dogs and ships. Or again it may be only a flash of a famous scientist stumbling along the trail under a hundred pound pack or even in keeping under men amusel. Harvard has on the round of his many duties to taste the soup cooking for supper or to inspect some other phase of the expedition's domestic economy."

Test Film at Night

"Nor is their work finished at supper time. Hours still have to be spent making tests of the film exposed during the day. Due to the intense light in which they are working, picture making is a difficult and tricky proposition. Filters have to be used at practically all times and only continual experiment will determine the proper type. The result is that only the men have finished their day's camera grinding, the portable developing outfit has to be hauled out, solutions frozen to the consistency of molasses thawed out and all the delicate routine of the laboratory gone through while perched perhaps on a block of ice."

"Finally, besides having their work as cameramen, both Rucker and VanderVeer have their duties of an exploring expedition. For instance, when Scott Island, whose very existence has been a matter of doubt, was discovered on the way south, it was up to Rucker to make the first photographs ever made of the island and so for and for all settle all controversies as to its existence and nature."

Run Antarctic Exchange

"Also on the long voyage south, VanderVeer and Rucker both, frequently helped with the sails, with other types of routine work, even taking their turns as mess attendants. To keep the men busy on shipboard, Rucker gave a lecture course in practical photography and also acted as assistant navigator in order to learn the subject."

"VanderVeer played a large part in maintaining the morale of the expedition and in keeping under men amused. Harvard has had charge of the moving pictures that accompanied the expedition and it is through his hard work and forethought that members of the Byrd Expedition have been able to forget the cold and driving work while watching the latest in features as released through Paramount's Antarctic Exchange."

Three Flavin Playlets Are Purchased by M G M

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26—M.G.M. has purchased three one-act plays by Martin A. Flavin, writer of action and stage dramas. The three are "Brains," "Emergency" and "Casualties."

Intimate Fun Brings Late Comers

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending February 21

This week Balaban & Katz offer to the Chicago picture houses perhaps the first glimpse of Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians in person. This splendid band of musicians were lent to the theatre through the courtesy of the Granada Cafe and the Music Corporation of America, apparently, their representation.

A special stage presentation entitled, "Knights of the North," featured the Lombardo aggregation and Roy Rogers' singing some pleasing tunes. In this stage show were also Walter and Dyer, a comedy team, and Doris Morrell. The stage offering had one of the most original stage settings ever constructed in a deluxe theatre. It was an interior representing a huge reception hall where usual large gatherings hold military balls. The entire male part of the cast were costumed in the red and blue formal military dress. Even Lombardo's boys were costumed as such. The house ballet, trained under the splendid coaching of Anatole Bourman, presented some original steps and a forecast that added the necessary life and color to the background.

This and in addition to the most interesting all-talking feature, "The Canary Murder Case," drew full houses at each performance. There is no question that Guy Lombardo's name, which has become a household word in the radio homes in the past two years, was responsible for 50 per cent or more of the throngs. As one of the most popular local dramatic critics recently said, "Guy Lombardo's band is the sweetest band this side of heaven."

One of Spitalny's carefully arranged overtures helped to please the higher element of music lovers in the form of "Massenet's Melodies," which at this performance was conducted by Ulderico Marcelli, and received quite a band for their splendid efforts.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending February 16

The Stanley presented as a stage attraction this week the Leegall Ensemble, with Jean and Leon Leegall, assisted by Dave Steiner, Edna Mae, The Skeldons, Cooper and Clifton, and the Beth Sisters. The Leegalls are experts in all lines of dancing and their apache and adagio dances deserve especial mention.

Cooper and Clifton do some clever tumbling and the stout member of the team takes a lot of punishment good naturedly. Their burlesque acrobatic stunt draws a good hand.

Jean and Leon Leegall first appear in an adagio dance to the music of Schubert's "Serenade," that is a thing of beauty. The contrast between the strength of Leon Leegall and the grace and lightness of his partner make this number one of the most applauded on the program.

Edna Mae is a dainty little blonde who dances gracefully and is good to look at.

The apache dance of Jean and Leon Leegall is delightful of its kind and the agility displayed is little short of marvelous. The girl is slapped, thrown across the stage almost into the orchestra pit, dragged around by the hair of her head and generally treated in the most approved apache manner. It is one of the most expected dances ever seen and the audience gave it a big hand.

Dave Steiner in red bleece and blue trousers puts over a Russian dance that is full of pep and vigor and makes a great hit.

The Skeldons appear in what starts off as a society dance but ends in an acrobatic dance that

Last Show Novelty

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

A new innovation has been inaugurated at the Uptown theatre, Chicago, Balaban & Katz' centrally located north side house. The innovation is called "Whoopee Time" and takes place every evening from Monday to Friday inclusive every week. The time designated for this novelty is 9:30 P.M., and it lasts for nearly a full hour. Verne Buck, who is a permanent master of ceremonies at this theatre, will present intimate entertainment and play request numbers which will also be sung by Frank Wilson.

As a rule, most of the theatres do capacity business at the first performance every night, but very few of them can boast of a full house at the last show. For this reason, Balaban & Katz have started this innovation with the idea in mind that if the stunt goes over at the Uptown theatre, it will later be installed in all their other deluxe houses.

One of the novel features of this innovation is the getting together idea of the audience and the stage show members who will offer separate stage events. Another novelty is the playing of popular song hits by the orchestra and organ who will ask the audience to join in a community songfest.

May Solve Last Show Problem

This may solve the problem of keeping the house filled at the last show. Hereafter, instead of being compelled to stand in line for seats the early part of the evening, amusement-seekers will be able to secure comfortable seats at the designated time and enjoy an entire evening's fun which will make them a part of the given entertainment.

Hitherto, amusement seekers, discouraged at the long procession ahead of them, would turn away from the theatre and probably not return again that evening. With something unusual as the above innovation, patrons may come back at a later hour and feel just as satisfied and theatres do not run the risk of losing their support.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I see in your February 9 Issue on page 43 a picture of George Billings who impersonated Lincoln in a New York production. Friends wrote in that they heard him deliver Lincoln's address over the radio and that it was remarkable. Mr. Billings is a friend of mine, he once lived in Salmon, and is a remarkable gentleman. He looks exactly like what we believe Lincoln looked like, and his voice low, deep, slow and with power to carry makes one think he is Lincoln in the flesh.

Mr. Billings put on a 30-minute act at the Rex while here a few years ago, using a local amateur to take the part of Secretary of War. Lincoln received the applause after which he made a short speech and then took away the idea that he was absent from the audience. It was wonderful, thrilling, convincing.

You exhibitors who live on the Eastern seaboard should try to bring him to your theatre. He will play on percentage and treat you right, I know.

If you seriously consider this I will find out his address and write you and him at once.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

P. S.: If he could only come to put on a prologue for "Uncle Tom's Cabin" I would put that over special for me, I know.

Osterman Replaces Johns

Jack Osterman, for many seasons featured in several of the Artista and Models editions of the musical comedy stage, has replaced W. A. Johns in the "Lady of the Pavements," United Artists Theatre in Chicago, in appearing in person with the picture in the "I Am..."

George Billings, who not only plays Lincoln, but really looks like him, is wanted for prologue work and should get in touch with the person at the department in that city who you hear very little of is E. Ellsworth Wood, who has been portraying George Washington for many years. Last week Reilly featured him in a huge theater, at the Paramount, he had special billing in thousands of newspapers until he completed his concert and radio tours.

King and King, two well-known presentation dancers are now doing a trio with another brother, and will soon begin a treat for houses.

Boris Petroff is coming to Chicago to replace Frank Cambria as stage producer of the Chicago theatre. Cambria has been slated for a bigger position in New York with Pullix.

Ford and Glenn, the "Marlowe G's," are still making a tour of RKO theatres. They are being replaced in the "Lady of the Pavements" at the New Ohio theatre by Eddie Mdez, the feature organist at the Harding theatre in Chicago, using "Careening You," as his theme song this week in his weekly solo. The song is a big hit and is published by Forster. Phil Miller is the Chicago manager of the Parke Artshow for their spring tour on Monday instead of Monday. Jimmy McHugh and Dorothy Fields have written the lyrics and music for "Leaves of Grass" a new operetta to open at the Amsterdam theatre in New York. Manager Maxwell of the Broadway in Portland, Ore., sends word every Monday and Thursday evenings have been set aside for dancing purposes after the last show. Al Popel of Marks Bros. started this.

Leu at Loop House

A new policy has been inaugurated at the United Artists theatre in Chicago, whereby feature players of some of their productions will hereafter appear in person on their stage.

This week Lupe Velez is making a personal appearance three times a day on the newly constructed stage in a song and dance routine staged especially to conform with "Lady of the Pavements," the new feature attraction now being run at the house, in which she also takes a featured part.

Barb and His Find

Lou Boltin, for several years an Independent theatrical agent in Chicago, has finally fallen into good luck. Lou has a protege called Lil' Esther, who is called "the Mink Miniature" by the other entertainers. The child has just finished a four years' training under Boltin's management and recently won a European engagement through her New York success. Her equestrian dancing and her inimitable singing places her in a position as the most phenomenal juvenile in the profession.
Chicago Harding
Week Ending February 22

It certainly is remarkable how the enthusiasm or lack of it shown by the audience can affect an individual act or an entire performance. This was proved quite conclusively at the Harding. The presentation wasn't so very bad, but it seemed to fall flat because instead of laughing or applauding heartily, the audience seemed to miss the occasional an- sleer or at most a weak applause. Too much effort, apparently.

"Revue du Rouge," directed by Al Morey, held several well known names, but at this performance one of the topnotchers, Maurice Marseilles, failed to appear. This was rather too bad because the lady has quite a following even after an absence of some length.

The show opened with Bobby Allen singing "What a Girl, What a Night!" while the ballet went into a dance routine. Following this, the act included "If You Down and Go Boom," which included crazy parodies by Morey and several members of the band. This was well liked.

Bill Cumby, a black-face (or maybe colored) tap dancer, jolted around a little, sang a little, and that was that.

The girls came on again and did a novelty dance for which they wore sax and slippers on their hands as well as feet, and did a doll-dance that was cute.

Carl McCullough followed, singing "My Blackbird-Are Blackbirds Now," then cracked wise for a while. He gave an imitation of a girl demonstrating breakfast fast food in a department store which was good, although that of Harry Lauder and Al Jolson, was not so good.

To replace Miss Marseilles, Al Morey and several members of the band played some numbers and did some clowning that helped to fill the void.

Maxine Hamilton was in the tap dancing that was good. He was well applauded at this performance. Then came some of the girls of the ballet garbed in appropriate costumes of all white, while Bobby Allen sang "Lovely Lady," after which the entire cast assembled for the finale.

Detroit Capitol
Week Ending February 8

Public had a darn good idea for their "Beaux and Belles," on view at the Capitol this week, and they were right this week, too, and what seemed to be quite a lot of bad, and didn't do much when it was played. The audience really wanted to hear something that would make them laugh, and that's what they got.

The show opens in one of the best of the grand-mother rocking the Cradle. In comes her granddaughter and her boy friend, and they tell her what she has been doing and what a good looking man Del Delbridge is.

Granny sighs and starting relating of a Del Delbridge she knew in the Old South "before the war." She ends by wishing she could see her Del again as the scene is blacked out. The lights flash upon the full stage, the interior of an old southern mansion. So far the idea is new and good. But there it ended when the curtain fell. Granny doesn't appear again until a short glimpse of her at the finale and when Del does come on the stage it is in wearing a 1913 model tuxedo and bears no resemblance to the Southern dandy that Granny was downstairs for.

Because of the lack of rhythm, the show was not exactly a hit, but there was a very effective production, and there was a very effective production, and the audience seemed to enjoy it. There were also a number of other numbers that were well received.

The next number was Palermo & Deere, garbed in the costumes of the period, who did an older-fashioned dance number gracefully. Then there was another dance number, Walley & Zella, who appeared in modern clothes and modern direction, with what they termed an "Irish Black Bottom."

Johnny Payne, that pianist par excellence, was on the piano, giving his best time in blackface. We have written about Johnny before and he's as good as he ever was. In our last report we mentioned the fact that his song number, something about "Carry Anything So Good Be Bad," slowed down his act and he should stick to his playing, which is great.

Johnny still sticks to the song and the audience still laugh at it. You're right, Johnny, we're wrong. This time, Johnny has added a bit where he plays two pianos at once, playing bass with his left hand and the treble with the other. Believe it or not!

Maxine Hamilton was a pretty little comedienne who didn't do much except sing "Do You Like Me Just a Little Bit?" in a baby talk and act saucy. The audience liked her.

Sid Lewis, the jokerster, and his straight man in the audience were very much in evidence. Sid has got some new jokes, some of them rather blue, and the audiences liked him.

But as you can see from the foregoing, the old Southern plantation idea suddenly went haywire and left things rather mixed up.

Dave Gould's second Public unit "Harvest Time" shapes up fairly well but not as good as his first. Featuring and in the title of the Public stage presentation, which features the stage band.

Teed Marks, Walter, Stanley Twombly, acrobatic dancers, Nell and Lucille Cook, singers and instrumentalists, George W., Cunningham, dancer and the Gold Girls also seen to good advantage.

A daily number with the girls having musical belts and playing the tune is an effective production.

The finale has the old fashioned barn dance which went very well by way of applause. "Doctor's Secret" was the feature.

This fine stage show, "Ekimbo Whoopee," was the original "Cooling Off" unit produced by the Gamy-Hale organisation. An analytic scene, with "Capi." Paul Small making a good radio announcement, the boy in the title of the Public stage presentation, which features the stage band, is a good example of what the boys can do. The Boys are led by Paul Small who was well received by the audience and received a good degree of applause.

The Gamy-Hale Girls then offered a cute routine, and were followed by the little Wallace Sisters, who were received with a good degree of applause. The Boys then offered a tap and novel rope-skipping tap dance that got a good hand.

A novel introductory to a song was then made by Wilma Wallace and Paul Small, who entered fight-line. Small then sang, "How About Me?" and recieved a very fine hand. At the finish, Ash had the ball, and then told a story of "Shownyman's," which included stories in which he, who sang pleasingly as the Foster Girls did a good ballet

Pickard and Pal (Pal was Pete the Seal) were received well for their offering. Paul Small sang the"I Love You" song representing Petuquas (birds of the arctic), danced a novel routine. The Wallace Sisters were on again and showed off a new hand for their "Turnover."

Ben Blue and his three assistants then come on for a lot of business which got a good hand. Same finale as reported at New York Paramount. This show made a hit here.

Salt Lake City Capitol
Week Ending February 9

The main attraction of this week was a charmingly arranged offering yet shown at this theatre was staged here this week. A gigantic stairway served as the stage, with a glittering curtain of twinkling lights, has been used intermittently, to enhance the beauty of the setting.

During the "Reel Episode" in which "20 high-standing beauties" perform their dance and precise drill routines on the gigantic stairway, the audience frequently broke into spontaneous applause. Other dances on the stairway were also spectacular and out of the ordinary. The dancers form the walls and form the compartments within which they entertain the audience.

Among other noted artists featured on this bill are the Al Falo and Bill Walker, the Al Kalar, character singer, and Oliver Alberti as master of ceremonies, and Oliver Alberti, as master of ceremonies, and added to the success of the stage pres- ence was an elegant "premiere." The Warner Brothers Vitaphone special, "On Trial," and all being the winning week for sound pictures here, tremendous business was enjoyed.

This week's stage show is another of those double-bill affairs that has the whole town talking, and while it's not bad singing, Yes, it's musical and good for some eyes, too.

The first unit of the show features George Dewey Washington and the "orchestra of the Blues." Gino Severi leads the Granada symphony orchestra through a reading of the blues and the curtain then goes up on a wondrous stage setting with girls fitting about casting enormous blue shadows on the background. George Dewey Washington, in tatters, comes on as a singing bird, the Soul of the Blues," a song that comes as a cluse under his mastery of imitation. As the song comes to an end the girl appears once again, bringing this part of the show to a close in an eerie manner.

Next up on the program is the "Barbers" production, "Bars and Stripes," suggestive of Sing Sing, Joliet and San Quentin, all in one. The members of the "Barbers" are wearing striped caps and coats directed by the comical Lamberti, garbed as prison wardens. The lamberti and Dussel, one of the world's best known clowns, are dressed as a bird and in striped costumes, do a Jail-Bird dance.

Novel Plug Increases Popularity of Dallas Band Leader
Ray Teal, popular stageband leader of the Greater Palace, Publix’s Dallas deluxe theatre, continues onward to an even greater popularity through the medium of good work and attractive stunt publicity.

A recent plug tied him up with a chain drug company in Dallas. Ray went to one of the stores and had his picture taken mixing chocolate soda, which the firm is peddling at this time. And another photo was made of Ray drinking the drink he had mixed. The two pictures were combined in a layout and run in a sixty inch display ad by the drug-gist, with Ray indorsing the chocolate soda. Retailers and druggists, the drug chain is going to put out in all of their stores a Ray Teal Fanci, made of a combination of fruit juices; they are to run ads in the local papers, make streamers for their fountain, and display for their windows on this stunt.

Another good one was pulled when the Baker Show Company of Atlanta opened a branch in Dallas, and had Ray and the mayors of Dallas as the informal hosts. Pictures were made, crashing Sunday papers, and one especially. Caffrey advising the boys to play the saxophone, drew a lot of attention and comment.

We wire press agents will keep their eye open at all times for local events in which they can tie in with good public relations and derive a lot of good box office publicity from such hook-ups.

Boston Metropolitan
Week Ending February 15

The Metropolitan, under the management of "Carnival Cock-tail," featuring Frank Mills, Joe Bresser, Ethel Dalon, Miss Wills, and Caffrey and Miller. A new musical revue, "Carnival," was introduced. Like his usual come-on, the person of Lee Matteson, who made an excellent impression with his singing and dancing ability, as well as his pleasant, original patter, the revue opened.

The chorus was introduced with a military routine, dressed in red soldier suits. The background of blue and green melded as a com- plementary eye to the figures. The Public boys orchestra was dressed in snappy red military suits, the seating position being slightly different, the men on one side, the women on the other, and the piano and drums in the middle. The effect was handled very well.

Caffrey and Miller in acrobatic dancing received a fine ovation from the patrons, which forced them to do the same thing again. One of the lights is "the sweetest girl on Broadway," was next introduced and pleased with several songs sung in blue voice. Her ovation was highly merited.

The Foster Girls came next in a jack-in-the-box number, which included the after dancing and simul- taneous arm and leg contortions. Their neatness and uniformity was such that brought forth a good hand of applause.

Lee Matteson then revealed his clever dancing ability with his partner, Miss Wills. The entire ensemble appeared at its conclusion while electric sparks shot from the background and lights twinkled from all angles of the stage.

The feature picture was, "Conquest," starring Monte Blue and Lois Wilson.

Ed Lowry master ceremonied the Publix Third Annual Carnival at the stage with Jack Powell and Harry Downing being featured.

Evans and Fayas presented the comedians; Maureen and Sonny, Juvenile entertainers, and the Gambly-Hale Girls, specialty dancers, also went over big in the stage hit of the week.

"Selections from Irene" was Dave Silverman’s orche- stral overture. Stuart Barrie at the organ had a "Popularity Contest."

"A Carnival Cock-tail," produced by C. A. Nieg- mayer, lacked the pep of Niegmayer’s usual productions. It opened concurrently in a scene where six Foster Girls sang an introductory song while standing in large wire glasses.

The set then changed to a carnival scene with orchestra in a bandstand as Charles Marsh, barker, immobile, in the carnival-flying scene. Joe Bresser and two assistants as candy venders came in for a lot of brushes as they passed through the aisles singing out their wares.

The Foster, master of ceremonies, next introduced the Foster Girls, who do a simple military routine. The orchestra then played and sang "Don’t Hold Everything" as "Two Free-veerettes" sang a tap number that got a good hand. Ethel Dalon pleasingly sang "I’ll Never Ask for More," then offered a vocalization that proved to be a "Do It Again." She was well received.

Charles Marsh next sang a "clown" song to a good hand. The Foster Girls followed with a cute drill which they did while in large boxes. They then took in handlights and resembling on the boxes did a good military tap dance.

Francis Wills followed with a sever and difficult acrobatic dance which he thoroughly received very good response.

Joe Bresser offered patter, chatter, dancing and all around clowning that got him many laughs and a very good hand.

George M. next did a good eccentric dance as ropes descended from sky and the Foster Girls did acrobatic stunts as epardriers and many colored lights flashed.

Kansas City Pantages
Week Ending February 14

Because of the length of the feature picture, the stage program of the Pantages was cut to three acts, headed by Lewis and Stovall, dancers, who have a number that includes just about every step one could desire to witness in a dancing act. Alice Wright, Rita Martin and Esta Rae also are included in the Lewis-Stovall company. Miss Wright and Miss Rae are dancers of unusual ability, while Miss Martin is a singer, her numbers consisting of light opera selections and popular numbers. The entire act is titled, "The Wedding Strut," and portrays the stratagems of various types of brides of different periods.

McCall and Keller have a comedy skit titled, "At 3 A.M." The act consists of a skit about two characters whose night activities extend into the wee hours of the morning.

The three were Art Beaton, who not only gave a good exhibition of dancing on her feet, but did a creditable tap dance upside down. Figure that out.

Louie Charninsky and his Pantsane orchestra ren- dered popular selections as the overture.

Milwaukee Wisconsin
Week Ending February 23

"Carnival Capers" is the offering of Al Belasco and the Wisconsins this week. The setting is the most unique seen here in six months. A great big doll stands in the center of the stage. The hoops of her skirt is all lighted with electric lighted. Sharply legs show. The tinsel on the skirt and hoop hangs down. Under the shade, if such it can be called, site the orchestra in artist Figurines.

The Torrey Dancers open the program, jumping through a hoop, paper covered hoop. They give a snappy dance that meets with approval. The tune played is "Don’t Hold Everything" and Charles Barrie, tenor, sings the chorus.

Jeanne Houston, dressed as a country girl, then comes on and dances. Slowly, you know. It’s ok but slow dances. There is a very nice set of Music, and somewhat of a skit which is very enjoyable and is a great hit. World War stuff is good stuff right now.

The Torrey Girls again snap into the scene, dressed like Queen Columbia, red, white, and blue. Lights play on them and it’s a dazzling effect. The crowd likes this first rate.

Chapman and Snyder, chained dancers, give a couple of good exhibitions of dancing. Ball and chain stuff and the act is novel enough to get a lot of applause.

Deetz Ratter, the funny fellow with a mustache and who sometimes wears a petite white suit, does his stuff. Not so pretty as the last time he was here, but the old jokes still set a laugh out of people. He’s different and that’s why they like him.

Billy Illgern and Billie producer a clever show at the Capitol this week called "Royal Flush." Ray Dietrich and his Ray-al band were featured and due to the size of the act, the crowd the acts were not given appreciation they really were worth. In the first number the small attachment a nice hand was given to Ray on his first appearance.

The orchestra members were dressed in uniforms made up of playing cards and gave a nice effect with the rest of the surroundings that were similar to the orchestra makeup.

The hand was singing as the curtain opened and the Abbott Sisters stopped to the rhythm in a pleasing strain. Little is ever said about the ballet girls, but which is done by them to help put over the stage show. ORGAN SOLOS

Emil Velazco (New York Rovex), with the assistance of Reine Valerie (who sang, while seated on a corner of the organ case), entered into a fine organ solo this week. This was "Me and the Man in the Moon." Velazco's good recital was due mainly to his fine manner of playing this number.

Henry B. Martzlag (Brooklyn Paramount) presented an original Martzlag creation in his "Just a Little Moonshine" solo. He played three "Moon" numbers that had everyone singing. These were "Get Out and Get Under the Weather," "The Man in the Moon," and "All By Yourself in the Moonlight." At the conclusion of the recital he had everyone at this house for two weeks, he would win the favor of the audience and now he has won them. He is to Brooklyn what Henri Keast is to Chicago.

Dick Liebert (Pittsburgh, Pa., Penn.) used "Sweethearts on Parade" as his theme song in his weekly organ program and had the audience singing at every performance.

Herbie Keck (Omaha, Neb., Riviera) was the feature of this week when he brought to a denouement his arrangement playing by parading up and down the sides playing the mighty theatre organ on a tiny keyboard strapped in front of him. A trailing cable was used as a connection with the mechanism of the organ.

Gail Lancaster (Birmingham, Ala., Alabama) proved a surprise when he returned to the organ. Gail is the assistant manager of the theatre and offered to play an organ novelty called "Doing the Raccoon." Until his appearance at the consulate Monday afternoon Birmingham people did not know that Lancaster, before entering theatre management, was an accomplished solo organist. His number draw spontaneous applause, the added kick coming from the fact that he steered from the managerial end of the business and proved himself exceedingly capable as a featured organist.

Jack Taylor (Newark Brantford), the new and already popular organist at this house, offered an original Taylor novelty called. "Sweethearts." The numbers he played and to which everyone sang were, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "How About Me," "Organ Song Love," "Sweetheart of All My Dreams," "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," and "Crazy Over Horsey." These last two numbers had special lyrics. Between each number, Taylor used special slides and lyrics, to the tune of "Farmer in the Dell" and "Good-bye Forever." His whole stunt was well played and very favorably received.

Charles Possa (Hokoken, N. J., Fabian), internationally known solo organist, offered a pleasing annual song review for his novelty community concert. His first number was "The Song Is Ended," one of his most dramatic slides. He then played a medley of "Hi!" numbers of 1928. They were "Ramona," "There's a Rainbow Round My Shoulders," and "Jeanette." He ended his solo with one of the first hits of 1928, "Me and the Man in the Moon." Of course everyone sang. The two-voice overdub he vaccination he received certainly proved his popularity.

Dena Raphael (Chicago Wallace) community singing is picking up at this little house after a slight let down this week. The numbers are strong three well known numbers; "But How About Me," "Me and the Man in the Moon" and "I Faw Down and Go Boom," the last number taking the house.

Jessie Crawford (New York Paramount) started his organ program with a beautiful number called "Love Tale of Alcace Lorraine." In his second number, "All By Yourself in the Moonlight," the unusual happened, this audience sang, where they have never sung before, but only on this number. Miss Joyce Broder, known as "Manchester Bee," "Marie." He then played "If I Had You" and closed with this Marche Slav." Crawford received the best hand of the reporter has heard at this house.

Julia with Shea

Julia Dawn, for many years one of the most popular solo organists on the Public circuit, has served several seasons in Chicago and is now featured organist at Shea's Buffalo theatre, in Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Dawn is also known throughout the country as a personality organist with a golden voice.

HAPPY HUMMING BIRD—(Remick Music Corp.)—A cheer up song, with words and always one of minds one of good things. This song can be best described as a happy shouting rag song. Lyric by Mort Dixon, music by Harry Wood.

THE WEDDING OF THE PAINTED DOLLS—(Sherman Clay & Co.)—The writer is well known as having written such tremendous numbers as Dull Dance and Rag Doll. This number is also the best liked in the new picture called Broadway Melody. This picture is a big hit and will help this novelty. Lyric by Arthur Freed, music by Nacio Herb Brown.

I'LL NEVER FORGET—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—A beautiful fox trot ballad. One of the writers is a local orchestra leader and the credit for having started his own song. By Gus Kahn and Spike Hamilton.

KANSAS CITY KITTY—(Donaldson, Douglas & Gumble)—An excellent novelty rag song. The melody is one of Donaldson's best which it is saying plenty. The lyric is clever having some great lines. Music by Walter Donaldson, words by Edgar Leslie.

NO ONE IN THE WORLD BUT YOU—(Henry Waterton)—A fox trot ballad that sounds very good. With the proper plug it should sell. By Dr. Wm. T. Ferris and J. Russel Robinson.

I'LL ALWAYS BE IN LOVE WITH YOU—(Green & Stept)—A pretty waltz that is the theme song of the RKO picture entitled SYNCOPATION. Words and music by Herman Rohr, Green & Stept.

SONG OF THE BAYOU—(Lee Fritz, Inc.)—The number that won the second prize in the Victor contest. Many people have stated that they like this as well and even better than the one that won the first prize. It is sung by famous Joe Clancy Bloom.

ON WITH THE GRACE—(Donaldson, Douglas & Gumble)—These writers are sure starting a come back. Though your heart is breaking On With the Grace, in other words dress down your sorrow and keep smiling.

IF YOU'RE THINKING OF ME—(Harold Rosier)—A fox trot ballad is a good tune and with the Lombardos to start making records (from the Lombardos (Guy himself) is one of the writers. Co-writers, Arthur Priestmore and Julian Davidson.)

LARRY SPIER.
HOLLYWOOD'S ERROR

IT WOULD sound smart and graceful to say that I purposely miscalled the title of Greta Garbo's picture last week just to see how many readers would write in to tell me of the error. I could even explain that I designed the error as a means of proving that the current wave of disapproval sweeping over this hoary head really isn't disapproval at all because the letters received show that approximately everybody in the industry is a constant reader of my column. Yes, that would be smart, but it would not be true.

The truth is that I miscalled Miss Garbo's picture because I never pay much attention to titles or allied data and I simply assumed that the picture had been given the title it should have borne. I apologize, therefore, on behalf of Hollywood. Sometimes I think they just never will learn.

"THE BARKER"

I'VE SO much to be personally thankful for in "The Barker" that I probably will make a scene of my gratitude. Gosh, what a lot of things that picture did for me. Thanks.

To begin with, "The Barker" explained Milton Sills to me. I've been at a loss to know why this actor, whose work since the great "Sea Hawk" has been one of the crowning disappointments of my theatre-going, was continued in employment. He got worse and worse, and for at least two years he's been far too terrible. And now "The Barker" explains him. It shows that the gentleman is an actor, a gifted delineator of drama, an artist. Again, thanks.

In "The Barker" Mr. Sills is the Barker. He speaks the principal lines, dominates the principal scenes, personifies the principal theme. I don't care if the microphones bring nothing better than this performance in the next decade. It is good enough for anybody, too good for some, far too good for others. Thanks, Sills.

To continue, "The Barker" explained Dorothy Mackaill to me. Like Mr. Sills, Miss Mackaill has been one of my chief arguments against continuance in the generally pleasant business of seeing and writing about motion pictures. Unlike Mr. Sills, Miss Mackaill had no previous grandeur to complicate the case. I was simply puzzled that she had crashed pictures and, as is customary in these cases, I discerned no satisfying reason for her retention. But "The Barker" restores the lady to her proper place by proving that her voice and the lady's voice is vastly explanatory. She can and does enunciate clearly, dramatically, effectively. She is an actress, a portrayer of character, even a star. Thanks, everybody, for enlightenment.

And to continue just a bit further, "The Barker" explains the reason for producing stage plays instead of originals during these early stages of vocal exploration. "The Barker" was a good play; it had what the footlight critics call form and what anybody calls dramatic contour, point, purpose, plot—go as far as you like. It is produced practically intact and so of course retains all these virtues. It is, therefore, excellent. There is no risk on the point of intrinsic value, as there would be in the case of an original, and there is considerable assurance. I estimate that ten audiences as good as "The Barker" will put an end to all doubt as to the future of the new medium.

"THE LAST WARNING"

THE LAST WARNING" is another mystery story, partially vocal, altogether melodramatic. It is of more ambitious construction than most, of wider scope than almost all, and it achieves an illusion but slightly less complete than any.

Usually, the writer of a mystery or spook picture is satisfied to imagine a rambling old domicile located in an out of the way place and proceed to people it with all sorts of goblins and what not. "The Last Warning" is an elaboration of this scheme. An old theatre is imagined, and the old theatre is peopled with more real and imaginary characters than could be crowded into the usual isolated domicile with a shoe horn. There is the stage, the auditorium, the dressing rooms, offices, the fly loft, the orchestra pit—the writer was a resourceful individual to concoct spooks enough to populate them all. And there is, of course, the always present feeling of unreality which pervades even an honest theatre before and after show time. Out of all this material it was inevitable that a convincingly spoky atmosphere should be manufactured. Particularly when Mr. Paul Leni was assigned the job of manufacturing it and Mr. Carl Laemmle, Jr., to assist.

If "The Last Warning" meanders, if it stretches the long arm of coincidence as that member probably never has been stretched before without breaking, still it does these things for cause. I can honestly object to nothing in the picture except some very bad comedy by a couple of very bad comedians who, happily, are given minimum chance to damage the whole. (And there may be justification for these in their contribution to credibility.) I heartily applaud the denouement as a clean piece of craftsmanship cleverly contrived.

"CHILDREN OF THE RITZ"

THE case of Miss Dorothy Mackaill having been covered at some length above, I need say of "Children of the Ritz" only that it is better than any of the preceding pictures Jack Mulhall and the lady have paraded in. Lived I elsewhere than in Chicago I might be able to add that Miss Mackaill's dancing is partially accountable for the zip, pep, etc., distinguishing the narrative, but the gentlemen and ladies who cut and slash our pictures for us seem not to have cared for her steps.

The story's the one about the young millionaire who wasn't a young millionaire and so forth, but this is the best telling of it I've seen. (And, baby, I've seen plenty.)

"THE BROADWAY MELODY"

IN "The Broadway Melody" the industry has a revolutionary picture far more important than the hallowed "Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," to which the so-called art theatres invariably turn when they run out of all other ideas. Unlike the cabinet, however, the melody is neither weird nor fantastic nor mystic nor dull; it is the contrary of all these.

It is my firm belief, and for once I seem to be supported by the critics of pictures, that "The Broadway Melody" is the finest picture yet made employing all we know about the presentation of films. It has dialogue, music, color, a good story, magnificent acting by Bessie Love, superb direction by Harry Beaumont. "The Broadway Melody" is an exciting yarn about two sisters who come from the tank towns to capture Broadway with a singing-and-dancing act. One is in love with a Broadway hoofer and song writer and through them he get into the envied "Follies." As it happens, the hoofer is simply bowled over by the beauty of the younger of the two sisters, whom he had not seen in childhood, and I'm not the sort of guy who spoils your fun by telling more.

The story is strong, intelligent, and it is played so magnificently, in such perfect rhythm, that the result is as grand an evening as I want to spend in the theatre.
THE THEATRE

Try These Ten Commandments Of Fred Meyer for Your House

Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Milwaukee, Wis., has issued Ten Commandments for the chain theatre manager to use in operating a house. The “Commandments” contain many excellent promotion and management tips, adaptable to practically any theatre.

These commandments are now in operation in the Milwaukee circuit and already are building up business in the various theatres of the organization. They read as follows:

1. The voice with the smile wins! You are not dressed for work until you put on a smile.
2. No chain is stronger than its weakest link. Do what you have to do and do it now. Spell “NOW” backwards and you have the answer.
3. “He profits most who serves best”—says Rotary. Increased profits mean an increase in salary.
4. Be on your toes! The fire department looks just as much business when answering a false alarm as it does when going to a real conflagration.
5. Take a firm interest in your firm’s interest. Work will win when wishing won’t.
7. The fellow who sits on top Monday morning usually is out of the red at the end of the week.
8. Confidence is the backbone of all business. Do or say nothing which might tend to destroy. When your work becomes a task, quit it!
9. “It’s the little things in life that count!” The fellow, who takes little interest in his work, accomplishes but little, is paid but little and lasts but a little while.
10. Before you go to sleep tonight ask yourself if the firm you are with, and the world in general, is any better off because of your having lived another day.

Extra Letter with Words in Ads Gives Punch to Contest

The hidden word contest is used to advantage in the monthly house organ just launched by L. E. Knowles of the Knowles Advertising Service at Newcomerstown, Ohio, “Newark This Month” is its title and while we gather from its contents that it is not strictly a theatre house organ but rather a community house organ, there are good “hunches” for the exhibitor in it.

Hidden Word Contest

The first issue (January) was the Midland Theatre Opening Number; the February issue was called the Merchants’ Edition.

One idea used to advantage is the hidden word contest. In this instance a letter is added to a word in each of several advertisements. These letters are to be pieced together into a slogan.

“I have been reading your Theatre section and note that you have articles on house organs or theatre program,” Knowles writes.

Plans Weekly Magazine

“I am enclosing herewith two issues of my first attempt on a program or house organ; the first issue of course was somewhat ‘balled up’ by the printer in leaving out the headings to some feature articles.

“A weekly magazine is now on the press and as soon as can get time I’ll send you copies.”

We are awaiting copies of the weekly magazines.

George Knowles Leaves National at Chico, Cal.

George Knowles, whose campaigns on a number of pictures are well known to readers of “The Theatre,” is no longer with the National theatre at Chico, Cal., where he was manager. One of the dodgers gotten out by Knowles was reproduced in this department last week.

We haven’t heard of Knowles’ new affiliation as yet, but we know that whatever it is he’s hitting the ball.
3,000 Girls’ Streetcar Fare Paid
By Riviera in “Thank You Month”

"Your fare has been paid, miss," greeted the girls of Omaha when they boarded streetcars the morning of February 1. The conductors went on to explain that the fare was remitted with the compliments of the Riviera theatre.

"This is Thank You Month at the Riviera," said a greeting card handed them, signed by Jay Mills, stagemaster, and Herbie Koch, organist, of the Riviera. The conductors also wore ribbons announcing "Thank You Month." The streetcar tieup—limited to the first 3,000 girl passengers—was one of scores of stunts arranged by Raymond Jones, manager of the Riviera, in putting on "Thank You Month" at the theatre, a plan which he evolved while manager at Fort Worth, Texas. The idea behind the words is that in appreciation of past patronage, the theatre is putting on a specially good series of bills for the month.

The plan has worked out so successfully that not only does Jones have the whole town talking about it, but several stores of the city have put on "Thank You Sales" in imitation of the theatre exploitation. The wording "Thank You Month" leaves just enough unexplained to invite questions, and questions there have been by the thousands.

All methods of publicity have been employed by Jones. Banners and bright lights on the theatre tell of the month, advertisements and billboards carry the news, all employees wear "Thank You Month" ribbons, the screen tells the message, Jay Mills and Herbie Koch let the audiences know about it. For five blocks approaching the theatre, streamers stretch across the street, all waiters in cafes wear "Thank You Month" ribbons, 25,000 blotter cards, 2,000 ribbons in schools and offices are daily reminders, displays in merchants’ windows have fallen in line and announcers over WOV broadcast the message.

As a feature of the month, Boy Scouts ran the theatre for a day in connection with a Boy Scout day at the theatre.

The film features listed for the month are the “Shopworn Angel,” “Wolf of Wall Street,” “Redskin” and “Canary Murder Case.” The public has responded with heartiness.

Airplane Drops Tickets
For “Wings” Exploitation

Exploitation opportunities aplenty were offered when the Lindbergh theatre, Kansas City suburban house, showed "Wings." Sunday afternoon airplanes flew over the theatre and dropped tickets. The picture was advertised as being “correctly synchronized on our $25,000 organ.” "Wings" is a sound picture, but the theatre does not have sound equipment, it being shown as a silent picture.

Add These To Your List, House Organ
Exchange Members

We’re happy this week to add the following to the Loyal Order of the House Organ Exchange:

George B. Lyley, Ventnor Theatre
Topicals, Ventnor City, New Jersey.

C. Elmer Nolte, Jr., Grand theatre, 511-17 S. Conkling St., Baltimore, Md.

Our new London member writes to "The Theatre" as follows:

"I would indeed be grateful if you would be good enough to enroll me in your House Organ Exchange. For the moment I am editing house organs for several theatres in London and my list is steadily growing. Perhaps my matter may interest some of your readers, and in turn would welcome the opportunity of picking up hints from my American conferences."

The Exchange idea is splendid and I hasten to avail myself of its practical aid. I will gladly exchange house organs with any of your members—and the more the merrier!"

And the more the merrier say we also, Mr. Harris.

From New Jersey comes this from Manager Lyley (the front page of “Topics” is reproduced on Page 49):

"Enclosed please find copy of our third issue of our house organ. Would be happy to have your comment on it.

"Would like to be in your House Organ Exchange. I read your magazine every week and think it’s fine."

And it’s fine of you, Lyley, to join us in the Exchange!

Two Managers Win
First Leg in R K O
Contest on “Wings”
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Chris Egan of the Fordham theatre was winner for Manhattan, the Bronx and Westchester, and James Fotheringham of the Madison theatre for the Brooklyn and Long Island groups, in the first leg of the Master Showmanship contest of the R K O Greater New York managers, during presentation of Paramount’s "Wings."

The prize, a plaque, must be won three times by the same manager for permanent possession.

The contest was exceedingly close in both districts and but a few percentage points divided the first four in each of these groups. Of the 100 per cent possible, the results were based on these percentages: exploitation 40; divided 2 in advance, 15 current and 5 for original stunt; gross receipts 20; net 20; best run stage 10 and best run from the house 10 per cent.

While many of the theatre managers were given equal credits for exploitation, the winners were determined by the increased gross and excess in profit over the average normal weeks.

The committee in charge of the contest is made up of Major L. E. Thompson, Mark A. Luescher, Charles MacDonald, Floyd H. Scott, R. Newman, Mr. R. Allen and Harry Mandel.

The next managers’ contest for the second leg of the contest of the championship trophy will be during the engagement of "Interference" in Radio-Keith-Orpheum’s Greater New York Theatres.
$10,000 Aircraft Beacon Blazes From Roof of Keswick Theatre

Exploitation that is exploitation is reflected in the installation of the largest aircraft beacon on the Atlantic seaboard by the Keswick theatre of Greater Glenside, Pa. "It has been erected on the roof of the theatre and is the only aeronautical beacon erected on a theatre in the United States," writes F. W. Norcross to this department. Edwin X. Johnson is the owner of the Keswick, which opened at Christmas time. The huge Neon light can be seen almost 75 miles distant on clear nights.

A sensational night-flying stunt featured the dedication of the beacon. Many aviation experts and hundreds of citizens of Lower Montgomery county witnessed the ceremony. "Follow the Keswick Beacon" will be the theatre's slogan, for aerial planes as well as passenger craft.

The Keswick Beacon cost $10,000 and dwarfs the great beacons which the United States has placed every ten miles along its airways. It is much larger than the big beacons at League Island and the Philadelphia Airport, and the beacon on Roosevelt Flying Field, Long Island.

As a publicity feature, it compares with the entrance of Citizen, the automobile manufacturer of Paris, who uses the Eiffel Tower as an electric sign for his business.

The Keswick Beacon can be seen from all parts of the Philadelphia area, and for nearly 50 miles beyond the city's limits. It will be seen by motorists approaching the Quaker City from the west, north and south for nearly two hours before any other indication of Penn's City comes into view.

Two Aeronautical Lights

The orange-red Neon light emanates from six U-shaped tubes six feet in height, and is of great fog-penetrating power. Above the Neon beacon are two aeronautical lights, one on a diagonal which remains stationary and points to Pitcairn Flying Field, and the other a revolving searchlight which rotates every 30 seconds.

The aeronautical lights are of 8,000,000 candlepower each. The Philadelphia Sign Company, a branch of Claude Neon Lights, Inc., of New York, installed the beacon.

When he planned the Keswick theatre, Johnson decided to give his playhouse two superb publicity features. One is the Keswick Beacon; the other the large tract of several acres in the rear of the theatre for the free parking of several hundred cars. The Keswick Beacon will burn from sunset to sunrise.

St. Patrick's Day Is Readymade for Special Exploiting

Five methods to make the most of the exploitation possibilities of St. Patrick's Day—March 17—are pointed out by Joe Weil of Universal, and not least of them is the matter of decorations, with inexpensive novelties, green lobby lighting, green spotlighting on orchestra, head usherette in attractive "Irish" costumes, lobby easel board in shamrock cut-out, and so on.

Invitations to Irish societies to hold theatre parties during St. Patrick's Week are suggested, with the taking of motion pictures of their leaders if the size of the party will warrant the expense. Slides and trailer announcements should be made in any case of any Irish news.

Let the newspaper share with you an invitation affair for all having birthdays on March 17, the birth certificate to be shown at the door, says Weil.

Lighted 24-Sheet Stand Helps Missouri Exhibitor

An illuminated 24-sheet stand has been erected by Hugh Gardner, Neosho, Mo., exhibitor, on the concrete highway leading to his town, advertising his theatre. Recently bookers, salesmen and exchange managers of Kansas City decided to "sell" exhibitors one idea each month which might aid in obtaining greater attendance at theatres. The first idea was "more advertising" and Mr. Gardner's 24-sheet stand was in response to the idea.

There's a Reason When Press Boosts Exhibitor This Way

"Some age—eighteen years in pictures," write T. & T. of Plattsburg, Mo., to "The Theatre," in sending us a clippings about them from the Plattsburg Leader. But more interesting to us is the fact that T. & T.—and that means C. H. Thompson and M. J. Trimble—have so conducted their theatre and maintained such excellent contacts in their city that the newspaper article includes the following: "Our people can greatly appreciate the high class entertainment that this firm has so long furnished the people of this section."

That's real, 100 per cent proof—no, this reference is not to the kind of "100 per cent people" that you might think—that the exhibitors stand solidly with their community, and the community isn't in the habit of boosting the theatre man unless he has merited it.

The article states: "On the night of February 8, 1929, the Plattsburg Opera House, under the management of Messrs. C. H. Thompson and M. J. Trimble, was formally opened with the then most popular stage play, 'The Bohemian Girl.' For the opening of the theatre, the Beggar and Prince Opera Co., of Des Moines, one of the finest dramatic troupes then in this part of the country were employed at a cost of $350 for the evening's entertainment.

"For a number of years the Opera House was used purely for theatrical purposes, and was visited by many of the better known companies then on the road. Of later years, however, the house has been used for a motion picture theatre, with intermittent visits by theatrical companies."

COMING

To Shake the World With Laughter

Ask UNIVERSAL
Two negatives: 1 silent; 1 with dialog
In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in planning and in the preparation of their advertising campaign.

Letters From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds forcefulness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Suggests “Echofilm”

EL PASO, TEX.—To the Editor: In regard to your contest for finding a suitable name with which to designate the “talkies.” The search is somewhat suggested by the compound word ECHOFILM, which comes from the Latin echo—sound, noise, and means also a repetition of a sound caused by the reflecting of the sound waves in our opinion is a phenomenon in question; and film; the established English name for movies.

We would also suggest this same word inverted like this—FILMECHO. However, the first name seems to us more catchy and as a consequence more commercial.

How would you like PARAFILM or PAKLACINE for the talking pictures only? We like the word ECHOFILM because ECHO covers all kinds of sounds.—R. CALBEZEW, International Amusement Co, El Paso, Tex.

Music in Small Theatres

UNION CITY, INDIANA.—To the Editor: I read the Herald-World every week and think it a lot and wonder a lot. Music has always been small town problem. Now we have the music problem solved and along come the talkies.

Anyone that is using cheap orchestra, organ, piano, photoplay, or electric powered music instrument and wants to know how to put on good music at a cheap price—just drop a line to the undersigned and we will put you on the right track. This is hardly an advertisement, but almost sounds like one.

Anyhow, we will save you some money and you can name it after you get it, but it does the work for you.

So that his boss will know he is on the job, I will mention that J. C. J. stopped in a while back for a few minutes, then on his way. I should like to mention this, as he promised to refer our town in his write up, but as he is getting old, will overlook it this time.

Would like to try T. O. Service a soda that “The Patriot” and “The Case of Lena Smith” get a lot of knobs and floss from small towns, and “Show Girl,” “Manhattan Cocktail” go good among the majority of reports. Just a prediction, as he says no one can predict a picture’s future. However, I think T. O. page is one of the best in the whole magazine. Only objection is there is not enough of it. Should be about three white pages. This guess will hold me for a while—S. NEWMAN, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.

Star Radio Programs

NORTH KANSAS CITY, MO.—To the Editor: I have noticed in the past few issues a few remarks from our old friend J. C. about how bad business is and unless something is done soon why there will be 5,000 of us out of the business before long. Well, I will surely say that he doesn’t know his business. We all know how the radio, by Wm. E. Traagsdorf from Neillsville, Wis., in the issue of January 26 sure helps hit the nail on the head as to what is wrong. I have been in the business since 1910 and this is the first time that I ever saw the big circuits like the Keith-Albee firm absolutely trying to keep the people home listening to the radio as they have been doing for the past few weeks with their weekly radio program of big stars that we little fellows have always called their big money stars. I know in my neighborhood that on these nights there are lots of my customers that stay home and listen because it is a bigger show that we could ever put on our stage in a year. Now, I ask my fellow exhibitors, is this kind of competition fair? I certainly don’t think so and I would like to hear from

Columbia

THE FAKER: Special cast—January 29-30. This picture was only fair. Not enough action and only a little spooky. Scored a few of the children. Six reels.—P. N. Wilson, Parkview theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

LONE WOOL'S DAUGHTER: Bert Lytell—February 5-6. A real good picture with fine acting by Lytell. Another good feature from Columbia. Comments very good. Didn't understand how Lytell played a girl's part from the title. Play boys, it's O. K. Seven reels.—P. N. Wilson, Parkview theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

DRIEFWOOD: Special cast—January 15-16. A fairly good program picture. Paced about 50 per cent of patronage. Seven reels.—P. N. Wilson, Parkview theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

COURT MARTIAL: Special cast—I can only add to what many other exhibitors have reported—it's good and it pleased. Seven reels—E. C. Young, Williams theatre, Laurel, Nev.—General patronage.

STREET OF ILLUSION: Special cast—(Silent.) Some ands ands. No light moments. The director and actors did their best with this punk story but the results were not pleasing to the few who came out to see it. Not up to the usual Columbia standard. Folks from the theatrical boarding house may eat this up, as it concerns people of their profession. People in the country don't care for such guff. Seven reels.—H. H. Heeberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

First National

THE HAUNTED HOUSE: Chester Conklin—Amusingly displaying his talent, Conklin scores a hit. Another ghost story, but we can pan this one, six reels.—H. H. Barrett, Colonial and Ritz theatres, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

ADDITION: Billie Dove—February 4-5. The first Dove picture I have been disappointed with. Billie did not look or act herself in this one. Moreno as a love-sick Russian officer seemed miscast. He can do better. It is not a poor picture, but not as good as usual from this star. Seven reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

WATERFRONT: Mackall-Mulhall—(Silent) This popular team in the best picture they have put out in many seasons. Here is one that is full of pep, has plenty of comedy, is perfectly directed, splendidly acted, and is entertaining from start to finish, with good clean comedy. Patrons loud in their plaudits.—H. H. Heeberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

O N E W E E K M O R E

ONLY one week remains for those who have not yet voted in the "My Favorite Players" contest to get in their ballots. All votes received up to March 1 will be counted, but none after that. The final standings will be made out on that date and published in the issue of March 9.

The representation of theatres in the contest is splendid, embracing houses of each type of patronage, in every section of the United States, in hamlets and large cities, in Canada and Mexico. There is always room for more, of course, and exhibitors who have not yet registered their preferences are urged to send in their votes and those of the members of their immediate families at once.

That every vote is going to count a lot in determining the final standings may be seen from the results this week. Clara Bow doubtless is "in" as the winner of the feminine players' race—but just look at the fight for second position! Who'll be runner-up—Colleen Moore or Joan Crawford? And a neck-and-neck race is being run by Lon Chaney and Richard Dix for victory on the male players' track. Chaney having come within two votes of Dix this week, after having lost a chased out of first place last week. So get in your votes—they may be the deciding ones!

The standings thus far are as follows:

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—30%. December 9-10-11. The weather stopped this one. We're having the worst weather in many years. People stay at home rather than plow through snow and ice. Picture fine but did not draw.—William E. Lewis, Plymouth theatre, Ontario, Ore.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—(Silent). Colleen Moore's greatest picture! A production that is worthy of being called a special. It has everything in it to make an audience fully satisfied—romantic, comedy, romance so cleverly interwoven as to make a perfectly balanced screen treat. Here's a number that will back up all the advertising you can give it, and your patrons will not complain if the price
NAMELESS REPORTS

And still come a few reports without the name of the theatre! This week “nameless reports” have come from Covington, Ky., which cannot be published until the present paper is printed. These reports are on “Two Arabian Knights,” “Manhattan Cocktail,” “Footlight Fancy” and “Chicken.” One report has the statement, “General patronage in our theatre is coming well.” Will the exhibitor who sent in these reports please forward his name and that of his theatre.

Joan Crawford: January 18-19. This proved to be an extra good feature, and will say hats off to Miss Crawford. Rex theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

Joan Crawford: January 25-26. Everything that is needed for entertainment. Believe me, brother, this new novel has it all—beauty, grace, charm and how! Nine reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Pauli, Ind.—General patronage.

DREAM OF LOVE: Special cast—February 12. A very good picture which is a change from so many underworld pictures that picture that is made is of the underworld I think. They are good but we don’t want to see them all the time. This picture was a good box office Good print. Seven reels.—Robert R. Yancey, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

Masks of the Devil: John Gilbert—February 9. Very good picture which is a change from so many underworld pictures that picture that is made is of the underworld I think. They are good but we don’t want to see them all the time. This picture was a good box office Good print. Seven reels.—Robert R. Yancey, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE: William Haines—25% February 7-8-9. Splendid entertainment. Taken from the old stage play and packed with drama and humor. It’s a natural, and anyone who does not play it, is passing up money. All the cast do their jobs well. Rex theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—General patronage.

A SINGLE MAN: Codly-Pringle—40% February 10. Better than the usual Codly-Pringle vehicle. Has more sophistication than I expected to see. The players are fine. This is a picture where the audience is almost as much an audience as the players. The story is one that isnone too good. Sort of a female “Les Misérables” affair. Gaynor and Farrell are fine, but a lesser picture than the atmosphere so overdone, and the picture is a joke. Rather heavy and easy. Don’t look for a box-office success in this. It pulled better than average, but Fox took all the money, which is a way Mr. Fox has of doing business. Rex theatre, Selma, Ala.—General patronage.

A SINGLE MAN: Codly-Pringle—February 8-9. In any town where Codly and Pringle are liked, and they are, they are doing a fine business with this picture. It is a fast moving comedy-drama packed with clever situations and laughs. The moral it points to all us fellows over forty is “Be your age.” Seven reels.—E. N. Biddle, Strand theatre, Pauli, Ind.—General patronage.

The Wind: Lillian Gish—January 30-31. Lillian Gish—February 8. In any town where Codly and Pringle are liked, and they are, they are doing a fine business with this picture. It is a fast moving comedy-drama packed with clever situations and laughs. The moral it points to all us fellows over forty is “Be your age.” Seven reels.—E. N. Biddle, Strand theatre, Pauli, Ind.—General patronage.

The Wind: Lillian Gish—January 30-31. This comes the nearest to being no picture, of any picture we have ever played, of being that ideal picture. I think the was mostly all “wind.” Played in a special, with a three day wind outside which put it over “big” to a box office. Six reels. Rex theatre, Granville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Wind: Lillian Gish—January 30-31. This comes the nearest to being no picture, of any picture we have ever played, of being that ideal picture. I think the was mostly all “wind.” Played in a special, with a three day wind outside which put it over “big” to a box office. Six reels. Rex theatre, Granville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Wind: Lillian Gish—February 8-9. The star pulled pretty well, and she played her part. M G M should sell each pictures by the dozen instead of one at a time. Seven reels.—E. P. Hoack, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Joan Crawford: January 18-19. This proved to be an extra good feature, and will say hats off to Miss Crawford. Rex theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Joan Crawford: January 25-26. Everything that is needed for entertainment. Believe me, brother, this new novel has it all—beauty, grace, charm and how! Nine reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Pauli, Ind.—General patronage.

They are good but we don’t want to see them all the time. This picture was a good box office Good print. Seven reels.—Robert R. Yancey, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—February 12. A pleasing comedy drama. Showed several Hollywood celebrities, Bill Hart was shown in full Western regalia. Wish he’d made some more of those money getters pictures. It draws a crowd. Third week, at the bank with that kind of jass they’d swear I’d turned bandit. Eight reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Granville, Ind.—General patronage.

Masks of the Devil: John Gilbert—February 9. Very good picture which is a change from so many underworld pictures that picture that is made is of the underworld I think. They are good but we don’t want to see them all the time. This picture was a good box office Good print. Seven reels.—Robert R. Yancey, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

MORGAN’S LAST RAID: Tim McCoy—February 9. Good entertaining picture. It had more comedy and pleasuring than either of them. It pulled very well. It started as we ran the first of the week. Good print and photography. Six reels.—Robert R. Yancey, Benny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

Rose Marie: Joan Crawford—25%. January 30-31. This is a fine entertainment. Stars and cast fine, as it should be. Rex theatre, Collierville, Tenn.—Beri Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.— General patronage.

WICKEDNESS PREFERRED: Codly-Pringle—Didn’t see it. Report hard, Poor draw.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

THE FLYING FLEET: Ramon Novarro—February 4-5. A very fine program offering. One of those tryers that should get more of the good, clean stories. Just common, every day life. It certainly did please and Bebe certainly didn’t lose anything in this one. Six reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyoke, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thompson—January 21. A good Thompson Western. We will make Fred. Seven reels.—William E. Traskoff, Tras theatre, Nellesville, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

THRILLING WEEK ENDS: Clara Bow—Good comedy drama, pleased her fans.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

VARSITY: Buster Keaton—January 30-31. Keaton’s playing well, but the picture is no thrilling success. Public not well pleased. Seven reels.—H. H. Barrett, Colonial and Ritz theatres, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

JUST MARRIED: Special cast—A comedy drama of the silly order. Absolutely no pulling power.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

FOOTLOOSE WOMEN: Bobby Vernon—Good. Bobby sends proposals to women and they all accept after he sees the one he wants—a merry mixup. Two reels.—R. S. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Beery-Hutton—February 4-5. Just a good program comedy, no reason on earth why we should pay double program price for those stars. Good print and photography. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Lane Chandler—January 24. Good Western and a Zane Grey which always draws a good crowd with us. If you want your business to pick up, install a Kolster Moviel- ome or some other similar device and ease your picture and watch your theatre fill up. Good print and photography. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

HALF A BRIDE: Esther Ralston—20%. January 21-February 1-L. Good entertaining little program picture. Gary Cooper is getting popular, though cannot see why Miss Ralston is a star. She has lost her best actor in Tom Brown. Seven reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

THE WOMAN FROM MOSCOW: Pola Negri—February 6-7. The Negri fans shouldn’t object to this heavy drama of S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Texas.—Small town patronage.

WINGS: Special cast—“Wings,” no doubt, is a wonderful picture. It will please every one that sees it, although there is room for criticism in this picture. Play it if you don’t have to split with Paramount on it.—Joe N. Wagner, Lyric theatre, Grangeville, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

SPEEDY: Harold Lloyd—30%. December 15. Something similar to his other comedies. Would say suffered but 75 per cent of my patronage to these reels.—A. K. Haynes, Community theatre, Razor, Tex.—General patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Richard Arlen—60%. The name Zane Grey drew them in. Just a fair picture. Did not follow the book.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Burner Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE MAGNIFICENT FLIRT: Florence Vidor—October 21-22. A very good little Sunday picture enjoyed by most of my patrons. Print and photography good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

TWO FLAMING YOUTHS: Special cast—65%. February 6-7. A superb comedy that will please. Some great gaiting by Fields, and the race for the widow’s hand by Fields and Conlin with a surprise ending, are the highlights. Six reels.—H. R. Grice, Alen Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

SPORTING GOODS: Richard Dix—January 3-4. Please as an average Dix picture. Enough comedy to make it good.—Joe N. Wagner, Lyric theatre, Grangeville, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

Make this practical test

Substitute a Dayton Safety Ladder for one of the ladders your men are now using in cleaning, repair, or maintenance work. Immediately, the good workman will become a better workman. We will lose all fear of falling, will use both hands freely, will waste no time running up and down for supplies and tools. With its widespread, steel-braced legs, the Dayton Safety Ladder cannot tip, wobble, or collapse. Plenty of room on the broad platform for two men with their tools. Has folding auxiliary step for extra height. Made of strong, light weight airplane spruce in sizes 3 to 16 feet.

We also make Type “B” Dayton Ladder, a smaller popular priced safety ladder.
THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—The fellow who made up Dix must have been sampling Los Angeles gin. Our hero looked like an old time stagecoach driver. Dix was a good member of a bad cast, a fact is a Doug Fairbanks' "Mark of Zorro" affair, but not as good. This just got by with our folk. No one raves for Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Special cast—A good crook melodrama. Well produced. Whether good enough for a special is rather doubtful, though I ran it as one.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

HOT NEWS: Bebe Daniels—Three rowing cheers for Bebe! This is great. One peach of a picture is abounding in this one. House in a continual uprising. What a story! What action! Oh, boy, I feel like a million dollars! For Pete's sake, book it instantly. We ran it on our best nights at raised prices with two-red comedy and Oddity and saw some real money.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—Went over with a bang. New Years. People like Clara. This is one of her good ones. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

SERVICE FOR LADIES: Adolph Menjou—Doo Menjou has never been better. A real picture. Personality for playing old maid. House in a continual uprising. A pretty good one.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Special cast—Good Western—better than program, but not, however, a real special. As people find the Zane Grey plays are never the same as the book, they draw less and less. This being the case, the Tonto Rims have not done too well for them less for accordingly. Paramount never had a good special which was a shame.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Beery-Hatton—Not as good as "Wife Savers," but pleased the men.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

NEVADA: Gary Coop—February 8-9. Good, a little old, but I got it right and did a little big even though the weather was cold and raw. Seven reels.—Joe Beery, Strand theatre, Pella, Ia.—General patronage.

BEAU SABREUR: Special cast—not as good as "Rattice Salon" was. What a way to advertise it, however. It is pretty good. The ladies Blair and Beery were good. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

WIFE SAVERS: Beery-Hatton—There is a certain crowd who flocks to see Beery and Hatton, but I had better book them if they don't though. Parts of it are a scream! It's a war burlesque.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Id.—General patronage.

THE MATING CALL: Thomas Meighan—February 8-9. Another story butchered, but if they haven't read the book, they will please them all. Seven reels.—D. A. Rhynex, Nitto theatre, N. Dak.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG KILLING: Beery-Hatton—February 12-14. A poor picture but better than they draw for me as they did at first, so their bustout is OK with me.—D. A. Rhynex, Nitto theatre, Hebron, N. Dak.—Small town patronage.

KING OF KINGS: Special cast—100%, October 21-22-23-24-25. This picture brought people to my theatre that had never seen the inside of a show house before. Has failed to draw well in several places. Program picture. bookings not out in Toronto, Oregon, Ore.—General patronage.

MAN MADE WOMAN: Leatrice Joy—Good social drama, but too many drawing power.—J. L. Soller, St. Anthony, M.—Any town. Five reels.—Leaside theatre, Nellisville, Ws.—Small town patronage.

RAYART

BOY OF THE STREETS: Johnnie Walker—Another good one from Rayart. What we have run of Rayart has not been quite up to Rayart's big company's stuff. Six reels.—H. C. Mauler, Liberty theatre, Pleasanton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

RAYART

GANG WAR: Special cast—Special! 1! Gold Bond this is for a very entertaining picture. It can hardly be classed so far out of the ordinary as to justify the appellations we have been distributing about here, and the few who decided to see what another underworld picture was about, commented on the fact that was better than many of our program features. A good program attraction.—Seven reels.—H. H. Heuberg, Anchor theatre, Moscow, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

KING COWBOY: Tom Mix—Pleased 100 per cent. This is the best Mix picture we have shown. Tom Mix is better than quite a few Mix plots with an African locale; heaps of comedy, lots of fancy riding and roping and some exceedingly fast action all the way. This is the sort of production that the Mix fans have been praying for, and our prayer is that FBO gives Mix more of it. Six reels.—H. H. Heuberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, Ia.—General patronage.

LIGHTIN' SPEED: Bob Steele—(Silent). One of those fast, zippy pictures that has a climax that will make any audience gasp for breath. A program attraction that pleased Western fans, who had kicked because Steele was appearing in other programs elsewhere. We feel that Sanéen, personally believe that Steele is the perfect type for good Western pictures, even though he seems to be almost successful in pleasing with fast action stuff. Six reels.—H. H. Heuberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, Ia.—General patronage.

LIGHTIN' SPEED: Bob Steele—February 9. Bob Steele has come out with all guns—lay it up. This picture is veritably an en-cyclopedia of action. Written and directed by Doug Fairbanks, Richard Talmadge, Ken Mayne, and a host of others are packed into this picture, with a few omissions by Steele to give extra action. This guy is the best leading lady, too, but the poor bob didn't kies her once. I don't see how he resisted the temptation, though. Bob Steele's best picture to date.—Bob Grice, Allen Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

DOG LAW: Ranger—February 6-7. A good dog picture.—Sam McLeague, Jackson's theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

LIGHTNING SPEED: Bobby Steele—February 9. Very fine Steele picture, business poor, but this is the fault of the booking and not of the picture. The other Murdock good. Six reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson's theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

LAST EAST: Tom Moore—February 6-7. A very nice, clean picture.—Rayart theatre, Elkhurst, N. Dak.—General patronage.

RAYART

THE JAZZ AGE: Special cast—25%. According to the showman the booking is a good one. We feel the popularity of "Our Dancing Daughters" (Metro), but the story or actors aren't there for this type. Paper very good. Here's a picture that can't be beat.—"Young Doug hasn't any Binge." Promoter said he's got it." Here's Doug draws his pay Sunday night and gets a big show. Six reels.—E. C. Archart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

CAPTAIN CARELESS: Bob Steele—Our first Bob Steele picture and we like him.—E. C. Archart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE GAUCHOS: Special cast—100%. Played on one piece. Our best show this year. Good reports on this one this when I have on any one picture. Star is Francis X. Bushman, Six reels.—Garrett theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE GAUCHOS: Special cast.—Just another big muscle movie that will seem in the picture, that was the one saying, "the end." H. B. Grice, Allen Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

RAYART

THE AIR LEGION: Ben Lyon—Fair picture, will be good in time—maybe. Seven reels.—H. B. Barry, General patronage.

ORSANS OF THE SAGE: Buzz Barton—January 21. A very good picture of the fifteen, when men were men and Indians were men with the love interest centered on Buzz and a winsome little last of 12 years. Six reels.—H. B. Grice, Allen Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

ALEX THE GREAT: Skeets Gillingham—January 26-31. This B. C. Winters picture of a small town smart alec who grabbed New York City—two cars, certainly makes one dandy picture. Drew was very good. They kept our patrons happy the entire length. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paei, Ind.—General patronage.

THE VAGABOND CUB: Buzz Barton—February 4-10. This is a real good offer. Five reels.—E. B. Conant, Charlestown Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

SALLY'S SHOULDERS: Lois Wilson—Someone made a worse picture but I do not know who it was. Six reels.—R. D. Carter, Colonial and Ritz theatres, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

RAYART

THE PINTO KID: Buzz Barton—June 6-9. December 29. Tom Mix picture with the 13-year-old wonder. Buzz is a great rider and is supported by
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

A wonderful cast. Six reels.—A. K. Haynes, Community theatre, Beson, Tex.—General patronage.

STONE WATERS: Special cast—10% February 1. This picture gave poorest satisfaction of any of my pictures here in some respects. Too many weak scenes.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

STORMY WATERS: Special cast—10% February 1. In point of box office and audience shown little attention has been given to this picture. It was only slightly played. Considering the way we fell for his wild ballyhoo, Uncle Carl is the man who laugh last. All that was there not even 20 horses. There was neither profit nor prestige in this for us, as we lost nearly half the amount of the film rental. Most of the kids from the local high school and thought after while we might be able to put the picture under contract. There was no contract in sight, as we lost at the end of the first exhibition. Had booked for three days, but lost 30 cents a day. The picture is simply not there, especially for small towns. Our chief complaint is that its story has its action unretained. Most of this is simply puerile. One hot scene hit in and, of course, that was too hot for the kids among our audience. Mostly the spirit of Victor Hugo was very much diluted. The two staves mean less than nothing here. This is the only outstanding performance was that of Blaschans—0, exquisite, beautiful Blaschans! Second day to lack of entertainment. We had to minimum admission of 50 cents by greedy Universal. What few boxes did this up, bowled and crushed their nails. Print very not good. Some of it very badly scratched. Another cause for that unforeseen—without a show yesterday was a call from a spy of the Society of Composers and Authors, followed by a demand for $10 per week for playing copyrighted phonograph records without permission. Any of you birds who are not already paying this 5% for the second prints, you better start, for they'll get you sooner or later. No victim is too insignificant for their greed. This great American business has the finest example of unscrupulous, subversive tactics, crafts and holdouts, Ten reels.—O. W. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS: Special cast—The salesmen who sold me this picture did not laugh. I laugh. I would laugh too. I look it in on my B. O. thermometer showed 10 below what I paid for this picture.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemon, S. D.—General patronage.

KING OF THE RODEO: Hoot Gibson—10%. February 9. Well, well, here's a Western without any shooting, stunt or sex appeal stuff and what the result—hang-up on entertainment. They ought to present their horse with a medal making such an entertaining picture for the theatre of any size. Many good comments. Six reels.—E. B. Conant, Charlestown Hall theatre, Lincoln, N. H.—General patronage.

BURNING THE WIND: Hoot Gibson—50%. February 2. Another good one about by the best Western actor in the game. He has gone forward where some of the boys appeared to have gone back. They are not as good as they, and they quit acting. Not the kind about whom people say, "What is the matter with so and so? Is he not good nowadays?"—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FANGS OF DESTINY: Special cast—Fair little picture, but had many kicks on it. People tire of cheap Westerns. Crowd dropped down every time I heard a kick. I'm not sure why.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CLEARING THE TRAIL: Hoot Gibson—Drew well and played picture.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

TWO OUTLAWS: Rex-Perrin—February 2. A very good, well made picture. Some of the towns.—E. B. Conant, Aristo theatre, Grand Prairie, Texas.—Small town patronage.

THE MICHIGAN KID: Special cast—Good Jewel, not real much money on no. G. to speak up when he can. This drew slightly above average.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

THANKS FOR THE BUGGY RIDE: Special cast— Said to "sell." The result was its not pull at all.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

THAT'S MY DADDY: Reginald Denny—Women and girls said it was Denny's best. High school boys didn't care for it. Would class it as a good picture.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

STRAIGHT SHOOTING: Ted Welles—Fair.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

WILD WEST: Hoot Gibson—Drew and pleased.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

ALIAS THE DEACON: Drew and pleased.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salina, Ind.—General patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast—This was one of the finest audience pictures I ever played and made a lot of damages for.—E. B. Caron, Aristo theatre, Lemon, S. D.—General patronage.

ANYBODY HERE SEE KELLY?: Special cast—Better than a lot of the so-called specials. A made picture.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemon, S. D.—General patronage.

HOW TO HANDLE WOMEN: Glenn Tryon—Poor picture. Wasted a good title and star on a mediocre picture.—M. D. Fraizer, Empress theatre, Aragon, Kan.—General patronage.

HOW TO HANDLE WOMEN: Glenn Tryon.—A fine here. A few like this and I will forget how to handle the crowd.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemon, S. D.—General patronage.

HERO OF THE CIRCUS: Maxfield—85%. January 17. One of the best animal and circus pro- ductions handled here. It simply fine and held a fair patronage spellbound. We think it all a foreign production and cast, but with $200,000, we did not put it out as a sure special can't understand. We will recommend it for our Chahtaauqua next summer. Those who have not flesh and fur may want a book it. Six reels.—C. H. Thompson, Opera House, Platts- burg, N. Y.—General patronage.

HONEYMOON FLATS: Special cast—How Uncle Carl can really put out such stuff and openly adver- tise it! Same old stuff with different faces, neither good acting or plot. Had rather be poor, showing off Moe Geller with a terrible di- advantage. Stick to "Collegians" George Lewis, was a real flat, then got a real flat.—J. Spec, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

United Artists

THE CIRCUS: Charles Chaplin—45%. January 28-30. Great for the kids. Never saw so many in the place at one time before. Failed to satisfy the older folks, although it drew fairly well. About one picture every six months in about right for Charlie. Seven reels.—D. A. Rheiner, Rialto theatre, Hebron, N. Dak.—Small town patronage.

RAMONA: Delores Del Rio—90%. November 28- 21-22-23. This picture is a "natural." Will help take some of the zero off the figures on other United Artists products that will not take in enough to pay for the electricity. No money can be made with United Artists.—William E. Lee, Jr., Dreamland theatre, Ontario, Ore.—General patronage.

THE GAUCHO: Douglas Fairbanks—Lot heavy on this, but it was not the fault of the picture. Was badly disappointed. Ten reels.—Victory theatre, Kent- tile, Pa.—General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BEE DEE—Another good picture, either talking or silent. Seven reels.—H. H. Barrett, Colonial and Ritz theatres, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

WOMEN THEY TALK ABOUT: Irene Rich—Not so good! Not so good! Six reels.—H. H. Bar- rett, Colonial and Ritz theatres, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

GOOD TIME CHARLEY: Special cast—16% February 2. A good program picture. Story better than average. Acting fine.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

TAX AS YOU ENTER: Special cast—16% February 8. Just a picture and not satisfactory at that.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FIVE AND TEN CENT ANNIE: Special cast—February 12. Just a movie. Played off the contract. Ten years ago we could get away with

Two negatives: 1 silent; 1 with dialog
DEAR HERALD WORLD:

This being the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday, it naturally calls to our mind three very important dates in this month, February 12, February 22, and February 28. The first two dates have become to be universally observed, while the last one seems to attract no particular attention outside of insurance and police court inquiry.

Since this is a semi-holiday and a young blizzard is forming outside, we can think of nothing better to do serve a suffering public than to comment on a couple of reviews we have on hand. First up is a picture we are sure you will not want to miss, "The Case of Lena Smith." The current issue of Liberty carries a review of this picture by Frederick James Smith, in which he gives this picture a three star rating. Three stars with this reviewer stand for "excellent," and the only time he gives a four star rating is when the picture is an "epic." Making Mr. Smith's view of the matter this picture must be far above the average.

We have in front of us the January 26 issue of the HERALD WORLD, in which T. O. Service seems to take an altogether different view of the matter. Here we find a conflict of opinion between two eminent reviewers, which leaves the common herd to wander over the range not knowing whether they will find pastures green or a helluva blizzard sweeping the valleys.

Mr. Smith lists this picture as excellent entertainment and stamps it as Esther Ralston's best work up to date, while T. O. claims it lacks everything it should have to make it worthy of the name. In his comment he makes use of the following language: "But under no circumstances can it be called entertainment, any more than can the highly interesting individual case of an epilepsy sufferer, the subject of the film." Mr. Smith gives the opinion that the picture should be seen by film enthusiasts, while T. O. thinks it should be seen by the common herd.

Noah seems to have been silent as to this word "appendectomy," and this lyricographer leaves us flat on our stomachs at the beginning of the picture. With the promise of something to come in the picture, Mr. Smith says that appendicitis is inflammation of the vermiform appendix of the cacao. This being true—and we would hardly care to question T. O. or Noah—it certainly makes it look darn tough for Lena.

Our only object in referring to these two reviews is to substantiate the HERALD WORLD's contention that no person is qualified to review a picture and give other than an individual opinion as to how the picture will be received by the public. There are many who claim to be able to forecast a picture's drawing and pleasing power, and there are many who are misled by the claims. Too frequently a review of a picture is governed by what's in sight on the table.

Not wishing to jeopardize our local reputation for being ball-headed and contrary, we are going to jump right in between these two eminent reviewers, with the hope that we may duely the works of both.

We would hardly expect that wedding anniversarys will be figured from so many days before or so many years after the date of the showing of "THE CASE OF LENA SMITH," but it is my judgment that this picture will be just as worthwhile entertainment by the folks out on the school section, and we wouldn't expect that the corn-hulker boys would carry their initials on the back of their seats while this picture was up on the screen.

Just what this picture will do in localities where the cops pay more attention to horseplay and left turns than to horsekeepers, we would not venture to guess, but the folks from the thickets and tall grass will go home from the show with the belief that pictures are made for entertainment, and this will be a great help to the industry. That's how Lena stands with us. No one should be able to "THE MAN WHO LAUGHS." Some of our best informed people will not doubt give this picture a four star rating. It might be because of the picture or it might be because Victor Hugo wrote the story, and his works grace the spotlight position in all well appointed libraries (ours was taken over by the insurance company a year ago), and we wouldn't like to expose our ignorance in matters of this kind. Mr. Smith's review is another, and this leads us to remark that we saw a cook once who lost an opportunity to make a helluva good huckleberry pie by following his own recipe instead of the one laid down in the book.

This picture will no doubt be classed by the best informed people as a classic, but from an entertainment standpoint, we personally list classic pictures in our catalog alongside of Grand Opera, and since we don't care what you think of our opinion of Grand Opera, it gives us license to say that the soothing strains from Grand Opera are about as pleasing to us as a hallelujah chorus by a bunch of Poland Chinas that haven't had their swill for three days. We never could see very much difference, and while this will again expose our ignorance, it ought to at least prove our honesty.

Don't get the impression that we are trying to tell you that "THE MAN WHO LAUGHS" isn't a good picture. We are trying to do nothing of the sort. What we are really trying to prove is that we are not overly crazy for Grand Opera. We presume high priced critics will say that this is one of the classics of the year, and they should know much better than one who has put in the hot part of life rooming in the one who that life roomed and common herd. Our experience with thoroughbreds has been limited. Our father had a thoroughbred cow once that he always kept right out in the front pasture so she could show off her shape. She was 12 years old and never raised a call, but she was an awfully

Serials

THE CRIMSON KID (Serials) (Colin Landis)—A good serial that held the interest all the time. Serials are a help to the country exhibitor.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

THE YELLOW CAMEL: (Pathe) Allen Ray—Fair serial that held interest all the way.—H. H. Heebner, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

TAZARAZ THE MIGHTY: (Universel) Special cast—The secret is out! Now I know why this serial was good. An operator must have said, "Some night that little shoulder strap on that gal's leopard skin dress is going to break, and oh, boy! when it does!"—T. T. Tatum, Aladdin's theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERY RIDER: (Universe): William Desmond—A silly thing, but the kids are excited about it now. A two episode series and it is holding up very well. It increased my Saturday business about 30 per cent.—Ben Evans, Jr., Liberty theatre, Rossville, Ark.—General patronage.

Short Features

EDUCATIONAL

AIN'T NATURE GRAND: Not bad, not good, none. One reel.—E. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Belkirk, Man.—General patronage.

THE MIGHTY KING (Universe): Lupo Lane—Another great comedy by a fine performer. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE GLOOM CHASER: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

OH, WHAT A MAN: Good comedy. Good paper.—E. P. Hosack, Strand theatre, Pella, In.—General patronage.

PLEM DUMB: Plenty good, I guess, as the house seemed to enjoy it.—E. P. Hosack, Strand theatre, Pella, In.—General patronage.

QUIET WORKERS: A fair comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

ROAMIN' ROMEO (Universe): Lupo Lane—Fine comedy.—E. B. Heebner, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

UP IN ARMS: Dorothy Doree—Dorothy sure can keep 'em up, and how they screamed again and again. We thank you, Dorothy. Our opinion of this is more like it. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimbalt, S. D.—General patronage.

SWORD POINTS: Lupo Lane—Not good enough for two reels. They all wear more clothes ones in a week. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

HIGH STRUNG: Jerry Drew—Here is a fine piece of work. More thrills than Harold Lloyd's pictures. Jerry sure can slick to the wall. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

LOC-MOTIVE: Felix the Cat—Good. These are the best creations in the market and please our people best. One reel.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

POLAR PARADE: A silly comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

GREY EYED LOVE: Just fair. One reel.—G. O. Tunnell, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

HOT OR COLD: Al St. John—Very good. Two reels.—O. Twemly, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

HOLD THAT MONKEY: Good comedy. Two reels.—Dorothy Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

pretty cow just the same. Gosh, we were all pront of that cow, but we got our milk from the scrubs.

Perhaps we have wandered far afield from the subject (you no doubt have surmised that) but if you were trying to collect your thoughts with a three year old granddaughter on one side of you pounding the keys on the piano and singing "I FAW DOWN AND GO BOOM," and a four year old grandson over the other with a hammer trying to smash the radios to pieces. We got a chuckle from you, and we would like to wander off the reservation, too. But what worries us most at this time is that we are marooned here with the highways blockaded with snow in every direction and Nancy down in the garage just ratlin to go. Poor Nancy, she gets so nervous, it worries us.

What we said last week about the necessity for Western pictures still goes as far as we are concerned. We would like to emphasize this necessity more strongly if we could, and if we could with the utmost consideration of New York and Hollywood from short sleeves or no skirts at all, to sombreros and chaps, we would feel that we had done the industry a real service. In ten thousand theatres in this country, Saturday nights are not show nights without a Western picture, and Westerns have kept these ten thousand theatres on the payroll. Some day the water will stop flowing over these theatrical turblines, and the mills will cease to grind, and when that time comes New York and Hollywood will have a shortage of flour. They may not believe it, but some day they will—when it is ex post facto (as we friend O. would say). If they are from Missouri that's all right with us, too.

We like the old state ouselves, outside of those Ozark hills.

Outside of the evidence to the contrary, furnished by the mirror in front of us, we never expect to see a homely cow than the chap who did the lead in "HIT OF THE SHOW."
one of RKO's recent pictures, and for fear this chap might read this comment, and to forestall any murderous resolutions he might make, we want also to say that we never expect to see anyone who could play the part better. We can't recall what the story was about, but whatever it was, the picture followed it very closely and we followed the picture clear to the end, we were so interested, when we could have gone down to the Owl Club and engaged ouselves in some heated political discussions, and if you want any further evidence that "HIT OF THE SHOW," is a good picture, you are asking too much.

As we recall it, this guy's name is Brown, and Brown is not an Irish name, but if this bird isn't Irish, then Charlie Murray is a Swede, and George Sidney eats pork instead of carb.

In the interest of self protection, we are strongly in favor of forming a brotherhood of homely guys, and we would like to see Bull Montana made president; Ben Turpin, secret-treasurer; Will Rogers, general manager; and leave Brown and us to look after the ice, etc., and to receive and introduce new members.

We homely guys have simply GOTT to stand together and give each other no standing room at all.

This Brown we are talking about is no relation to Crockett Brown of Nashwauk, Minn., even though Crockett is eligible to join this fraternity, and when Brown is in tow, it is likely there will be no waiting list at the beauty parlors, but the line will form on the left at the box offices if "HIT OF THE SHOW" is on the screen. We had a girl once who married a fellow by the name of Brown. Maybe this Brown is a grandson of hers. There is quite a family resemblance. But she was a Hooper. Anyhow, you better see "HIT OF THE SHOW in order to prove that we know a fairly good picture when we see one.

About the most encouraging news we have read lately is a report which states that young Carl Laemmle has grabbed the ax and has started to trim out the deadwood in the Laemmle organization. From this report it seems he didn't spare the Laemmle tree either, for a number of branches seem to have been trimmed from that sturdy old oak, and it seems that young Carl didn't care where the chips fell nor how much he cluttered up the ground with the deadwood.

It may be that the virus of economy has begun to work in the production arteries of the house of Laemmle and it is to be hoped that this disease will be "catching" and other like organizations will adopt the pruning-knife system to the useless branches that have been there, and men from other less successful houses.

We have said before, and we say again, that good pictures can be made and circulated at 50 per cent less cost than they have been up to date. We say this, too, without any knowledge of production and distribution. We don't claim any, but any student of mathematics can prove that if you hire two men to do one man's job, and pay those two men double the salary one could be hired for, it must necessarily increase the cost of the product in proportion.

We congratulate young Laemmle for the stand he has taken in the interest of economy.
It is the most forward step that has been taken in the industry in recent years and it must certainly give a hopeful outlook for the future of Universal service. Got to, Carl, we're for you, and you will find that the exhibitors will be too.

We are about the axe now that is going to the tree
To trim out the useless deadwood,
It no doubt caused a ruction, but take it from me.
He did the whole industry good.

WHEN MONEY COMES: Just fair, too much sameness. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

WHAT HAPPENED: Not bad. The story that does the comedy.—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Texas.—Small town patronage.

SHE-GOING SAILOR: Billy Dooley.—Good.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

HORSE SHY: Edward E. Horton.—Better than most Horaces. Two reels.—Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—General patronage.

NIPTY NAGS: Jack Duffy. This one brought plenty of laughs. Two reels.—Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—General patronage.

OCEAN HUGS: A very funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Good news reel, but so old it is ancient history by now. I show it. One reel.—H. G. Slepmund, Jr., H. & S. theatre, Chandler, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SKATING HOME: Frances Lee.—First of "Comedians of a Famous Girl" series and hope that they all prove some. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

THE SOX EXCHANGE: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PATHE

CAUGHT IN THE KITCHEN: A good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE CHICKEN: Funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

DUMB WAITERS: A very good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT BRIDE: Marie Prevost.—Marie Prevost has a few followers who liked it. Poor draw. Two reels.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Saloon, Ida.—General patronage.

SHOULDER ARMS: Charles Chaplin.—(Rodeo) No. It might have been good ten years ago. The race in this one has been used so much that people know how to defeat it.—Philip Jackson, family theatre, Flemont, Ala.—General patronage.

SMITH'S CATALINA BOAT RACE: Good "Smith" comedy. Mary Ann Jackson is a tram.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmanzoo, Va.—General patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A PRINCE: Ben Turpin.—This is the only comedy that my patrons ever commented on. It must be good. Two reels.—J. D. Howard, Jr., Institute theatre, Oak Ridgo, N. C.—Small town patronage.

PUTTING PANTS ON PHILIP: Stan Laurel.—Fine comedy. Lots of laughs, so it must have pleased Two reels.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SMITTY AND PALS: Lloyd Hamilton.—Lloyd Hamilton is dull and gets this comedy a needed boost. Lloyd ranks with the best. Two reels.—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

SMITTY'S ARMY LIFE: Very funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HOOK AND LADDER NO. 9: Cornelius Keefe.—Fine picture of its kind. Six reels.—Jack Jackson, Jackson's theatre, Flemont, Ala.—General patronage.

MCCARIE AND BARNEY GOODE COMEDIES: Absolutely nothing to them. Not a grin in a container or a laugh in a carload.—E. C. Archam, Auditorium, Minnesota, Minn.—General patronage.

Mickey's Circus: Mickey McGuire.—Good kid comedy.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson's theatre, Flemont, Ala.—General patronage.

MONEY BALKS: Barney Google.—Not what I call a comedy. Would have been better in one-half reel or probably none at all.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson's theatre, Flemont, Ala.—General patronage.

HOW HIGH IS UP?: Three Fat Men.—Good, but as a whole don't care for them. Two reels.—Mrs. Hudla J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

HAPPY TRIOS: Three Fat Men.—Plenty of fun in this one. Two reels.—Ruford Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SILK Sock Hall: Al Cooke.—Pretty fair, as I think most of Cooke's comedies are, although this is by far not the best. Two reels.—A. R. Rynker, Rynker theatre, Hoosick, N. Y.—General patronage.

WAGES OF SYNTHETIC: Al Cooke.—Not much to it, as we got it too dear. Two reels.—Ruford Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

OSWALD CARTOONS: Oswald.—Good cartoon that pleased the kids. That's what they are for, so why shouldn't I show it?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson's theatre, Flemont, Ala.—General patronage.

TWENTY-THREE WASHINGTON SQUARE: Special cast.—This took fairly well.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Saloon, Ida.—General patronage.

WHOSE BABY: Arthur Lake.—Slipping. These started out with a bang, and now we merely have the explosion. I can't think of anything in this that could be objected to by narrow-minded patrons.—Rex theatre, Screenland theatre, Nevada, 0.—Small town patronage.

THE YANKIE CLIPPER: Oswald.—Average for this cartoon series, which have all been good so far. Good print.—Ruford Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

OSWALD SERIES: Krazy Cat.—So far these cartoon series have taken fairly well. One reel.—Oscar, Family theatre, Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—General patronage.

TAKING THE COUNT: Mike and Ike.—Just a fair cartoon.—Two reels.—Ruford Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

WHEN GEORGE HOPS: Very good, as are most of them.—Print not so good.—Carl L. Brown, Crystal theatre, Marshall, Mich.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL COMEDIES: Average about the worst in the big time field. No originality, though, Sidney Weeks is a good comedier.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

NEWLYWEDS HARD LUCK: Sunny McKee.—Pretty good Newlyweds comedy. We give the infant the place of honor, as he is really the whole show. Print good, but photography and lighting in this is not very good for us. Mostly rather dark. Two reels.—Ruford Duba, Screenland theatre, Nevada, 0.—Small town patronage.

ON DECK: "Let George Do It" series.—Good. Two reels.—Ruford Duba, Royal theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

WENDELL, N. C.—To the Editor: I read Mrs. Dunning's letter of March 19, and did not expect the same thing to happen to me so soon but it has. I have just played Erich Von Stroheim's "The Wedding March" by RKO Theatre Corp. and about thirteen of them wasted. About the only thing in the picture that tallied with the wonderful amount of advertising was in "its entirety an Erich Von Stroheim Production." It certainly was, and I lost plenty on it too. The salesman played it up highly to me and Bill, all the gross copy was the same. I was badly oversold and put out quite a bit of extra advertising.

My crowd the first night was pretty good, their knockers brought my second house down to far below par, the third and last night I ran it was almost an entire failure. By the way, have you ever noticed that every new stunt and novelty like so well. I surely wish he had "looked-it-up" so it never could have gone to Wendell. I have a few more specials booked and if they turn out like the one, I never expect to run another Paramount special again. I played the "Har- vester," an FBO picture, two days last week as a test and it grossed more than I did on "The Wedding March." I notice that Mr. Service does not have one good word for "Abraham Lincoln." Going to that fact I expect it to be one of the best I have shown a long while.

I understand that Stroheim has only produced one picture that has ever been seen by them. If any salesman ever calls his name to me again I think I will run him out of my office. Man, I'm hot and you wouldn't think if you had been oversold as much as I was.

I am enclosing my check for the continuance of the contract. As I gave no run for my show without it I could not without my advertising matter—G. H. WRIGHT, Jr., Star Theatre, Wendell, N. C.

Hang On, T. O. Service!
SALMON, IDAHO.—To the Editor: Whoopie! What's this raging my old partner in Crime, T. O. Service, all about anyhow? Hold on tight, there's a much larger chap still filling my spurs preparatory to a whirlwind gallop east to your rescue if these darned dumb exhibitors don't stop pestering you. I'll give them their work for a while and then the steady wind, and a few more of the hard old ridin' bunch and collectively we'll put up a ratatouille good fight in your behalf. So hang on! Any chump of an exhibitor ought to know by this time that you're the best darned reporter on plays in the whole star spangled banner of states barring none, that's the facts. You tell us the truth, plain, unvarnished, and to the point. If the play is good you say so— if poorly you tell it, and that's all we exhibitors want to know, and if you don't decide for ourselves whether the type is good for our particular little old burg or not. For instance, when we wrote your long-assed article on that gosh all mighty good play. So it was, so it was. I booked it, not because I thought it would pay, because that type of play never pays here, but because I wanted to show the kids and wanted to see it, too, you bet. When you said it was A. 1. I ordered it up, well knowing I would.

That any exhibitor would buy it because you said it was good and run regardless of whether that type of play suited his crowd would be rarin' to go, T. O., and if any more guys start throwing bricks we're going to have a real round up the bunch and we'll come flying—PHILIP RAN0, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Perhaps The City Had 2 Tales; Who Can Tell?
ALBANY, Feb. 26.—Under the direction of the Parent-Teachers' association of Troy the Troy theatre entertained a group of 100 boys and girls on February 22. at a special showing of "A Tale of Two Cities." A boy appeared at the box office and inquired if the "Tales With Two Tails" was being shown.

Proper Exploitation
ASHLAND, ALA.—To the Editor: There has been some complaint from exhibitors throughout the country that some stars were losing their drawing power in their theatres. Of course, it is true that all stars make some pictures that do not measure up to their usual standard, but in many cases the fault was the exhibitor's, for not exploiting the picture properly.

Some of the best stars in pictures today have been severely criticized by exhibitors, although one of the leading experts in their criticisms have gone over big for others. Naturally, the question arises as to why the decline in drawing power of any particular star.

My answer in a number of cases would be this. When a star rises to the top many exhibitors try to take advantage of their increasing fan base by using amount placed in placing of a top position, and expect his or her pictures to continue to break records just because he or she may be more popular. Nothing could be more foolish than this. Manufacturers of nationally advertised merchandise, instead of curtailing their advertising, are constantly increasing it, although sales of the article in particular are increasing daily.

If any business in the world thrives on advertising, the movie business is foremost in this and instead of panning a star because business drops off on his or her pictures, check up on yourself and see if your advertising on this particular star is what it should be, if not, then make it so, and I believe most cause for complaint will be removed.

And, I would like also to say a word about taking advantage of special features for small-town exhibitors. Instead of worrying about what we should and could do about "Audiences," forget them and consider like the devil with what we have, and within a little while the big houses will be all fitted up, and then they will have to get up an outfit that we can use. I don't think they need the equipment and increased rentals, etc., will make up any money we will lose in the mean- time. Wake up, fellows, let's go after busi- ness, and not wait for it to drop in on us.— E. F. INGRAM, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.

What of Television?
MECHANICSBURG, OHIO.—To the Editor: Is not entertainment from television show business will be of as much importance as stock market ticker service.

Western Union, Postal, or Bell will have such service to offer every theatre in the country? Should such service be looked for if the "television" rooms are any way correct, before long?

Machines leased to pick up from the air the broadcast events should be expected instead of popular circuit service.

Is this of the most importance to your read- ers and advertisers, or is there no real basis to create this excitement? "Automotive Industries" is a trade paper that does not hesitate to print information and you note this policy has the effect that every industry wishes was working on it—R. TULLEY, Television Theatre, Mechanicsburgh, Ohio.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

The State-Lake theatre is to make a new variation in its policy in an effort to find just the right arrangement to attract to the box office the tinkling discs, which have been a bit elusive since the rise of pictures made vaudeville less sizzling as a draw. Tentative plans call for Pathé's "The Goddess Girl" to go into the house March 17, with Photophone, and because of the footage, several acts of vaudeville will be pulled.

And thereafter, the length of the stage bill will be determined by the length of the picture, for awhile, at least. Otherwise, according to Mort Singer, Chicago RKO circuit manager, the policy will be as usual.

Marshall Nelan, the director, was in Chicago last Friday, enroute to New York. He screened "Empire," in which Mary Brian, James Kirkwood and Lloyd Hamilton are chief members of the cast.

Lupe Velez, the Mexican beauty who plays in United Artists' "Lady of the Pavements," made a personal appearance at the United Artists theatre on Washington's Birthday, in connection with the showing of the picture. Miss Velez sang, danced and talked a bit to the audience. D. W. Griffith, who directed, was in town for the opening.

Brooke Johns is gone from the Oriental, after a successful sojourn there. Jack Osterman has replaced Johns. The new M. C. flew from Detroit to Chicago with a few of Chicago newspaper picture "critics."

Mrs. Tom North and her mother, Mrs. Eva Bemiss, are in Columbus Memorial hospital suffering from severe injuries received last Thursday, when the automobile in which they were riding on the outer drive, was struck by another machine.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Halper at the Michael Reese hospital, January 28. Halper is the owner of the Irving theatre on Chicago avenue.

Clyde Eckhardt is back at his office after making a trip to key cities.

Louis Abramson, brother of Joe, genial secretary of the Chicago Film Board of Trade shows signs of becoming a great film salesman. Louis had his first chance at selling Fox pictures last week.

Tom Gilliam, assistant manager of First National, returned to Chicago last week, after spending two weeks in New Orleans. He was accompanied by his wife.

Barney Balaban, secretary of Balaban & Katz, procured a license in Miami Beach last week to wed Mrs. Tillie Urovk of Chicago.

The Elston theatre is now operated by Louis Breckan. The Elston is a 700-seat house formerly owned by Gus Stathis of the Cosiner theatres.

Brumberg Named World Wide Manager

William "Bill" Brumberg, who has been connected with Columbia for over a year, has been appointed manager of the Chicago office of World Wide Pictures. Bill will take over the new office on March 4, the very day another great inauguration takes place. Brumberg was film salesman for Columbia and recently was appointed country sales manager, before that he was with Universal.

have no news from the Pathe office this week.

George Wilson is back on the job. The Universal salesman sprained several ribs in a fall.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Hansen of the Jefferson theatre, Goshen, Ind., left last Monday on a six weeks' vacation in Miami.

The Apollo theatre in Princeton, Ill., was sold by Myles Fox to Carl Pearson, operator of theatres in Rushville, Ill. The Orpheum theatre in Princeton, which was formerly operated by B. Jaffries, also has been taken over by Pearson.

Among the exhibitors that visited Film Row last week, were Carl Pearson, Myles Fox, Louis Cocherety of the Strand theatre in South Bend, Oscar Lambatte of the Mishawaka theatre in Mishawaka, and John Miller of Woodstock.

Frank A. Kennedy, from the home office of RKO, was at the local exchange last week. The RKO exchange is having a new sign, reading "Radio Pictures." Ain't that something?

C. McDonough, formerly connected with the Auditorium theatre in Libertyville, III., is now selling DeForest Phonofilms in the Indianapolis and Indiana territory.

Returning from New York, after having a conference with Harry Lee DeForest, Harold Siegel reports that offices will be opened in St. Louis and Kansas City.

Another salesman has been added to the DeForest staff. G. R. Jernaine, formerly Blazing and why shouldn't he? L. V. Kuttnauer, distributor of Photophone in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan and Ohio, reports that with the end of February, Photophone will have closed its banner month. (Herald-World Photo.)

Saul Goldman, use-to-be booker for Gotham pictures, is now operating the New Lyceum theatre at 39th Street and Cottage Grove Avenue.

"Weary River," First National Richard Barthelmess picture, was given its Chicago premiere at the Roosevelt theatre on February 22. "Weary River" is the picture in which Barthelmess is heard singing, talking and playing the piano.

The versatile Tom North, who in his spare time sells great quantities of Pathé-Van Beuren shorts to the Middle West, and who in such time as remains, writes pieces for the Morning Mail, had a notable literary contribution in that little known but interesting journal last week. To read it was to understand at once why Tom is a great film salesman.

Fire at St. Paul Garrick House, Damages $4,000

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. PAUL, MINN., Feb. 26.—Fire damaged the Garrick theatre to the extent of $4,000 and because the theatre was empty at that time, the flames, which are believed to have started under the stairway leading to the balcony, made considerable headway before the alarm was sent in. The Grand theatre, Fairbault, Minn., which was destroyed by fire a short time ago, will be replaced by a $150,000 structure, according to Finkelnburg and Ruben. The new theatre is to be an atmospheric house, Moorish in design.

Moulin Rouge

Splendid Picture, Well Done
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

If this first release of World Wide Pictures is a fair sample of what may be expected in the way of British importations by the J. D. Williams concern American producers are going to find some real competition from abroad.

"Moulin Rouge" has just about everything from a box-office standpoint. It is not so foreign as most of these imported pictures and it is produced on a lavish scale in all the natural surroundings called for in the story. It is the work of E. A. Dupont.

The synchronization by R C A Photophone is done by both the film and disc process and is as good as the picture. The score is by Joseph Littau of Roxy's and the recording by the R C A Photophone Orchestra. The picture serves to introduce Olga Chekova, European star, and she is a real artist, good to look at and with an abundance of screen talent.

The story has the background of Paris theatrical life. It shows the famous Paris-New York Revue, popular with all visitors to Paris. It is gorgeously mounted, with costumes that will have a tremendous appeal to the feminine movie goers, and a bevy of beauties that will have as great an appeal to the masculine fans. In addition it has thrills, suspense, heart interest and just about everything else that is necessary.

The romance may be a bit far-fetched, but it is not unnatural for a youth to become enamoured with a famed stage beauty even if she is his prospective mother-in-law. That is the story. Here is the scion of one of the wealthiest families in Paris who is to marry the daughter of this darling of the theatre. The girl is just back from school and brings her sweetheart with her to the theatre to see the mother perform. The mother is the toast of Paris. The youth seated in a stage box becomes infatuated with her. Her infatuation becomes desperate love. The father of the youth objects to the marriage to the daughter of the star, so the latter makes a personal appeal to the father and he capitulates. Then the devoted mother finds out the true circumstances, that she is the one the youth loves. Here is a powerful situation with the doting mother caring only for the happiness of her daughter, the daughter desperately in love with the youth and the latter thinking all his love is for the mother. It is all logically and satisfactorily worked out in a splendid portrayal of Paris night life.

Drawing Power: It is a picture that should appeal to all classes. The story is good, lavishly produced and has all the necessary elements to click at any box-office. It lends itself readily to exploitation.

What are the Four Big Bets for 1929?

(No. 625—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation)

THERE ARE FOUR GREAT BIG OUTSTANDING BOX-OFFICE BETS FOR the year of 1929 and Universal has all four of them!

NO. 1 IS “SHOW BOAT.” THIS IS SO PACKED WITH BOX-OFFICE NAMES and values that it staggers the imagination! Edna Ferber’s best-selling novel, plus the cream of the cream of Ziegfeld’s hugely successful stage version of “Show Boat,” plus Jerome Kern’s music, plus Oscar Hammerstein’s lyrics, plus Helen Morgan’s singing, plus Jules Bledsoe’s singing, plus the Plantation Singers, plus Harry Pollard’s direction, plus Laura La Plante, plus Joseph Schildkraut and so on and on and on. No such piece of property has ever been owned by any producer in the moving picture business. No such box-office values have ever been dreamed of before.

NO. 2 IS “BROADWAY.” THIS PLAY ESTABLISHED NEW RECORDS FOR dramatic successes in New York. Universal was the successful bidder for the motion picture rights in competition with practically all other producers. So great was the envy of some of the unsuccessful bidders that they have attempted to cash in on the fame of “Broadway” by appropriating bits of its business or its atmosphere or even its title. But, like all imitations, they will fall to the ground, deceiving neither you nor your patrons. There is only one “Broadway” and Universal has it. Paul Fejos, supervised by Carl Laemmle Jr., has wrought another masterpiece and it will be one of the mainstays of your business this year.

NO. 3 IS “THE KING OF JAZZ.” THIS MEANS THE INCOMPARABLE PAUL Whiteman, himself, and his incomparable orchestra of symphonic jazzers. Universal was the only company which could lure this famous man and his organization into the movies. With a story so gripping that even the silent version will be a tremendous sensation. Imagine how much punch is added by the fact that Mr. Whiteman and his entire orchestra will appear in the synchronized version. The millions who have heard of Whiteman or have listened to his phonograph records, can now see and hear him in a great picture.

NO. 4 IS “THE MINSTREL SHOW.” THIS PICTURE IS BUILT AROUND the famous Eddie Leonard and other Minstrel men whose names are a household word. It is modern, snappy and jammed full of the kind of up-to-date material which the present-day movie audience demands. It will set a new pace for all other producers to follow. When I am ready to give you the rest of the details regarding this production, you will be delighted.

THESE, I REPEAT, ARE THE FOUR OUTSTANDING PICTURES FOR THE year of 1929 and they are all under the banner of one company—the Universal. Four such pictures from the whole industry during one season would be a good record, but coming from one company alone they will establish a new era in showmanship. If you cannot book all of them because your competitor has beaten you to it, at least get what you can!

ADVERTISEMENTS

"When a Writer Goes Movie"

MR. GEORGE JEAN NATHAN weeps a few well-chosen tears for "the writer gone movie" in the current issue of the American Mercury. He sheds precious salt over the contention that when a writer writes in one way or another for the films, then he is ruined as an artist.

"Almost without exception," writes Mr. Nathan, "such men and women, whatever their previous eminence or capabilities, are found to have gone down the chute. One speculates as to the cause.

"There seems to be no sound or even theoretical reason why a competent writer should not get easy money for himself by turning out a piece of scenario junk, nor does there seem to be any good reason why a man should not be able to mingle for a spell with the morons and idiots of Hollywood and yet remain uncontaminated. There are morons and idiots outside of Hollywood that even the best writer is occasionally forced to mingle with and they make no impression upon him and do him no noticeable harm.

"But the fact remains that a writer who undertakes to lend his talents to the films, however briefly, presently finds himself with his artistic pants down.

"The only reason, I believe, is not so difficult to catch by the tail as it appears to be. No genuinely first-rate writer can imagine himself writing for the movies; the apparently reputable writers who go in for movie work have a trace of shoddiness under their flashing surfaces and the movies bring that shoddy out, encourage it and develop it. This bringing out, encouragement and development may be unfelt, even unobserved, by such writers, but it is not long before it contrives to make the shoddy permanently triumphant over the writer's better attributes and qualities."

Mr. Nathan may be ignored. It would be easy to deal sarcastically with him, laugh at him, and leave him in a position quite as inelegant as that in which he so impishly portrays his friends, the writers. One might even consider being angry at him, but that seems rather a noble sentiment for this tiny affront; one shouldn't go hunting gnats with grenades.

Let us see, instead, if there is any truth in the contention which he has rewritten here for the thousandth time to fill the last column and a half of his clinical notes in the Mercury. Let us be open-minded, as he has declined to be, and see if there isn't the germ of an idea here that might be helpful to pictures.

Let's go out and hire a great writer for motion pictures. Let's get Tolstoy, or shall we say a Thomas Hardy, or an Anatole France. Because these men have written great books is that by any means assurance that they will write great motion pictures? When Tolstoy's best manuscript was finished he had written a great book, even before it went to the printer and the binder and the bookseller.

Furthermore, a great book by Tolstoy is by no means a great motion picture; I am divulging no secret when I say that many scripts are made difficult to render into pictures because they represent psychological problems. Books of deep philosophical content, such as any by France, cannot be made into great motion pictures. Conversely, a great motion picture would quite conceivably make a very bad book, very bad writing.

Writers of books and motion pictures are working in different media and there is no good reason why a writer of great books should automatically be a writer of great motion pictures. The one deals in deep rounded thought, its style expressed in words. The other deals in sharp edged action, its style made manifest in pictures.

Motion pictures, my dear young George (and I see no reason why you shouldn't hitch up your artistic panties by this time) are not created by writers. Motion pictures require a certain amount of cooperation. Writer, actors, technicians, and above all directors, must cooperate to make a great motion picture. The script of a great picture is by no means a great picture, as the manuscript of a great book is in itself, without further aid and ado, a great book.

Here's a tip to critics who want their work made easy for them: lay off writers and fill your columns on directors. After all, they are the boys to be held responsible.

One Bold Stroke

BY his spectacular acquisition of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Mr. William Fox has by one bold stroke made himself a master figure of the industry.

Always the possessor of a great producing organization and an extraordinary string of theatres, Mr. Fox has made his position of eminence doubly sure. He has added some of the finest stars and directorial genius in the industry to his legions. He has added some of the strongest theatres in the country to his string. That he has added to his power as a master of motion pictures goes without saying.

Mr. Fox is to be congratulated for the vision, the energy, the consummate courage which have enabled him to make his path to the top. The industry is to be congratulated that this leader, for all his personal power, all his wealth, all his aggrandizement, has the future of motion pictures close at heart. He knows that his own extraordinary progress is inevitably bound up with the extraordinary progress and the amazing success of the motion picture itself.
Fox Buys Loew's-MGM; Assets Now 230 Million; Industry's Largest Deal

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, March 5.—William Fox successfully closed the biggest deal in the history of the motion picture industry here last week when he purchased the controlling interest in Loew's, Inc., including the ownership of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The deal was concluded with such a brilliant show of power and such dramatic suddenness that it left the industry amazed. Indeed, negotiations were concluded with such startling success that news of Fox's achievement leaked out before either he or any of the Loew officials was ready to admit the deal was on.

Schenck Remains Loew's Head

A formal statement given out by Fox at the Roxy theatre yesterday, said: "Fox Theatres Corporation has purchased a substantial block of the common stock of Loew's Inc. The transaction was concluded by Mr. Fox on behalf of Fox Theatres Corporation, acquiring the shares held by the widow and family of the late Marcus Loew and those of a group intimately associated with the management of Loew's, which now gives Fox Theatres Corporation a definite position in Loew's Inc., which owns also the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation.

"It is the intention that Loew's, Inc., shall operate as a separate unit in the amusement field. Nicholas M. Schenck will remain president and David Bernstein vice president and treasurer. The officials and executives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer theatres, studios, branch offices, etc., in foreign countries as well as in America will continue to operate separately. No change in management, policy of operation or production at the California studios is contemplated.

"The distinguished production achievements and the splendid business conduct of Loew's, Inc., is acknowledged in the amusement world, and its policies and personnel in the domestic and foreign fields will be continued by Fox Theatres Corporation.

Improved Pictures Seen

"Fox Theatres Corporation's present associations, augmented by its new affiliation, will be productive of a vastly improved quality of screen entertainment, bringing to audiences throughout the world, operatic, musical, dramatic, audible news reels and a variety of entertainment in the educations, industrial and theatrical fields, through the medium of Movietone, the sound on film method developed by the Fox Case Corporation, an associated company of Fox Theatres Corporation."

Representing Fox interests were William Fox, Winfield Sheehan and John

Theatres owned outright or controlled by the William Fox Organization now have reached the stupendous total of 794 by the addition of 175 Loew houses in 21 states through the deal just closed. These Loew holdings are in Alabama, California, Canada, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and Washington.

As noted in the March 2 issue of the Herald-World, Fox theatres totaled 619 before the merger with Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Successive steps which raised the holdings to this figure were the acquisition of the Wesco and Widwesco circuits, the Poli chain, expansion in Philadelphia, a number of deluxe building projects and the deal for more than 200 theatres in the New York area.
Zanft. Loew's was represented by Nicholas Schenck and David Bernstein. Schenck said he expected to continue as president of Loew's, Inc., for many years.

Price Reported $125 a Share

The exact terms of the sale did not become known with the news of its consummation. In the open market Fox purchased large blocks of Loew common stock, of which there are 1,400,000 shares outstanding. In a private deal he obtained the stock held by Mrs. Carrie Loew, widow of the great Marcus Loew who founded the company; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of the company; Arthur M. Loew, vice president; David M. Loew, a director; David Bernstein, vice president and treasurer; and Louis B. Mayer, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in charge of production. The price is understood to have been $125 a share.

William Fox thus obtained—on the 25th anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture industry—control of one of the pillars of the film, worth at least $110,000,000. His Fox Film Corporation is easily worth $60,000,000. His Fox Theatres Corporation lists another $60,000,000 in assets.

Fox now has assets, in round numbers, amounting to $230,000,000. This gives him the eminence of a master in the industry, for the vast Paramount organization listed a lesser sum, $156,926,967, as its assets in a balance sheet dated Dec. 31, 1927.

Why William Fox, already the possessor of a powerful and successful producing organization, already the owner of the extraordinary total of 619 theatres, should want to add to his holdings makes a neat question. The answer seems threefold.

Pre-eminent in Industry

By the acquisition of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox first makes himself pre-eminent in the industry. In the second place he eliminates a strong competitor. In the third place he enlists under his own vigorous banner some of the greatest stars and the finest directorial talent in the industry.

Furthermore, by his purchase of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox won a stiff fight, and the history of this man in the motion picture industry makes it obvious that he loves the fire and the excitement of battle, loves the smell of powder. Fox defeated the Warner Brothers and their powerful hankers, Goldman, Sachs and Company, who were in the thick of the struggle for control of Loew's until the last moment.

Just what Fox will do now that he is in control of Loew's is a matter for the future to determine. He must make some disposition of the following:

175 Loew houses, in 21 states, which brings Fox's total up to 794 theatres.

A producing organization with such directors as Harry Beaumont, James Cruze, Cecil B. DeMille, King Vidor and others, and such outstanding stars as John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, Renee Adoree, Marion Davies, William Haines, Buster Keaton, Aileen Pringle, Norma Shearer.

Plants of great value and importance in New York and in Hollywood.

At present there is no indication of just what William Fox plans to do. It may be assumed, however, that in time he will merge his own organization with the Loew, thereby effecting economies that may run as high as 10 per cent.

What of Those 200 Independent Houses?

One other factor assumes importance; and that concerns the purchase of 200-odd independent theatres in Greater New York. When Fox first plunged into negotiations for Loew he sidetracked the independent deal, as he did everything else. It was reported that auditors were going over the books of the independent houses with extreme care, but as a matter of fact Fox was too busy to do anything but keep after the Loew purchase.

Now, there is a possibility that the deal for the independents will not go through, though both sides claim that everything is all set except for the last few details. Fox has acquired extraordinary strength in New York, including the great Capitol theatre, rival of his own Roxy, and 68 others.

All in all, Fox's deal is probably the biggest yet seen in the motion picture industry. It invites further mergers and purchases and it is not unlikely that 1929 will go down in the history of the motion picture industry, as in many others, as the golden year of the era of mergers.
Called a "Nut" When He Bought First House, Fox Shows 'Em How

When Brooklyn Theatre Was Full, B. O. Registered $7.50—Fought General Film Company Down to Defeat—Pioneered in Many Ways
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—William Fox has consummated a deal which makes him the biggest theatre owner in the world. His name is on the tongue of every person connected with the motion picture industry.

"When I first announced that I was going to show motion pictures in a little Brooklyn theatre I was put down as the craziest man in the city. I was called a nut who thought he could delude people into thinking pictures would move," William Fox said not long ago.

"But after a few adventurers had risked five cents apiece to see a few feet of film which showed the leaves of a tree trembling in the breeze I had to call the police reserves to keep the crowds in line."

Maybe. Maybe not. At any rate the little house at 700 Broadway, Brooklyn, which did not even have a floor and seated only 146 people, where the price of admission was one nickel, was the first step along the path which now stand the Roxy and some 681 other motion picture houses not including the Loew interests just acquired.

That was twenty-five years ago.

Born in Hungary in 1879
William Fox was born in Turin, Hungary, in 1879, of poor but hardworking parents who, a few months after his birth, scraped together sufficient funds to emigrate to America, even then the land of opportunity for the down trodden of Europe.

The child's musings and militant jaw were matched at home and incandescent among the raucous school children of the lower East Side of New York. His dreamy side provoked them to aggravation and his fighting spirit sent them scuttling to their parents.

East Side life was then much as it is now, lots of squaller and very little fun. How the Fox family got along is not a matter of record. As soon as he was old enough to leave the public school, young William got a job as a cloth shiriner at $3 a week.

A few years later he started his own clothing establishment at $17 a week. In those days that was a lot of money. Fox got married and raised a family. It is said that he was getting two dollars too much as it was.

Bought Brooklyn Theatre
"He may have been right," Fox will tell you. "But his appraisal of me made me decide to quit my job. I had lived modestly and had managed to save about $1,600. I pooled it with the resources of a couple of other fellows and together we bought the Brooklyn theatre. We charged five cents admission and when the theatre was full we had $7.50 in the box office."

From that day until he bought the Wescow chain William Fox fought the film trust, an organization bent on driving out individual competition. When he started out he wrote to exhibitors under the name of the Greater New York Film Rental Company, he was told by the Loew Film Company to fall in line. The pugnacious jaw set in a firmer line and the film trust was fought and exposed so ruthlessly that the Government stepped in and dissolved it.

It is now hardly a memory even with those in the film field, and motion pictures leaped forward magnificently when freed of its throttling influence. That is just one phase of Fox's pioneering, prompted by his vision and his valor.

Other Pioneering Deeds
Here are other pioneering deeds:

Taking over large legitimate theatres at an early stage for the pictures, and scoring a coup by acquiring the Dewey, the Gotham and the old Academy of Music.

Introducing scientific methods of bookkeeping and management into the casual amusement business.

Developing his own production forces to supply his own theatres, resulting in the two mammoth studios in New York and Hollywood, including Movietone City, with the first sound proof stages specially designed for the purpose.

Fostering the foreign market with exchanges in Europe, South America and elsewhere.

Getting control of Movietone.

Humanitarian Sense
Amid his affluence Fox has retained a keen humanitarian sense derived from his own harrowed vicissitudes. This has been shown in numerous charitable donations, vast but never revealed, and by his chairmanship during the war of the theatrical committees for Red Cross and relief drives. Another aspect of his philanthropic spirit was revealed in "Over the Hedges" and "The Man from Hollywood".

In earlier successes which he is proud to recall, relieved the distress of the aged and the imprisoned, as shown in actual statistics of poorhouses and penitentiaries.

It was this same spirit, according to his friends, which inspired him to produce "Four Sons" to promote "The Exalted Flapper," and "Mother Machree" to bring sympathy for the downtrodden.

Hollywood Gives Sheehan Will Take MGM Studio Rule
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—The production center has been stunned more by the news of the Fox-Loew stock deal than any other movement, according to the trade. Employes of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are preparing for a general reorganization which they anticipate but which may never materialize.

Likewise while the M G M people are preparing for the ax to fall, numerous independents are to be buying for advance-ments and promotions.

Of the 40 "agents" in the business 24 were counted in a casual stroll through the Curver City lot Saturday morning. They had been called, it is presumed, by nervous clients whose contracts are expiring soon.

Report Sheehan to Take Charge

Reports of expected changes have kept Hollywood toadies busy in the past several days. Winfield Sheehan, it is gossiped, will take entire charge of the studio. Mr. Sheehan has not and will continue to attend to his present executive duties.

It has been rumored about the Keith Warner, and newly assigned head of Movietone production, will assume an added line of responsibility at Curver City. But it is also reported that the company will maintain their own individuality and that the publicity staffs will be kept intact.

The subject is under debate in all restau-rants, theatre foyers, hotel lobbies and offices here.

Higherups in East

Many of the higherups of Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Warner Brothers are reported absent from their desks and are either in New York or between there and here.

which Associated Exhibitors was taken over by Pathe.

Number of Companies Merged

By 1927 the total number of oldline com-panies had been reduced to 10, a marked contrast to the following: Educational, First National, F B O, Fox, M G M, Paramount, Pathe, United Artists, Universal and Warner Brothers. First Division was a newcomer in the field of the independents. But in 1926 had appeared the Vitaphone, followed in 1927 by Fox Movietone, and the beginnings of a complete change in the complex of produc-tion had begun. The motion picture industry lost its voice.

The year 1928 was to see a tremendous in-crease in the use of sound, with a great num-ber of affiliations with the Western Electric and subsidaries. Electrical Research Products, in the way of equipment for the making of "sound" pictures, as well as development of new devices by other corporations. And R C A Photophone entered the field.

Contrast This with 1922!

And now, with 1929 scarcely under way, we find, for contrast with the foregoing list of so-called oldline companies in 1922, the following mergers:

Columbia, Educational, First National (under Warner Brothers control), Fox (including Metro), Loew and Loew, Pathe, RCA and Radio-King Orpheum, Tiffany-Stahl, United Artists, Universal, World Wide Pictures, and Warner Brothers (including First National, the Stanley Company of America, the Vitaphone Corporation, and, to be seen to the not-so-long-ago days, Vitagraph).

And the question is: Next?
Foreign Producers Aim Blows At U.S. Films to Get in Market

Many Overseas Make Poor Pictures to Satisfy Quotas and Obtain Permits for American Product—Yet 200 Fine Imported Productions Were Shown in U. S. in Past Year

By DOUGLAS FOX

NEW YORK, March 5.—Almost all the attacks on the American film industry from abroad are inaugurated by foreign producers who want to get their product into the American market but cannot make the grade because what they have to offer simply lacks the proper entertainment value, the Herald-World learned today after a survey of the foreign situation.

It is an established fact that the American market is wide open for any film of value. Witness the popularity of “Variety,” “The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari” and other fine imported pictures. More than 200 foreign films were exhibited here last year, the proof of the pudding. The only qualification for imported pictures is that they must have the proper entertainment value. Most of them have not because of the policy of many of the foreign producer-exhibitors of making cheap films in order to obtain permits to show American pictures in their theatres.

There is no doubt that distributors here would rather buy an established foreign product for a good price than put their money into an uncertain production of their own. Hence the criticism of the American industry on its own industry, simply amounts to the squall of the fox who could not get his grapes and so pronounced them sour.

Status in England Changes

This condition is somewhat changed in England. Last year the British trade was reviling the American product. This year it has come to life and is turning in its criticism on its own film industry, saying all the things that we could have said a year ago but didn’t.

England has overproduced, in opinion of close observers. England has gone at it wholesale in an effort to beat out foreign competition. England last year had no idea of selling her stuff at home and the Colonies have been unwilling to buy it. She has seemed to make a true “international picture.” American films, generally speaking, have an appeal in every country, are shown in almost every country. Once the British films are more or less limited to the British Isles simply by virtue of their content.

There is lots of money in the British film industry. Members of the trade have admitted that their sales were unlimited. If England makes pictures, and they undoubtedly will, that appeal to the entire English speaking race, she will be well on the road to prosperity.

Must Find Out for Herself

When England makes pictures that are adapted to colonial use she probably will make them equally well adapted for international use. Bit by bit she has got to find it out for herself. There is no earthly use in having the same kind of pictures that should not be just as good as ours. With the silent film England always had the excuse that they were handicapped because of the war when her industry was at a standstill and the Americans went on learning to make better pictures.

Sound New Everywhere

This plea will avail nothing with sound. It is not even worth making. Representatives of American concerns are in England; England can get all the best sound equipment immediately if she wants to. England has her own inventors and the industry is on the right track. It is up to the most enterprising to come out on top.

Only a few British theatres have been wired for sound and, so far as could be learned, they have mainly shown American pictures. Moving pictures and does in this medium in the next few months will be a matter of great interest to all American distributors.

German B. O. Drops 20 Per Cent

German box office receipts fell 20 per cent in 1928. That was largely because the German films fell down in their own market in accordance with the policy previously described. Fifteen British films crept in as against two in 1927. Meanwhile 215 of the 520 pictures shown in Germany during 1928 were of American make.

German producers found that if they made a very cheap film of their own they could get a permit to show an American picture on which they could make money. The public got tired of German productions and preferred to patronize those of other countries.

And American distributors have quite enough poor stuff at home to contend with without bringing in mediocrities from abroad. Which partly explains the sour grapes pose.

Much the same situation exists in France. The Frenchman must first obtain a permit for a French production from the Cinema Commission before he can show a foreign picture.

And to show how little he is willing to spend on his own pork, all but eight of the first film importations submitted for permits were turned down by the Commission.

Italy has a 10 cent quota law which has never been enforced because Italian production is too negligible to warrant enforcement. If American pictures were cut down, there would be little film entertainment in Italy.

No Quota in Scandinavia

Scandinavia has no quota law and on an average 400 American films are shown there every year as against half a dozen Scandinavian ones. One company, the Svenska, has a monopoly and owns almost all the theatres worth mentioning there. It is not a large business. The most notable one of recent times was “Charles XII,” a heavy, glittering, historical pageant in fourteen reels which was great for the Swedish people but too cum-

Richardson's Sound Text Book Will Be Ready Very Shortly

It will interest the entire industry, but particularly the exhibitor and projectionist, to know that F. H. Richardson, Projection Editor of “Better Theatres,” has been working for a year past upon a sound supplement to the “Bluebook of Projection,” to be published by the Chalmers Publishing Company, New York City.

There has been demand that this work be hurried, but Richardson has always refused to rush publication at the expense of either completeness or accuracy. The work is now nearing completion. He expects to have it ready for release very soon.

In this work Richardson has had the active cooperation of the engineering departments of Electrical Research Products Company, Fox Case Movietone, R.C.A Photophone, DeForest Photofilm, Powers Cinophone and others, besides the vast available fund of exact information he gathered while he was for almost a year editor of Movietone Bulletin.

The sound articles, which have already appeared in his department in “Better Theatres” are another proof that Richardson has a wide grasp of the whole subject of sound projection, and the equipment by means of which it is accomplished.

This supplement will be in the form of a third volume to the “Bluebook of Projection.” It will be bound the same as the Bluebook, in semi-leather, and will be available from the book department of Exhibitors Herald-World. There will undoubtedly be a considerable rush for this edition, so it may be well for those interested to send in their orders at once. They will then be notified as to the time of release and the price in time to get their orders in at the lowest possible price.

800 Pupils Become "Walking, Talking Ads" for Sound by Campaign

Woodin at Wellsboro Puts Over Herald-World Drive Suggestion and Does It Pay? Read What Happened!

GET the schools hunting for a word for talking pictures "and they will send out every boy and girl as a walking, talking advertisement for your theatre," says Larry A. Woodin, manager of the Arcadia theatre at Wellsboro, Pa. Woodin knows, because he adopted the campaign detailed by the HERALD-WORLD in the issue of December 22, and eight hundred pupils took an active part in Woodin's application.

"TALK about publicity," writes Woodin. "Every school kid in this town knows more about synchronized pictures than most exhibitors do. They've dug into all the facts obtainable on sound pictures and they're the talk of the town here.

"Again I want to say, exhibitors: get the schools hunting for a word and they will send out every boy and girl as a walking, talking advertisement for your theatre.

In sending in the lists of names suggested by the pupils, as well as the winning essay, Woodin calls attention to the fact that he as yet does not have sound equipment and the majority of the words were coined by students who never had seen a sound picture.

"It was the opinion of the judges of the contest held here," he writes, "that Sound Picture "The Movies" (Sears is a junior in the high school) was the name to designate any kind of synchronized picture, the term to be preceded by what type of sound picture that might be, namely Vitaphone Sound Picture, a Movietone Sound Picture, or a Photophone Sound Picture.

Leave It to Public

"The judges decided that as the 'movies' were named 'motion pictures' and branded 'movies' by the public, let the public brand the sound pictures which they may. But it is their opinion that the name Sound Picture would stick because it is easy to say and says it all.

"More power to you in your hunt for a word. Eight hundred students here did their best. When it was all over, the simple, easy-to-say, self-explaining term, Sound Picture, won."

Here is the list of names suggested by the pupils:

Sound Picture, Phone Picture, Cinephone, Movietone, Musical Phone, Photophone, Vivavoxx, Senatore, Reptitone, Talkie Sound, Movietone, Wonderland, Speakie, Auditone, Motox, Audimovie, Singaphone, Voiceosp, Mimic Movie, Sound Movie, Viewtine, Moviesound, Telectors, Phonologs, Radiographatone, Cameraphone, Sceneand, Jolytone, Metax, Phonophoto, Audiphone, Aumopic, Audion, Soundaphone.

Not only did the campaign bring home a close interest in the motion picture theatre to the pupils participating, but it also attracted the attention of the entire population of Wellsboro. The newspapers kept everyone posted on the contest—and so kept the theatre interests before them. A full newspaper column was devoted to the contest on the day the judges awarded the prize—a six-month seasons pass—to Miss Shauer. Miss Shauer's increased patronage will meet the cost of that ticket many times.

Newspaper Details Contest

"The Sound Picture" Herald and Motion Picture World, the leading trade journal of the motion picture industry, has been and still is conducting a campaign to try and find a suitable brand-word (for all new synchronized pictures," the article stated in part. "The public has already given them various names, all of which are misleading and inaccurate.

"Such names as Vitaphone and Movietone are trade names which apply to only one certain company's product. None of the names such as these should be used to designate any type of synchronized picture, which is a picture with sounds of all kind reproduced when the picture is shown at the exact moment that the sound is seen to be taking place in the picture and so well done that the audience is unaware of the fact that the sound and picture are two separate things. These sounds may be talking, singing, laughter, noises, effects, or any kind of sound.

"The essay will be forwarded to the Exhibitors' Herald and Motion Picture World to be entered in the national contest seeking a new word for the synchronized pictures. However, until a suitable term is found, Wellsboro fans will see and hear sound pictures.”

1928 Net Profits; Gross 100 Million

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5—Radio Corporation of America earned a net income of $23,661,990 in 1928, according to a report of the directors to the stockholders last Saturday. The gross income was $101,831,916, as compared with a 1927 gross of $65,418,020. The net income for 1928 is revealed as approximately twice as much as that of 1927, three times greater than the 1926 amount. The amount credited to surplus for 1928 is $19,834,799.

In submitting the report, General James G. Harford, president, described the growth in the use of radio throughout the year, pointing out its wide application during the presidential campaign as an example of the increased scope of the medium.

The report gives total current assets at the end of 1928 of $35,577,260, and total current liabilities of $8,177,811. The corporation, according to the report, has not bonded debts or notes outstanding.

P. L. Thomson Addresses
1,500 at Whitehall Club

On the Talking Picture

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5—P. L. Thomson, director of public relations for Western Electric and president of the Audion Bureau of Circulation, addressed 1,500 members and guests of the Whitehall Club on "Talking Pictures the Talk of the Country." He followed this with a showing of the latest Fox Movietone short features. The Whitehall Club is a social organization of downtown business men and meets for luncheon on the roof of the Whitehall Building.

The Sound Picture

"The word which I have selected to enter into this contest is the sound picture. This new invention which enables us to hear a movie or parts of a movie does not just give us talking or "Talking Pictures," but gives us sounds of all kinds, music, laughter, a beat of drum, or the whole of a song, all in the same sound in which we seem to see taking place in the picture is heard. So why not call it a sound picture since that is what it is?"

"Of course "Sound Picture" may not sound just right at first but we would become used to it, as we have to "Moving Picture."—Sara Sears.

Foreign Producers Aim
Blows at U. S. Films to Get Into the Market

Burn for the more sophisticated American public.

Russia is potentially one of the great film powers although at the present time her contribution to the world of motion pictures does not match her real value simply because of propaganda. The Russians, backed by their government, are practically giving their pictures away in the United States. Almost all of them are saturated with propaganda, which kills whatever entertainment value they may have.

Lack Entertainment Value

Pictures must be entertaining to get across. Russian films are often beautifully photographed, have striking sequences but they lack the entertainment value.

This is bad for both countries. It hurts the Russian film as an article of commerce and it spreads a doctrine which we regard as commercially unsound and socially vicious in the commercial center of the world, New York, where propaganda has its greatest scope.

In certain circles here it has become afad to attend a wearisome performance at a little theatre in the city, that the pictures are dull, that the pictures are far too cultivated to hit the vulgar mark of Broadway. As a matter of fact, the pictures are so lacking in entertainment value that they could not possibly be shown on Broadway.

Anything May Happen

The Russians will not make good films till their country lets them, till it settles down and permits the finest artists in the world (which she undoubtedly has) to make real pictures with the splendid equipment at their disposal.

Things are by no means settled in the foreign field. Anything may happen over-night. Every country is seething with production ideas and each is trying to reach the American market. And the first to get the proper perspective of what constitutes entertainment here will be the winner. We have more than enough to get along on as it is.

And meanwhile shortsighted men try to pinch us abroad so that we can get an entertainment here out of the old story of the fox and the grapes. What they need is entertainment plus!

Musical Sense Declared Big Asset to Manager Showing Sound Films

Must Decide How to Regulate Music During Picture, Kenoshan Advises—Tieups with Musical Organizations Urged

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

MILWAUKEE, March 5.—Requisites of a successful theatre manager were raised considerably when sound pictures became the vogue, according to Frank Ponton, manager of the Kenosha theatre at Kenosha, Wis. In the first place, Ponton declared, the manager must be musical or at least must have a musical sense.

"The successful theatre manager today must have a sense of music," declared Ponton. "He must arrange for private screenings for his sound pictures so that he can determine for himself how to regulate the music during the play. He must determine for himself how extensively to use it and when. All these things are considered by the National Association that sound is an expensive thing for the small theatre. (This statement appeared in the February 2 issue of the Herald-World.)

Fred S. Meyer of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., and also secretary of the Milwaukee M P T O, declared that although sound seems to attract many people, still it was too high priced a proposition for a small house. "The theatre owner declared that the theatre sound as estimated by the experts as a true estimate, is some $600,000 a year, including but not limited to the cost of the pictures and other expenses.

"The boy's voice is a beautiful, inimitable thing, but poor musical training can destroy it." This was Ponton's opinion. He also said that 75 percent of the pictures offered to the public were poor pictures and that 25 percent of those offered were of no artistic merit. He also said that 75 percent of the pictures offered to the public were poor pictures and that 25 percent of those offered were of no artistic merit.

"Hearts in Dixie" is the story of an old Negro and his grandson, the son of his dying daughter. They live happily in the Southland, as testimony of which there are many amusing and delightful incidents, but the death of the boy's mother makes the old man realize that the boy must have his chance. Paul Sloan directed the picture with the finest taste. His actors were excellent, natural; their voices were strong and clear. The singing was charming. Altogether this is a novel that ought to enjoy real prosperity.

Warner Sales Force

Honor Sam E. Morris

With Drive in May

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—The sales force of Warner Brothers have designated May as the Sam E. Morris month, as a way of paying a personal tribute to the vice president of the company. The purpose of Morris Month is to get all salesmen to amass playdates so that the selling force can offer a large volume of business as a sign of their appreciation to Morris, for his able leadership.

This year it is hoped to top all previous figures and dates will be taken on more than thirty Vitaphone pictures, with such stars as Al Jolson, Dolores Costello, Pinto Colvig, Davey Lee, Monte Blue, May McAvoy, Conrad Nagel, Pauline Frederick, H. B. Warner, Everett Horton, Betty Bronson, William Collier, Jr., and a host of other well known players.

Suggests “Photox” and Supports His Word with Own Sketches

INTERESTING and beautifully presented, as the sketches on this page prove, is the suggestion of “Photox” as the name for talking pictures, as presented by E. H. Benson, special representative in charge of the Far Eastern headquarters of United Artists, in a letter to the HERALD-WORLD.

In offering his contribution to the campaign of the HERALD-WORLD for a proper name for talking pictures to supplant the objectionable word “talkie,” Benson explains that his suggestion is a condensation of “phototalk,” which a leading Japanese exhibitor employed in designating productions having synchronized dialogue. Benson writes as follows:

“The writer has followed with interest your endeavors to secure through the medium of the industry at large a word which will in effect convey to the public and the trade in general an actual term which is both euphonious and expressive of its meaning, and which if adopted universally would become a useful term in motion picture sound parlance.

“In conversation with a leading Japanese exhibitor the other day, during which the subject of our conversation turned to sound pictures, this exhibitor continually used the word “phototalk.” On thinking over this term in connection with “talkies” and Mr. Vischer’s article, EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD issue of December 29th, it occurred to me that after all this exhibitor had expressed in his own way a term which, if boiled down, might effectively serve as a universal name for the product in question, and I am therefore sending you the condensed word in the form of “Photox” for your consideration.

“From the producer, distributor and exhibitor’s point of view, and as a name which is brief, expressive and synonymous with that which it is desired to convey to the public mind, as well as its use throughout the industry, Photox might prove a welcome aid, inasmuch as it can easily be coupled with any and all forms of advertising attendant to the production, sale and exhibition of sound pictures.”
Study of Neighborhood's Likes Held
First Need in Chain Bookings

Certain Kind of Pictures Draws Best on Certain Days, Says Arnstein, and Exploitation Must Keep Pace

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-WORLD]

MILWAUKEE, WIS., March 5.—The booking problems of a chain theatre are concern have been overlooked to a great extent, according to Eugene Arnstein, assistant manager of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., Milwaukee.

ARNSTEIN believes that the average chain theatre manager is inclined to book pictures in the hope of a draw, of thought as to how suitable a particular picture is to the house or the day of the week on which it is going to run. This is particularly true in a chain where a manger has a voice in the booking of pictures.

What the Public Likes

In booking pictures there are three things to keep in mind, declared Arnstein. The first is to book the right sort of a picture for certain days. By that he means that in some cities there is a stronger demand for pictures that will attract newcomers and will get a new audience. In other cities, there is a greater demand for pictures that will attract returning patrons.

Another important fact is that pictures must be new and well-made to draw a good audience. The public is getting more and more sophisticated and demands that the pictures they see are first-class. They will not go to a picture that is poorly made or that is not well-produced.

If chain theatre managers would study and analyze their neighborhoods more carefully, they would be able to book pictures for the respective days during the week which would enable them to get the highest possible receipts. However, in order to do this they must have a good range of managers who can work over every day in the week, there must also be the right kind of exploitation along with the booking of pictures.

Many chain theatre managers who wonder why their bookings don't pull can trace the failure to a lack of study of neighborhoods, Arnstein believes.

Warms of Cost Responsibility

The second thing for a chain theatre manager to keep in mind is: "Regard the theatre as your own business. Buy and spend for it as though you were your own. Exercise the same rigid cost principles that you would exercise in your own business." This is very important, declared Arnstein. There is a certain lack of responsibility in all chains due to failure to realize sufficiently what operative costs actually are.

The third thing to keep in mind when booking, Arnstein said, is to schedule mentally the coming weeks and try to arrange a program that will be attractive to your patrons. Do not arrange a program which you think will appeal to them; arrange a program which you, from experience, know that they will desire to see. He managed too often, through lack of study of neighborhoods, book pictures that they think should attract people, but which, in actuality, do not appeal in that particular neighborhood.

First National to Wage $100,000 Ad Campaign on Corinne Griffith Picture

(Special to the Herald-WORLD)

NEW YORK, March 5.—First National is prepared to spend $100,000 on the advertising of Corinne Griffith's new film, which is putting forth "The Divine Lady," Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager, told the Herald-WORLD today.

"The leading cities of the country will be covered with a series of 'Divine Lady' advertisements that will tie in with local first-runs of this First National-Vitaphone special, which stars Corinne Griffith, Depinet said.

In addition to the campaign are 84 cities, with 141 newspapers. These newspapers have a total circulation of 15,533,306, following a population of 37,401,000. The entire campaign will extend to exhibitors during the weeks from April 1 to May 1, when "The Divine Lady" will have many of its most important first-run bookings. The campaign is being extended run at the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles. Following are the 84 cities on the advertising list:

New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and New York City; Massachusetts—Boston, Worcester, Springfield and Fall River; Rhode Island—Providence; Maine—Portland, New Jersey—Newark and Trenton; Florida—Jacksonville; North Carolina—Charlotte; South Carolina—Charleston.

Ohio—Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Cleveland, Toledo, Akron and Youngstown; Maryland—Balt-more; Wisconsin—Milwaukee; Pennsylvania—Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Scranton, Reading, Harrisburg and Erie; Washington, D. C.; Texas—Dallas, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Houton; Indiana—Indianapolis, Fort Wayne and Terre Haute.

Many pictures will be in New Orleans; Oklahoma City and Tulsa; Texas—Wichita, Abilene and Grand Rapids; California—Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco and Oakland; Wisconsin—Milwaukee and Madison.

Minnesota—Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth; Nebraska—Omaha; Oregon—Portland; Utah—Salt Lake City; Montana—Bozeman; Washington—Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma.

Vargas, M G M's World
Camerman, Makes First Visit to N. Y. in 5 Years

(Special to the Herald-WORLD)

NEW YORK, March 5.—Ariel L. Vargas, world cameraman of M G M News, arrived in New York last week for his first visit since 1924. Vargas first went abroad for M G M 14 years ago and has visited nearly every country, making important newsreels.

He was the first man to fly over the pyramids and photograph them with a camera. He was also the first man to make a picture of the pope, having secured a permission to photograph him, late Benedict XV. Vargas spent two years in China photographing spectacular battle scenes during the revolution. He took many pictures of the war and the arms of both the North and the South. His pictures of the siege and fall of Chochow was considered a big-achievement. Vargas will remain in New York for several years before starting out again on his wanderings in quest of new material for M G M News.

Cabin Plane and Radio Aid Audien At Dallas Palace

Bob Armstrong, publicity director of the Greater Palace, Dallas, Publix de luxe house, contrived a dandy on “The Canary Murder Case,” resulting in thousands of dollars worth of publicity at no cost to the theatre. Bob promoted a cabin plane from the Texas Air Transport from Ft. Worth, and radio equipment from station WFAA in Dallas, and hooked his transmitter up in the ship.

He took the plane up in the air for two hours on Friday before the all talking picture opened at the Greater Palace on Saturday, and made announcements on it and Publix coast to coast Celebration Week. Thousands heard the mysterious talking from two thousand miles. That Wood, the chief investigator of the cause, Dallas papers ran cuts on the idea, and the radio station called attention to it during its regular announcement periods, explaining that it was devised by the theatre for Publix Celebration Week.

Scoredisc Starts Active Production; March Distribution

NEW YORK, March 5.—Scoredisc Company has started active production at its factory, 701 Eight Avenue. Each feature released after Aug 1, 1928, will be Scoredisc treated for perfect synchronization for exhibitor with a non-synchronous sound device, his feature program.

It is estimated that distribution will be started late in March, when a full score for each picture released in the period mentioned will be ready for the market.

The company is headed by Arthur J. Abrams, inventor of Scoredisc.

Discs Solve Anthem Problem of Canadians

( Special to the Herald-World)

OTTAWA, March 5.—One problem chanted up to the sound film programs in Canadian theatres is a patriotic one. A time-worn requirement calls for the playing of the national anthem either in opening or closing a performance. With sound picture projection, the show comes to an end, of course, when the film "runs out." Then it suddenly occurs to the manager that there is no orchestra or organist to play the national anthem.

The difficulty has been solved, however, by引进 phonograph discs of "God Save the King." The projectionist has to switch to the non-synchronous system of Vitaphone equipment if necessary for the presentation of the official hymn.

Audien Will Eliminate the Stage Except in Big Cities, Says Mayer

( Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, March 5.—The talking picture eventually will eliminate the legitimate stage except in the largest cities, and even there unless stage producers abandon the use of film and sensationalism as box office attractions, said Louis B. Mayer, M.G.M vice president in charge of production, in New Orleans Thursday on his way to Washington for yesterday’s inaugural ceremonies for President-elect Herbert Hoover.

The silent picture never will be abandoned, Mayer said, and in fact will be improved as a result of audien. Fewer silent pictures will mean better silent pictures, he declared.

"Dialogue broadens the scope of the moving picture, makes it publish to film manifest stories hitherto impractical," Mayer said.

"But it will not do to get hysterical about this new thing. Our organization has been experimenting on it for years. We have thrown away hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of stuff. We will continue to make silent films. For one thing we can’t afford to throw away all our foreign markets, bringing 40 per cent of our profits.

"I look to see, eventually, about a half and half schedule for silent and talking films. The big advantage of the talking picture over the legitimate stage, as I see it, is that, through the closeup, every seat in the theatre is a front seat."

In the party, in addition to Mayer and Mark Requa, were Mrs. Mayer, Mrs. Requa, Mayer’s daughters, Edith and Irene, Mrs. Ida Kovernman of the Central Republican committee of California and a secretary.

13 Christie Films in Paramount’s Current Releases; Work Rushed
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—The Christie organization is speeding up production of its sound pictures and taking up options with several stars for additional productions with the announcement that thirteen of the new series of Christie Talking Plays are to be released by Paramount in its current group.

Christie has completed the filming of nine of the Talking Plays, including the first three of the Octavus Roy Cohen stories, and has delivered six of the pictures to Paramount for immediate distribution. Now filmed are “The Melancholy Dame,” “Music Hath Harms” and “The Framing of the Shrew,” by Octavus Roy Cohen, with all- negro casts; and the star pictures, “A Bird in the Hand” with Lois Wilson, Jason Robards, and Roy D’Arcy; “Post Mortem,” Raymond Griffith; “Meet the Misanthrope,” James Gleason and Lucille Watson Gleason; “When Caesar Ran A Newspaper,” Raymond, Hatton and Sam Hardy; “Jed’s Vacation.” Charlie Grapewin and Anna Chance; and “Dear Vivian,” Raymond Hatton and Sam Hardy.

Star Picture Plans Made

James Gleason, Raymond Griffith and Lois Wilson will each be presented in at least one more of the talking plays; Louise Fazenda has been signed for two, and plans are being made to include some of the Christie Comedy stars, such as Billy Dooley, Bobby Vernon, Jack Duffy and Frances Lee.

Paramount is releasing two of the Christie Talking Plays this month, three in March, several in April, and a steady flow of pictures in succeeding months. Releases have been arranged so that there will be one of the Octavus Roy Cohen colored stories in approximately each three pictures issued.

Quite a list of supporting players have appeared so far, including Dot Farley, Tom Kennedy, Mabel Forrest, Robert Emmett O’Connor, Helen Mehrman, Eddie Waller, Doris Brownlee, Bill Irving, Lorraine Eddy, Betty Lorraine, Madea Trux and Carl Stockdale, casts being about equally divided between well known stage and screen players.

Lafayette Players Appear

In the Octavus Roy Cohen stories the best known of the colored actors so far appearing have been the stars of the Lafayette Players, a colored company producing stage plays in Los Angeles. Evelyn Preer, leading woman, and Edward Thompson, leading man, and Charles Olden, of the Lafayette group, appear in several of the Cohen stories. Others featured are Roberta Ryson, Spencer Williams, Harry Tracy, and the members of Mosby’s Blue Blowers orchestra.

Four directors, Arvid Gillstrom, A. Leslie Pearson, Walter Graham, and Raymond Kane, are working on the new talking plays, while Alfred A. Cohn, is in charge of the editorial staff selecting material for these pictures. The force of Christie recording technicians has been increased to include three full operating crews of seven men each, in addition to the engineers in charge of the Western Electric equipment.

Scoredisc Names

G. I. Matthews as Manager of Sales
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—George I. Matthews, for many years a sales executive in the motion picture industry, has been appointed sales manager of the Scoredisc Corporation.

Matthews, who is also vice president of Scoredisc, will tour the principal cities and establish sales centers in key cities and plan demonstrations where exhibitors can witness actual projection of pictures and Scoredisc sound accompaniment.

A perfect synchronized sound score is assured by the company and for any feature employing the Scoredisc, which is an appliance for use in conjunction with nonsynchronous sound machines. Scoredisc is not a cue sheet service.

Eddie Dowling Adopts New Portable Equipment
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—During the filming and recording of “The Rainbow Man” for Sono-Art Productions, Eddie Dowling was the first to use portable recording equipment, made by the Western Electric Company.

The use of this new equipment opens up a wide range of possibilities in outdoor filming and recording that heretofore has been impossible because of limitations of the apparatus now in use.
Exhibitors Buying Sound Equipment Sight Unseen Deserve to Be “Gypped”

Exhibitors May Avoid Lots of Grief, Loss of Time and Save a Lot of Expense by Remembering That—

HIGH powered salesmanship may and probably will sell you an equipment, but it takes more than eloquence to make it perform properly, dependably, without interruption—at the most crucial time.

IF you invest in sound, be sure your equipment will work—not only today but three years from today, by your operator in your theatre—not in a screening room under the supervision of an “expert.”

BUY sound equipment as you would an automobile. Find out something about the organization back of the product; if its past accomplishments, integrity, financial stability and ability to “make good” are such as to warrant your confidence.

TO build the right kind of sound equipment requires, (1) vast plant facilities; (2) large financial resources; (3) a highly trained technical organization—the kind it takes years to build and develop. It is this threefold combination of factors that created—

And other leading talking picture producers.

FOR the first time, basic economic and merchandising principles have been applied to the manufacture of sound equipment. “The greatest possible value at the lowest possible cost,” has been the objective sought to be attained in creating this equipment.

THIS has been accomplished after long research and experiment to such a degree that quality, performance and value per dollar invested compared with any other equipment GENNETT Synchronizer Systems will prove a revelation to the industry.

THIS has been made possible only by the tremendous facilities, financial resources and a technical organization that has been built up over a period of more than sixty years, at the command of the sponsors of this equipment.

GENNETT Synchronizer Systems are now in production on a large scale and are guaranteed for delivery within 15 to 30 days from date of acceptance of your order. Deliveries are now being made.

GENNETT Synchronizer Systems are produced in three different models, designed to meet the needs of every size theatre—from 400 to 4,000. Differing only in price, not in quality, performance, or durability.

Freedman Heads Qualitone Co.; Sound-on-Film to be Added Soon

(HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—Samuel Freedman, wellknown Hollywood motion picture producer and former owner of Fine Arts Studios, heads the new company which is sponsoring "Qualitone," a device for the projection of sound pictures. With thousands of dollars worth of orders already in hand, the Qualitone Corporation immediately will begin quantity production and distribution and anticipates completing more than 200 installations within the next six months.

The initial Qualitone equipment to be installed in a theatre is now in operation at the Marcal Theatre in Hollywood where a preview of the device was recently held for the edification of a large group of exhibitors, newspaper folk and others. The reproduction of the various sounds of the films was so close that dancing, instrumental and vocal music and voices was declared to be perfect and as a result several orders were placed for the machines at that time.

Sound-on-Film to be Added

The inventors of the Qualitone, which in its present form employs the disc system of reproduction but which will shortly add equipment to handle sound on film, are Fred H. Harrington and E. R. Harris, both of whom are now members of the Qualitone Corporation and executive heads of the company's engineering department. The former is a nationally known electrical and radio engineer and a prominent member of the Institute of Radio Engineers. He is the inventor of the sound projection device used in the Qualitone.

Harris is responsible for the recording equipment of the new device as well as the inventor of the Qualitone dynamic microphone and dynamic electrical head. He was formerly recording engineer for the Victor Talking Company and later consulting engineer for the Columbia Phonograph Company.

According to President Freedman, Los Angeles will be the chief distribution depot as well as the manufacturing site of his company, which branch offices will be established in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Kansas City, Detroit, and other cities. The concern’s main office is now at 5360 Melrose avenue, Hollywood.

Among the claims made for Qualitone is that it will permit of its use in even the the statement that it is to be sold at a price smallest theatres. It is further asserted by Qualitone officials that the Los Angeles made device is the simplest one on the market in the matter of installation and upkeep.

The Qualitone Corporation is prepared with its own recording equipment and stage for the use of outside picture companies and has inaugurated a greatly reduced schedule of fees permitting independent producers to take advantage of the nationwide demand for audiences.

A distinct feature of the Qualitone, according to Freedman, is that the machine is interchangeable and can accommodate any picture presentation employing records.

Warner Brooklyn Studio Working On 24 Hour Schedule

(NY, March 5.—All departments of the Warner Brothers Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn are being taxed to their capacity, the plant is being operated on a 24 hour schedule.

Filming of some of the short numbers goes into the early morning hours and never has there been as much activity in the plant as there is now.

Some of the numbers just finished are three with Eleanor Painter, and others with Julia Sanderson, Frank Crumit and J. C. Nugent.

Vitaphone talking pictures are now being seen and heard in all the English speaking countries of the world. Vitaphone is shortly to invade Germany and is producing pictures adapted for that country.

Quality Equal to Best Guaranteed Phonofilm Users

(NY, March 5.—General Talking Pictures Corporation has taken a decisive step toward clearing up any uncertainty among exhibitors about the admissibility of putting in sound equipment, by inserting a clause in contracts for the installation of the DeForest Phonofilm reproducing devices, guaranteeing that the quality of sound in the installed theatre "shall be equal, if not superior, to the quality of sound reproduction of any reproducing device regardless of price." The guarantee is chiefly of interest to those exhibitors who cannot spare the time to fully investigate the service which is being rendered by DeForest Phonofilm in theatres which have been wired.

(Up to date statements it has never received a request for the inclusion of the clause from exhibitors who have had the opportunity of hearing a demonstration before buying, nor has this clause ever been invoked by exhibitors holding contracts in which it has been included.

THE DRAMAPHONE FILM PICK-UP

is interchangeable with all film recording methods

THE DRAMAPHONE NON-SYNCHRONOUS

attachment plays any standard phonograph records

The Dramaphone "triple" amplification system assures continuous performance. It can, also, be used as a public address system in announcing election returns, prize fights, etc.

You can see and hear the Dramaphone under actual working conditions in theatres in the following cities:

Omaha, Nebraska
Beatrice, Nebraska
Chicago, Illinois
Taylorville, Illinois
Cincinnati, Ohio
Hollywood, Calif.
Ft. Dodge, Iowa
Mishawaka, Indiana

Be sure your sound equipment will stand long wear and tear and give perfect tonal qualities under the entire audible range. Also, be sure that it will accommodate phonograph records, standard disc talkies and film systems, also enable you to plug in your radio so that important broadcasts can be heard over your speaker system without costly changes to your basic equipment. The Dramaphone does all these things.

Dramaphone is using ball and roller bearings, chrome vanadium worm gears, all running in a bath of oil, which assure long life.

PRICES

$2500.00 for a complete synchronous up to 2200 seats.
$1000.00 for complete film pick-up.
$500.00 for non-synchronous attachment.

Audiens Benefit Speaking Stage, Says Head of Repertory Shows

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 26.—The “legit” speaking stage is on the eve of one of the brightest epochs in all its centuries-long history, thanks to its supposedly deadly enemy, the talking pictures. This double-edged tribute to audios voiced by Edward Ewald, head of his own repertory company at the St. Charles theatre, doesn’t mean exactly what it seems to mean.

It doesn’t mean, for example, that Ewald believes the talkies are contributing anything to a great art. Quite the contrary. The audios are aiding the legitimate stage, he believes, because they are supplanting the silent pictures.

Says Films Never Hurt Stage

Ewald, a passionate believer in the artistic traditions of the spoken drama, had been asked about the oft-made claim that the talking pictures are to take the place of both the spoken stage and the silent pictures. With the quick response of a man whose greatest enthusiasm has been touched off, he made a gesture of disdain and said “boosh!”

“The talkies,” he said, “can never replace the spoken stage, any more than the movies could replace it, nor displace it in the affections of real lovers of the drama.

The ‘movie fans’ may not havc realized it, but the movies have never hurt the art of the spoken stage. Speaking purely in a financial sense, they have taken support from the spoken stage, and lured many good actors to their own ruin. But they have never touched the real art of the theatre. They have touched only the pocket-book of the theatre.

Supplanting Silent Pictures

“Now come the talkies, and we hear the claim that they will drive the legitimate theatre out of business. That’s perfect nonsense.

The talkies have shown already what effect they are having. They are supplanting the silent pictures. They had a field to themselves so long as they remained silent. Then they were a photographic art—not an art of the theatre.

The talkies are showing the movie-goers the importance of lines and the spoken voice in any play, and now the movie-goers won’t return to the silent films. In their place are the ‘talkies,’ no longer a photographic art alone but an attempt at the art of the theatre.

Says Stage Will Benefit

“The talkies won’t satisfy the public, not even the public which attended the silent pic-

English Universal
Tongue, Says Mayer
(Special to the Herald-World)
WASHINGTON, March 5—English may become the universal language of the world through widespread distribution of talking pictures in foreign countries declared Louis B. Mayer, vice president and general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, in an address March 2, before members of the National Press Club.

In a comprehensive survey of the motion picture and the revolutionizing influence of sound production, the former editor of the famous newspapermen's organization, the producer said he did not agree with those who feel that the talking picture will eliminate the American product from foreign markets.

"Just as the silent American pictures have popularized American habits, customs, goods and ideals abroad, so will the American talking picture popularize the English language in foreign countries," said Mayer.

"For the immediate future I believe that foreign rights to American motion pictures will be sold much as are the rights to the spoken play. In other words, the American producer will make a picture with English dialogue. The rights to produce this picture in a foreign language will then be sold to the foreign producers who will make the picture with their own players and organization specifically for their own home market."

Harry Beall Named
Wampas President
By Unanimous Vote
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—Harry Hammond Beall was elected president of the Wampas Monday night by a unanimous vote. He succeeds Barrett Kiesling who has held the office a part of one term. The honor to Beall comes after several years of loyal work for the organization which he helped to found.

Other officers are Joseph Sherman and Pat Dowling, first and second vice presidents, Hank Arnold, secretary, Ed Perkins, treasurer, and George Brown, sergeant-at-arms. Board of Directors are Sam Cohn,
George Landy, Arch Rewe, Pete Smith,
Ivan St. John, Charles West and Harry Wilson.

Delay of Sales Season Is Felt
In Production; Only Two Begun

34 in Work; Sound Stages to Be Built by Tec Art Studios for Use of Independent Field; Former Norma Talmadge Story
Given to Fitzmaurice at U. A.
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—The announced postponement of the sales campaign has shown its influence on the production center. Only two pictures were started this week and only three were finished.

A De Mille picture, "Dynamite," a Dorothy Arzner picture and an Irving Cummings picture were completed, giving M.G.M. Paramount and Fox an even break.

The delay may be caused by the sales organizations or it may be caused by the production departments; it's like the chicken and the egg—it's hard telling which came first.

But with all the handicaps of a treacherous market and of mental hazards out here it is surprising to note that there are actually 34 feature pictures in production. A few of them are merely rehearsing; but with them all the casts have convened and the director is megaphoning his instructions.

The red head, Clara Bow, is in the Dorothy Arzner picture, "The Wild Party" which has just been completed.

Tec-Art to Build Sound Stages

To provide facilities for the independent producer, Alfred T. Mannon, president of the Tec-Art studios, announced today plans for the immediate construction of two sound stages.

Under the supervision of H. Kirk Kellog, the engineer responsible for the sound units at United Artists and at R.K.O. work on the stages will be started early next week.

Two projection rooms, a scoring room and three unit recording rooms will be built in conjunction with the stages. Both sound on film and the disc method of recording will be available. It is understood, however, that several of the most popular systems of recording will be made available to all producers.

The tremendous overhead now involved in the making of sound pictures will be reduced as the cost will be distributed over a number of producing companies instead of being shouldered by one unit.

Kellog expects to complete his plans by the end of the week and construction will start at once. The stages will be made available to many of the biggest independents in the movie field including: The Edwin Carewe Productions, Inspiration Pictures, Inc., Technicolor Motion Picture Corp, Gotham Productions, Burr-Hines Enterprises, Quilltone Corp., Chesterfield Pictures, Quality Productions, Smitty Comedies and many others.

Pollock Story to Fitz

After United Artists had purchased Channi-ing Pollock's stage success, "The Sign on the Door," for Norma Talmadge as her first talking picture, and Miss Talmadge later felt that she should make a different type of story as her initial dialogue feature, filmdom speculated over what would become of the Pollock opus.

Now comes definite announcement by John W. Considine, Jr., that George Fitzmaurice will direct the Pollock story without the star, while Norma will appear in another story in all-dialogue form.

"The Locked Door" is to be the new title of the screen version of Pollock's play, and Fitzmaurice is busy preparing.

Credit for the adaptation of "The Locked Door" goes to C. Gardner Sullivan, while the dialogue is in the hands of George Scarborough, well-known New York playwright.

According to Considine, a notable cast of players will be assembled for the Fitzmaurice production, among these a woman stage star of national reputation. Many of the players will be brought to Hollywood from New York, it is announced.

Production on the picture should start within a few weeks and those in the studio predict for "The Locked Door" one of the best all-talking pictures on the United Artists schedule for the coming season.

Just what Miss Talmadge will make as her first all-talking offering has not as yet been determined, according to Considine, but several stories are being considered and a deci-

Another Epic Western to Be Shot; Maynard Independent Producer

Max Ree Returning from East—Beall in Baine Block—Hamilton and His New Figger—All About Norman Houston

By DOUGLAS HOGDDE

HOLLYWOOD, March 5—With Will Hays' precaution about "silent epic pictures" probably in mind one of the big companies is planning to make a gigantic picture. Public announcement has been withheld; but the Herald-World has been informed it is to be a Western production. "In Old Arizona" has done much to change this fickle town's mind about the dearth of the Western.

UNIVERSAL has never joined the cry for a "no Western" policy. Instead, by sitting on the Maynard that company has attached the handsome males. According to my friend, Ivan St. Johns, Ken has the same arrangement with Universal as Hoot Gibson. He will produce his own pictures with his own unit for the Leonmole release.

As one of the erstwhile Western stars they are hard to find. Tom Mix has made himself scarce around here since the holidays when he abruptly left William LeBaron's Melrose Avenue lot. They say Tom took a little vacation in the woods and is now East of the Rockies with Tony and a vaudeville contract. Buck Jones is driving past the imposing Marion Building (home of the Herald-World) in his custom built roadster today. Buck is no longer a broncho buster but plays dress suit roles and smokes cigarettes.

Tim McCoy (I believe that's his name) is in Paris and other educational centers with his family. He has revealed no plans.

Rex Bell is unhorsed. He has been doing society stuff the other day when I saw him in the cast of a Los Moran picture. He would have made a good Western star but for the sudden shift in production programs. And Fred Thomson has left.

There is the story about Norman Houston who is the co-author of "The Broadway Melody." He went from one studio another until he had been in every end of the show-business. He already had had a few rounds experi- menting as a reporter and copy reader.

By some chance of fortune one thought he saw the possibility of au- dience pictures and persuaded Louis B. Mayer to take him off the stage and put him in the studio. That was two years ago.

His schooling has ended and he gets his first great assignment next week. The picture will be "Cory." Harry Hammond Beall's offices have been moved to the Baine Studio Building, according to a very simple announcement received today. With the move from the Paramount Theatre Building comes word of re-organization of the staff. Robert Finch bears the responsibilities of general man- ager, a new Writer of associate executive, and E. Steinberg of executive secretary.

He has advertised Sid Grauman's enterprises, Jack Dore's King Vidor's, Farrell MacDonald's, Lloyd Bacon's, Annette Kellerman's, Harry Beaumont's, Sam Gold- wynn's, Thomas H. Ince's, Sol Lesser's, Fanchon and Marco's, and many of the larg- est commercial establishments in Los An- geles.

At the saying in Hollywood goes: "If Beall hasn't advertised you then you haven't been advertised." * * *

Lloyd Hamilton and Harry D. Edwards have formed a company known as the Lloyd Hamilton Talking Comedies and will produce two reel pictures starring Hamilton. Gilbert Pratt has been signed to write stories and to assist in editorial supervision.

Hamilton's departure from Educational a year ago preceded a long period when Hamilton was rarely heard of. It finally became known that he had taken a much needed rest and was planning to the screen to attempt audien roles.

He appeared in "Black Waters," two months ago, which was made by the British Domin- ion Productions.

He has acquired a bundle of new energy and is boasting quite a new figger that makes him almost unrecognizable.

* * *

Max Ree will return to the Coast by way of New York according to a very reli- able informant. He has recently been signed by RKO Studios as art supervisor.

Imposing Array of Talent Signed by Le Baron for RKO

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 5.—An imposing lineup of talent was announced today for the 1929-30 schedule of Radio Pictures by William Le Baron, vice president in charge of production at the Radio and Hollywood Studios. The list includes players, writers, directors, musical composers, technical experts and others.

Sally Blake, Olive Borden and Betty Compson compose the first trio of feminine stars to be signed. Miss Borden has been signed for two pictures, and Miss Compson for four. Probably the first to go into pro- duction will be "Help Yourself to Happy- ness," from the novel by Frank R. Adams, now appearing serially in the Red Book.

Le Baron, while on a recent trip east, signed Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, co-authors of the stage success, "The Front Page," for a series of scripts. He returned with Mr. Hecht's first manuscript in his pocket, and was assured that the first of MacArthur's scripts has been written.

John Russell, author of South Seas fiction, and John Brownell have been signed for the writing.

Le Baron also brought back to Holly- wood Samuel Raphaelson's story, "My Boy," which will be produced as a Radio Picture. Raphaelson was the author of "The Jazz Singer."

William Cowen and Bert Glennon head the list of directors.

A complete musical and orchestral depart- ment will be established at the RKO Studios, where the synchronization of all Radio Pictures will be handled, as well as all other musical and sound effects. Con- tributors of musical numbers already signed include Vincent Youmans, Dorothy Fields and James McHugh.

Max Ree has been engaged as art su- pervisor.

Delay of Sales Season Is Felt in Production; Only Two Are Started

tion should be reached on one of these days in the very near future. Gilbert Roland will be the leading man.

Nibo Starts Audien Career

Fred Nibo enters upon his talking picture career with "Redemption," Tolstoy's famous novel. Russian tragedy, for screen and stage. Righting of which were obtained by Metro- Goldwyn-Mayer from Arthur Hopkins, who produced it on the stage.

Nibo will have a chance to work out some of his ideas for the talking version during the filming of the silent film version of the story, which was the production released at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. John Gilbert is the star, supported by an unusually strong cast, including Conrad Nagel, Rene Adoree and Claire McDowell.

As a director of audiens Nibo has a long New York stage experience to call upon. He scored his greatest triumph "Hit the Trail Holiday" and "The Fortune Hunter." Gilbert will make nothing of pictur- e debuts as "Feda," the central figure of the Troy play.

Eugene Walter Joins RKO

Another celebrity, in the person of Eugene Walter, eminent playwright, has been added to the roster of talent by Le Baron. Le Baron is gathering to film the 1929-30 pro- gram of Radio Pictures.

Walter will write dialogue for "Help Yourself to Happiness," based on the Red Book serial story by Frank R. Adams, will be made as a Radio Picture with Henry Hobart in charge as associate producer.

Brown Starts "Wonder of Women"

With a moving train as his first setting, Clarence Brown yesterday consumed some two hundred miles, back and forth on a railroad track, while filming the opening scenes in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new European drama "Wonder of Women."

The new production started yesterday is a filmed version of "The Wife of Stephen Tremboli," a vivid romance of modern European life. It will be made in silent and will become the first to present plans, the silent scenes to be filmed first.

Peggy Wood, famous in "The Clinging Vines" (talking) and other stage plays, is mak- ing her screen debut in the picture. Lewis Stone, recently in "The Trial of Mary Du- glyc" plays the hero, Trom- holt, and a notable cast has been assembled.

It is Brown's first production since "A Woman of Affairs," in which he directed John Gilbert and Grece Garbo from a Michael Arlen story.

Christie Lines Up Big Stars

At Christie has lined up a high powered cast for the Douglas MacLean all talking feature "Divorce No. One." This, which is to go into recording within a very short time. In addition to Marie Prevost, who has been announced as playing opposite MacLean, some well known featured players have been signed on the dotted line this week.

Johnny Arthur, Jack Duffy, Frances Lee, and Dolores Del Rio, are the notable stars in the picture, which is being adapted by Al- fred A. Cohn from the farce comedy which was bought by Christie from Wilson Collison.

Neither Edward G. Robinson or Raymond Kane of the Christie directing staff will be chosen this week to handle the production. Both have directed previous projects. Joe Graham directing the Octavius Roy Cohen story, "Music Hath Harms" and Kane direct- ing Charlie Grapewin and Anne Chance in "Jed's Vacation."

Lloyd Hamilton Signs to Make Two-Reel Audiences for New Firm

Lloyd Hamilton is the latest of short feature stars to go into audience production. The former star of Educational, who played an important speaking role in "Black Waters," British production made in Hollywood by Herbert Wilcox, has signed with Harry Donald Edwards, former production manager, to make all-talking comedies in two reels for a new company to be known as Lloyd Hamilton Talking Comedies. Production is to start at once.

The company already has signed William Watson, who was for many years an outstanding comedy director and editor for Mack Sennett, to direct the first of Hamilton's auditions; and Edwards also has signed Gilbert Pratt, former Paramount writer and editor, to handle the scripts and assist in editorial supervision for Hamilton.

Edwards, who heads the new Lloyd Hamilton producing organization, is a well-known production manager, and recently signed the Marquis Henry de La Falaise for pictures, the Marquis' pictures being postponed, however, on account of the latter's having to make another trip abroad.

Lloyd Hamilton was rated as one of Educational's drawing cards for several years while he was starring in Educational's silent two-reel comedies. He registered an immediate hit in the British production which recently was made in Hollywood, and was signed by Edwards several weeks ago, following his completion of that picture.

"Opry House" Completed, Disney Goes to Hollywood

NEW YORK, March 5.—Walt Disney, creator of the "Micky Mouse" sound cartoons, returned to Hollywood on February 18, after completing the sound synchronization of "The Opry House."

Educational and Hohner Stage Big Campaigns

In Harmonica Contests

Two more Juvenile Comedies-Hohner Harmonicas Playing contests have gone over with a bang. The contest held at Oneonta, New York, proved so successful that it was followed with a second. These contests were announced with trailers, window displays, in a tie up with the Bell Music Company and with hand bills.

The Capitol theatre in Jacksonville, Florida, also obtained a large amount of publicity on its first contest and the manager indicated that another may be held.

Theatre managers and more are taking advantage of these contests, arranged the co-operation of Educational Film Exchanges and M. Hohner Inc.

Houston Films War Play

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—"Two Americans" is the title of the two-reel drama which is Walter Huston's latest vehicle at the Paramount studio in Astoria. This playlet is based on Civil War material and was written and directed by John Meehan.

Barton's Sound Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 5.—"Happened to Him" is the second short talking picture starring James Barton. It inchjes two of Barton's most popular vaudeville songs and comedy skits, "The Spell of the Blues" and "Anabelle Lee."

Yale Students Set Off Alarm Clocks But Worm Turns!

Wallace R. Allen, publicity director of the Olympic Theatre in New Haven, turned a prank played by some Yale students into good publicity. One night the students planted six alarm clocks under seats in various parts of the theatre and they rang out during the stage show. The morning paper ran a story about this on the front page.

Allen went to the afternoon papers and made sure they ran the story and inserted an ad as near to the story as he could, reading: "FOR SALE: ALARM CLOCKS. APPL Y OLYMPIA THEATRE. This caused lots of comment and Will B. Wyse, columnist in the morning paper, devoted almost all his column to the incident and said that was the first time a press agent was called a student.

Then one of the afternoon papers was induced to run a story of how the clocks were set going at the ad was inserted and many people came to the theatre disappointed. The story also went over both the A.P. and U.P. wires.

Meera Goes with Brown Theatres

MILWAUKEE—John D. Halgren, public relations manager for the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, for the past year, has accepted a position as publicity and advertising manager for the Milwaukee, a firm which operates the Davidson and Pabst legitimate drama theatres.
PRESENTATION ACTS

Stage Shows

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending March 1

This week Balaban & Katz introduced a new master of ceremonies in the person of Jack Osterman. Jack was stillborn in a descendant of show business and is known for his smart alecness. However in this particular show it looks like Jack has knuckled down to the business and even in the way he does it, when Jack wants to be clever he is a clever boy.

Lewis McDermid produced the show in his honor by calling it "Jackie's Here" and everything was put on in a sort of a musical comedy manner. The Merry Mad Gang, the stageladdies, who have made this policy history by now through their former leader, Paul Ash, were directed by Victor Young, well known arranger for the firm.

The show opened with the ballet girls in abbreviated costumes, all lined up on the runway, singing a special song about "Jackie's Here." Of course, no stage show could be complete without an introductory song, especially when a new member is being introduced to the theatre. This song is about as old as the hills, and in spite of its age, still goes over, probably on account of the singing chorus, who had beautiful voices.

At the proper time, Osterman came out in light suit with felt hat and cane to match, and told the crowd he was glad to be back in the town that he was born in. In this particular case, it happened to be the truth, but how many artists have used this line, simply to get themselves in the mood of the audience. Well, so far the crowd was waiting for Osterman to do his stuff and prove the truth of what the Balaban & Katz publicity department said about him. At our surprise as well as theirs he did not appear, and we don't mind saying that if Osterman is given the proper shows and surrounding talent, he will continue to be a drawing card at this theatre. Osterman has a natural way of dispensing humor and when it's clean it is entertaining. His smart chatter about flying to Chicago and his mention of Lindy and his future on the island got the audience from the start.

Right after this number, Victor Young was introduced as the band leader and then a little boy of about ten opened the proceedings with a tap routine and surprised the audience by playing a trap drum like a trooper. His "Stars and Stripes" brought the house down. Clever little fellow, this chap, and a wonderful future ahead of him if he is given the proper training.

This was followed by a special arrangement of "Shes' Fanny That Way" played by the Merry Mad Gang and admirably directed by Victor Young. This was a sort of a waltz, arranged with a vocal chorus by one of the band boys. It was one of the best pieces ever played by this band of musicians and got a wonderful hand for its original rendition.

The next number on the bill introduced by the new master, was Harry Downing, who offered a mixed comedy singing routine with double trick voice. Harry has been doing this sort of performing in vaudeville, and in spite of the fact that he is clever in some ways, he nevertheless lacked the necessary punch in this show. Some way or other, impersonators, whether in fun or in seriousness, do not click as they used to.

After several minutes of comedy antics between Osterman and himself, a drop lowered to expose the orchestra background, as the ballet dressed in silk hats and swallow tails, went through a comedy routine of great length. The audience was quite surprised.

In the show Haywood, Hello, Montreal" was played by the band the same tune, while the girls held on to morose lamp posts, each one lighted and effective in dim setting.

MARKS BROTHERS

LEAD CHICAGO

Good Shows and Original Settings Help Independent Chain Keep Ahead of Competition

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Stage entertainment is still an important feature of deluxe theatre programs. At one time these offerings were considered merely an extra trimming thrown in with the picture for good measure, and for a while exhibitors allowed themselves to think that any form of show would do. This situation might not have been so unsatisfactory were it not for the keen competition facing the motion picture theatre industry.

Take for instance, Marks Brothers of Chicago, who own and operate the Granada and Marbro theatres, one located on the north side and the other on the west, and both confronted with pretty stiff competition. In spite of the fact that on the north side there are at least four large motion picture theatres, two of which may be classed as deluxe houses, the Granada manages to play to capacity crowds on nearly every occasion.

For awhile Marks Brothers had some pretty tough sliding when they first entered into the exhibition business for the simple reason that they were not able at that time to secure good motion picture attractions and stage talent, not because they were not financially able to book them, but because they were prevented from booking them. This condition has been adjusted since then by a recent lawsuit which has been settled in favor of Marks Brothers, and today they mean almost as much to Chicago in the way of entertainment as any other well established theatre enterprise.

In the short space of less than three years' time Marks Brothers have continually given to the Chicago theatregoing people, unusual stage and screen attractions. They set the pace with the greater show season last year in presenting something like a dozen or so world wide famous stage and screen stars and are again entering the theatre with another greater show season program that is expected to surpass the first one. For a young organization starting with such a handicap as they did, Marks Brothers not only merit the support of

Sam Kaufman Heads Stageband Unit

Sam J. Kaufman, formerly of presentation work, is now touring Fox and Loew theatres in a stageband unit, produced by Correll and Sanders. Kaufman formerly led the stageband show at the Lawndale theatre, Chicago, and was also at one time master of ceremonies at the Piccadilly theatre.

In this unit Kaufman not only directs his twelve-piece band but is also the ceremonial master for Tommy Wonder and his sister Betty, Morton and Mayo, the Janet alisters, the Rio brothers, Aife Martin, and Merri Boyd, who are all doing specialties in the show.

He'll Clean You

George Voelk, formerly of Lang & Voelk, is now a business man. Voelk recently took over the Brecker cleaning and dyeing establishment, located at 165 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, and has turned it into a valet shop for the theatrical profession. The new place is now being operated under the name of Spic and Span with barber service as well as tailor service.

their patrons but the respect and cooperation of the entire show business for the admirable progress and wise showmanship that they have injected in their few years in the business.

Marks Bros. Mean Something Now
They have been unusually successful in surrounding themselves with a wonderful staff and bénéficr of wise showmanship by always doing something original before the other fellow has had a chance to think about it. They were the first Chicago circuit to present serin organ solo and stringophone solos, both con-cieved and perfected by Albert F. Brown who is in the business. They were also the first genuine film prologues in Chicago when they offered "Mother Machree," "The Singing Fool" and "The Spielerc" to their patrons.

The latest Marks Brothers innovation is a semi prologue-presentation stage at-	raction produced on a lavish scale with no announcing of acts from the beginning to the end. To prove the success of any stage or screen attraction in Marks Brothers theatre one has only to attend one of their performances and be convinced for himself. The writer has never been able to secure a seat yet, but he is told that the place he chose to enter either one of their theatres.

Balaban & Katz also saw the value of good stage entertainment and decided about a month ago to change the policy of their Chicago theatre. Since that change has been made that particular house has been enjoyed the full houses that it was accustomed to in previous days. These examples and the reinstatement of stage acts in many Pub-lix theatres further prove that the day has passed when a motion picture theatre may expect to entertain its audience with just one good picture. Every exhibitor throughout the land has noticed that new deluxe houses must offer good screen attractions irrespective of their being dialogue or still pictures, and in conjunction with the film part, a good stageshow carefully produced with good talent and pleasing settings.

Misrepresentation Is Bad Business Amusement seekers are wise enough to know the difference between a good show and a bad show. They know that when they desire to be entertained they usually shop around to find the most and the best for their money. That is one of the reasons why it is also very important that your newspaper advertising should not misrepresent and should always carry across a message which will establish your institution and its policies in the minds of the people attending your theatres.

THEME SONGS

De Syrva, Brown and Henderson, Inc., have published another theme song that looks like a big winner. The title of it is "I Found Happiness When I Found You," and the theme of "The River," the latest William Fox Production. The song was written and composed by Erno Rapee and Lew Pohl of Chicago.

"Where Is the Song of Songs for Me" is the theme song of "Lady of the Sapphires, Jr.," her young husband of some years. Irving Berlin is the composer and publisher and D. W. Griffith is the producer of the film.

Million Acer and Jack Yellen, two of the best known song writers in the country and who also compose part of the Acer, Young & Bourstein music publishing company have written a song called "The Glade Ranch," which has become the top sales hit and motion picture by the same name to be produced by Warner Bros. Dolores Costello will be starred.

The Sam Fox publishing company have already begun the preparatory work for the musical score of "The Beaty." This setting will be arranged under the personal direction of J. S. Zamecner.
William Frederick Peters, another important member of this firm, will soon start the score for "The Four Feathers."

The finish of this number whereby the girls literally dragged the lamp posts, was very novel and received quite a loud applause.

This was followed by the Meyko, three Japanese artists, two of them being pretty girls, who offered a dance act which was very novel from the standpoint that very few people from the English edition, and the girls’ fine acrobatic dancing won a very nice hand.

By this time Jack had worked up some unexpected fun back there and came on introducing Florence Moore, who was on her way to California and had just dropped in to say “hello” to everybody. It’s a good thing Florence had to catch a train for the crowd in the audience were quite willing to get that trick out of the English edition. He is almost as big a hit as Morton’s “Blind.” The Floreolettes rule high for entertainment.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending March 1

The Public production “Bubbling Over” is colorful and well constructed. The program was well mounted and, except for the leading lady and leading man, who failed to harmonize while singing, went great guns. The trick was that little surprise was in store for the audience when, at the conclusion of his usual organ solo, Arthur Marcel took over the position of master of ceremonies. He proved the best yet, better than the imported masters of ceremonies, who received a free ovation from the patrons at all times.

Boyd Senter carried off the major portion of honors in his best marvelous saxophone playing, the vaude in Boston since the visit of Ted Lewis. He was called back for a second and again by the heartily handclapping of the patrons.

The feature picture was “The Dummie” starring Ruth Chatterley and Micke Bennett, a 12 year old wonder, following the feature picture “Way Down South,” and attractively brought back to life.

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending February 28

This week’s stage show at the Warfield Theatre features the “Objects D’Art Idea” of Fanchon and Marco, and also Robert Rahin, former Orpheum star, as master of ceremonies. Bennett retains his delicious Jewish accent and offers a choice assortment of jokes which he can tell them.

The show opens with Harace Heath’s Californians in color, who are being taught how to do roses, under the name of a “Bouquet of Roses,” with both vocal and instrumental solos by members of the company. These two numbers, “Roses of Picardy” and “My Belgian Rose.”

Benny Rubin comes on and offers a few jokes, after which the curtain goes up on a studio scene, with Matty and painting, which gradually come to life, as time passes, to become a double. Bennett sings and dances himself in this feature, and in the next act, the scene is a set of comic for the benefit of the patrons.

The Sankest Beautes, attired in fanciful court costumes of a bygone day, down the stairs and go through an old-time dance with white- winged corridors. The scene was a feast for the eyes and was intended as such. Benny Rubin gives his impressions of a few modern numbers, ending by saying that there are no Jewish football players at all. The line is made of papier. A dainty Chinanteau miss steps out of a box, and in her steps, “If You Want the Rainbow,” getting a good hand.

While the Herling sings “Marcheta” the Sun- kist Beautes do their Mexican dance in marked contrast to the former offering. Robert Steckner, Bennett and the female Beautes on enormous long skirts and goes through a lively dance. As he concludes this, a girl makes her appearance dressed in exactly the same fashion to emphasize the difference in height.

Benny Rubin presents the history of Columbus with musical interludes by the band and then presents some novel dance steps to display his ver- nacular.

The Sunkest Beautes offer a novel dance and fencing exhibition with foils that prove one of the most attractive features of the program. A girl steps out of one of the large paintings and goes through a whirlwind apach dance with a partner who enters night,” a pleasing lyric written especially for this production, and Lewy serves a triumph of his own when he concludes the number by playing a guitar accompaniment for himself and rings the re- frain.

Let Sisters & Louline come on for charging bits of vaude and gets a cordial response from the audience with their harmony singing. They have a pleasing stage presence and dress perfectly for their back- ground.

In his usual manner, which is so funny that he puts a laugh before he turns a hand, Charles Brausers puts over musical nonsense consisting ele- vements and a jumbled gag. The folk of the English music hall variety. He is almost as big a hit as Morton’s “Blind.” Altogether “Blouoms” rules high for entertainment.

St. Louis Fox
Week Ending February 23
The stage attractions for the week included "The Moon and the Flume," a dance unit in beautiful settings which featured Ballet Supreme with the Butterfly Ballet, "My Turia," a plenteous atmosphere produced built around the theme song of "In Old Arizona," the sudden screen offer ventures was received well. Evelyn Wilson, popular comedienne,唱出了她的首支单曲，and sang a pleasing number called, "Everything I Do." Evelyn hasn't much of a voice, but her inimitable way of putting a song over is hard to beat and inimitable she appears. The Chester Hall Girls, are well received for their pleasing "Bellhop" routine. The Runaway Four pleased with their two-step blues, their comedy and dances got little response. The small fellow, saved the act from failing entirely. With a little more of their good trusting and their comedy cut in half this would be a very fine act.

Evelyn Wilson, stipulated how she plotted with her "Drunk" song. She was forced to beg off. Stone and Vernon adagio quartette received an extremely fine hand for their dancing drawing. The finale forced a curtain call.

Chicago Grand Opera
Week Ending March 8
Something new in the show entertainment was presented by the opera company this week. "Moultarme Madness" was the given name in which the operatic offering unfolded itself. It was presented with the exception of one announcement made by the leader, the rest of the program got along without him.

It was the intention of the theater to sit through a stagehow and not be compelled to applaud when not in the mood, merely to be polite and show their efficiency. Should the performers a chance to present their waves fast and snappy, and make use of the songs of their own merits, and not by the assistance of someone who would milk the audience for some unnecessary applause.

The idea is nothing new as far as motion picture theatre entertainment is concerned for several shows have been presented without the customary announcements. However, it is the colossal manner in which these entertainments conceived that presented it to the audience that struck a novel chord.

In this particular show the entire action took place in a setting, that of a city section of Paris, or what is more generally known as the Artists' Colony. The little studio studios, with their cutout effects enabled them in every way to do all the action, were not merely scribbled paintings but actual sets, constructed to resemble such homes. Truly it was one of the most original settings ever seen in a popular priced performance stage.

An ensemble of two was also decorated the set from various angles such as paving out of balcony windows and other such familiar poses among a greater number of sets. The costume wore by both actors as well as the rest of the cast were in keeping with the picture, and the make-up and the musical comedy production. In fact the producers that made use of a huge carnival gathering, and everything that was operatic was used to great advantage and jazz revel. It had sufficient diculty to please the high class element and enough popular strain to make it a very popular show and reserve in both to entertain each kind and offend no one.

The three outstanding specialty numbers were headed by Kirby and DeGraaf, a team of apache dancers. Their dance is a more thrilling and original style than the average dancer of this sort. Gertrude Fisher in a series of acrobatic stunts, surprised the audience with some of her unrepeatable turns and turns. This young lady's outlook on life is rather unusual, as she throws her favorite trick when she bends herself almost in two and appears to be the centre of conversation to the Lucky Boys and almost go over as big. However, they have not the polished finish and comic ability that is usually the case, and which still make them the peer of all other acrobatic shows.

Margaret Merle, as the prima donna of the show, had a good deal to do with the line formation of the ballet, dashing, dashing last but not to a less degree with their eccentric dancing and musical comedy taps. Many favorite songs of favorite musical comedies were staged with better finishing and costume effects in which Margaret Merle and Foster Yorkekill offered vocal duets. Not a dull moment was passed and something was going on all the time. No one was allowed to DS, which made the show no less sensational. Havin' a total of 21 acts, the story when the entire audience burst out with applause in appreciation for what had taken place.

Philadelphia Academy
Week Ending February 24
The news attending the theater this week noted many changes for the theater has been remodeled, equipped with new lighting effects, a new curtain and an enlarged stage, while a series of changes in presentation is also inaugurated, with Charlie Nelson as master of ceremonies. And a popular master of ceremonies. From the productions of the various entertainers are snapped to snap, but his return are witty and his sense is above the average. The stage program consists of a miniature revue in which a well trained chorus and a staccato siren, with a spreading roll, a pipe organ and a gong of the dull and dancing adagio dancers, Howell, Narri and Nabi, who are the hit of the show.
EXHIBITORS that huge At is rich a rose the remove the completed green Patti as duet carries John High are attendants.

"Busties of Long Ago," adds a comical touch to the presentation. The Patricia Sorel girls, one as a girl and the other as a huckle, do some stumping in the course of which, the huckles and the girls become separated, with the huckles doing some aimless meandering before finding their owners again.

Patsy Chapman and Gene Snyder are on next with "An Old Fashioned Wedding." About the only thing old in the number is the costume of the wedding attendants. The pair take the house by storm with the "Wedding Chant" number. In this dance, the sticks are chained together while the team dance around.

Al Mitchell and the Serenaders offer as their solo "Fan in Paradise." Enough said. Something ought to be done to remove these numbers from the units before they get so stale they crash with dryness. Even the excellent arrangement of the number, with special attention to the woods and etchings, did not save the skin. Another Al Mitchell, John Quinlan as the very incarnation of a jest of the song.

New Haven Olympia
Week Ending March 20

Nickneyege's Public revue "Bubbling Over" is the main stage show at the Olympia this week. Last Warning, basing on the well-known recording star is the best in the unit. The Gamble girls do three novel routines, one being an upside down dance, with the costumes giving one the impression of the girls dancing upside down. Markel & Team and Ray Hyatt are also in the show. The finale has real hubbles as a background with the acts stepping through for a great finish.

This effect was seen in Frank Tinney's show "Tickle Me" over seven years ago.

Tradition has it that while King Solomon was erecting the Temple he amused his workmen with a hand of wandering minstrels who interspersed their vocal and musical programs with jokes and wisecracks, which were so old even in those early days; that a. the completion of his labors the royal court presented a gala celebration of the greatest magnific- ence. For centuries they were lost to the world. But now all who have the voice of a song will always have an adimision may listen—Earl La Ver headliner with "Teens Off." tells them and adds one or two that others have never heard. When Mother Eve passed the apple saw to Father Adam.

Owen and Anderson in vocal specialties furnish a new act which was well received. The comedy is fresh and they know how to use it. "Duffy and 4gan with an original and in a good doll dance offered novel caperings and proved that sometimes humans are born without bone, or apparently so, as an ordinary rag doll would seem to one such twirings without disaster.

Alice Wellsman, too, a soprano, voices with a melodious voice and was extra well received. Twelve Gaamy-Hale dancing girls composed the chorus and introduced a novel and in a good doll dance the edification of the golf fields, and golf widows who eyed them respectfully.

Philadelphia Fox
Week Ending February 24

The Philadelphia Fox is looking forward to the overture "Chow of the Past," accompanied by a most ef-factive patriotic stage presentation representing three American soldiers heroically defending our country. The red light thrown on the scene, the waving flag, with the noise and dash of barking hounds make quite a realistic picture.

Coletta Ryan, beautifully gaured in white chiffon and ribbons, sings well, has voice of a song and wields a joke to a beautiful song and the appearance was maeguet. Paul Moore and Sammy Lewis are the type of entertainers that bring applause. They are vivacious, bustling with witty remarks and generally ready at any minute to make "whoopsies." They come hack a second time dressed as a bell hop and maid. This time they tap dance up and down the stage, turning at exactly the same time to top and bottom.

Producer Emmett Riegers comes through with his fourth consecutive success in Pin-Up Girls, the current stage show at the Alabama. Again he provides pleasing numbers against a most effective scenic background.

Art Dickinson is featured in several popular ballads and the picture given a number of titters. The eight Gould Girls go through some intricate and pretty dance routines that add much to the show. Well drilled, well costumed and within a good-looking box, they add a pleasing note of color and movement.

The Francis Trim, knock-about comedian, solves the performance with their antics, but they are nothing out of the ordinary.

The biggest individual hit of "Oh Pohak" is the special band number, "Tiger Ratz," which stops the show. Under the patronage of Bundmaster Eddie Guest the boys are forced to repeat this number at every performance, and they seem to enjoy it no less than the audience.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Please pardon my bothering you, but your interest in attention to a prominent subject, and your ability to tell you of something new and different that we are experimenting with—in fact, it seems such a success, that it’s no longer an experiment.

Because the public liked the organ with the Tiffany color scheme—to a Pennsylvania Market— I tried something on a larger scale this week with our showing of Universal’s Melody of Love. We are showing the moving picture, and I am sitting in and playing with the orchestra in the picture, and also many spots where there is no music otherwise. The picture, being all talking, has scope in a talking sequence that are silent, because the characters just haven’t anything to say, I guess, and as there is no synchronized music to fill in there, I can see the scenes a if I were playing the silent drama again. Then, as the talking is resumed, I fade down and play softly during some of the speeches, as is done on many other sound pictures. There are several long scenes that the organ seems to help solve a bit—for instance, the main battle scene, that has nothing synchronized except music and battle effects—so the organ plays appropriate battle music, and "My Buddy" themes as one wounded comrade is assisting the other— etc. I have it timed, so that as the music is resumed the organ comes on with the orchestra, or fades down as seems best. The picture opens and closes with the theme "My Sweetheart," and there is another place for the organ to cooperate with the unseen orchestra and to carry out the chaser where they leave off. Another place or two that worked well, was where a talking sequence was followed by a sloping one—and during the silence, or talking, the organ played the same song that was to follow, synchronized and the audiences were ready and expectant to the following.

It was a lot of work preparing all this, and memorizing the scenes—expected to do in the dark to the people’s attention undisturbed) but I think it was worth it, if comments from the patrons mean anything.

Incidently, Mr. Gallo, we had another novel experience the second night’s run of this picture. During the features, we were delayed for a short while due to part of the power circuit to the booth giving trouble, and being at the organ, I commenced trying to keep the audience quiet. As they gave evidence that they would like to sing—I began on "We Want You." As the words rang clearly, and the people got into the rhythm, the house was cleared and the audience was kept in order, to be sure. I believe it raised better than they ever did before.

Respectfully—Kenneth T. Wright, Lloyd’s theatre, Menomines, Mich.

Blue Laws Rapped
By Church Paper

Science and not religion should concede the right to dictate against thinking. Hence, the Sunday holiday, states an editorial of the Christian Century, published in Chicago. The position taken by the paper is that there is no question as to the need of weekly rest day for workers and that the canon law should not be enforced by police powers.

The conditions under which such a day should be established is determined by science, not by any appeal to religious dogma.

ORGANIST

LEW WHITE

Lew White, one of America's premier organists and head of the White Institute of Organ at 1699 Broadway, New York City, and exclusive Brunswick recording artist and honoree at the opening session at the centennial of the Roxy Theatre, New York, when that movie cathedral opened its doors to the general public, will be heard first time on March 15th, 1927.

It would be amiss not to mention the fact that Lew White secured his musical training from his father, Herman White, who at that time was instructor of Philadelphia's outstanding music masters. For eight years, until White reached the age of 14, his father tutored him almost to the point of concert pianist. He then went abroad to continue his studies.

Upon his return to America after three years, Lew came to the realization that he preferred being organist by far than a pianist, and under the able guidance of Dr. Alexander H. Matthews of the University of Pennsylvania, was soon considered as a past master and an outstanding figure at the organ.

It would take too many paragraphs to get into detail for his masterful technique and the way he handled his instrument. The popular organist began to be heard in the rapid rise of Lew White. Suffice to say he started his career as a theatre organist in 1918 when he was given the opportunity to tour in the largest picture theatres for the Stanley Company of America, after being with them for eight seasons.

He was engaged by Roxy to open the world's largest moving picture theatre at that time. After this, things went really well. He continued at the Roxy Theatre for one year after its opening, at which time he left his post to make more of his time to his school which he had opened a few months prior and which was making such rapid strides that he thought it was time to institute of organ, rather than continue at the Roxy Theatre.

His broadcasting as a solo and exclusive National Broadcasting Company artist with his work as an Adelin Bar-artist. His broadcasts kept Lew pretty much in the limelight, which increased his popularity week by week.

On Saturday, March 9th, Lew White once more returned to the Roxy in the capacity of Roxy's organist for one more year. Now with his school running along in a good manner, he feels that he can give more devoted considerable time to his theatre work and has accepted Roxy's offer to return to his old post as chief organist of the Roxy Theatre.

As soloist on the Red Network of WEA T on Saturday evenings and on the Blue Network of WJZ on Monday evenings, Lew White has been receiving mail from all corners of the globe, even so far as from British Guiana, stating that they have heard and enjoyed his programs.

Being a Brunswick recording artist has also added to White's popularity. He is still a bachelor, good looking and considered as a singer. Single girls please note.

The Columbia system, whose key station in New York is WABC, is giving the National Broadcasting Company quite a run these days. Both companies have a coast to coast hookup of stations, and they vie with each other constantly for the public's ear. We have said that they make with each other and settle those controversies. It is merging days anyway.

My idea of a great job is general production managed by a man who is in the position is held by one of the sweetest boys I ever had the pleasure of meeting—John Fingerlin. Just a regular fellow. More power to you.

P.S.: Next week's column will contain the autobiography of Fred Kinsley, managing director of the organists in all Radio-Keith-Orpheum Theatres.

"LADY OF THE PAVEMENTS"

I SUPPOSE one should always be a gentleman. It would be a gentlemanly thing to applaud this or any of Mr. Griffith's latter-day productions. It would be a gentlemanly thing to join the chorus of applause for Miss (or is it Senorita?) Lupe Velez, for surely the lady's appeal is to the male gallantry. But it is not gentlemanly to misrepresent and hence this reverse approach to the statement that I don't think a great deal of "Lady of the Pavements" and I'm not enthralled by Lupe Velez as she appears, cavorts and carols in it. (Which is a bit strange because I did think she was excellent in "The Gaucho").

The picture is one of those curiously things (Napolacome if I'm not mistaken) wherein the unembittered lady trains a girl of inferior station to entrap and wed the noble gentleman who has scoured her. Jettta Goudal is the lady, and properly wicked; William Boyd is the gentleman and properly upright; Lupe Velez is the girl of inferior station and I suppose, since there were gilgly aplenty during her Gishy pyrotechnics in the early footage and her Walkesque melodies later on, she isn't bad either. But the lady was present in the flesh on the occasion of my visit to the United Artists cinema and she overflowed into the aisles, into impersonations, into jazz songs and even into the bestowing of osculatory favors upon the very young ladies in the audience. This—left it to you—is too much.

As to the picture, for of course the lady cannot be everywhere with it, it isn't bad save in one particular. The noble young man's choice of wife must be approved by his emperor and yet he somehow marries the setup. A minor fault perhaps, but annoying. Singing, direcing, etc., are admirable. My other complaint is that it all seems more like a song-plugging enterprise, for which reason I'll not name the ditty, than a motion picture. (Maybe I'm old-fashioned.)

"TIDE OF EMPIRE"

WHERE I not the laziest individual in these parts, and were I not of the opinion that this page should convey reactions of one who simply sits in the cinema and reports what he sees, I should ascertain whether "Tide of Empire" was shortened for the Oriental theatre run. It begins as a super-production, continues in slow, increasing tempo, builds interest and suspense steadily, then clicks to a close that comes all too soon. If this is all the picture, it is keenly disappointing. But I suspect it is not. And so let us consider that I have said nothing pro or con in the matter.

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTE"

I STAYED away from "Alias Jimmy Valentine" as long as I could. Everyone told me it was excellent. I had seen it, man and boy, stage and screen, too many times. It had William Haines in it. But I had to go, finally, and so now I have to report that it is excellent, that William Haines is excellent in it, that Lionel Barrymore is too, and that the others, of whom there are many, are of like ability. (Now please don't make this story again, Hollywood, at least until my offspring is old enough to cover it for me.)

I am genuinely delighted to find that young Mr. Haines speaks fluently, brightly, much as he acts. I think he'll be a lot better vocal than he ever was mute. Sure enough to promise, here and now, that I'll look at his next picture whatever it may be. (Barring "East Lynne").

"THE RED DANCE"

IF I were not, as I have confessed, the laziest individual in these parts (and probably there's no really good reason for restricting the statement that way!) I should delve into the files and unearth the name of the bulky gentleman who plays the "cabaret of the Volga" in "The Red Dance." This guy is good. Maybe it's his size, though I'm sure that's only a contributory factor, and maybe it's shyness. I think it's the latter. Anyway, he's the outstanding figure in a picture that makes the other Russian-revolution things look pale, wan and vague by comparison. Of course Dolores Del Rio is the star, and super as such, but a story of this character throws emphasis upon the male participants. In this case, upon the anonymous gentleman mentioned above. (Anybody know his name?) Not that Miss Del Rio is other than colorful, fiery, intense in her role, but that he is more so.

You know, of course, the story. You know, too, the high favor bestowed upon the picture by those who have attended it in great dozens where it has been exhibited. I can do no more than to confirm the good judgment of those more fortunate persons who saw it before it passed before these eyes. (The world, I venture to hazard, is becoming more intelligent.)

"THE SPIELER"

AND NOW, on the echoes of "The Barker," comes "The Spieler." Alan Hale scores a distinct hit in it as an amusing, hardboiled grifter who is softened by love and turned honest.

Rene Adoree has some of the appeal which she exercised in "The Big Parade." She is always attractive except in profile. Her voice does not help her a great deal. "The Spieler" is synchronized, with occasional talking sequences. These are especially effective in the meb scenes which emphasize the denouement and the climax of the picture. Gay Garnett works these scenes up in a fine crescendo.

The story deals with Flash (Hale) and his partner, Luke (Clyde Cook), grifters, who join Cleo's (Adoree) show, which she is trying to keep on the level, in the capacity of spieler and tight rope artist.

Red Moon (Fred Kooler) runs the midway gang, as tough a crowd of villains as ever shot a racketeer.

Flash and Luke work in with Red Moon till they are caught in the act of lifting the wallets of unsuspecting patrons by Cleo, with whom Flash has fallen in love. A couple of these percaillilos and Flash turns straight and has a rumpus with Moon. There is the usual misunderstanding when Cleo thinks that Flash, who is now aiding her against the grifters, is still crooked.

Luke overhears Moon plan a plant on Flash and is shot as he walks the wire high above the crowd. A very effective scene. Flash finds out who did it and goes Berserker. A really swell fight ensues. It ends in the death of Moon, the mutilation of his crones and the inevitable fade-out of the blood stained hero embracing the pale but voluptuous Cleo.

Good entertainment with lots of local color which does not slow the movement for a second.
THE THEATRE

Old Ideas Go Over if You Make Them Look New, Spencer Finds

Juvenile amateur acts—a children's contest—an illustrated song with community singing. Nothing very complicated about that, is there? Indeed, it's a combination of three old exploitation ideas. Yet it brought the Walkerville theatre to the top at Walkerville, Ont. All of which shows that anything is new if it is presented in a fresh way.

Now the Walkerville theatre is a neighborhood house of 1,250 seats, situated on the dividing line between the two cities of Windsor and Walkerville, across the river from Detroit. Manager C. T. Spencer had all the worries that every manager has, if his house is similar to this one, and that the matinee business, especially Saturday, again very stiff competition.

The Saturday Problem
Up to a few months ago Spencer was playing to only 300 and 400 children each Saturday, depending entirely on the picture for their attendance. He found it practically impossible to have the long feature attraction appeal to both the adults and children equally on the last half of each week, and when one of these occasions would come, that is, a picture which would appeal to the adults more than the children, he would without exception have a very poor matinee.

He saw that what he needed was something outside the pictures and vaudeville to attract the youngsters, something that would please them specially and guarantee continually good matinee business.

For the past few years he had been using Amateur Nights, or Opportunity or Local Talent Nights, as an extra feature on Monday evenings and had always had the pleasure of good business on this night. He could see no reason why a special amateur show along with a contest and community singing would not do the trick for Saturday. This he did, but in a very much smaller way than on Mondays, and it has made a big difference to this house, not only on Saturday but the rest of the week as well, for the children are the biggest boosters in the world for anything which they like, and they have created a lot good will for this house.

Juniors, Contests, Songs
For this special entertainment for the children Spencer engages two juvenile amateur acts, singing and dancing mostly, presenting these first. Immediately after this he puts on a contest, in which perhaps as many as twelve of fifteen of the children compete. All this is held on the stage. It makes the ones in the competition a part of the show and also makes great fun for the audience. Following this comes the old, old, illustrated song played by the entire orchestra, in which the entire house joins and sings.

That summarizes Spencer's special entertainment, and there is nothing marvelous about it. It is just a combination of three of the oldest stunts in show business. But what it has done for this house is remarkable. At the first Saturday matinee at which this was presented, there was the regular number of paid admissions, that is, 300. The following week he played to over 500 and since that time the theatre has been averaging over 1,200. For two weeks he had the house filled to capacity, with over 1,300 in at 1:30 p.m. and a line a block and a half long still waiting to buy tickets and not a chance for a seat for two hours. Spencer ran an extra performance and over 300 remained the two hours, bought tickets and were admitted. When they do this it certainly proves that they must like this extra bit.

That is the story of pulling a house to the top, at last for one day a week, and the way things are going now, the condition will continue for some time.

American Ballyhoo
Used in Bombay To Exploit "Blood Ship"

For the first time American methods were used to exploit Columbia's "The Blood Ship" was advertised by the use of floats made to simulate ships. All carrying banners, in big black letters to advertise the name of the picture. These floats were driven through the city before and during the run of the picture and created a sensation not only in Bombay but also in Burma and Ceylon.

Bridge Tables Help Exploit The Seattle

Bob Blair, manager of the Seattle Publix has managed to swing a nifty after a lot of trouble with the city and other drawbacks. On the third mezzanine floor he installed a bridge playing room with forty tables. Patrons while waiting for shows can play without charge as the cards and score cards are provided gratis. A local bridge club has booked the place for every Friday until next April. All this means extra admissions to the theatre.

Keep One Admission Price and Friends Emil Franke Finds

There are many theatre owners and managers throughout the country who are wondering how high or low they should maintain their admission prices. Whatever they do in this respect, it is important that they maintain a constant admission price, according to Emil Franke, manager of the State Theatre, Milwaukee.

Franke believes that the public loses confidence in a theatre when the prices for admission are constantly being changed. "They cannot see the reason why a theatre should raise prices for one picture and lower them for another," he stated. "And I believe that in line with this feeling on the part of the public, the theatre manager and the theatre owner should set a general admission which will meet all conditions. It is rather aggravating to some people to come to a theatre expecting to pay a certain price to get in, only to find that the price has been raised for this special production."

It is Franke's belief that the maintaining of a general admission price in a theatre will create confidence on the part of the public. People, when deciding which show they want to go to see, will usually patronize the one where the general price admission remains the same, he holds.

Kiddie Club Creates Goodwill and Pulls Crowds to Shows

Every theatre manager in the country who hasn't started a Kiddie Club wants to, because he has heard of the success that theatre owners are enjoying with it, in practically all sections of the United States. However, there are certain fundamental operating rules which must be observed if a Kiddie Club is to be a success, according to Don Smith, manager of the Lake Theatre, Milwaukee, who has built up some of the largest and most successful Kiddie Clubs in the north and middle west.

"The first requisite for a successful Kiddie Club is to inject a personal note into the show," declares Smith. "Boys and girls are usually a happy, active lot and they want to be entertained, and occasionally get a little boisterous. They like to cheer the hero and things of that sort, which, of course, the adult does not indulge in. If you encourage the children in applauding the commendable points of a play, then you will have gone a long way toward winning their interest as well as friendship."

According to Smith, another important thing is to get certain boys and girls to appear on the stage occasionally and "do their stuff." This always creates a great deal of interest. Boys and girls are very enthusiastic in their support of someone they know, he said. The encouraging of local talent and the staging of a few acts at the Kiddie Shows will oftentimes pack the house.

If you schedule interesting pictures and book good local talent acts, then you will have created a greater interest in the Kiddie Shows which will make them a success. And when a manager has built up a good Kiddie Club, the children will go to their homes and boast of the theatre to their friends and parents, according to Smith. In this way the theatre is benefited in still another manner.

Addison Made Mayor for Day as Parting Tribute

BUFFALO, March 9—Two years ago, H. M. Addison, whose contributions to "The Theatre" are familiar to the readers of this department went to Buffalo from Binghamton, to open the Great Lakes theatre.

Last week he left town to become assistant to M. E. Comerford and as a final honor he was made mayor of the city for one day. In his short stay in the town he made more friends than any other man, in so short a time.

As a present, Addison received a wardrobe trunk. Early in March he sails for Europe and on his return will take over his new duties.

Theatre And Newspaper

Put Over Garbo-Gilbert

The Austin Minn. Daily Herald and the State theatre went into a huddle on the showing of the latest Garbo-Gilbert picture, "A Woman of Affairs." The two offered $5.00. $3.00 and $2.00 prizes to the residents of Austin who sent in the cleverest piece of conversation supposedly taking place between Greta Garbo and John Gilbert whose pictures appeared daily in the paper.
Neighborhood Manager’s Job to Make Friends, Exhibitor Urges

The theatre manager who operates a neighborhood theatre has a foremost duty in making as many friends as possible, according to Frank Cook, manager of the Juneau theatre, Milwaukee. And it’s not so easy at that.

“The successful managing of a neighborhood theatre requires an ability to make friends with people,” declared Mr. Cook. “It means that a manager must spend a little time visiting the various business places and winning the friendship of the business men. It also means that the manager must stand in the lobby of the theatre and greet people when they come to see the picture he is showing. The latter is very important if you want to make your house an individual one.

“A theatre is not a mere automaton where people shove the admission price through a window, get a ticket and then march into the theatre. A theatre is managed by people who can be human and who can service a patron after the admission price has been paid.”

The manager of a large theatre has a bigger job in this respect than the manager of a small house, Cook says. The large theatre plays to a large number of people, and therefore has more goodwill to create and more to maintain than the small theatre.

It also is important for a theatre manager in a neighborhood house to make the acquaintance of school teachers, ministers, and leaders of civic organizations, believes Cook. In this way the theatre manager will be able to get more co-operation from them whenever he wants to exploit a picture.

Many times these classes of people make suggestions for pictures that the manager actually can obtain and play. Then these folks will lend an active hand in exploiting them. This is particularly true of religious and educational pictures.

Politics Via Vitaphone
Beats the Old Soapbox:

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, March 5.—Conducting a majority campaign via the Vitaphone is the modern mode introduced by former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, who is seeking the republican nomination for the chief executive post at the city hall. A five-minute Vitaphone subject featuring Kiel is now doing the rounds of the wired houses, having its premier showing at the Ambassad". At the close of this run a Vitaphone performance by Mayor Victor J. Miller, who is Kiel’s opponent, will be given at the Skouras houses.

The “Wedding March” front used at the Strand theatre, Minneapolis. The idea of music was carried out by the use of black notes on a white and gray background which, through the rippling lines, gave the impression of the movement of a musical composition. Large reproduction of Erich von Stroheim’s head completed the metaphor between the theatre front and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

The Great Civic Event of 1929

Philadelphia was blanketed with signs for Mastbaum Day, feting the opening of the Mastbaum Memorial theatre, February 27. The entire city was decorated with flags and a large parade was the climax to the celebration, that is, the celebration preceding the opening, which of course was the real climax.

Looks Like Season
Pass but It’s Just Boost for “Spieler”

At Fournet, new manager of the Publix Empire, San Antonio, devised a clever card for the exploitation of “The Spieler,” when he played the attraction. He had printed 3,000 cards, which at first glance looked like a season pass, but further persual showed the elated recipient that it was only a cleverly worded stunt for “The Spieler.” The wording starts, “Don’t let the SEASON PASS without seeing,” etc. The cards got the attention quick, and created talk. They were passed out on the streets, at hotels, and to luncheon clubs.

Firemen Help Theatre
Manager Light Sign

(Meriden, Conn., March 5—A. W. Gillis, manager of the Palace theatre called the firemen to help his sign. A thirty foot sign was recently put up and at that time bulbs were not available. Yesterday Gillis received the bulbs but could not find a steeplejack to put them in; Gillis called the fire department and fire chief John F. Donovan gave him aid. He sent a ladder truck and fireman Frank Sarrazin climbed skyward and screwed in the bulbs.

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

SOUTH OF PANAMA: Chesterfield drama, with Carole Lombard, Dwight Frye, Ralph Bellamy, Miss Mehan, Stanley Watson, and Harry Davenport. Directed by Frank McDonald. Released by Columbia. Length 6,484 feet. Released March 15th.

TYPE AND THEME: In a little town South of Panama, Doc Lew is having a hard time trying to get out of town without a passport. He succeeds, however, by outwitting the guards. Further on in his journey, Doc finds Emily, an InternationalExpress Company, in trouble with her husband. Emily agrees to the plan of El Torro and Coreno. The purpose of this is to cause a quarrel between the two towns, thus creating a market for the contraband ammunition and to make the two brothers, who are in love with Carmelita, decide to make a clean breast of the whole business. El Torro decides Emily is shot and Coreno is taken captive. Doc, who had helped to save Emily's life, notifies Pete, and they capture the two brothers.

TYPE AND THEME: John Far, a beautiful son of war lords, his left hand is caught in a trap and taken back to Chinatown. His father, who is a man of blood and honor, decides to take him to Europe. Another long war starts, and John edits to save his son. A bloody chase, and John has no time to pay attention to his son's events. The war is over, and John rescues his son. He is an Englishman, and takes his son to Europe. He gets acquainted with other members of John's family, and John is happy. He marries Jane, his daughter, and John is happy. John Marries, and John is happy. John lives in Europe, and John is happy. John Marries, and John is happy. John lives in Europe, and John is happy.

TYPE AND THEME: A murder mystery. Eastlake, a young brother of Lady Ware and her half brother's nephew, is murdered while a house party is on. Lady Ware is suspected, her. She is arrested by Inspector Brown, who looks for her. She is found guilty, and she is sent to prison. The trial begins in court, and Lady Ware is found guilty. She is sent to prison, and she dies in prison.

TYPE AND THEME: In which Barthelmess sings and even plays the piano. Jerry Larracue, who is a cripple, is killed by a bull, who leaves a paw and panache with fingers, is framed by Span- doni, rival sinister, and sent up the river. Barths goes to get even with Spanodi as soon as he gets out of prison. The Ingenue tells him that the "worsted river must find its way to sea." A prison band is formed and plays over the radio.

Blowin' 'er out—a test in lung power conducted in a scene from Tiffany-Stodd's "The Days of My Youth," with Wallis and Shearer.

TYPE AND THEME: George Bancroft as "The Wolf."
Not to overstep Ulysses Cooper stock, he is faced with disaster unless he can acquire a loan from Stargus, his bitter enemy. The Wolf succeeds where his business associate, Graham, pulls a trick on Stargus. Stargus is freed, and Stargus is taken to the police station. The Wolf is freed, and Stargus is taken to the police station. Stargus is freed, and Stargus is taken to the police station.

TYPE AND THEME: Ben Golds, who has been given a fine looking for his child. He leaves for America and meets Boe, a giant who is seen later in America. In New York John gets a job and sends his son, Brian, to a boarding school. The pupils are taken to a casino. There the instructor sees Ben and tells him that Brian disapproved the school because his mother is a red hot. He wants to see Ben again. Only in later years is Brian revealed to him as his mother. Brian is a daze man. "My Mother."

TYPE AND THEME: Janace Driscoll, who has Nortis and Edward Davis. Directed by Eric C.

TYPE AND THEME: Jim Kirkham, young man who with his father of art school, is invited to the house of life, his love. A valuable pearl is stolen, Eve and Jim are dropped away to a strange situation. Many things happen in the mystery house and Jim finds out what the seven steps are.

NOTHING TO WEAR: Columbia comedy drama from the story by Peter Milne, with Jacqueline Lonan, Theodore von Eltz, Bryant Washburn, Jane Westum William Irvin and Elsie Flynn. Directed by Er- C. Keaton. Released November 5th, 1928. Length 5,700 feet.

TYPE AND THEME: Jackie, paused at her house, and hearing someone in the basement, asks her husband to come down. Does he wants, to go on old friend, Tommy. The next day, he meets the wrong person, and she is surprised to find that she is going to marry. A young girl is at her house and when the coat comes, Tommy says he bought it for her. Phil snaps at her husband, and she is surprised to find that she is going to marry.

Cal Stonely is chosen to take up the range and save the cattle. Settlers think Cal destined and disposed of, disposed of the cattle. Settlers think Cal destined and disposed of, disposed of the cattle. Cal is taken to court and found not guilty, but he is treated and tied to a runaway horse. Tarzan saves him, Cal round up the steers, and Cal round up the steers.

Censorship Defeats Own Aim, Says Pastor

(Special to the Herald-World)

BOSTON, March 5.—Censorship of motion pictures as an own ends is a defeated venture, according to an opinion given by Rev. Horace Westwood, D.D., from the pulpit of the Arlington Street Church.

"My inclination is all against censorship. It defeats the very ends it has in view," said Rev. Dr. Westwood.

TRYING TO ESCAPE FROM DEATH — Ralph K. Dorgan,润, was arrested by the police last night in front of the old home of his parents in the Morris Park neighborhood. He had been released on bond for the murder of his father, but he was caught at the time of the arrest of his mother, Mrs. Ralph K. Dorgan, who had been unable to pay the bond.

"That police arrest," said the detective, "is to be made a warning that crime will not pay."

The movie shows Armett, bearing its way into the Arctic circle, amid icy flocks and the great walls of stretches of desolation from Nome to Herald Island.

Speedometer for Careful Autoists Puts Over Picture

Fred Meyer and Harry Wren certainly pulled a good expet at the Alhambra, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. "Red Hot Speed." They rigged it up a huge speedometer in front of the box office with a lot of wording on it advertising the picture. The number of careful drivers were posted on this board every day. If one of these drivers would come out to the box office and present his license registration blank, thereby proving he was a careful driver, this stunt made the drivers interested in the picture.

The numbers were changed each day. Harry Wren stood in front of the theatre with a paper and pencil and got the license numbers of careful drivers, but said it was worth all the trouble.

Eyeing up I still maintain that Vitaphone, Movietone, Photophone are all tones of the vision the screen places before the eyes, in short—“Vision Tone.” My position in the show world is so small that I do not think my opinion in such a great influence as they are screened may start some of you powers in the show world to more deep thought on the subject of a possible management of the whole of the general public has. Theatres are for family recreation, in most cases and the average family desires nothing so much as wholesome pictures which speak to any people in an interesting, but cleanly way. We have been in this business nearly six years and a careful study of our records shows that the receipts on the clean pictures were invariably greater than on the “cheesefactory” type, as J. C. aptly expounds it. Once is a distinctly family theatre and we are ashamed to show many of the pictures that we do show, but we do not know what to use—less possible in them until they are screened and we cannot take the time to screen them before showing them to our audience—and besides it would be necessary to cut out half the time the theatre were open. “Out of the Ruins” ruined Bartholomew here forever.

War or no war, the sickening love affair, closed over as “suffering,” should not have been crammed down the throats of our younger generation. There were thousands of good, honest, loving affairs, that I wanted until their boys came home and boys who had good sense and nerve to wait, so why not use something of the past in proper style, and give the other type of which we have had an abundance.

As to the future of the small theatre, is it not possible to have regular vaudeville instead of pictures? The talking pictures will undoubtedly throw a lot of the vaudeville people out of their city jobs and although the small towns cannot pay city salaries, a circuit could

How About “Vision Tone”

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—To the Editor: After having read through the various headings and the different names suggested for the Talking Pictures, I have finally decided to submit the name “Vision Tone.” I’ve got a few things to say about it.

Let us go back to the Road Show days of the “Birth of a Nation” with its vast traveling casts, exponents, and admission prices. The pictures were perfect, the hands who worked the sound effects so that some of the parts had life-tone and it was these things that helped the picture over with the public. Likewise the cracking of the ice in “Way Down East” the cannon fire in “The Big Fad-rade” and “What Price Glory.” And others—all were Vision Toned to inject life into them to thrill and make the audience live the scenes before them. We also had “Over the Hill,” “Broken Windings,” and “The Miracle Man” which could make you feel the tears coming and you almost lived the pictures with only a small amount of narration. Then with the talking injected by a large orchestra; a difference even in those three great pictures.

Then we come to August 5-6, 1926, at the premiere of Vitaphone at the Warner Brothers theatre in New York, as it opened with the address of Will Hays, the vice-pres. of Mr. Hayes was on the screen and his voice came forth naturally. I asked you was not it a vision, toned with life. Misha Elman played “Humoresque.” What did the audience think? The violin of course, and the sound that came forth was the tone of the violin or the vision. The eyes were on the violin and the bow and surely the ear would not expect to hear voices or talk from a violin but the ear did expect to hear tone and it did hear it. However, it was very weak, not for a minute, it was the sound of a man playing a violin but the illusion was perfect.

Then came Ray Smee who played banjo, ukulele and guitar; all a vision of a man playing but the ear expected tones as the eye visioned the different instruments. Finally came the words “Don’t you think the music was played on the Vitaphone by the ‘New York Philharmonic.’ Ah! I can read your mind now you say Vision Tone will not answer. Granted in part but not wholly. As one of an audience absorbed in looking at a great feature picture, how many times have you ever looked at the orchestra as they played the music score? Not many times have you and these few times were when you were watching the projected picture and not when the pictures were being shown. Therefore “Vision Tone” will answer for the orchestra accompaniment as the audience does not expect to vision the orchestra because the fact is set upon the mind of the people that music is played in accompaniment to the showing of pictures and the ear is alert to register the sound of the music. When that is heard it satisfies our desires in that direction and we would expect it to exist, but it looked empty before to most of us with the exception of overtures, when the spots were turned on the orchestra and the music started light, helping here and there in the semi-darkness.

Summing it all up, no matter whether it be the cheers of a football crowd, the voice of a traitor on an aeroplane motor, the guns of a battleship, the rumble of a volcano, the cry of a person, the bark of a dog, the sound of a train, the crash of gangsters’ gun, the tap-tap of a stage dancer, the playing of a musician, or the spoken voices of the actors themselves, it is only the tone of the vision you see. Into Vision Tone.

* * *

Take “On Trial” for example. You are almost moved to tears by the pleading of the various stars who have witness parts; and then as the Court Clerk (Fred Kelsey) swears in the next one, you have to laugh by the manner in which he does it, and then as Bert Lytell is caught with Pauline Frederick and Holmes Herbert our excitement is keyed up and then, as the revolver rings out, it all comes on a heart stoppage. But then,

Then as the pleas of little Vondell Varr rang forth, how we had to fight to keep back the tears, but Fred Kelsey saved us in a moment. His performance of the judge, the court, the arguments of the defense attorney and the prosecution, the arguments of the court, the sound of the various pictures or visions we saw.

* * *

Looking at Vision Tone from the point of injection into the advertising of the pictures themselves.

“On Trial”

“Interference” 100 per cent Full Vi-Fully Vision Toned

The “Patriot”

Partly “Vision Tone”

Then looking into the future when pictures will be technicolor why it will be very easy to say Color Vision Tone.

Then way down in the future when some thoughtful company uses drops to go along with their pictures to simulate with the set used with act and with a system of lighting make it as near a human act as possible, why Vision Tone will be necessary.

I, like everyone else, started at first to coin an elaborate word and after work in the local library I had one coined, but after search and through that amount of misunderstandings I decided that the talking pictures could not be anything else but “Vision Tones.”

Your choice of “Audience” is very good and if the public as a whole would understand it as readily as you do it could not be improved but take audience cut off the “ce” and you have Audien. Don’t you think some people would think that it had something to do with audience?

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

RICHARD DIX — The Winners — CLARA BOW

The race is run—and the "My Favorite Players" contest, first to represent the vote of the exhibitor's immediate family as well as that of the exhibitor himself, has resulted in victory for two Paramount players, the vivacious Clara Bow, and the stalwart Richard Dix. Miss Bow winner among the feminine players, had her lead narrowed at the finish, but she came out with a total of 91 votes, 26 to the good. Dix, after starting and standing in second for the greater part of the race, gradually overtook his nearest rival to win with a total of 59 votes 7 to the clear. 'Twas a great campaign, mates. The ballots came from no less than 100 theatres, located all over North America, in hamlet and metropolis.

Jill Crawford, of M G M, finally beat out Colleen Moore for second place, getting 65 votes, while the First National star captured third position with 44 votes. Two M G M players followed Dix among the men: Lon Chaney taking second place with 52 votes; and William Haines, third with 44 votes. The complete final standings are given on the next page.

COLUMBIA

OBJECT, ALMONY: Lois Wilson—49%. February 10-12. It was a fine program feature. I did not have much of a crowd on it due to the weather being so cold. Will some kind brother tell me where I can purchase one of those fur-lined features the Herald-World suggested for my use? Six reels—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LONE WOLF’S DAUGHTER: Bert Lytell—Very fine picture that failed at the box office. Please all that saw it. Lytell good.—J. W. Bason, Shadona theatre, Mount Shasta, Cal.—General patronage.

THE LONE WOLF’S DAUGHTER: Bert Lytell—50%. February 7-8. Do you know, boys, Columbia puts out some mighty good stuff, and they were reasonable till they sent the Columbia exchange out in Nebraska two new managers. One had worked for United Artists and the other for M.G.M. Oh! do I have to tell you? Well, here it is: They only wanted to raise my film rental 800 per cent, so I don’t know how long I will use their product. Six reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

SUBMARINE: Jack Holt—49%. Despite weak direction, this picture is really a special. Book it and boost it—you can get all sorts of extra business. There are few silent pictures on the market as good as this. Nine reels.—F. H. Kershaw, Tivoli theatre, Winnipeg, Man.—General patronage.

THE TIGRESS: Special cast—February 12-15. Everybody said punk, and I agreed. It would have been fair if they had not turned it into a Western in the last reel.—D. A. Rhyner, Rialto theatre, Hebron, N. D.—Small town patronage.

THE WIFE’S RELATIONS: Shirley Mason—February 14-18. At my place Shirley will outdraw 30 per cent over the alleged Big Stars who get their names in the lights of Broadway. A good program picture with a good story and supporting cast. Will please most of them. Six reels.—William E. Tragard, Trags theatre,Neilsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BEWARE OF BLONDES: Special cast—February 5-6. Good program picture with a good title. Six reel.—William E. Tragard, Trags theatre, Neilsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE SCARLET LADY: Special cast—January 15-16. One of the best program pictures played here this winter. Have played many specials that did not please as did this one. Don’t let the big fellows tell you Columbia is weak in product. This pleased everyone and drew well—C. V. Hunsberg, Parkersburg, la.—General patronage.

OBJECT, ALMONY: Lois Wilson—February 5-6. Lots of comments on this one. All good. Columbia seems to have the pictures this year. Have played five of the new ones and find them excellent. Seven reels.—C. V. Hunsberg, Parkersburg, la.—General patronage.

First National

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: Special cast—February 2-3. One of the pictures you only see once in a long time. Good, clean, human, and with a lot of heart interests. Brings people out who seldom go to a show. So many have read the book, it is sure to draw and please. Had cold weather and bad roads here, so didn’t go over as it should have. Fine is what we say. Eight reels.—F. O. Litsch, Royal theatre, Hopkins, Mo.—General patronage.

BURNING DAYLIGHT: Milton Sills—Good program picture. Story of the Alaskan gold rush days. When the map of North America flashes on the screen, and the chain begins to revolve around it, you may know you are going to see a good program. First National pictures are O.K. for us.—F. O. Litsch, Royal theatre, Hopkins, Mo.—General patronage.

18-19. Maynard does about all the stunts known in horsemanship in this contest. As one of his favorite scenes—H. Hunger, Parkersburg, In.—General patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—70%. February 13-14. This is always a good choice, and one everyone liked. Seven reels.—M. W. Hughes, Colonial theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Small town patronage.

SYNTHETIC SIN: Colleen Moore—50%. February 14. Cannot get a big turnout on Colleen. Have run all the other Seven reels.—M. W. Hughes, Colonial theatre, Astoria, Ill.—Small town patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—18%. December 31-35. For some reason I failed to report on this picture when I played it. I am glad I can say I got it. I believe all house records for admission charged and pleased more people than any picture we ever played. Why? Because it is by far the best picture of this type of the screen, including “Wings,” and because we exploited it as we should. In addition, we churned out a picture with our sound outfit and obtained wonderful results. A few of our patrons had never seen a picture in Atlanta and Birmingham but came to see it here again. They told me that our presentation was equal to that in the big house. Wake up, fellows, and get behind your pictures and quit looking at the stars losing their drawing power. If you don’t show the interest you should in your programs, can you expect your patrons to show any? Congratulations, Colleen, on “Lilac Time,” which will go down as one of the outstanding pictures of all time. Nine reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram’s theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BABY: Alice White—45%. January 21-22. Not a world beater but drew unusual business. Alice has quite a following now, but they are better off than they were from the cast on from now on, because she overshadowes Alice White in every way. They have been best in Iris if they will only give her a break. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram’s theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

OH KAY: Colleen Moore—February 1-2. Well, Colleen has a number of admirers here and they brazened the elements to see her in “Oh Kay,” which was very well liked. Good show, everybody pleased. Seven reels.—Arch E. Moc, Rock theatre, Maysville, W. Va.—Small town patronage.

OH KAY: Colleen Moore—February 17-18. Several exhibitors have complained that Colleen is slipping. I have been thinking that always they use to blame for it. Instead of slipping here she is gaining popularity with every picture, but yet, we, We. We still exploit her pictures just as Colleen Moore should be exploited. Recently an exhibitor informed me that he did not make money on pictures. So I asked him what he was doing. He was using as the advertising he was using on her pictures and found that he theoreitcally useless to advertise according to the public knew as well as it known Colleen Moore. There was the answer to why he was not doing the business he should have done. “Oh Kay” is a good subject for Colleen, and if you don’t make money with it, it is your fault, not Colleen’s. Get behind her pictures as you should and you will have no complaint. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram’s theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

FRED: Double cast—58%. February 13-14. I think this is the best Fox special so far this year. Eleven reels.—Henry Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robinsona, Pa.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast—March 12-13. Very good program, but too long and overemphasized by exchanges. Fox aims to get most of the receipts. Did not make any money for us, as we paid too much for it. Good war story, and acting excellent. Good clean story. Eleven reels.—F. O. Litch, Royal theatre, Hopkins, Mo.—General patronage.

FLEETWING: Flying—42%. February 1-2. This is a very good picture. I think the horse is lovely, and the dour scenes are wonderful also. Print and photography good. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, la.—General patronage.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST, STREET ANGEL: Seven reels—April 10-14. Both very good. “Mother Knows Best” is no special, however. Business here is mediocre due to tremendous business done with day run by, and, extreme cold weather.—F. H. Kernsh, Travit theatre, Winnipeg, Man.—General patronage.

PREF AND PEP: Special cast—Don’t be afraid to play this one. Did a good business. Nater Carroll is very pretty and clever.—D. R. McConnell, Conto, Chico, Calif.—General patronage.

PREF AND PEP: Fox Junior Stars—39%. Boy, what a picture! Just as good as “West Point.” A smash program really. This is the sort of Fox that will outgrow all their so-called specials. No exhibitor can go wrong on this one. Good for family patronage especially. Six reels.—F.
The Runners-Up

Both M G M stars. Lon Chaney (left) was finally tossed out of the lead in the "My Favorite Players," contest, to take second place with 52 votes. His studio-mate, William Haines, landed in third position with 44 votes.

H. Kershaw, Tivoli theatre, Winnipeg, Man.—General patronage.

HORSEMAN OF THE PLAINS: Tom Mix. A splendid picture. I can remember way back when a Mix picture would pack 'em to the roof. I say I REMEMBER BLACK LADY.—February 11. A poor picture, which pleased the few who saw it. Lew Cody and Allene MacDonald are very popular in this town. Seven reels.—A. B. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

THE ADVENTURER: Tim McCoy—February 22-23. Can't say much for this one, in fact this fellow McCoy doesn't pull at all with our patrons. Too many of the same type pictures. He should be cast in parlor dramas where he could show his pretty teeth to better advantage. Five reels.—Joseph Diemer, Capitol theatre, Dubuque, la.—General patronage.

DETECTIVES: Dana-Arthur—February 5-6. These boys have delivered another very good comedy. They snow and bad roads keep some away, yet a num- ber came to see this pair perform. Have seen many more favorable comments. Seven reels.—Arth E. McCord, Rex theatre, Marysville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

RIDERS OF THE DARK: Tim McCoy—January 12-13. This one he shows a little more activity as a rider. There were several kicks, most everybody pleased. The average Western.—Arth E. McCord, Rex theatre, Marysville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

MAN WOMAN and SIN: John Gilbert—19%. February 19-21. Rotten. No story, poor acting. This is the type of picture that puts stars in the junk heap and the quicker the better. Five reels.—Kriegerbrohm, Char-Bell theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

SHOW BUSINESS: Special cast—49%. February 17. The work of Miss Davies and Haines was fair. Good acting but no story. The picture was over the average.—Griswold, Box office flop.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greensville, Va.—General patronage.

THE WINN: Lillian Gish—February 1—Too long and druggy. Did fair business. Lillian Gish is not so popular here. Would have run.—McCol- lum, Cozy theatre, Chico, Cal.—General patronage.

MORGAN'S LAST RAID: Tim McCoy—50%. February 9. Poorest McCoy we have yet run. Six reels.—Kriegerbrohm Bros., Char-Bell theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Good cast.—C. V. Huserberg, New Haven, Conn.—General patronage.

Print and photography good. Five reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, la.—General patronage.

WHEN YOU ARE MARRIED: Lon Chaney—86%. January 29-30. A good Chaney picture. Print and photography good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, la.—General patronage.

YOMING: Tim McCoy—60%. McCoy always puts out historical pictures of the early pio- neer days, so they are always good and always have enough action for the farmers, although my town crowd enjoy them once a while. Seven reels.—W. R. Boughen, Jr., Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

HONEYMOON RATE: Florence Vidor—January 29-30. Not very much to this one, very light, no comments for or against. I thought it but fair. Six reels.—J. W. & F. Rex theatre, Marysville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

DEGGARS OF LIFE: Wallace Beery—Not the type of story for Beery at all. Poorly acted out with a murder and ended same.—J. W. Bason, Shasta theatre, Mount Shasta, Cal.—General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Beery-Hatto—January 22-23. The best from this pair, many favor- able comments. Weather, snow and ice against people leaving their fireside to attend pictures, no matter how good. This is a fair show of theirs, no matter what the hindrances. Wallace Beery has several kin folks in this town. Six reels.—Arth E. McCord, Rex theatre, Marysville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

TAKING ME HOME: Bebe Daniels—75%. January 16. Bebe Daniels won (a famous name) the other night and she always pleases although this did not come up to her general run of stories. Never- theless, Bebe put it across. Sorry to hear she is not making any more, Miss Daniels. Six reels.—W. R. Boughen, Jr., Sun theatre, Walthil, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TAKING ME HOME: Bebe Daniels—29%. February 14. A good program picture but not up to Miss Daniels' standard. General satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—66%. February 14. Good clean show of the "Robin Hood" type. Tried out the Cinemaphone with it, and it seemed to go good.—H. B. Osborn, Community theatre, Mount Hope, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WINGS: Special cast—74%. January 21-22.
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD
March 9, 1929

THE FIRST KISS: Cooper-Wray—44%. February 10-11. A very fine program picture, not a bit moody, clean and entertaining from start to finish. A picture for Sunday and Wednesday patrons good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thomson.—Our patrons said very good. Thomson and Silver King are always a pleasure. Two reels.—F. O. Litch, Royal theatre, Hopkins, Minn.—General patronage.

SOMEONE TO LOVE: Buddy Rogers.—One very little picture, here was no second picture. We didn't have to place the second plaster on our Fowlers to get out of stock. How come? Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingrams's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN COCKTAIL: Special cast—95%. February 24-25. One of those refreshing pictures that come so far apart. Had more favorable comments on this than others. The cast is always changing—perfect and lovely making it and Mary Brian was delightful to watch. They'll like this one. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram's, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

SOMETHING ALWAYS HAPPENS: Esther Balton.—January 18-19. We like Esther fine, but was disappointed in this part. Was so dark you couldn't see what it was. We've used this up for some real comedy, but there were very few laughs, and those in the last reel. We would call this an 8-reel. Six reels.—Arb. R. McCord, Rex theatre, Maysville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Bancroft—95%. February 7-17. Nothing to rave over. Entirely too long and not enough action. More film wasted here. A fine picture, but a droning picture. Again, the ordinariness of Gene Tunney—"there isn't no such thing." Eight reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingrams's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE SUNSET LEGION: Fred Thomson—February 22-23. Beat the best night's attendance at "King of Kings" the first night and held up pretty good we wanted a couple of goodfellows to show us the town by moonlight, we can think of none who could do the job better. (Now girls, please make a note of this and as soon as we get in town, call us up.)

Last night we saw Polly, Marie and J. Farrell MacDonald in "BRINGING UP FATHER" and if ever they cleared the crums out of our sides pretty soon we are going to see one MGM for another. As a social climber, Polly showed off her Shanty Irish to perfection, and every time she bounced a rollepin or sledgehammer off of Jiggs' gourd, she made us wonder why Ireland hadn't got her independence long ago.

Whenever the Irish get together in a picture, you can look for anything to happen. And if Polly and Marie are in it, you can expect an earthquake always. Of course, it is better to have a sprinkling of "Moms" in it, for then sometimes they gurgle the soup and expand the tablecloth, which is why they had Ginsburg in this picture. They may have made better comedies than this one, probably have, but when they did, Polly and Marie were in 'em. If you like the comic strip, you will eat this picture up with salt, pepper or vinegar. It was built for laughing purposes, and if you don't laugh, then you should consult either a horse doctor or an undertaker.

Let's take this case. Suppose you were walking down the street with your little boy and girl, looking for entertainment as some of the theatres, and you come to one that had this kind of billing out front, "Fevered youth, speeding down the highway of thrills. Bring the kiddies", or, "Pleasure crazed children chasing jazz and gin"; "A riot of gin and jazz parties". One of your kids says, "Is that your daughter?" who, D. Smoak, owner of jazz and gin parties, "She forfeited the love of father, mother and home for the mad whirl of the night life of jazz and gin." What would you do? Would you take your children to see the show? If not, why not?

This is a sample of the billing we sometimes see in front of theatres, the managers of which would resent the implication that they were not running places of respectability. And yet are they? Does this type of entertainment teach morality? Some claim it does. If so, why not go the limit and show vice and immorality in all its hideous forms?

We sometimes wonder to what extent some producers would go were it not for the fear of condemnation by respectable people and the threat of censorship. There are no wings sprouting from our belfry but we can discover that they strike a blow at indecency and immorality so long as our fingers are able to push the keys down on this typewriter. We are going to speak as the truth as we see it, no matter if it takes every inch of hide off of our own carcass. What's that? Did we hear some of you boys in the back pews say "AMEN?"

The other evening we saw "REDSKIN," and after we got home we suggested to our daughter, Marjorie Bradley, that she write Richard Dix an invitation to attend that gathering of artists at the G Lakes. He may have been there, for his name was on the dinner menu—W. Craig's restaurant, Mount Shasta, Cal.—General patronage.

J. C. Jenkins, the Herald-world Man.

United Artists

TWO LOVERS: Colman-Banks—59%. Feb. 9, A very good production, but paid too much for it. So did not do at our Opera House. Nine reels.—Stanley Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Roberson, Pa.—General patronage.

SADIE THOMPSON: Gloria Swanson—A splendid picture. Gloria does her best acting to date in a few of the most serviceable performances of the year. The year of 1925. They all turned out for this picture, and I received many a favorable comment from patrons of all ages. This is the first time that we have shown Gloria. This one pulled in more people for me than any picture I have played in three months.—D. R. McCollum, Cozy theatre, Chico, Cal.—General patronage.

CITY OF THE SEVEN: Special cost—99%. Feb. 14-16. A very unusual D. W. Griffith picture, but very entertaining and pleased almost 100 people in the theatre last Saturday night. They were pleased. Print was bad in spots. Don't think that the picture has a future, as the music was too much extra that they charge the small town exhibitor. Eight reels.—G. A. Billa, Sun theatre, Farrell, Neb.—General patronage.

THE CIRCUS: Charlie Chaplin—75%. Jan. 31. We thought Charlie's day was gone before we played "This Is the Life," and now we know it. Lost money on account of being held up by United Artists. If you can buy it for 75c, regardless of your population, it might be a good buy. Decide for yourself. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

THE SINGING FOOL: Al Jolson—35%. Jan. 8 & 9. Venetian—55%. Jan. 15. It was a big picture for a thing they hardly ever do in this town. Business was good. The picture was well offered in a nearby full house. Warner Brothers were very good as to price. Had special music on the "Jazzbands" worked and put it by myself, and the picture was operated and cued by myself and others. Some thought the music very good, others were on the fence, and a few did not like it. Eight reels.—O. Lane, Star theatre, Trumansburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

THE SINGING FOOL: Al Jolson—99%. Jan. 12-13. (Silent.) Truly a wonderful picture. Nothing but praise from patrons. David Lee, James Dennis, and Myron Tunstall all went out of their way to hit with our clientele. Played this when the flu epidemic was at its peak, and as a result the picture did not do as well as the other eight reels.—A. R. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myers- town, Pa.—General patronage.

MIDNIGHT TAI: Special cost—15%. Feb. 5. Nice crook picture that will please 'em, maybe. Six reels.—L. Lane, Star theatre, Trumansburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

BEWARE OF RACHFORDS: Special cost—a slowly moving picture. Met with considerable censure. Cotter goes, but no star. Miss Ferris, well, something should be done about her. In the last few pictures she has always been cut out of the print because they or she got it in for her. Andre Benager drew the only laughs. By the way, take a look at the maid in one of the bed room scenes, you'll see—R. J. Speck, Kenwood theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

Theatre Campaign Pays Church Debt

Oregon exhibitors for several years past, especially in the smaller cities and towns, have endeavored to cooperate with the churches in an endeavor to provide wholesome amusement, but it remained for the Venetian theatre at Hillsboro to put it over the best of all.

Hearing that the local Methodist Episcopal church desired to raise money to pay off the church debt, the theatre manager got in touch with Rev. Mr. Smith and in turn obtained the help of Chief of Police Jenkins of Portland and Tommy Luke, community song leader. These two, with the police quartet and firemen's band, staged a program at the Venetian theatre, following a spectacular parade. As a result of their activities their unusual program, enhanced with a couple of lively firehouse songs, filled the house for several performances and paid off the church debt in short order. There is no question in this live rural town that there shall hereafter be Sunday shows.

WOMEN THEY TALK ABOUT: Irene Rich—A mighty nice comedy-drama, with Claude Gillinwater stealing the picture. It's good for a lot of laughs. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Sunny theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

SLIGHTLY USED: Special cost—25%. Jan. 6-7. This is a novelty picture, as we have ever shown at this theatre. It pleased them all, and we have given an exceptional amount of advertising space and financial support to this picture. A picture they will stay for days afterwards. Due to bad weather and many other reasons, it appears as if we have the attendance we should have had, but this is not the fault of the picture. Book this one and step on it. Seven reels.—J. D. Johnson, S. of N. theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

ACROSS THE ATLANTIC: Special cost—50%. December 28, 1924. We thought you could get in them. Good story and plot, well setted. Eight reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

THE PORT OF MISSING GIRLS: Barbara Bedford—It is time that some one reports the truth about this picture. The only thing that is what they expect in this picture is the picture. While the leads are handled by film stars of experience, they do not register. The picture itself is so many feet of film. It is past repetition, there is nothing to, casuho, but they can't do show this offering to the better class of patronage, for it is just another mediocre picture. Eight reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

MISSING LINK: Sid Chaplin—This was a joke for us. A few funny scenes, but the good picture was missing.—Community theatre, Athol, Kan.—General patronage.

IF I WERE SINGLE: Special cost—January 7-8. Excellent. The "talkies" have made their impression in this Egyptian theatre, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.—General patronage.

State Rights

THEN CAME THE WOMAN: Cullen Landa—Good picture.—Samuel Jackson, Jackson theatre, Plano, Minn.—General patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE ROGUE: Special cost—14%. February 21. This is a good clean picture. The star fine. The story started from the middle and worked both ways. I called it good, but some said "No." It did well.—B. E. Kreiser, Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

ROARING FIRES: Special cost—33%. January 30. Fair picture for your Western night. Print and photography good. Six reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

Short Features

COLUMBUS

CHAPLIN REISSUES: These are the bunks. Too many to list. A few are—The Great Dictator, The Kid, The Enchanted, We, In a Word, The Kid in the side when they were used up.—C. V. Henneberg, Parkersburg, La.—General patronage.

EDUCATIONAL

ALL IN FUND: Cameo—Good. One reel.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

ATTABaby: A good comedy.—Theodore Stallings, Imperial theatre, Warrenton, N. C.—Small town patronage.

BREAK AWAY: A good comedy that brought but few laughs.—C. L. Tunstall, Majestic theatre, Warrenton, N. C.—Small town patronage.

CROWN ME: Wallace Lupino—Rotten. One reel.—A. R. Kreiser, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

DUCKS OUT: Bobby Vernon—Very funny.—Theodore Stallings, Imperial theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

GOOFY BIRDS: A good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

HUSBANDS MUST PAY: Wallace Lupino—Two reels.—Bobby Vernon, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

HOT OR COLD: Mermaid—Good comedy. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

HAY WIRE: Cameo—Good one reel comedy.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

PEP UP: Cameo—Fair comedy. One reel.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

SERVED HOT: Cameo—Better than a good reel subject. Enjoyed by all.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

SOCIAL PRESTIGE: Monty Collins—Monty Collins is a good comedian, and this two-reeler is enough proof.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

FOX

JACK AND JILTED: Very good comedy with plenty of laughs. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, La.—General patronage.

M G I

ACHING YOUTH: Charley Chase—Not Chase's best comedy, but still a very good comedy.—A. E. Kreiser, Malibu theatre, Myersville, Pa.—General patronage.

ALL PARTS: Charley Chase—Sorry, but this is one Chase that never registered. Two reels—Dime- ment, Son, Many, Me, Reel.—War.—Small town patronage.

THE BOOSTER: Charley Chase—All Charley Chase comedies are excellent. Best they have.—Tivoli theatre, Winnipeg, Min.—General patronage.

CLETOPRA: Dorothy Revel—Wonderful two reel subject, enjoyed by all. Technicolor is gorgeous. Cast is exceptional, headed by Dorothy Revel and Robert Ellis.—A. R. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myersville, Pa.—General patronage.
PROJECTORS Hired For Harvard Courses

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 5.—The lecture room in Baker Library of Harvard University becomes the Bluechel Theatre on Saturday to give a lecture on motion pictures to university students. Two projection machines have been installed, and Professor H. H. Tawney will be in charge.

EARLY TO BED, WE FAW DOWN, TWO TARS: Laurelhurst—All three knockabout comedies. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are in big draws and the greatest comedians on the screen today.—F. H. Kershaw, Tivoli theatre, Winnpeg, Man.—General patronage.

FEE 'EM AND WEEP: Max Davidson—Mr. Kershaw please cut down on the plechrow in your comedies. Too much is too much. Also our public is tiring of Max Davidson. The roles are much too similar, but the lack of variety is causing a decline in attendance. Tivoli theatre, Winnipeg, Man.—General patronage.

M G M NEWS: We have played Kinostram, Pathe News, Fox News, Paramount News and now M G M News, which is in competition with M N S News. It beats them all.—A. B. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

METRO COMEDIES: All very good.—C. V. Humer- berg, Parkersburg, Ia.—General patronage.

NOISE NOANNOS KOKO: Inkwell Imps—Clever cartoon. Enjoyed immensely by the kiddies. A lot of old timers told us that these cartoons bore them. However, the majority of adults seem to enjoy them.—A. B. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

WAY GOILLAS LEAVE HOME: Bobby Vernon.—Bobby Vernon has slipped a little and his comedies are not as good as they were about six months ago. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

WHY GORILLAS LEAVE HOME: Bobby Vernon.—Bobby Vernon has slipped a little and his comedies are not as good as they were about six months ago. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

ORIENTAL HUMOR: Billy Dooley—Here is a knock- out comedy. Should fill me up in a hurry. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT COMEDIES:—As a general run they are next and clever but far from funny. Billy Dooley the only laugh.—R. J. Sneek, Keewood theatre, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.

TOSPY TURY: KRAZY KAT:—The best of Paramount's short stuff, to our notion, are these Krazy Kat cartoons, and that isn't saying a whole Filler class only. Good print, for a distinctly novel change. One-half reel.—Holmes & Williams, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

PATHE CAMPUS VAMP: The only good comedies Mark Sennett made for Pathe are the Giri Comedies. Book every new Pathe comedy at the Tivoli theatre, Ulus, Wis.—General patronage.

PRUDE: Max Davidson.—A dandy comedy. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenview, Ulen, Minn.—General patronage.

PATH TREE: Always a good and diversified entertainment. Maybe some of the other outfits have as good or better programs, but if I do I haven't seen them. —William E. Traskoff, Trask theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—General patronage.

PATH REVIEW: With its new dress, the Pathé Review is a good addition to anyone's screen. Always clean and neat. Two reels. William E. Traskoff, Trask theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NO PICNIC: Smithy—Very un-funny.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

TAXI FOR TWO: Very funny.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

NOT A SOUND PICTURE, Wired House Advertisements (Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—There is one theatre in Kansas City, at least, which is not forgetting the silent picture. It is the new $1,000,000, 2136-seat, second run suburban house, which has its formal opening not long ago. The theatre is equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone, but so far is used in H. A. Jones, manager, that his patrons like the good silent pictures that he recently has billed. Here are a few lines inserted in his advertising:

"This is not a sound picture!"

"I have nothing in particular against the noise pictures," Jones said, "but many of my patrons have told me that they preferred a good silent picture to the screeching and bumbling of a talking or sound picture. The truth of the matter is, I think, that the silent picture leaves more to the individual experience. We have no thought of discontinuing sound and talking pictures, but it will be a learning experience, one that is a hit and try to please all types of people in our audiences. After all, that is any theatre manager can hope to accomplish, isn't it?"

Theatre Closed in "Flu"; Protests Bring Reopening

SANFORD, ME., March 5.—Following a hearing at which protest was voiced by many citizens, James Greenlee's old opera house in Sanford has been granted permission to reopen his theatre, closed by the health authorities, as a means of combating an epidemic of the grippe and influenza. The theatre was closed but one week.

THEIR SECOND HONEYMOON: Not much comedy to this one. Disappointed as a rule. Pathe comedies have hit the mark. Two reels.—Arch E. McCord, Rex theatre, Mayvills, Mo.—Small town patronage.

RKO

Mickey's Pal's: Mickey McGuire—Pretty fair kid comedy.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

Mickey's BIG GAME HUNT: Mickey McGuire—Good comedy.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

Mickey's ANTICS: Mickey McGuire—Good for the kids. Two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

NOTHIN' DOING: Charlie B. Saylor—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenview, Ulen, Minn.—General patronage.

RACING BLOOD: Have run several of these and patrons seem to like them.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

Racing Blood: These are liked very much. They are as good as the "Collegians" and do not cost as much. Two reels each.—Stanley Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

Hot Dog: Oswald Cartoon.—Very good cartoon.—O. D. Lane, Star theatre, Trumansburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

NEWLYWEDS UNWELCOME: Snookums:—The public seems to be getting tired of this line of comedies. Two reels.—Stanley Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—General patronage.

Panicky Partners:—Well! here is a comedy that is a scream. If they keep up as good as they have, we will still be looking at them five years from now.—Stanley Goodwin, Pioneer theatre, Robesonia, Pa.—General patronage.

Rubber Necks: Sid Saylor.—A few laughs in this, but have had a lot of better Sid Saylor comedies.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

Winning Goal: The Collegians—Pretty good, although my people know nothing of hockey.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson theatre, Flomaton, Ala.—General patronage.

Bluechel & Lannan Buy Two Theatres in Iowa (Special to the Herald-World)

CLARINDA, Ia., March 5.—Two motion picture theatres, the Armory and Kuallo, have been purchased by Bluechel and Lannan, former Omaha theatre promoters. The Ar- mory will be equipped with Vitaphone.

Utah Exhibitors Attack Bill to Tax Amusements

(Special to the Herald-World)

SALT LAKE CITY, March 5.—Practically every theatre in this section is issuing a reply, addressed to the governor, for their patrons to sign; protesting the bill, to place an additional tax upon places of amusement. This bill is to be voted upon in a few days.

be established and one night stands played to the advantage of all. It would be a godsend to the little fellows whose patrons have tired of the cheap night plays that they can get for a song, in places of amusement other than the "big" theaters. We will be glad to try it ourselves, when the picture game plays out, as it is rapidly doing here, but in most cities we don't like it. In fact my husband and I have a little conference with that little book each night after the show to discuss the "little" plays and how I do like to read J. C.'s writing. He seems to speak right from his very soul. In fact it's all good, but what I would like to work on as a source of income, what do you mean to do with so little little people? Get rid of us, I guess! I never saw the treatment they are getting here.

I saw in one HERALD-WORLD where one man went after the school for putting on admission shows at school and he won out. But here in these cities where the schools run their shows the same as us, only they want to have the licenses and of course, no music license, and they sell the pictures. This is much cheaper to schools than they do to shows. A year ago we ran "3 Bad Men" and we paid $25; and that fell they offered it with a list of other pictures we ran the school for $10. So where they have a live wire school like they do here, it really doesn't pay a show man's salary, they still run those "problem" pictures, football, plays, parties till basketball; then it's plays, shows, parties and basketball till one has about one night a week for profit and very little of those shows are shows.

They are now trying to tax us poor little fellows extra. Well, it is more than the most of us can stand, so I guess I'll be looking up a hamburger stand and start in there. That will be about all the money one will have left after they pay their taxes and licenses for shows, music, etc.; so maybe while they pass by I can sell them a 5 cent hamburger, unless they tax the ham that goes in the burger. Just got through reading J. C.'s letter in the HERALD-WORLD of February 9 and he sure knows what he is saying when he tells us what is wrong with the picture business.

If we could get good clean pictures we wouldn't have to leave the box office when our best customers come out of the show. Now, I believe they can be made not suggestive and still be good, lively pictures. That is what us little country towns want, in fact we don't understand half they are trying to suggest in some of the smutty pictures they are making now. With the picture business and had children, they never would be allowed to go and see the underworld things they are putting out. Where are all these things coming from? I don't see this kind of pictures by I would like to know.

I will not forget, some time ago while in the box office, and we had one of these underworld things on, a little "thuggish" looking boy about 13 or 14 years came to the window and asked if we had a robber picture on tonight. I laughed and said I guessed that was about the only picture I wouldn't look like it; and he threw his money down so quick and was in the show before I had time to think. After we had shown it he said, "I thought so." So I have surprised my limits, but don't suppose I'll ever bother you again as I only take a look at the calendar to thank you for your patience if you have read this far, as I had some "What the Picture Did for Me" to send in—Mrs. J. D. Swarz, Strand Theatre, Oxford, Ky.

On Producer-Theatres
SAFETY HARBOR, FLA.—To the EDITOR: Stettmum's letter was an eye-opener. His views have existed in the minds of a lot of producers for a long time. But all of the producers who have taken the trouble to think in the past have been forced to let their minds exist, for the result—closed theaters because the picture is not as represented by the local theatre man's advertisements. The producer is not interested in the producers lies about the picture. A very recent instance is F.B.O.'s "Shanghaied." But, Stettmum, the producers have gone into exhibiting and control all key cities and就不会 allows the public to see those methods used have only been lawful by greased palms. Pete Harrison can tell you. Yes, we have been forced to take and pay for the public has, through us, forced them on our friend and patrons. In cities where a producer-distributor controls all the theaters, the public has lost out. It is a situation that is being satis-fied. If you think we've had rotten ones, wait till the producers-distributors control the exhibiting and the bottom will be high, compared to quality then.

And Stettmum—How about all this bunch of riff-raff foreign actors they're importing at beggar's pay to whip our own American actors with? And how about this bunch of foreign produced junk that is forced on us in this blanket book looting gym? With the producer or the vertical trust that the government is allowing to develop, the actors, the public and everybody else will be the loser. The independent theatre operator, through his house and screen, helps the producer to create a star, but after that star is made it takes him away from you and you can't reach. Milton Sils and numerous others, after they are developed into stars so that their names are forced into cheap rotten pictures that kill them and the local theatre too. By restraint of service any independent trying to open in a town where the producers control is in the red all the time until forced to close.

Will Hays has brought more people of a single group into want and poverty than any man. The Stebbins Corporation combine has made itself a blessing to our country, so has a number of other combines. But the men at the head of the Motion Picture (dis) trust that the government is allowing to develop, the actors, the public and everybody else will be the loser. Advertised brands of hose, shoes, clothing, etc., are made to a standard sold at a standard price, making an effort to establish and build a reputation replace and adjust defective or inferior product, making pictures carefully before being distributed for public sale. Not so with the film business or what have you. They want a decent trade name. "Talkies" (Squawks, I call them). When the industry becomes decent, then decent trade names and trade marks can be established. Even the producers, realizing their product was so rotten, had to add prologues, presentations, band shows, etc., to make it worth the same relation to the show as the short comedy did in the past.

I guess I am a bum showman; the talkies, or whatever the name is, is not true interest for them in me. I hope that the small town house stays off them and saves the gyp that goes with em. Stick to good silent films, if you can, and find those obscure.

Pete Harrison has told you the facts of the methods used by the big 3 producers and their exhibiting combines to forcing a house shut and get out of the way from them, so why not decide to quit patronizing theaters controlled by those groups. They would treat you a little dirtier than they do in your town. And these wonderful film boards of trade and their affiliation committees (Bunkum-Hololum). Pettijohn says there is the height of fairness and justice. (Shoshosh—his idea of justice.) They are a burlesque on justice and a travesty on fairness. The national flag of the film game is the dollar and their loyalty knows no code of morality or integrity. A letter from a secretary of a film board says the distributors have no authority to help the exhibitor but only to force any and all demands of the distributor, whether just or not, on the exhibitor.

In my business I thought it would be a respectable business and in my local houses I have been blocked in the town, but in key cities I was blocked myself—R. G. Husson, Alden theatre, Safety Harbor, Florida.

His Public Wants Sound
MANILA, ARK.—To the EDITOR: I am one of the three picture shows located in small towns of around 1,500 population each. Up until about one year ago I thought there was no necessity for me to own even more houses in small towns, but today I do not think very much of it.

It seems to me that the people are losing interest in pictures, and it shows in the little difference about what pictures one shows. I have always tried to play the very best pictures that I could get, and am still using pictures. Even have tried to play the very best pictures that I could get, and am still using pictures. THE present status of the Ascher circuit comes in for consideration as a result of the Fox-Laew merger. In lists of theatres now controlled and operated by Fox, appearing in various publications, including the daily press, the Ascher string has been named. This chain is operated by the Chicago Title and Trust Company, as receiver. The efforts of creditors and Fox, which holds the preferred stock, to reorganize the circuit, reported some time ago in the Herald-World, are being continued, but according to Chester R. Davis, assistant trust officer for the receiver, the status of the properties is so far unchanged.

Lupe Velez, the famous Mexican star of United Artists, has been causing the traffic cops around the United Artists theatre a lot of grief during her engagement there. The entire corner was jammed with people coming to get a glimpse of the beautiful star as she left the theatre. "I'm a Mex," declares Lupe in her act, and we must admit, "a darned pretty one, too." Frank Younelli, who appears with her in the picture, "Lady of the Pavements," is with her in the act.

The Regent theatre at 6746 Sheridan Road, has changed hands. The Regent was formerly owned by John Semedalos. The new owner is Eddie Roth.

J. K. Burger, head of the United Artists poster department, was visiting the local exchange last week. C. E. Smith, assistant to the general manager, was another visitor from the home office. They remained a week in Chicago.

Harry Goldson, owner of the Plaza theatre in California, going out to join Mrs. Goldson.

The inauguration of sound pictures with RCA Photophone at the Belmont theatre Sunday brought out the crowds as crowds are not always wont to be brought out. All house records were broken the first two days of the Photophone showings. The screen attraction is Warner Brothers' "The Singing Fool."

The new Montclaire theatre, at Grand and Harlem Avenues, opened March 1. Basil Charushas is manager of the new house.

A. J. Balaban, manager of productions for B & K, has returned to Chicago after a vacation of five weeks in Hollywood.

The Diversey theatre will open with sound in the near future.

The Laporte theatre in Laporte, Ind., opened March 2 with DeForest Phonofilm.

Felix F. Frist, general sales manager of M G M; and Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity manager, passed through Chicago on the way from Hollywood to New York.

We had an enjoyable chat with Walter Balbitz, manager of the Grant theatre in Geero last week. Balbitz house seats 400. Besides being a good exhibitor, Balbitz is an accomplished musician. He studied on the violin for over 15 years. In his music was his profession.

Oscar Florene, who is selling service records for Victor, now has headquarters in the Exhibitors Association offices.

Catherine Sullivan, one of Tees Heraty's charming friends, has taken a position at the Warner Brothers exchange.

The Crawford theatre, a B & K house, is now being equipped with DeForest Phonofilm.

Nat Wolf, owner of the Biltmore theatre, has returned from a vacation in Hot Springs.

George McKeen, home office representative for Fox News, stopped off for a visit with Clyde Eckhart last week.

The Willard theatre, formerly operated by the Turklein Amusement Company, has been taken over by the Fifty-First Street Company.

WILLIAM (BILL) BRUMBERG

World Wide's Chicago branch was placed in charge of William Brumberg on March 4, and thereby Bill staged a little inauguration of his own.

Bill Brumberg is a Chicago boy. If you must have the secret, he was born on his back in 1896, and in way days Chicago was plenty tame, so he quit high school in Chicago and went out to Wyoming. Later on he went to Santa Barbara, Cal., where he became assistant circulation manager of the Morning Press. Bill entered the motion picture business as usher in a 300-seat house called the La Petite in Santa Barbara. About this time the American Film Company moved its studio from San Diego to Santa Barbara and Bill became an extra. Later in Los Angeles, he played a part in J. Warren Kerrigan's "Samsun and Delilah."

He was employed in the Broadway theatre as projectionist and next leaving this post to join Bill Chuee's road show of "The Birth of a Nation." When the war broke out, Brumberg joined the navy. After the war, he tried out several jobs, finally ending up in coming to Chicago as a publicity man.

In 1922 R. C. Seery employed him as a salesman for First National, later appointing him country sales manager. In 1923 he became country sales manager of Universal, and a year ago he joined Columbia in the same capacity, in which position he remained until his appointment as World Wide branch manager last week.

The Pilsa theatre on West 63rd Street has closed, having gone into bankruptcy.

Benny Abrams, brother of Jerry Abrams of the Gotham pictures exchange, was visiting his brother last week. Benny was handling "Road to Ruin" in Washington until recently, when he was hit by a machine and suffered an injured thigh.

R. L. Helving of the Liberty theatre, Marysville, Kan., has signed up for DeForest Phonofilm. Helving was in the Chicago last week and heard a demonstration of the device.

A Kansas City exchange for DeForest Phonofilm has been opened, and W. L. Sherid- dan, well known figure along the Row, was named manager.

Doug Hodges, former Row reporter for the Herald-World, and now in Los Angeles as manager of the Herald-World's West Coast office, is the father of a baby girl, born to Mr. and Mrs. Hodges last week.

Office of a leading first run exhibitor. Enter Mr. Exhibitor, beaming and chuckling. He had just witnessed a trade showing of Douglas MacLean’s talking comedy-thriller, “The Carnation Kid.” Mr. E. had the picture booked and he’s tickled to death. He lights up a Corona-Corona and summons his secretary:

"Take a letter to Doug MacLean"

Dear Doug: I just saw your talking picture, ‘The Carnation Kid’ and it’s sure a knockout from a conceivably box-office angle. It’s by far your best since ‘The Hottentot’ and it sweeps you right up in the front rank of the talking stars. The way ‘The Carnation Kid’ mixes the thrills with the laughs and the talk with the music is great. The story speeds along like a breeze. Every voice in the picture is A-1. Frances Lee is the cutest little trick I’ve seen in some time. And the scene here that big, beautiful blonde, Lorraine Eddy, tries to vamp you because she likes her men rough will start any audience roaring. Congratulations, Doug. A bow to Al Christie for giving you such a swell show. And another to Al Cohn for writing the story. What a break for you boys and Paramount! And for us smart fellows who have these great Paramount talking pictures coming week after week.”
“Paramount has three short subjects now running at the Criterion, N. Y., that far surpass any sound shorts yet made. They are ‘TWO LITTLE CHINESE MAIDS’, ‘HIGHLOWBROW’ and ‘THE FALSE ALARM FIRE COMPANY’. The three of them will relieve any exhibitor of a lot of worry, for after seeing them he will be in a position to say to himself—if a company can make them so good in such a variety as I have seen, I need not have any worry where I am going to get the short reels I want in sound.”

—Exhibitors Daily Review

CHRISTIE TALKING PLAYS—“The Christies seem to have beaten all other producers to the screen with their talking comedies of colored life.”

—Motion Picture News

"THE CARNIVAL MAN”—This two reel talking act, with Walter Huston, is a knockout.

—Earl Hall Payne, Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky.

PARAMOUNT SONG CARTOONS—“Sidewalks of New York’ is the cleverest novelty in sound we have ever seen. Howard Theatre audiences applauded. It is recommended for every theatre, regardless of size.”

—Weekly Film Review (Atlanta)

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME”—“This talking comedy, taken from Octavus Roy Cohen’s Satur day Evening Post story, is great. Let’s have more of them.” (Temple Theatre, Toledo, O.). “A riot of stomach laughs” (Los Angeles Herald). "A pride for the Christies” (Exhibitors Herald). Sprightly dialogue tells a bright story in excellent voicing. Christie seems to be ‘in’ ” (Zit’s). “The good news on ‘Melancholy Dame’ has spread like wildfire and any number of exhibitors have called up for a booking.” (R. B. Wilbanks, Branch Manager, Charlotte, N. C.)

A TIP SHORTS

PARAMOUNT has captured the sound short feature business. No question about that. This company’s entrance into the field has turned sound shorts from a headache to a box office joy. Real quality and popular appeal of the subjects has done it. The difference between Paramount’s class one- and two-reelers and the rest of the product in the field is a matter of comment throughout the trade. Exhibitors by the thousands have been quick to appreciate Paramount quality in the whole show in sound.

5 FAMOUS COMPOSERS MUSICAL GEMS Produced by James Fitzpatrick. Already a favorite with first-run theatres. Twice as good in sound.

3 SONG CARTOONS Presented by Alfred Weiss. Sparkling musical novelties that get the audience singing.

"JUST ONE WORD"—"Interesting and amusing for its novelty." —Billboard

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME"—"You can't go wrong with this one. Christie's have set a tough pace for themselves. If the others live up to this standard, the whole group is worth buying." —Motion Picture News

"We are booking Paramount Sound Shorts as fast as they are received by the exchange. Already played Eddie Cantor, Ruth Etting. Playing 'Just One Word' and Borrah Minnevitch this week. Have booked 'Sidewalks of New York', 'The Melancholy Dame' and 'Two Little Chinese Maids'. This is indication of what leading first run theatres think of them."
—Royal and Newman Theatres, Kansas City

"Paramount Sound Shorts, 'Kisses', 'Melancholy Dame' wonderful. Exceptionally good." —Jacob Lourie, New England Theatres

"The Octavus Roy Cohen stories being made by the Christies for Paramount release are examples of what is liked best in sound shorts."
—Inside Facts (California)

"IF MEN PLAY CARDS AS WOMEN DO"—"Will amuse the women muchly. Well played." —Variety

"THE MELANCHOLY DAME"—"A very good and well recorded comedy subject, playable in any house on any bill." —Variety

RUTH ETTING—"Miss Etting has good appearance on the screen and expert disc voice. Her shorts are important. She stands a good chance of becoming a decided favorite in them." —Variety

SOUND SHORTS IN SIGHT OR SOUND
Dear Charlie and Joe:

Last week at the Chinese Theatre in Los Angeles, I fought my way through crowds to see BROADWAY MELODY, and how I enjoyed it and how I envied you.

But listen, Charlie and Joe. Since I returned from the Coast we screened a picture, MOTHER'S BOY, an ALL TALKING, ALL SINGING Melody Drama with Morton Downey that makes me honestly feel that we have a better picture than "Broadway Melody."

I feel certain that you are just as happy about this as we are, because being in the theatre business you want good pictures, and whether they bear the roaring lion or the crowing rooster is secondary. It's the results at the box-office that count.

Sincerely,

FRED A. FLADER

Dear Fred and H. M.

You men are extremely fortunate in having as your guiding genius, Mr. Carl Laemmle, whose methods of conveying ideas, not only to the trade but to the public, have been an inspiration to all of us. "Straight from the shoulder!"

But here's another one straight from my shoulder.

We have an ALL TALKING, ALL SINGING, PATHE Melody Drama titled MOTHER'S BOY, with Morton Downey, that will make more money for the Universal Theatres than either "Show Boat" or "Broadway" and - we make this statement with the full realization that "Broadway" and "Show Boat" are two of the outstanding pictures produced during the current season.

Sincerely,

SAM DEMBOW, JR.

Dear Sam and Bill:

I am sure that you took an intense pride in the fact that Paramount produced and released such a marvelous picture as THE CANARY MURDER CASE. I saw the picture and thought it was great, and I know that it is doing a tremendous business in all of your theatres.

But let me tell you something, Sam and Bill. You haven't seen anything yet.

MOTHER'S BOY the All-Talking and Singing PATHE picture, from a box-office standpoint starts where "The Canary Murder Case" leaves off, and I am sure you will share my enthusiasm when you see it.

Sincerely,

BILL SAAL

These letters are very personal, indeed
Dear Spyros and Ed:

Because of the perseverance and foresight of Warner Brothers, we have a new medium of expression in this business of ours; that is Talking Pictures. Two of the greatest talking pictures, THE JAZZ SINGER and THE SINGING FOOL were produced by your company, and when I say great I mean great—both from an artistic and box-office standpoint.

These two pictures had a very rejuvenating effect on all of the theatres. They have been rejuvenated just in time to appreciate a better picture than either one of them. It is MOTHER'S BOY, an All-Talking and Singing PATHE Melody Drama that will establish new motion picture history.

It looks like it's another picture for the Hall of Fame.

Sincerely,

CHARLES S. LEVIN

The wheels are humming

WITH the introduction of the RCA Photophone the statement was made that "Superior facilities and superior resources automatically attract superior public support."

Although but ten months have elapsed since the initial announcement of RCA Photophone, the correctness of this statement is attested today by a demand that is taxing the production resources of the world's largest electrical organizations.

In this brief period, the RCA Photophone has become the standard by which the tonal quality and efficiency of sound reproduction are measured. Sound pictures made by the RCA Photophone system of recording are receiving universal public acclaim.

The facilities of the plants of RCA, General Electric Company and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company are constantly being expanded to bridge the gap between date of order and date of installation.

On the present basis, theatre owners may confidently anticipate a calibre of delivery service in keeping with the resources and production scope of these organizations.

And they may confidently look forward also to an equipment that embodies all the advances of today, plus the assurance of such improvements as may develop tomorrow.

An Epic of the Screen

THE struggle for supremacy between Paramount and William Fox promises to be the greatest epic of the motion picture industry. Exhibitors throughout the country have perfect seats for a more thrilling and more fascinating drama than they have ever seen enacted upon their own screens.

Paramount has been the undisputed leader of the motion picture industry for so long that the challenge offered by William Fox, as a result of his spectacular purchase of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, cannot go unanswered. It would be too much to expect Paramount to move over just because William Fox started to shove.

This does not mean, necessarily, that blood will be shed as a result of the extraordinary quickening of the rivalry between these powerful organizations. It is quite within the realm of possibility that the struggle between these two will be a peaceful one; there is so much at stake that neither side would willingly jeopardize its holdings just for the pure love of battle.

If the vast Paramount organization had been unduly disturbed at the prospect of a deal between Fox and Loew's, then it may be taken for granted that some move would have been made to counteract it. Adolph Zukor knew that Fox was negotiating for the purchase of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; nearly everybody in on the "wise money" knew what was going on.

If Paramount was content, then, to see the Loew string of theatres and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization purchased by William Fox, it is more than likely that Paramount feels well protected. It is to be expected, therefore, that the battle between these two powerful forces will be amicably conducted, not belligerently.

That it will be fascinating cannot be doubted. Paramount, at this moment, has a perfectly rounded organization. Paramount has a producing organization going full blast, making sixty pictures a year that have the stamp of public support. Paramount has a string of 500 Pucklix theatres, a strong string, needless to say, for the weaker links of the chain have been quietly dropped during the past few years. Paramount has available all necessary financial resources.

William Fox, on his side, has extraordinary strength. He has the greatest string of theatres the world has yet seen, a total of nearly 800. He has two producing organizations, his own units which have attained such prominence and success under Winfield Sheehan, and the brilliant Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization. He has fighting sales forces and indomitable spirit. He has plenty of money.

Competition, fair and honorable, is the life of trade. Paramount and William Fox striving to outdo each other can help only to advance the motion picture industry. As Adolph Zukor himself stated, in a recent interview, the basis of the industry is the picture and competition means better pictures.

An Age of Mergers

THE acquisition of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by William Fox has revived talk of further mergers within the industry.

Students of motion pictures who have seen the Paramount organization in a position of leadership for so long anticipate some move to step out in front once more with a giant stride. That will-of-the-wisp known as Wall Street talks of a merger between Paramount and Radio as though it had already been accomplished.

The philosophy underlying mergers is at once simple and complex. Naturally, a merger is made with the motive of strengthening two positions into a better one; that much is simple. Which two positions can be fairly merged to make a better one is another matter, a problem of peculiar complexity.

So many intricate problems are involved that one may place considerable confidence in the statements of Adolph Zukor on behalf of Paramount and David Sarnoff on behalf of Radio that a merger between these two powerful, but rather dissimilar, units is not in contemplation. That may be said even in the face of the recent experience at Loew's, where responsible officials of the company in caucus assembled announced flatly and without reservation that a sale was not in contemplation.

The matter of mergers between great units is of the utmost importance to the industry, therefore important to individual exhibitors. The wisest course, however, is to keep both feet comfortably on the ground until actual announcements of fact are made.

News Reels in Sound

THE success of the various sound news reels in reporting the inauguration of Herbert Hoover as President of the United States makes the importance of these films more evident than ever before. News events in sound are a development of which the industry may be particularly proud.

The interest manifest in these films is so self-evident as to make comment unnecessary. The public takes the keenest satisfaction in them, and even those critics who decline to be anything but caustic about sound pictures are loud and sincere in their praise of the news reels.

There is something deeper than mere entertainment in this, however. The news reels in sound make history as it has never been made before. Not only do they bring the public in virtual personal contact with the great happenings of the world, but they preserve them for posterity in a manner that could hardly be improved upon.

News reels in sound is as close as mere man has yet come to immortality.
Hoover to Study Enforcement Of Laws Affecting Film Trade

Commission to Sift Activity on Measures Against Trusts

President Favors Greater Freedom in Industry—Board Will Not Upset Procedure

By FRANCIS L. BURT

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A thorough study of the enforcement of the laws against trusts and monopolies, trade restraints and other commercial practices in which the motion picture industry is interested, will be made by the President's commission on law enforcement, proposed by President Hoover during his campaign and referred to in his inaugural address.

The greatly increased scope of the commission's activities came as a surprise to the country, which had anticipated that it would be restricted to consideration of the situation arising under the prohibition laws.

Under this policy, business men in many industries have been saved large sums of money in litigation costs.

Will Not Upset Procedure

With this plan, President Hoover is heartily in sympathy. His proposed commission will not do anything that will upset the procedure. On the contrary, it is indicated, improvements may even be made, for, he explained last week in response to inquiries from newspaper men, 'the purpose and scope of the law enforcement commission is to critically consider the entire federal machinery of justice, the redistribution of its functions, the simplification of its procedure, the provision of additional special tribunals, the better protection of justice, and the more effective organization of our agencies of investigation and prosecution.'

'"It is intended to cover the entire question of law enforcement and organization of justice," Hoover continued. "It will naturally include consideration of the method of enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and abuses which have grown up, together with the enforcement of the laws in respect to narcotics to immigration, to trade restraint and every other branch of federal government law enforcement. The whole constitutes one problem of better and more effective organization and enforcement.'

Sound Plays Part in Western Electric's Sales Record; Net Also Makes Big Gain

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Sound equipment played a large part in "the most remarkable year in the history of the Western Electric Company," says President Edgar S. Bloom in reporting on the fact that the company's sales for 1928 set a new record, and net earnings surpassed those of 1927 despite larger interest and tax deductions. Sales totaled $265,454,000, an increase of 13.5 per cent., or $34,000,000 over 1927, while the business volume gained 22 per cent. Net profits were $22,023,282. The payroll had gone up to $6,324 employees.

President Bloom declared there were "successively established in the motion picture field the Western Electric system of recording and reproducing sound with motion pictures, which bids fair to revolutionize the motion picture industry and will undoubtedly have an important influence on the future development of the entire entertainment field."

The report calls attention to the progress made by Electrical Research Products, Inc., which makes the sound apparatus, and states it is expected that 3,000 installations in 1929 will be added to the 1,000 previously made.

Dramatic Is Strong in “The Letter”; Davey Lee Wins Broadway

Paramount Film Called Particularly Suited to Larger Cities—“Sonny Boy" Captures First-Nighters
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Two new pictures came to Broadway last week when the Paramount organization gave the premiere of “The Letter," starring Jeanne Eagels, at the Criterion on Thursday, and Warner Brothers presented Davey Lee, first brought into prominence by “The Singing Fool," of Al Jolson, in “Sonny Boy" at their theatre the next night.

“The Letter" is an all-dialogue picturization of Somerset Maugham's play of the same name. It is a picture with a strong dramatic theme and the comment was heard that it was particularly suited to audiences in the larger cities. Miss Eagels' acting gives ample reason for Paramount's renewal of her contract to do “Jealousy," another of her starring vehicles on the legitimate stage, which is now being filmed at the Long Island studios.

“The Letter" brought forth a keenly interested audience, for the picture had been magnificently ballyhooed by word of mouth before its premiere. That it satisfied most of the audience cannot be doubted. That it fell rather short of the expectations of some others, not contented with mere technical perfection, is also true. In addition, there were many who objected that the story was inconsistently worked out, that the picture was quite short, and an old tale. For all that, the name of Davey Lee was on the lips of every one of them. The hard gale had gone out of the eyes of the older women. There was something tenderly reminiscent in their expressions, their thoughts of Sonny Boy as they waited for taxi cabs in the cold night glare of Broadway.

“Sonny Boy" was taken to the heart of his audience. Just the naive, solemnly of Davey Lee alone made it worth seeing. He was a riot. Edward Everett Horton, who has rocked a good many audiences of late in the Coronet talking comedies, outdid himself in this picture, and Betty Bronson, who has a pretty good speaking voice and a very attractive giggle, supplied the feminine appeal.

There was no question outside of Davey Lee's matchless rendition of "Sonny Boy."—D. F.

Church Adopts Films; Pastor Says Pictures May Supplant Pulpits
(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, March 12.—One of the largest churches in Albany, which has been suffering for several months from small congregations, at its Sunday night services, is now trying out a program of motion pictures as a means of increasing the Sunday night congregation. According to Rev. Harry J. Swan, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, the pictures are proving a tremendous drawing card. Rev. Mr. Swan even goes so far as to say that there may come a time when motion pictures will supplement the minister in practically every pulpit in the land.

“I think," said Rev. Mr. Swan, "that the motion picture can put across a theme far better than human words. It makes a direct appeal to the senses and people can learn more from the eye than from the ear. Although we are merely conducting these 'movie' sermons as an experiment, the increased Sunday night congregation just about settles the question as to their permanence. Before we started this sort of educational propaganda which is one of the largest in the city, was only about one-quarter filled each Sunday night.

Last Sunday night Rev. Mr. Swan presented a double feature, and the theatre was packed to its doors. Albany is one of the few cities in New York state which does not enjoy Sunday shows. Therefore Rev. Mr. Swan is not competing with the theatres.

Italy Is Using Screen To Educate and Build Moral of Its Colonies
(Special to the Herald-World)

NAPLES, March 2—(By Mail)—Lucien DeFoo, general manager of the International Institute for Educative Cinema has recently sailed for New York. He is due back soon and nothing could be known concerning this voyage. It is clear, however, that he is going to make a contract with the United States Government in view of America's adherence to the above mentioned institute.

The Italian Government in order to obtain, by appropriate propaganda, a stronger hold on the moral factor of its colonies' populace, that is Tripoli and Cirenia, has established a series of pictures; so that properly appointed operators undertake a monthly tour in every principality town, projecting the "Luce" with admittance free. The films of the institute are educative and serve splendidly in the aim of the propaganda.

New York Village Votes On Sunday Show Mar. 19
(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, March 12.—The village of Mas- sena will decide for itself on March 19 whether there will be Sunday shows. The village fathers passed a resolution to the effect that a special election be held March 19 to decide the question.

Flames Raze Theatres In Two Cities of Texas

Pathé's Ace Cameramen Shoot Inaugural Sound
(Special to the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, March 12.—All of the Pathé cameramen and their assistants were at the Hoover inaugural and made unusual shots for both the silent and sound newsreels. The cameramen were aided by engineers who supervised the sound recording and had charge of the recording equipment.

In an all night task, the both reels were assembled, edited and ready for public showing the next day.

Missouri Tax Measure And Kansas Censor Bill Still Worry Exibitors
(Special to the Herald-World)

KANSAS CITY, March 12.—The worries of Kansas and Missouri exhibitors have dwindled down to a state of legislatures of those states. In the Missouri legislature there is a 10 per cent amusement bill program which raises a $15,000 for each picture in the ranks of showmen, while the bill which would provide local censorship for each town of Kansas, in addition to the usual state censorship, still is alive, having been favorably reported in committee.

Many tax measures not affecting the theatres have been killed already in Missouri and the principal fear of Missouri theatre owners is that, through a process of elimination, the amusement tax might be dragged out as a "last chance" measure for state revenue this session, although politicians who are supposed to have their earstills to the ground believe the measure has small chance for passage. It now is in committee.

In view of the fact that opposition from within Missouri had a bearing on the defeat of the proposed Missouri censorship bill it is believed the proposed Kansas bill has little chance for passage as it is very unpopular.

Pathé's New Productions Draw Significant Praise, Declares Phil Reisman
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—One picture success after another at last week's reviews, the critics, has a significance which has impressed everyone in the business," says Phil Mark, Strand theatre, for the grapevine.

"The number of our pictures to play Broadway, with two in one week, has created a lot of comment. "The Spieler" and "Red Mo- cob's Daughter" have been called by reviewers the best pictures of the week.

"When the new Pathé production plans are announced," he continued, "I am certain they will be a sensation of the industry, and as a sales executive I want to say that I am tremen-dously impressed with the magnitude and the salability of the pictures."

During his western tour he placed Pathé Sound News in 74 additional theatres, and reports that his management is doing big business wherever it has been played.

Theatres Hold Key to Coming Moves of Fox and Paramount

Wesco Regarded Barometer To "War" If It Is to Come

Zukor Knew of Intended Purchase of Loew's and M G M and Made No Move to Thwart Deal

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, March 12.—Exhibitors throughout the country are watching with the keenest interest for the next moves on the part of William Fox, following his purchase of Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and by the powerful Paramount organization.

These two are placed in sharp juxtaposition to each other; that they will rub elbows in conflict cannot be doubted. Whether their conflict will bring friendly rivalry and an amiable working out of the struggle they face, or warfare, remains to be determined.

Paramount is apparently content to face the issue as it stands. Despite rumors that Paramount will widen its holdings and which to meet competition, should it become necessary. It develops that Zukor knew all about the intended purchase of Loew's and M G M by Fox. He made no move to thwart it, apparently content that it would not harm Paramount's interests. Zukor drew up plans some years ago to meet Loew opposition in New York, should it become necessary, and instead entered into a working arrangement whereby M G M pictures would be available for Publix houses.

Fox Amalgamating Units

Meanwhile Fox is working at top speed to perfect the amalgamation of his new units with the old. Winfield Sheehan, his general manager, has established himself in a suite in the Savoy-Plaza hotel, where an extraordinary amount of business is being transacted.

One of the first moves made by Fox was to bring Irving Thalberg to New York from Hollywood, where he has been established as production chief for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Immediately upon his arrival he went into conference with Fox, Sheehan, Nicholas Schenck and Louis B. Mayer.

Fox is in the present, at least, the Loew and Metro organizations are remaining intact. It was definitely stated last week that a shakeup of Loew and Metro forces is not contemplated, though students of the industry take it for granted that certain duplications will be eliminated in time, to effect wise economies.

Wesco Seems Barometer

Some curiosity is evident regarding Fox's plans for Loew's and M G M. An earning statement made public last week shows that for the twelve weeks ending Nov. 13, 1928, Loew's had an operating profit of $2,997,276 and a net profit of $2,102,033. This is money, even in American dollars. Apparently, if there is to be war, it will be a theatre war and not a war of product. Paramount is at the moment in a particularly strong position, with most of the weak sisters weeded out of the Publix string. Fox has an immense number of houses on his hands, nearly 800, and that they would profit from several years of intensive concentration cannot be doubted.

The feeling here in New York is that if there is to be a war between these two great factors in the industry, then it will first be noted in the western end of the country. Wesco seems to be a barometer of this situation.

PORTLAND Theatres Hit Union Demands; "Hip" Is Reclassified

(PORTLAND, March 12—Portland exhibitors have banded together to fight the local operators' union, whose demands with regard to sound equipment are keeping many of the suburban houses from wiring. Two men at $75 a week is an impossibility for many of the small houses, but the union will not retract one step from the arbitrary stand they have taken.

Another conference is being held. If it fails, there probably will be brought about a deadlock between the two factions.

The Hippodrome has been on the open shop basis for the past 8 days, but it will be given a new classification, under which it will be required to employ four stagehands in the place of six, with five musicians instead of eight. The status of all other union employees will remain the same.

Wingate Denies Officials Favor Repeal of Censor Law of New York State

WINGATE, N. Y., March 12—James Wingate, director of the Motion Picture Division of the State Education Department, today denied that there was any report of the unfavorable feeling among departmental officials that they favored the repeal of the censorship law, and that state review and licensing of motion pictures is very well located in the State Education Department. The general experience of states which provide for a state review and licensing of motion pictures seems to support this opinion, as at least four, if not five, of the six states which do that work have it under their State Department of Education.

So far as I know, the board of regents have made no expression upon the matter—Wingate told the Herald-World. "I advise you that it is my personal opinion," Wingate added, "that state review and licensing of motion pictures is very well located in the State Education Department. The general experience of states which provide for a state review and licensing of motion pictures seems to support this opinion, as at least four, if not five, of the six states which do that work have it under their State Department of Education. Lent Cuts Little into Upstate N. Y. Receipts (ALBANY, March 12.—While some theatres are reporting business as being rather slack these days and laying it to the effects of the Lenten season, other houses in central and northern New York, declare that business is fully up to normal, and that Lent is not cutting into receipts as in years past. Exchanges along Albany's Film Row report business as being under normal for this time of the year.

"Noah's Ark" As Roadshow To Open in Five Cities

NEW YORK, Mar. 12.—Warner Brothers' decision to open "Noah's Ark" as a roadshow attraction was announced this week by Sam E. Morris, vice-president.

This picture, which has its world premiere some weeks ago at Hollywood at Grauman's Chinese theatre and which opened for its first Broadway showing last week at the Winter Garden, will go on view in five other large cities in the near future.

The picture will open at the Majestic theatre in Boston, April 15, and the Woods theatre in Chicago, April 17.
A Good Show

To return briefly to the subject of Mr. William Fox, which seems to be the thing to do these days in motion picture circles, it might be said that he puts on a deal with real 100-proof prewar showmanship.

First, a few rumors and prompt denials. Then argument, and ballyhoo. Then more denials, made so earnestly and with a shocking show of sincerity. Then finally the deal is closed, definitely closed, with more denials.

All this is not putting over the deal, not presenting the big act. This is merely preparation, merely a prologue, a bit of presentation to precede the big picture.

* * *

Then comes the old dawn.

Invitations go out to a chosen few that Mr. Fox will entertain at the Roxy theatre during the quiet of Sunday afternoon. The cat is out of the bag, but there is nothing more than a hint that Mr. Fox has something to announce. Apparently there is just a little party on tap.

The afternoon moves on and they begin to gather in the Roxy, high up in one of the corners of the building, not far from Mr. Fox’s own office. A pleasant room is fitted out with chairs, not too conspicuously placed in rows. A table holds light refreshments; servants pass noiselessly around. A piano keeps the rows of chairs from looking like a schoolroom, but it is smothered under hats and coats, wrappings of a press pretending to be blasé.

There is an air of suppressed excitement. Finally Mr. Fox enters, quickly, flanked by high priests of his organization, Mr. Winfield Sheehan and John Zanft. With them are Nicholas Schenck (smiling at the men he’d told that Loew’s was not for sale, certainly not to Fox) and David Bernstein, officials of the Loew-Metro organization.

Everybody knows exactly what was going to happen. Everybody knows just exactly what is in the typewritten sheets that are to flutter around the room. And yet they all sit hushed and interested in what is going to happen. They want to see the show.

* * *

Mr. Fox will say a few words. The announcement will give all the details. Please do not ask Mr. Fox for further information. There will be nothing more to say. It is all in the little press bulletins.

Mr. Fox starts to talk. He is modest, commendably so, but very proud. It is apparent that he knows he has accomplished something. He thinks of the great purchase he has made, binding Loew’s and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to his own triumphant organization. His mind rests on them, but not for long. It quickly shifts to other scenes; he thinks of his early days in the picture business, his early days in this country, an eager, strange and gaunt little kid brought to America from Hungary to work out his own salvation.

"When I first wanted to go into motion pictures," is the theme of Mr. Fox’s song, "people thought I was crazy. . . . I was working in a clothing factory—$5 a week. . . . $17. . . . when I wanted more I couldn’t get it; they told me I was $2 overpaid as it was . . . so I quit . . . my savings of $1,666 . . . and with that I bought my first theatre, a house in Brooklyn, with seats at 5 cents each and a box-office of $7.50 when the house was full. . . ."

U.S. Launches Suit Against Hays Body and Film Boards

Government Charges Conspiracy for Restraint of Trade by Operation of Credit Committee—Defense Declares Nine Millions Lost in Theatre Transfers Last Year

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Trial of the first of the Department of Justice's two suits in equity against the Hays organization—the M P P D A—and Film Boards of Trade, under the Sherman Antitrust Act, began here yesterday in federal district court No. 3, Federal Judge Thatcher presiding.

It is the contention of the Government that the defendant distributors and Film Boards of Trade are engaged in a conspiracy for the restraint of trade by operation of credit committees throughout the country.

The keynote of the defense is that no power is given to anyone by the rules and regulations of credit committees by which injury can be done to any exhibitor. It is also the contention of the defense that the Government must prove that concerted action, alleged conspiracy, is harmful to the individual exhibitor. The theory of monopoly and it is admitted by the Government that competition is free.

Intimidation Plot Charged

Edwin D. Dowling, chairman of the Wallader, Wickersham and Tait, is head of the defense council which also includes Gabriel Hess and Charles Pettijohn of the Hays organization and Arthur Fisk of the law firm of C. Stanley Thompson and Ralston R. Irvine, special assistants to the attorney general, are handling the case for the Government.

To expedite matters the case has been brought against First National, co-defendants being the respective Artists, Fox, Pathe, Universal, R K O, Vitagraph and Educational.

Thompson says that the Government will show a conspiracy to coerce and intimidate purchasers of theatres to assume the contracts of the former owners which is, allegedly, done by shutting off the service of the owner until he has assumed the obligations of his predecessor. The Government asks an injunction against the alleged conspiracy of distributors and Film Boards of Trade, contending that the credit agreement is a restraint of interstate trade and commerce.

Big Loss in Theatre Changes

The defense states that 4,000 houses changed hands last year, that $9,000,000 was lost when the new purchasers failed to assume old obligations, and that only 30 exhibitors were called upon for security against new contracts.

The Government is understood to have 30,000 exhibits garnered from the files of the defendants to which it has had free access in the four years in which the investigation has been conducted.

All the Government's evidence will be documentary, while the defense will call a number of exhibitors to the stand.

The case was adjourned at 5:30 p. m. for continuation today.

An as yet second of the two suits, which concerns the operation of Arbitration Boards and methods of enforcing decisions, will be argued in the same court.

Mr. Justice M. Frank, chief justice of the United States Supreme Court, will preside in this suit, in which Paramount et al will be defendants.

"Rainbow Man" Songs Will All Be Published Before Film's Released

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.—The principal songs of the composition of "The Rainbow Man" starring Eddie Dowling, SonorArt's all-talking and musical picture now being filmed in Hollywood, will all be published prior to release of the production, as deals for the new song material are now under way, with several publishing firms bidding for the material.

All the music has been written as original numbers by James Hanley, who was with Dowling in the song writing for Dowling's musical comedies such as "Honeymoon Lane," "Sally, Irene and Mary," and "Sidewalks of New York." The principal song numbers of "The Rainbow Man" are "Sleepy Valley," "Smile Little Pal" and "The Rainbow Man," Louis F. Gottschalk is arranging the music and conducting the orchestra.

Fox First to Broadway With Mexican Revolt Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Fox News scored a treat yesterday with the first pictures of the latest Mexican revolution to reach Broadway, while Pathe News has cameramen with both the federal and the rebel forces in Mexico; pictures showing the capture of Juarez and Nogales reached New York by airplane early yesterday morning and got to the Broadway houses in time for the afternoon shows.

Brown Denies Publix Pact To Supervise RKO Houses

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—There is absolutely nothing to the denial of Hiram S. Brown, president of R K O, said today in denying the report that Publix has agreed to supervise the operation of R K O theatres.

"We are operating our circuit ourselves and will continue to do so to the best of our ability," Brown said.

House Operates as a Club to Get
British Law; Bar Natives
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Distant parts of the world, China, India, Africa, boast odd motion picture houses. But one of the strangest is the "Carib Club," in Nassau, Bahamas, only a couple of hours by air distant from Miami. The Carib Club does no general advertising, sells no tickets to the public, has no billboards, and admits no strangers. It is run as a private club and is supported by membership dues only. Yet it is the only movie palace for Nassau's white residents.

The club occupies part of a long building on the waterfront. The other half of the structure is a liquor warehouse, where, it is rumered, great quantities of whiskey were "ou" being the heyday of Nassau liquor smuggling.

Each of the three weekly performances opens with the ringing of a gong, signal for the audience to "God Save the King." The great majority of the guests attend in formal evening dress.

The real key to the Club's exclusivest is not far to seek. Four�ths of Nas-sau's population are negro spiners, fishermen, stewards, and farm laborers; yet they cannot, under any pretext from church or places, as such as Nassau's other cinema. So Bahamian, English, and American business men and women own and organized the club, which extends membership privileges to the white residents and to American and Canadian winter tourists. But there are no bright lights or placards or the Miami sort of publicity here to Shilling the box office.

Fox Movietone News
Tells Inaugural Story
In Distinct Recording

That Fox Movietone News got some very fine shots of the Hoover inauguration was evidenced last week when the newsreel ap-ppeared at the Uptown, Chicago. The first sequence showed hordes of Coolidge escorting Hoover to the stand to receive the oath of office. Coolidge stepped to the microphones studio, while a band and Taft proceed to administer oath of office.

Hoover then made his inaugural speech and while his speech was being recorded the camera panned over the vast crowd sur-rrounding the grounds. The camera next followed Coolidge to the train and recorded his farewells to everyone.

The closeup shots were exceptionally good and the recording clear and distinct.

New York Back to Limelight as Production Center

Nine Companies Have Acoustically Constructed Stages in Empire City—Several Closed for Years Are Reopened and Rebuilt, Others Being Erected

BY DOUGLAS FOX

NEW YORK, March 12.—Sound has brought about the return of New York as a production center. Studios which had been shut down for years are being reopened and rebuilt while new ones, especially designed for the new medium which promises to be the mainstay of future entertainment in America, are under course of construction.

Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warners, Brothers Fox, Pathe, R.C.A Photophone, the Victor Talking Machine Company, American Sound Films and Biophone all have acoustically constructed stages in and around New York. Most of them have been working full blast, concentrating on shorts which in some studios, have been turned out at the rate of two a day.

The men in charge of production, at all these studios are convinced that New York is the logical center for sound pictures. They cite the propinquity of the headliners of the legitimate stage, the presence of a great deal of mechanical equipment; the nearness of Wall Street and the center of distribution as clinching arguments. As for the weather, most sound shooting is done indoors. For snow scenes it is not far to Lake Placid and there is plenty of country of every kind within 25 to 30 miles of the metropolis.

Of the studios, the Paramount-Famous-Lasky building in Astoria is the most imposing. The marble facade with the deeply indented portecochere is reminiscent of a great railroad terminal rather than a motion picture studio. Its main stage, 150 by almost 300 feet, is easily the largest in the east. It is an open stage, but the monk cloth hangings make it available for sound, and two companies, if they are careful, can shoot at once. In the basement are two more thoroughly sound-proofed, specially constructed stages. A new building 200 by 50 feet, is being added to the studio. This will house the heating and lighting plants, property rooms, carpenter's shops, etc., and leave more room for shooting as well and reduce the noise hazards.

The studio was opened last August when equipment was installed and a certain amount of time was given over to experimentation.
All the work was done in the downtown stage until it was found that the big stage could be used for sound. The stuff was prepared at first, but advance was rapid and pretty soon shooting began in earnest.

The first talking feature began in October with Jeanne Eagels in "The Lady," which is now playing to Broadway. It was made under the direction of Jean DeLimur, who wrote the "Legion of the Condemned."

The Marx Brothers were gambling through the motions of "The Cocoanuts" when this reporter strolled on the stage and came near to being ejected after a valiant struggle with an incipient smash.

Robert Florey and Joseph Santley, directing, heaved sighs of relief when the tension was over.

Mona Bell is in charge of things at the studio. His title is production executive.

Among the comedians doing shorts are Eddie Cantor, Fred Allen, James Barton and Donald Ogden Stuart.

Among the features which have been made in the past few months (all are dialogue pictures) are "The Hole in the Wall" with Edward Robinson, "Gentlemen of the Press" with Walltuson, and "Nothing But the Truth" with Dix. Jeanne Eagels is now doing
"Jealousy" and will probably get to work on another feature soon.

The building is completely equipped. That means dressing rooms, restaurant, everything in the way of mechanical equipment, laboratories and a honeycomb of offices as well as the usual run of projection rooms and so on.

MGM Studio Elaborate
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Eastern Sound Studio at 127th street and Second avenue is also an elaborate establishment. So much so that a list of the various rooms with their purposes covers three closely typewritten pages. Let it suffice that it is completely equipped from recording rooms and cylinder labors to the lighting of the second of the four floors and basement.

First National Effects Tieups with Kick for All New Productions

Newspaper Drive for “Divine Lady” and Old Gold Campaign for “Barker” and “Weary River” Set the Pace
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Producer exploitation tieups have taken on a new importance, both in variety and completeness of tieups, through the policy adopted by First National on its latest product, Ned E. Depinet, general salesmanager, declared today.

MAN’S promises have been made in the past by the cooperation, Depinet said, but the proof of the pudding with First National is a layout of campaigns of which “The Divine Lady,” a $100,000 newspaper drive, is pointed out only because it is. They are taken from the latest, Depinet recalled a long train of tieups.

“The First was co-operation, the stronger Warner has been wide publicity for ‘Weary River’ through the popular song, a Victor record and radio favorite. The Victor Company is just releasing two ‘Divine Lady’ records that promise to be equally popular. They are taken from a song published by H. Witmark & Sons. One is an arrangement by Nathaniel Shilkret, played by his orchestra; the other a ‘Lady Divine’ song sung by Paul Oliver, Victor artist.

Effective Use of Radio

“First National is making effective use of the radio through the Vitaphone Jubilee Hour and other features on the air. Millions of people were reached by Colleen Moore and the other stars, March 4.

“A tieup for Alice White in ‘Broadway Babylon’ has just been negotiated with the Tantzen Bathing Suit Company, whereby 10,000 stores will feature Alice White in a Tantzen bathing suit in window displays as well as newspaper and magazine advertising.

“Millions will be reached by the True Story Magazines of March, April, May and June, and the first National players on the cover—Billie Dove in March, Doris Dawson in April, Billie Dove and Antonio Moreno in May and Colleen Moore in June. True Story Magazine has a circulation of over two million.

“Another recent newspaper break of great value in the marketing work of ‘The Barker’ and ‘Weary River’ has been obtained through the tieup with Old Gold cigaretts,” he said. “Two thousand newspapers carried advertising on these two pictures in connection with its own advertising. This is the sort of co-operation that really means money to an exhibitor.

We have prepared special campaigns on all departments of the picture. The exploitation records on ‘The Barker’ and ‘Weary River’ have proved of great value. Then there has been wide publicity for ‘Weary River’, through the popular song, a Victor record and radio favorite.

“The Victor Company is just releasing two ‘Divine Lady’ records that promise to be equally popular. They are taken from a song published by H. Witmark & Sons. One is an arrangement by Nathaniel Shilkret, played by his orchestra; the other a ‘Lady Divine’ song sung by Paul Oliver, Victor artist.

Italian Executive on Visit to U. S. in Interests of World Film Institute
(By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World)

NAPLES, March 2—(By Mail.) Lucien De Feo, general manager of the International Institute for Educative Cinema, has sailed for New York to make contact with the United States and states important questions in view of America’s adherence to the Institute.

The Italian government, in order to get through appropriate propaganda, a stronger hold on the moral factor of its colonies, that is, Tripoli and Cirenaica has established a special office for propaganda purposes. The properly appointed undertakers undertake a monthly tour in every principal town projecting the “Luce” films, any one being admitted to the studio. The films of the institute are very educative and instructive, thus serving splendidly the aim of the propaganda. The natives prove to be very enthusiastic for such a discovery as this picture was absolutely unknown. By this wise system Italy obtains great advantages because it helps to give the natives a positive manifestation of Italy’s grandeur and beauty.

Indiana Senate Repeals Daylight Saving;

Chicago Faces Early Time Start April 6

Indianapolis, March 2.—The Indiana Senate has today passed a resolution that daylight saving time be abolished and that the early time for telegraph and telephone traffic be 11 o’clock instead of 12 o’clock. The measure, which fixes Central Standard time as official, now is Governor Harry G. Leslie for his signature. The vote was 24 to 9.

Chicago exhibitors were not jubilant. They are facing the prospect not only of a partial abolition of daylight saving, but the possibility of the time being fixed at 11 o’clock instead of 12 o’clock. The proposal before the city council calling for starting daylight saving at midnight of April 6, was defeated by an early vote today.

At Albany the legislators decided not to report out the bill to repeal daylight saving, under New York state. The censorship blow hill also is expected to die in committee. In California financial interests are backing a daylight saving measure.

Showmen with Common Sense Solve Sound Problems: Lasky

No Need for Excitement. Declares Paramount Vice-President—Interviews Himself and Learns That Picture Is the Thing, Not Whether Audien or Silent

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Good showmanship and common sense will solve all the problems that have been raised by audiens and sound pictures, and while "the film industry faces a situation unparalleled since its start, there is no need for excitement or hysteria," according to Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount vice-president in charge of production.

Lasky declared that the future of audiens is the future of the industry itself, that the talking picture is here to stay, but that the public will ask only whether a picture is good, not whether it is talking or silent. Audiens, however, will make for better entertainment, he said, with the possibilities of the new field scarcely scratched as yet.

Applying his own formula, asking himself questions and then answering them, Lasky said:

Q. Will all pictures be talking?
A. No. It all depends on good entertainment. The ratio of talking and silent pictures depends upon the way strong dramatic subjects shape up, and upon the public's reactions to the two types of pictures.

Q. Will the silent pictures of the future be synchronized with moving pictures?
A. Yes. We have found that synchronization adds tremendously to the dramatic and romantic appeal of productions. Subjects that lend themselves to beautiful musical expression will be chosen in preference to those that do not. The same applies to sound effects.

Q. Will stage stars supplant the present silent stars in dialogue pictures?
A. Both will have to add other qualities to those that brought them success in the past. The stage player will find his or her trained voice a great asset. The established film player has demonstrated screen personality. If there is any advantage, it probably goes to the present film players.

Q. Is beauty still important in pictures?
A. More so than ever. The voice expresses so much of personality that beauty takes on a new meaning in talking pictures. A melodious voice will never take the place of physical beauty, but it can add to it.

Youth Still Preferred

Q. Will talking pictures affect the preference for youth on the screen?
A. I see no reason why they should. If the public wants to see youth, why will it not want to hear it?

Q. Do talking pictures offer more opportunities for talent than silent films?
A. Unquestionably. The singers, the dancers, the whistlers, and any others with any sort of talent can now turn to the screen.

Q. Will talking pictures have any effect on the general speech of the nation?
A. I am sure they will, and a beneficial one. Clean, correct American English will result from them. Just as the films set styles in clothing, they will bring a new fashion in improved speech.

Q. Do you recommend elocution lessons for players or novices who aspire to film fame?

A. Elocution went out of style for the stage some time ago. It is not wanted for talking pictures. Lessons to improve diction are excellent. The declamation style of elocution is harmful. Singing lessons are helpful. None of our players has been inducted into lessons of any sort. The players are using their own good judgment in what voice training they are doing. I want them to be natural.

Q. What of his style of elocution?
A. Sometimes they are an asset. I have requested Maurice Chevalier to take care that he does not lose his French accent.

Hollywood Musical Center

Q. What effect will synchronized pictures have on music?
A. They will make Hollywood a great musical center. They will bring, too, a greater popular appreciation of good music.

Q. What of the future or musical shows in pictures?
A. Tremendous. Musical plays, such as "Close Harmony" or "Burlesque" will be very popular. There will be screen musical comedies and operettas. I do not think grand opera will return to the screen, because it is not popular enough generally.

Q. How about Shakespearean plays?
A. The public demand for them is not great enough.

Q. What is the next technical development?
A. A wide angle lens, giving a broader screen. The screen of the future will be as big as the present theatre stage. The new development will make every seat in a theatre a front row vantage point.

MGM Official Shelters Homeless During Blizzard

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Mar. 12.—An account in a Paris paper of relief work on the part of the Government Palace by Joe Freeman, director of M.G.M Continental theatres, and supervisor of this Loew-Metro-Goldwyn house, sponsors an appeal to take care of many of the homeless in the French capital. The cellars of the Palace were opened up for "business" within 24 hours. In cooperation with a prominent restaurant owner, Freeman arranged to provide food at night and in the morning for those who came to the improvised hotel.

13 Million Patrons In Two Years; Roxy And Gang Celebrate

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Roxy and his "gang" are still celebrating the anniversary of the ten million dollar theatre on Seventeenth avenue which was two years old yesterday. In those two years thirteen million people have been in what has had to offer and more than eleven million dollars has been taken in at the box office.

"I feel that I have justified the faith that my friends have had in me," Rothafel said, "but still I want to go on. There are greater things to come and those people expect them. My only hope is that I may live up to their faith."

Roxy said he had big plans for this year but did not want to discuss them. He was too much excited with the present to go far into the future.

RKO Managers Co-operate In Syncopation Festival; Many Tieups Expected

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Mark A. Luescher, president of Radio Keith Orpheum and Hyman Stahl, advertising manager of Radio Pictures, got the fullest co-operation of all the RKO managers in putting over a "Syncopation Festival Week." After the pictures had been booked solid for their chain of theatres a national temp campaign was launched through the Victor Talking Machine Company and its thousands of dealers, Stept and Green and Harms, music publishers, the National Broadcasting Company and the 150 RKO theatres.

The publishing firm of Doubleday Dorr lined up book shops throughout the country and exploited "Stepping High," the book from which "Syncopation" was filmed. Resi- dent managers won local co-operation of broadcasting stations, dancing schools and dancing contests, and special attention was paid to lobby displays in each of the theatres.

Take Mystery Out of Synchronization and Customers Will Appreciate Its Wonders, Declares Ponton—Calls Ear for Music Big Asset to Exhibitor

SYNCHRONIZATION is no longer a mysterious secret. When theatre managers realize this they will take another step toward socializing their patronage to the point of making them interested as well as enthusiastic supporters of synchronized programs. The day is just about here when wired-house monopolies will cease to exist, and every theatre in any good-sized town that is anxious and desirous of giving the best type of entertainment to its patrons will be wired for sound and talking pictures.

New York Back in Limelight
As Sound Production Center

Movietone Acts which include miniature dramas, comedies, revues, sketches, playlets, monologues and dialogues ad infinitum. Individual talent abounds. Miller and Lyles, Vincent Lopez, George Dewey Washington, The Happiness Boys, the Gilbert and Sullivan ensembles and the Capitol Theatre crowd can be seen kicking their heels and singing their songs all over the several stages. Major Edward Bowes and Louis K. Sidney are in charge, with Nick Grinde directing.

The lower stage, 30 by 73, is used by the music department for scoring films. The main stage on the second floor is 114 by 58. One of the main uses of the studio is for purposes of synchronization. Musicians simply clutter up the place.

Radio to Make No More in East

Pathé used to share Sound Studios, Inc., with Radio Pictures, which recently completed "Syncopation" there. Radio, however, will make no more pictures in the East, according to Lee Marcus, vice president in charge of sales. So Pathé reigns supreme.

It is concentrating on the production of an extensive schedule of musical features and short subjects under the direction of Robert T. Kane. For the past few months the old building at 134th street and Park avenue, which was once a dance hall, then a skating rink, where Pearl White made her early serial thrillers, has been rocked with the musical synchronization of "The Leatherneck," "Noisy Neighbors," "The Shady Lady," "Geraldine," "Sal of Singapore" and "The Spierer," which made such a hit at the Roxy.

Pathé Forces Busy

Morton Downey’s first Pathé talking and musical feature, "Mother’s Boy," has just been completed, the production of Gilbert & Sullivan’s most popular operetta is under way, and George Lemaire is making a series of Pathé talking comedies.

Josiah Zuro is in charge of all musical synchronizations. Formerly the director of presentations for Famous Players’ theatres, he now conducts a 44-piece orchestra in what Pathé claims is the largest synchronization room in the world.

The main stage at Sound Studios is 100x125 and will accommodate one large or two small sets.

Fox Expansion Predicted

Production in New York for the Fox organization is centered around Fox Movietone News, the workings of which were described in a recent HERALD-WORLD article. Occasionally they shoot a few shorts over at the buildings on Tenth avenue and it is believed that they are planning to go in rather heavily for this sort of thing in the near future. Cortlandt Smith, in charge of production, is uncommunicative.

150 Vitaphone Shorts

Warner Brothers reopened the old Vitaphone Studios on Avenue M, Brooklyn, in the middle of December. Since that time they have turned out more than 150 shorts, or something like two a day. The main stage, just large enough for two sets, measures 50x100. A large one adjoining it is in construction. The place is completely equipped for turning out sound pictures. They can be produced there, developed, cut, edited and sent out on the market.

The only outside work is the processing of the discs, which is done in New York. The personnel in steady employment, including the clerical staff, numbers around 250. Morris Levinson is the manager in charge of the studio. Bryan Foy, son of the famous Eddie, is in charge of production and also takes care of most of the directing.

Foy claims to be the first man to do a full length all talking picture, "The Lights of New York," which, by the way, was made on the Coast.

Every studio has a director who did the first all dialogue feature. Which is an indication, at any rate, that they are not exactly new.

No Synchronizing of Silents

Plans are underway for the production of a number of two reeler as well as the program novelty shorts. Murray Smith is writing the scenarios and Edmund Joseph is doing the dialogue. Sesuie Hayakawa, the Japanese who was the talk of the town some years ago, is making two reelers in sound. J. C. Nugent is writing a two reeler in which he will take the lead. Raymond Hitchcock is another who will be starred in two reelers.

There is no synchronization of silent pictures, as in many of the other studios.

Quite an elaborate system, however, is used to insure perfect synchronization between the camera and the machinery in the recording room. Because of the changes that have to be made with the discs, takes can be only seven minutes long—which is pretty long for any kind of a take these days.

Scenes Rehearsed in Sound

Scenes are rehearsed in sound without the camera and then played back without the disc. Recording is done on three discs simultaneously. One is destroyed and the other two are processed. Playing back will ruin any disc. The great wax plates come an inch and a half thick, weigh eighteen and a half pounds and can be shaved down and re-used until they are half their original thickness.

Harold Levey, by the way, is the musical director there.

Universal, at the present moment, is not using its studios across the river at Fort Lee, N. J. It is believed, however, that they will be utilized with the inauguration of the Universal Sound Newsreel in the fall. The dialogue sequences of "Show Boat" were made in the Ziegfeld theatre.

[Josiah Zuro, director general of music for Pathé, is shown with the orchestra which he employs in making musical synchronization of Pathé Pictures. In Chicago last week, on his way to the West Coast, Zuro declared that the music department of Pathé was growing by the familiar leaps and bounds.

This survey will be concluded next week in this department and will include Eastern sound production of RCA Photophone, Columbia, American Sound Film Productions, General Talking Pictures Corporation and Biophone.]
New Sound-on-Film Device for $1,000 From Movie-Phone

A sound-on-film device which will sell for $1,000 has just been announced by L. E. Goetz, national distributor for the Movie-Phone Corporation, with offices at 724 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. The Movie-Phone disc equipment has already been installed in more than 200 theatres.

The new sound-on-film device is sold in connection with the company’s disc equipment, which also sells for $1,000, making complete sound on film and disc equipment for $2,000.

This new Movie-Phone equipment will place complete talking picture devices within the reach of hundreds of exhibitors who have held up their orders for this kind of equipment because of the higher prices heretofore, Goetz said.

The Movie-Phone Corporation already has installations of its disc equipment in practically every large city in the country and to these will be added the sound on the film attachments which are ready for immediate delivery. The Movie-Phone Corporation promises the same quick delivery and service on the sound-on-film device as on disc equipment.

Goetz announced that exhibitors may purchase the sound-on-disc device to determine how the audience responds to sound pictures, and later, if desired, can add the sound-on-film attachment.

Powers Cinephone Gets George Craff

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—George Lewis Craff, formerly engineer with the Victor company at Camden, New Jersey, has joined Powers Cinephone and will serve in an advisory capacity on all sound productions, using the Powers system.

With the Victor company he was identified with the scoring of “Wings,” “Lilac Time,” “Redskin” and “Abe’s Irish Rose.”

Maxwell Sails for U. S.

For World Wide Session

On “Made to Order” Films

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—John Maxwell, chairman of British International Pictures, sails from London tomorrow for America to confer with the executives of World Wide Pictures on a talking program for fall releases. Maxwell heads the largest British producing company and is planning on spending millions of dollars on all dialogue productions, to be released in the United States and Canada by World Wide Pictures.

It is the intention of the company to make “made to order pictures” for the American exhibitors and J. D. Williams says “the finest line of product ever sent out of Europe will soon be on its way.”

Dowling’s “Rainbow Man” Uses Sound-on-Film Plan

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.—The “Rainbow Man,” the talking picture which Sono-Art Productions is filming with Eddie Dowling, will be released with the sound on film. It is being taken with Western Electric apparatus in the Metropolitan sound studios. Engineers H. W. Bergman, Robert Harper and Dodge Jumme are in charge of the recording.

Fred Snow is directing and George Crote is film director and editor.

Audiens Boost Silent Pictures’ Standard Declares Floyd Bacon

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—While making a short trip to the studios a correspondent of the Herald-World was greatly impressed by the unshaking faith of the producers in the future of audiens. With a source of wonder, even to those connected with the studios who watch millions of dollars go into the erection of sound-proof stages and electrical equipment. The confidence of the producers increases one’s respect for this new off-spring of the moving picture industry.

My friend talked to Floyd Bacon, at the Warner studio and got some ideas worth passing on. My friend was asked “How do they like the talkies in San Francisco” and answered that he had heard them called “shouts.”

“That’s the trouble,” replied Bacon, showing some irritation, “but not all the fault lies in the making of sound pictures. The shouting element is often the fault of the amplifiers in the theatres. It is as necessary for the operator in the theatres to learn the technique of projecting as it is for the studio operator to register the picture.”

“Arein’t they specially trained?”

“‘Yes. But it is the same as in oil. Discover oil and everybody is an oil operator overnight. We should not judge the talkies too harshly.”

While Floyd Bacon is an enthusiastic believer in the future of audien pictures he believes there will always be a place for the silent pictures. He believes that the audiens has more than justified itself in demanding more of actors than silent pictures do. He believes that it will bring about a higher standard of screen play values and that these will be felt in both the sound and silent productions.

Film Cutters Read Lips of Players as First Aid in Editing

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12—Methods of editing auditions have changed as much as the pictures themselves. According to B. W. Burton, who is editing the synchronized prologue of Universal's "Show Boat," it is not only where to cut, but how to cut. The sound is printed on a separate piece of film and when edited and transferred to the film which has the picture. To find the place to cut, the film editor must and will read the lip action of the characters. He must memorize the lines while watching the picture and then edit by lip reading.

8 Christie Shorts
And "Carnation Kid"
Released by PFL

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12—This month is the largest in the history of the Christie Film Company. Headed by the "Carnation Kid" with Douglas MacLean, a talking feature production, the release schedule calls for three Talking Plays and five silent two-reel comedies. The "Carnation Kid" already has opened at the Paramount theatre, New York. It was filmed in 43 sets and locations.

Paramount also is releasing this month "Post Mortems," "Music Hath Harms" and "Meet the Missus."

HEAR, SEE AND COMPARE

MORE VALUE PER DOLLAR INVESTED THAN IN ANY OTHER EQUIPMENT YOU CAN BUY

MR. EXHIBITOR! If you are investing in Sound Equipment, would you rather have the finest equipment that money can buy NOW—or do you prefer to put out your good money for a lot of glowing promises for the FUTURE? Exhibitors will profit by analyzing the FACTS cited below, concerning Gennett Synchronizer Systems.

SYNCHRONIZATION—Vibrationless. The utmost finesse and precision combined with a sturdiness that will outlast your theatre. Gears and bearings are of the finest material which insures you against the trouble and expense of frequent gear replacement, caused by excessive vibration.

AMPLIFICATION. The finest that money plus the best engineering brains in that field can create. FULL DOUBLE CHANNEL amplification system (2 complete units) is the standard equipment of all Gennett models. All built into a compact rack and panel combination—a feature typical of ONLY the highest price equipments, size 69x19x15 inches.

REPRODUCTION—Without Distortion. GIANT DYNAMICS—one type or enclosed type for air column horns—specially designed for and so perfectly matched with entire system as to reproduce naturally and with fidelity the entire range of frequencies—from the highest soprano to the lowest bass notes without distortion.

GENNETT SYNCHRONIZER SYSTEMS are so designed that by a simple lever movement you can detach the synchronous equipment from your projectors. Thus: 1) You can switch from “talkie” to silent and run your projector on its own power at any speed to conform to time schedules; 2) Keeps current bill down; 3) Saves overtime payrolls.

GENNETT SYNCHRONIZER SYSTEMS are all A-C 110 volt operated and are adaptable to any and all standard makes of projection machines.

FILM ATTACHMENT. We expect to be ready in a very short time to offer exhibitors a film attachment which will conform both in price and quality to the standards of our present product. With this in view present amplification is so designed as to handle such film attachment with but slight additions whenever such attachment is added to your equipment.

GENERAL SOUND EQUIPMENT CORPORATION
1650 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY
World Wide Pictures
Appoints S. N. Berg to Direct Music Bureau
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12—World Wide Pictures announces the creation of a musical department headed by S. N. Berg. This means that there will be established a complete bureau to musically interpret future World Wide releases, with music arrangers, copyists and a musical director for recording on both film and disc.

Berg resigns from Sam Fox sound department claimed to have scored the first motion picture and also the inventor of the cue sheet. At one time he was musical director of the Motion Picture vaudeville and the Exhibitors Trade Review. Previous to going with Sam Fox he had been abroad and associated with Keith Prowse, the largest music publisher in England.

Berg is working out a new development in sound synchronization whereby sound will not be confused merely to effects but work up the psychological and dramatic situations. His department will be located at the World Wide office, New York.

Simplicity Claimed for Theatre Cue Service

The Synchronized Music Company has developed a new cueing service that simplifies, it is claimed, the work of the individual handling non-synchronous sounds devices of every kind. These cue sheets give every necessary detail for cueing the music and sound effects to the picture. This service has been put on a large production basis that permits a sharp price reduction also.

Arrangements have also been made to handle the Dubbing machine. The company now offers itself to meet the requirements of theatre owners for everything in the reproduction of sound in their theatres.

"Cohens and Kellys" to Be Released March 17
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12—The latest Cohen and Kelly picture, called "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," will be released on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, according to an announcement by Carl Laemmle. This is the third of the series of "Cohens and Kellys," and next year, on March 17, will be seen the fourth of its kind. The picture has George Sidney, Kate Price, Mack Swain, Vera Gordon and others in it.

Orpheum in Des Moines
Opens with Photophone
(Special to the Herald-World)

DES MOINES, March 12—Photophone equipment has been installed in the Orpheum theatre in Des Moines. "In Old Arizona" was the first show, and opened Sunday, March 3. Elaborate changes were made in the house to accommodate the new apparatus and to put over audiences with the vaudeville audience.

Audiences will Be Potent Medium
For Propaganda, Griffith Says

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12—Talking pictures will entirely supplant the silent film, television may become an adjunct of the press, and national figures will soon appear in dialogue films for purposes of propaganda, David Wark Griffith, United Artists director, told the Herald-World today.

Griffith, whose directorial activity will soon be centered on Molly Picon, of the Yiddish Art theatre, to name in town for the opening of "Lady of the Pavements," starring Lupe Velez, at the Rialto last Saturday.

I think that the President will not allow national figures will soon have to give their statements to the sound newspapers as well as to the press if they want their communications to have the ring of authenticity," Griffith said. "People take more stock in what can be seen to move and heard to speak than they do in the cold vision of the printed word. The sound newspaper is the natural complement to the newspaper. And I also think that the time will come when television will flush the news of the day before our eyes as we ride in to work on the morning train. It will be many years before this medium is at all practicable but the time will come when it will probably supplant the more ephemeral portions of the press.

"Talking pictures," Griffith continued, "will probably be perfected within a year. In two years or so the production of silent pictures will be practically negligible because, although audiences have had their limitations so far, there is not a thing that can be done silently that cannot be done in sound.

"Dialogue pictures will mean the end of the legitimate theatre in the smaller communities in a great many cases musical comedies will be done directly in this medium. The legitimate theatre, however, will never die. It is a medium of expression which can be approached but never duplicated on the screen. Motion pictures, no matter how vital, how gripping they are, are essentially remote when compared with the living drama. The theatre is a place of illusion—that illusion is more perceptible in pictures, you are conscious that your characters are shadows, not real. They are not real in the theatre but they do live and breathe before you, they have color and a vitality which you can sense as well as see.

"Predicts More Screen Propaganda

"During the war I devoted considerable time to propaganda. I was making a picture in England called 'Hearts of the World.' I persuaded the Dowager Queen Alexandra to play in it. She managed her entrances and exits remarkably well and showed quite a natural flair for acting. And there is no doubt that her appearance in the picture helped tremendously in war-torn England.

"Nations are constantly using propaganda for which motion pictures and especially sound pictures are a splendid medium. When this is more generally recognized it will not be as uncommon to see and hear your national and world figures on the screen.

"There is no such thing," Griffith went on, "as a third dimensional film. Trick lighting will give you certain effects in relief. Re- volving lenses will not do it for the simple reason that photography is the imprint of light on film and no matter what kind of lenses you have the basic results will remain the same."

West's "Alibi" Called Best Audien
Ever Produced; Gang Theme
Gilstrom Directs Two Good Dialogue Short Features—Hollywood Overrun with Poor Relations and Parasites

By DOUGLAS HOUSES

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.—If Roland West never makes another picture it doesn't matter. He has made one that has burned the ears off a couple of producing companies that had set a fast pace in making audien.

He has called it "Alibi." Whether that's a name or an excuse for one doesn't matter, the picture starts with in pretty lively fashion and has boom-booming all through it with stuff in the latter part that better any melodramatic action in the best five reel Western.

Not that "Alibi" is a Western or a cheap quality picture; it is an expensive piece of work built from the ground up.

The only people in the cast I recognize are Pat O'Malley and Mae Busch. The others are new friends from New York who have spent their lives behind the footlights.

The picture proves numerous things to the trade. It isn't pretentious nor uncommonly experimental. It comes from the United Artists studio as that company's first big debut into dialogue.

It isn't experimental in using musical comedy songs throughout the action. That has been done successfully chiefly by MGM in "The Broadway Melody."

It proves that the most fashionable kind of dramatic theme, namely the underworld, can be applied to audien production. Guns popping men off in dark alleys while hands play 100 feet away is novel in a Hollywood product.

It proves that in a good audien charac ters in the story achieve a much more distinct individuality than on the silent screen. The characters portrayed by O'Malley, Chester Morris, and Regis Toomey are separated by chasms. The rather obstinate appearing Elinor Grith holds nothing in common with Irma Harrison in her role. Each character stands out as indubitably as in a Dickens novel.

Sequences are permitted in the action that would have been thrown out completely had the picture not been enhanced by audien equipment. It would have been impossible to tell the onlookers the story of the episode in the night club or in the roof bungalow if the lens alone had been depended on. The action would have been too complicated and would have been deleted.

With these things in mind the picture seems to be the best dialogue picture ever made. It has the elements of entertainment so thoroughly backed into it that it is easy to say it's a fine picture. But, I believe it is more than that.

The two reel field is probably the most feasible place to expect the greatest progress in audien. Fred Gilstrom has given several months of conscientious study to the new device and has begun successfully to put many of his ideas into production.

Alongside of him is Al Cohn who is writing and editing the Christie output. Their stuff is getting too much heard about, "Melancholy Dame" (which you've already heard about) and "The Framing of the Shrew" are negro stories by Octavus Roy Cohen. They are as funny as the original Cohen stories and are (if I'm not confusing you) more entertaining than the originals. They tell a funny story in the way of drama rather than narrative. In this case drama is (perhaps always is) more entertaining than narrative.

In "Framing of the Shrew" Floriano Slappey straightens out the domestic difficulties of his pal by strategy. After six cons ultations with Floriano h.p. finds there is no reason for a smart house-husband to work or worry. The wife does all the work and pays the pal to lie in bed for breakfast and take things easy.

Gilstrom's work is further proven in "Meet the Misius," a Gleason starring pic ture of two reels. It is funnier than the Cohen picture.

Quite noticeable here are the idle guests of the town. The Packards and Cadillacs that many of them are driving belong to hard working girls that haven't time to cruise along the boulevard. The afternoon is the time for this sport.

The girls who own them are working before uncomfortable kleig lights. They arise at six in the morning and return home about eight for dinner and a few hours rest.

Their pay checks are reputedly large and therefore Uncle John and Aunt Emma decide to move the family from Ironton, Michigan, to Hollywood, where Cousin Mary "is in the movies." Maybe Mary can get Uncle John a job as a janitor or something. But jobs are scarce and Uncle John soon finds he has been living at Mary's beautiful little home for a year without having paid any rent. He falls easily into the habit and Mary is too much of a sap to kick him out.

Stepfathers and stepmothers are as bad or worse than the distant relatives. Sally Phipps filed a petition with the court last week here asking that her stepfather be kicked out bodily and that he be restrained from annoying her.

She claimed he had taken her money and had never accounted for it.

Fox-Low Deal Has No Effect on Plans of U, Says Laemmle

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.—That he now feels the need all the greater for him to produce pictures as an independent was voiced Sunday by Carl Laemmle upon his arrival at Radio Corporation of America where he is expected to a merger with Universal with another company and said the Fox-Low deal will have no effect in any way upon his own motion picture plans.

"The many new alignments," he said, "entered into by motion picture producers only strengthen Universal."

He was met by Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer. Laemmle has been vacationing at Hot Springs, Ark.

Production of Audiences in Four Tongues to Be Made
By Boasberg and Brock

(Special to the Herald-World)

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF., March 12—Production of talking and musical short reel vaudeville sketches in English, French, German and Spanish will be launched by Al Boasberg and Louis Brock April 1. Brock signed contracts in New York March 8 with Radio Corporation of America whereby the films will have worldwide distribution through RKO.

Al Boasberg, writer of original vaudeville material for Eddie Cantor, Phil Baker and other stage and screen comedians, will write the original sketches and take entire charge of production. Louis Brock has had wide experience in foreign distribution of films, and is thoroughly conversant with market requirements abroad.

In making pictures, each set or sketch will be produced in English; and then actors will be engaged for the German, Spanish and French versions, with each of the latter shot in rotation. In some instances, it will be possible to engage players who will be able to take the same part in two or more versions. The producers expect to use both vaudeville and stage players in the pictures. Brock is now en route to Hollywood. It is expected that the first series of six pictures will be produced in the East, pending completion of installation of electrical apparatus at the local studios.

Lehman, Arthur Caesar Resign from Director
And Writer Staff of Fox

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 12—Henry Lehman and Arthur Caesar resigned their positions at the Fox lot last week. Lehman has been on the director's roster about one year. Caesar had come recently from New York and has written several two-reel comedies and also did the dialogue for Jack Ford's "Napol eon's Barber."
Many Film Actors Give Way To Stage Folk; Voice Demand

Stars However Are Able to Buy Their Way Into Audiences; Fannie Hurst Bound Westward; Swanson Signs Paul Stein: Jolson and Meighan Start Work on Films

HOLLYWOOD, March 12—Whether erstwhile motion picture stars will enjoy a comeback after their present competitors have been tried out is doubtful from appearances. In practically all studios every cast bears a strong New York stage influence.

The actors brought from the New York stage are fitting into jobs heretofore held by beautiful but inaudible film people. People like Charles King may lack the beauty but they make up for it in voice.

In “Alibi” it is difficult to relate the names in the cast because so few of them are familiar Hollywood faces. Pat O’Malley is there to be sure but he is with strange company.

Very few actors who lay no claim to stage experience somewhere along the line are in demand. But, men like John Miljan, who have proven voices as well as faces, are going to the top by leaps and bounds because of increased demand.

Ready made stars are in the delightful position of being able to pay their way. They are making their own pictures and you cannot keep them from talking.

Swanson Signs Stein for Audien

Gloria Swanson has signed Paul L. Stein as director of “Queen Kelly” and camera work is scheduled to begin immediately.

The double version of “Queen Kelly” has been in preparation ever since the completion of camera work on the silent picture more than a month ago. As finally approved, the studio is using open casting for the recording of Miss Swanson’s voice not only in dialogue, but in a number of songs as well.

Stein, an Austrian, is regarded as being particularly fitted to direct the picture, which has its setting in Germany. Schooled as a factor for years in the Max Reinhardt company in Berlin, he also has written plays and novels and directed a number of musical production pictures in both Europe and America.

The new picture, Miss Swanson’s third independently produced offering under the United Artists, is expected to be completed for late summer release.

Fannie Hurst Coming West

Herbert Brenon will soon start production on Fannie Hurst’s famous story, “Lummox,” and Joseph M. Schenck has prevailed upon the noted writer to pack her bags. Brenon was in constant script consultation with Miss Hurst and Elizabeth Meachum while a picture he was completing for the Max Reinhardt company in Berlin, he also has written plays and novels and directed a number of musical production pictures in both Europe and America. The new picture, Miss Swanson’s third independently produced offering under the United Artists, is expected to be completed for late summer release.

All of which are nearing completion.

“On With the Show” is an elaborate musical show with an all-star cast including Sally O’Xel, Betty Compson, Jo Dye, Jack Egan, Spring Byington, Arthur Lake, William Bakewell, Sam Hardy, the Fairbanks Twins, and others. Alan Crossland is directing.

Al Jolson is starred in “Little Pal” with David Lee, Marian Nixon, Henry Herbert and Kenneth Thompson in the supporting cast. Lloyd Bacon is directing.

“The Argyle Case” is Thomas Meighan’s first Vitaphone starring vehicle. Warner Brothers have signed Lila Lee as his leading lady. H. B. Warner, Gladys Brockwell and others are prominent in the cast and Howard Bretherton is directing.

“Skin Deep” is Monte Blue’s latest starring vehicle. In the cast are Betty Compson, Alice Day, John Davidson and others and it is being directed by Ray Enright.

Abbe Lane is directing “The Sap” with Edward Everett Horton, Alan Hale, Patsy Ruth Miller, Edna Murphy and Franklyn Farnum.

Grant Withers is portraying the leading role in “In the Headlines”, which John Adolph is directing. Marian Nixon has the leading role in “Elmwood.” Edmund Breese, Clyde Cook, Pauline Garmon, Hallam Cooley and Vivian Oakland are included in the all-star cast.

LeRoy Gets Better Job

Mervyn LeRoy saw his First National-Vitaphone contract torn up this week—and a new one substituted at a chunky advance in salary.

LeRoy has been directing less than two years. His first picture was “No Place To Go,” and since then he has had such successes to his credit as “Harold Teen,” “Oh! Kay,” and “Naughty Baby.”

LeRoy is directing his first singing, talking and dancing offering, “Broadway Bahamas,” which should be of value. The first picture under the new contract will be, “Little Johnnie Jones,” a screen version of the George M. Cohan success, which will be presented with an all-star cast as a complete Vitaphone picture.

LeBaron Again to East

Universal’s “Hearts in Dixie” Wins; Character Study of Negroes

Picture Is Found Splendidly Constructed and Excellently Executed—Verboso Prologue by White Actor Is Called Unnecessary

By WILBUR MORSE, JR.

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.—Half the Hollywood folk who put on their dinner clothes last Wednesday night to attend the opening of “Hearts in Dixie” at the Los Angeles United Artists theatre, came away praising the unique merits of a splendidly constructed and exceptionally well executed bit of entertainment.

The other half went home with another thought. It was that William Fox and his assistants had no business to go and start down any lane of the show business this year, whether it be in consummating mergers or being the first onto the screen with a new subject.

A Film of Character Studies

Until “Hearts in Dixie” was booked here, this precursor, for one, had thought King Vidor’s “Harmony” would be the first venture into the debatable field of all-Negro film. But Vidor will have to turn over an unusual picture to an ambitious service to participant Negro film. Shelly test first vivid glimpse of Negro life, with its colorful trimmings of the Negro’s music and gaiety and superstitions and search for enlightenment. For this particular field won’t stand crowdfunding.

The picture’s theme is a slender one, serving childish as a homely thread on which are strung splendid character studies. Stetin Fetchin’s comedy as a worthless, lackadaisical black and the squint-eyed voice of Clarence Huse, the “Pappy” of the film, are the outstanding offerings of the capable Negro cast, a cast brightened by the sweetness and naturalness of its principals.

Sympathy Inherent Quality

Not quite as tense in its story, not quite as vibrant in its setting as “Porgy,” which the New York Theatre Guild staged so beautifully two seasons ago, “Hearts in Dixie” is none the less a worthy screen successor to the Heyward play.

Like “Porgy,” it lacks any trace of offense to either white or black, and its inherent qualities of sympathy made unnecessary the verboso prologue, in which the one white actor of the piece explains its purpose. Indeed, one feels that the novel effort was made to increase rather than lessen any feeling of antagonism brought to the theatre by any small group which it is obviously aimed.

The premiere of the picture here attracted an unusually representative audience and the spotlights, the cameras, the radio announcers and other trappings of exploited openings drew downtown crowds who usually do star gazing outside the long run houses of Hollywood.

Two Movietone Comedies

“Hearts in Dixie” was presented to Los Angeles with a surrounding show which might supply exhibitors with still another experiment in presentation to study. For, instead of a lengthy overture, or stagebow, and a comedy, there were two movietone comedies and no other prologue, except a prolonged effort of an organism with illustrated slides that might well have been spared.

The first comedy, presenting Robert Benchley as a character as hilarious as his other offerings, Clark and McCullough in “Waltzing Around” were funny but not as funny as in some of their previous film foolish.

Many Film Actors Give Way to Stage Folk to Meet Audien Voice Need calls for the perfection of details incident to the 1929-30 program of Radio Pictures, the first of which are to go into production at the RKO Studios shortly.

During his last stay in the metropolis, he signed a host of film, theatrical, and musical talent to contribute to the 1929-30 program of Radio Pictures, as well as obtaining an imposing list of story and musical material.

LeBaron will return to Hollywood by the middle of March.

Maude Fulton, who directed the stage and radio prologue directly for the screen, has joined the staff engaged in writing scenarios and dialogue for Radio Pictures, it was announced today.

Most of Miss Fulton’s career has been as a stage writer, and she wrote and played in “The Humming Bird,” which later were used and adapted by Gloria Swanson. She wrote and played in “Sonny,” which ran for some 15 weeks on the Pacific Coast. But her latest stage success, of the seven plays she has written was “The Brat”.

Davies’ Audien Debut

Marion Davies will march to the rank of audien stars this week when she begins shooting on “Marianne,” a French comedy written and directed by one of the leaders of French screen production debut by Dale Van Every.

In the 100 per cent talking, singing and dancing feature, Miss Davies will play the part of a Parisienne with a voice, and will introduce three new songs via the sound screen. Laurence Stackels is responsible for the adaptation of the adaptation which includes numerous French passages.

Caldwell-Hilliker Return to Fox

Capt. H. H. Caldwell and Katharine Hilliker, the ace film editors of Hollywood, have just completed editing and titling “Christina” for Fox Films. This is Jack J. Cohn’s latest starring vehicle directed by William K. Howard and with Charles Morton and Dieter Schildkraut in the leading supporting roles.

Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell have just returned to the Fox lot after having completed the editing job on J. Cohn’s two new picture, “Eternal Love,” for United Artists.

Kenneth Thomson and Jolson

Only recently returned to Hollywood from a vacation jaunt to Atlanta, Ga., and other Atlantic seaboard cities, Kenneth Thomson has just introduced a new male in the forthcoming Al Jolson picture for Warner Brothers.

He returned to find local critics praising his performance of two songs and five dances, playing simultaneously here, “The Broadway Melody” at Grauman’s Chinese Theatre, and “The Bellamy Trial” at Loew’s State. Hailing from the New York stage which he deserted two years ago, Thomson’s first notable film performance was in the lead of “White Gold,” the William K. Howard production which won so much favorable comment. He was seen on the stage in the revue, “Vaudeville, July 4th” ago, at the Berkeley Theater in “The Devil’s Plum Tree,” with Ruth Chatterton.

Higgin and Boyd Again

Howard Higgin and William Boyd are now at work on their fourth picture together at the Pathe Studio.

High Voltage Is Offered thru LeBaron for the screen by Elliott Clawsow, is their current production, those who have gone before are “Vespers,” “The Judge,” “The Leaferner,” two of which received mention by a leading motion picture publication as one of the best of the month.

Owen Moore, Cab Calloway, June Elfin and Philip Smalley are playing conspicuous supporting roles in “High Voltage.”

Moorehead and Miljan in “Ghost”

Natalie Moorehead, stage actress, is the latest celebrity to be lured from the footlights to the microphone. Miss Moorehead has been signed to play the role of “Lady V” in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer’s all talking filmanization of Ben Hecht’s, The Green Goddess, a Theatre Guild production for the second time.

Her role is that of sister of the hero, a part played by Roland Young, also a newcomer from the stage. She played also the character of Estelle in “The Good Soldier,” for which she was nominated for “Dr. Ballou” in the new picture.

Rogell Directs Own Story

While other producers are pursuing the "watchful waiting" policy regarding audien, Harry Cohn, representing Columbia, is according to the demands of the public, Albert S. Rogell, whose “The Shepherd of the Hills,” which he directed for Fox, is one of the best pictures of the year, is to be directed by one of the HERALD-WORLD’s highest box-office successes, has affixed his signature to a contract to direct his own original story, The Flying Marine.

The acquisition of Rogell by the Columbia organization is considered fortunate as it was he who directed “The Lone Wolf’s Daughter,” the first all-talking feature which opens at the Roxy in New York next week.

“The Flying Marine” is to be directed by Rogell with both dialogue and sound throughout, and each separate unit of this campaign picture is to be inaugurated, upon orders from Cohn, immediately following the selection of the cast.

Rogell has given a promise to Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer with Universal, that immediately following his completion of the talking picture for Columbia, he would direct a series of productions for Universal based on industrial life; these also to be audien.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Granada
Week Ending March 15

In keeping with the recent new policy inaugurated by this management, the Granada presented another huge stage show this week called "In 1933." It was modernistic as well as futuristic and was sort of a prophecy in extravagant style. The stage show was preceded by a message on the screen from Stuyvesant Peabody, chairman of the World's Fair expansion committee, who gave a detailed message and was quite appropriate for this particular presentation.

Charles Kaley was featured with his band and was surrounded by a cast of capable artists. Jack Laughlin, who produced last week's stage show, also starred this one and did a good job of it again.

The show opened in musical style with six boys and six girls in modernistic costume as a male singer beamed the line with a voice called "In 1933." This is a published number of which the stage producer is one of the writers and has a nappy sweater that may lead me into one of the best sells. The setting for this opening is quite novel as it represented Chicago's skyscrapers with six posters each bearing the trademark of some nationally known product, such as Wrigley's chewing gum, etc., with cutout effects displaying girls' heads from behind. These name girls and boys also offered a novel dance routine intermingled with specialties and acrobatic features, and receive a fine band.

After this number Charles Kaley came on to announce the opening band arrangement of "Sweetheart of All My Dreams" and as he did the skyscraper set was raised and full stage setting displayed a beautiful reception room with fancy staircase winding up around it and the starseand snuggled in the center of it. This was to be one of the high lights of this setting was the gift statue that decorated the first step and later turned out to be a human being. Kaley obliged by singing a chorus of the band number through his megaphone and after the band had played it with plenty of pep he turned the band over to Charles Wheeler, who took some readings for the balance of the show. The twelve Granada girls then struck the way and the starseand dressed as roses with the heads presenting a red bloom while the lower extremities were trimmed in green bobbles to represent the stems and they engaged in a novel series of Tiller steps as the male singer sang "I'm Bringing a Red Rose." This is one of the hit songs of the "Whoopee" show and it is about the first time that a popular theatre has staged a revue around it.

After this number, which produced quite a novelty, the gift statue came to life and offered a fast series of specialty steps in conjunction with his speech. This routine stopped the show cold and brought the interpreter of the number out for a speech in which he gave the producer of the show credit for the originality of his number.

A young lady of charming personality followed him with a medley of Victor Herbert melodies with which she also injected a few strings of violin music. This young lady's routine was probably arranged for vaudeville and in spite of the fact that it was considerably histrionic it went over on the merits of her voice and personality. She was followed by another dance routine by the Granada boys and girls, this time as zombies with tambourines.

The comedy element of this program was supplied by a man dressed as a policeman and his little fox terrier, whose antics are a drab and other unique tricks, not only received the enthusiastic applause of the audience but also kept them in a happy mood.

The next specialty on the bill was offered by three young men and a girl in what turned out to be a (Continued on next page)

It is quite unusual for a man to make a huge success in one town after having been away from it for a long while. This is true almost in any line of business but it is the exception with Henri A. Keates, who, a good many years ago, started out the DeLave Theatre, Chicago, as the first Chicago organist to feature solos and community singing. Now Keates is the most talked of organist in Chicago and known from coast to coast as "The Man Who Put Community Singing on the Map." Bandan & Katz, who employ Keates, find him a box office stimulant and rotate him over their Chicago circuit from week to week. Keates has proved that his novelties are not only a success in one theatre but in any theatre, and the reason for this continued success is that he has made it his business to present only original novelties.

Prospects

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

The biggest motion picture deal was put over last week when William Fox bought M G M, of which Loew's, Inc. were the owners. The deal, which caused considerable excitement and interest in the motion picture industry, is bound to have a great deal of influence on the size and scope of the presentation field. Fox already owned and controlled over 600 theatres before the M G M deal was consummated, and the new assets now make him the most outstanding figure in the motion picture business.

Nearly 800 theatres will now be serviced and booked under the Fox banner, of which 175 of them are Marcus Loew houses, while the balance include West Coast Theatres, Midwesco and the Poli circuit. The new buy includes deluxe theatres in twenty-one states and with the plan now in preparation, Fox will have 200 more deluxe theatres in the remodeled Midwesco circuit.

Fox Now Leads the Field

Until a few months ago the Public Circuit, a subsidiary of Paramount, was the biggest theatre chain in the country with Keith-Orpheum a pretty close second. Since William Fox has taken control of Weasco and the other circuits, including the latest M G M deal, the Fox organization has the most powerful production and distribution organization in the motion picture business, since the M G M theatres were the Loew houses and the Loew circuit was considered one of the largest before the merging season came on.

The Warner Brothers' deal with First National, which also includes the Stanley Circuit, is a nice outlet for their product but not as powerful as the last two organizations. Unless Radio-Keith-Orpheum merges with Public, or makes some arrangement whereby both circuits will be operated under one head, William Fox will have the largest presentation circuit in the country.

This development should be of considerable interest to people actively engaged in the business of stage shows. Although no new plans have been made as to the future policy of Fox and its newly acquired or-

Organizations, it is understood that they will all more or less specialize in pictures and stage talent. It is safe to state that under the new ownership the present policy of vaudeville and stage work will continue and meet the general public demand in motion picture theatres. If this happens and there is a very good possibility that it will, there will be no such a thing as vaudeville any more, as all stage entertainment in picture theatres from then on will be referred to as presentation.

When this happens, Radio-Keith-Orpheum will have to inaugurate a new stage policy in an equal charming way with the other theatres, and when that time comes the well known brand of Orpheum and Keith Vaudeville will pass out and make room for the much more popular demand, and its new trademark will be Presentation. When all these things come to pass, and these theatres are doing as they should, and the William Fox organization is a firm believer of class programs, and in spite of the fact that it may have considerable talent on the screen along with that of popular vaudeville, it will not jeopardize the future of its theatres by robbing them of the human element.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open form through these interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: This is the first time I've written you, however, I read the Herald-World each week, as it is sent to me, and enjoy especially the notices of the various plays and what they are using for their "specials." I use as a title. Lisbon Theatre's special, called "Closeup and Snapshots," featuring songs, "I'll Get By," "Marie," "How About Me," "I'd Rather Be Blue Over You"

This is a very entertaining novelty, which was well demonstrated by the audience in their splendid dressing, their genuine applause which was still heard after feature had started. You may print any part of this in your organ column if you choose. I think it would be fine if more organizations would let us know what they are using for specials, and how they click. Very sincerely—Edna Merle Bain, Paramount theatre, Nebraska City, Neb.

Playing Return Dates for Balaban & Katz

After proving that comedy dentures can be entertaining on a high class program as well as the popular type, the Lasser Brothers are now making their fourth tour of Balaban & Katz houses in a new Chicago unit.

The boys recently scored a hit at the Chicago Theatre in the new stage policy and previously completed their third tour of Publix as a featured attraction. The type of entertainment that they present is a combination of eccentric and athletic routine intermingled with much clean comedy.

Before entering stage work the boys were members of a theatre staff.

Chicago's Favorite Entertainers

Centuries ago every king had his favorite clown and the jester found himself important in the king's court as any member of his kingdom. It seems that that same tradition has passed from one generation to another and even in our present day amusements we select our comics then and almost worship them as in the days of old.

Helene Keller and George Reily who scored their first hit in a picture house about five years ago are probably the most liked presentation team in the entire Midwest. This capable couple of funster staged many engagements over the Publix circuit and have appeared in Chicago deluxe houses so many times that we have lost track of the engagements.

Chicago has practically adopted them as his favorite entertainers this week they are featured in "A Melody Menu" now playing the Paradise theatre with Mark Fisher.

Roy Detrich Makes "Whoopie" While Wife Is Away

Mrs. Roy Detrich, wife of the popular southside singing bandleader is enjoying an extended vacation with her mother and brother, Dr. Harry Griff of New York City. Three nephews, one who is also a star, has joined the family in the reunion, and, according to Roy, Jr., Mrs. Detrich's son, a good time has been had by all.

Roy Detrich, who is now entering his second year as master of ceremonies for the National Playhouses, recently won his handle with the Capitale and Avalon theatres.

This week his stage show is called "Whoopie" and features the Rosedale boys with Born and Lawrence.

daring and novel adagio team, intermingled with many acrobatic twists and turns. At first the black uniform of the men with white capes caused snickers but as the routine progressed the act soon had the audience in their control and they were given a tremendous ovation for their splendid efforts.

The finale showed the male singer introducing the best things in life such as beauty, joy, etc., while one of the ballet girls portrayed each part in novel attire. To keep the continuity of the show, Clem Dengler, as Dick Debecca, sang another chorus of "In 1933" as the rest of the cast assembled around the beautiful setting while the orchestra and organ struck up the tune of "Mystery of Life" as the curtain slowly descended.

A point that is worthy of mention is the original lighting and coloring that were played on the stage set during the ballet routine.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending March 2

With Arabian atmosphere enveloping them Louy Lawy and his Merry Musical Men offer the Emmett Roger's production, "Pishah," to Howard this week. Lawy and his Men went over in good style, saving the show from an absolute flop.

The show opens with the Good Girls offering a routine, slow, Stagey and unquestionably amusing. They seemed to possess only fair dancing ability. Following was a distinctly novel band number, which drew a good hand. Art Dickson, baritone, sang, "Me and the Man in the Moon" and "My Blackbirds Are Blue Birds Now," to fair approval.

Next in line were three tumblers, a la Francis Trio, held the stage. They brought some laughs, but failed to be the high class act Howard audiences require. The Gould Girls returned to present a fast stepping number and went over better than on first appearance.

Detroit Fisher

Week Ending March 1

The Publix star piece "Zig-Zag Folksie" was on the stage at the Fisher this week, and a very nice little stage show it turned out to be, too. Paul Leah is the master of ceremonies of Fisher now. He is a good looking young man, has a nice way with him and the audience seems to be with him.

With a title like "Zig-Zag Folksie," the setting for the piece, of course, couldn't be anything else but in the fantastic manner. And that's just what it was, with jagged streaks of color, like streaks of lightning, shooting across the drops.

A group of ten little girls in vivid blue costumes, ornamented all over with silver epaulets, were doing a routine dance as the curtain went up to the tune of "Don't Be Like That." Astounding them were four young men, who later were introduced as the Edgemont Four. This quartet, while they opened as sin-

The stage presentation, in which Charlie Davis and his band are featured, bears the title "Magical Roy." Davis and his band play "I've Got a Lion and Go Boom," and "My Apache Man," an original composition. Davis has also introduced several new numbers of his organization by having them do specialty numbers. Burns and Kissen sing parodies of popular songs. Dance was provided by Star and Rolla and Emile and Remainie.

Philadelphia Fox
Week ending March 9

The surrounding hill at the Fox this week was second to none in Philadelphia.

Healey and Kellen's popular request, back this week crooning and harmonizing in their own irresistible style. The Willow Lady shay with the laughing duet almost comically, the leading chorus woman with the audience as chief performers. In reviving the memory of the "harmonizing quartet" of their boyhood days, Healy and Cross strike a chord in the memories of many in the audience and the applause is generous.

Philadelphia's own stars, El Brendel and Fl Burt, in their hilarious comedy "Yohnny Johnson and the Euchester," reach a co-rhythmic climax when Yohnny borrows a dress suit from the Duchess' father, but with every move something rips and a regular nightmare follows for Yohnny. But the audience gets a big kick out of Yohnny's nightmare.

King, King and followimg and maybe those three加上 aren't very moving and taggets. When they aren't buck and wine dancing, one takes the energy of the stage and does a solo dance, and the variety of subjects in their repertoire is amazing.

Sanami and Geniy put an act that is unique, exotic and colorful. The curtains are drawn aside revealing a golden four-armed statue of Buddha. The arms of the statue slowly begin to move in time to the music. As the statue quickens the statue rises and begins a most unu-iural oriental temple dance. A female figure directly in back of the statue also rises and together they dance and assume various poses in keeping with the spirit of the dance. As the music subsides, the act returns to their original positions and the curtain falls.

By way of contrast the Triana Sisters, in yellow and orange costumes, with fringe skirts and long scarfs fastened to the wrists present a dance of Spain, with the beat of castanets, and the music of the guitar, to dance to the music of their drummers' fingers tapping time to the movement of their feet.

The Queen of the Tiffany girls contribute no small part to the evening's entertainment. They first appear in blue tights against a sparkling silver drop. Four (Continued on next page)
George Givot, a Pupil of the Old Master—Paul Ash

When Paul Ash is old and gray and cannot direct his stagehand any longer he will at least have one consolation in life and that is that he has been responsible for the origination of the bandshow policy and also the discovery of many stage stars.

Among those who used to be Ash is responsible for finding during his Chicago reign at Meekins and at the Oriental theatres, are Miss Wayne, Peggy Bernard, Johnny Perkins and George Givot. Each one of these artists are now Stars representing the small Brothel.

Johnny Perkins is still sticking to picture houses, but George Givot has discovered that he really possesses a fine tenor voice. About a year ago this fact became known to Givot at a benefit and since then he has been training his voice under the direction of Henry Halperin, formerly an associate of Caruso.

Givot now has a repertoire of several operas in the original languages and will soon make his debut in concert after completing his present tour of Publics.

The revue idea is different than most, and it was well received during the week. The women flocked to it, of course, to get beauty hints and as for the men—

As for the rest of the stage show, it was well above the usual revue in that Ross proved himself a good C. M. and Helen Lynd, without her being known to this audience. Helen offered good impressions of Leonce Urie and Fanny Brice and was very well received. The Kaufman Boys and Girls had a little too much of the “Gypsy Sweetheart” and “The 12th Street Rag” on an accordion, the only fault being that the solo was too short.

Ida May Chadwick and Greiger did another sone and dance with the tap dancing of Miss Chadwick the outstanding hit. Ross proved himself a good Mc. when he sold Helen Lynd, without her being known to this audience. Helen offered good impressions of Leonce Urie and Fanny Brice and was very well received. The Kaufman Boys and Girls had a little too much of the “Gypsy Sweetheart” and “The 12th Street Rag” on an accordion, the only fault being that the solo was too short.

Detroit Michigan

Week Ending March 9

Helen MacFadden, daughter of Bernarr MacFadden, who made himself famous as a physical culture exponent, was the central figure in “Perfect Girl,” the Public's presentation at the Michigan this week. The revue is built ingeniously to exploit Helen, her figure and the “daily dozen” she goes through to keep in top-notch health. And of course there was one of those special beauty mattresses for women only during the week, at which Edna Moore delivered a talk on health and Helen MacFadden went through her exercises.

In the regular stage bill, MacFadden is assisted by twelve Foster Girls, who go through a program of dances which are labeled as good for reducing.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending March 7

This week’s stage show at the Granada introduces Brooke Johns as the new master of ceremonies and if his initial performance is an index of what may be expected during the balancing weeks he may as well hang up his hat and consider himself blazed, as far as the public is concerned. Not that he’s great, or anything like that, but that he is a great big, good natured human, with a lot of personality and a real Westerner in spite of that Southern drawl. He’s the kind of a fellow who makes you feel at home, even in a theatre, and whose easy manner is reassuring.

The stage show opens with a special musical production featuring the famous prison scene from the opera “Faust,” with Gino Severi conducting the Granada Concert Orchestra.

New Haven Olympia

Week Ending February 27

Bobby Agnew, who formerly was in pictures, heads the Publicus unit “Happy Go Lucky” at the Olympia, produced by Charles Nieggerman. He, like all the rest of the show, is fine and well done. It is a “fourth of July” in real style, and Miss Helen Daily, who has been with the show since its inception, is greatly missed.

Chicago Diversey

Week Ending March 8

This stage production is a complete hit with the entire audience and goes on to prove that a good revue is the key to a good show. Chicago Diversey was the first and only all-black stage show to open in Chicago in 1929 and it remains one of the most popular shows in the city. The cast is filled with talented performers, including dancers, singers, and comedians. The show features a variety of acts, including tap dancing, jazz numbers, and spoken word poetry. The audience is always engaged and laughing, making for a fun and entertaining night out.
in front of a production set with the band on the stage, he conducts, sings, introduces the various entertainers and generally introduces the life of the party. That boy has personality plus.

The twelve Beebe Barrie Girls, in tuxedos and black chiffon, start the ball rolling with a snappy tap dance. Then the stage band strike up a popular tune, "Topicals," with Charlie energetically conducting. Jim Gerlach and saxophonist Bill Pick are featured, and his song, "Cassy Jones," is reminiscent of the old type of vaudeville entertainers. He puts over some wise cracks as he and Charlie Melson engage in a clever patter and he sings "Cassy Jones" with a great deal of animation. The ballet in black and yellow, with costumed, appear in a charming "Spanish Interlude," grouping themselves in graceful postures at the back of the stage as Nita and Arliz give an exhibition of tap dancing that is characterized by perfection of technique and restrained gracefulness.

Jerome Mann makes a tremendous hit with his impersonations of Ted Lewis, Eddie Leonard and others. As an encore he imitates Pat Rooney. He is not only clever in his impersonations, but has a fund of original stunts that make him an extremely popular entertainer.

The Beebe Barrie Girls appear in a unique character dance entitled "Gollwogas." Attired in yellow silk and blue woolen wigs they give a perfectly synchronised dance that goes over big, especially with the male part of the audience. Charlie Melson's singing of Irving Berlin's "How About Me?" wins the house. Perhaps the most delightful offering on the program is White and Manning's "Everything Is Spanish Now," a clever account of burlesque dance in which comedy is introduced with startling realism in a manner that must be seen to be appreciated. The reproduction of native Spanish costumes of the face of the feminine member of the duo after some fanciful and unexpected collisions and falls is too bewildering for words.

In the splendidly staged finale the entire company appears with the band on the stage, in ballet dancing and in the background on an elevated platform several girls holding revolving electric pinwheels forming a colorful and animated picture and concluding one of the most outstanding presentations that ever graced the Stanley stage.

ORGAN SOLOS

Don Williams' (New York Garden) fine playing and perfect picture synchronization, is one of the good features of this house’s program. Incidentally, Don is William’s organist at a private theatre in Long Island, during the summer months. This week at the Gardens, Williams’ fine selection of numbers, which he used to the motion pictures, “Beware of Bachelors,” and “Power of the Press” was one of the highlights of this program.

Walter Wild (New York Hippodrome) presents a “Organ Presentation” called “Summer and Moonlight.” Wild played a fine number called “When Summer Is Gone.” His other number was “All by Yourself in the Moonlight.” Intermingled with these numbers, he used clever slides with special lyrics that aroused much enthusiasm. The reception accorded him was big.

Carlyle Beadeau (Marinette, Wis., Rialto) synchronized the photoplayer “Vikings” with several sound steps and played with perfect effects of aeroplanes, machine guns, etc. This chap also scored “Mother Machree” so well that people on leaving the theatre, commented on his work. He is also popular for his organ symphonies pictures, and is noted for dramatizing motion pictures in an original way, as he never takes his eyes off of the screen. At least that’s the opinion of several patrons who enjoy his work.

Bernie Cowham (Flushing, L. I., R-K-O) played an organ solo called “Isn’t Nature Grand.” Bernie used special slides that went well with the theme. He received a request for the audience to sing. Everyone complied with Cowham’s request and sang “The Sun Is at My Window,” “Where the Sky Little Violets Grow,” “A Precious Little Thing Called Love,” “Jimmy Flynn,” of Remick’s, sang a chorus alone and one with the audience that was received very well. Bernie, through his pleasing manner and fine playing, has become very popular at this house and also at the Madison theatre, Brooklyn, with which he alternates each week.

Henry Murtagh (Brooklyn Paramount) offered an original solo called “Follow the Leader.” His numbers were: “My Blackbird Are Shellsbriere Now,” “Once in a Lifetide,” “I Faw Down an’ Go Boom,” “Let Me Call You Sweetheart.” Intermingled with the numbers Murtagh used some clever slides that told the story. As usual his reception was also big.

Francis Kromer (Chicago, Diversey) used as his solo a special arrangement of popular numbers, called a “Continual Theme Number.” The numbers used were: “Avalon Town,” “Cousy Little Dream House,” “Don’t’ You Know That Life Won’t Be Happy Days,” “Marie” and “As Long as I Have You.” The audi- ence responded very well to each of the numbers but showed preference to “Avalon Town” and “Marie.”

THESA ME SONGS

The theme song for First National’s production of “Children of the Rita” featuring Dorothy Mackall and Ray Milland, is called “Some Swell Day.” The number was composed by Nathaniel Shilkret and it is published by the Remick Music Corporation.

The new Pathé all-dialogue production “Mother’s Boy” will have a theme song by the same name which will be sung by Dorothy Downey, who will also be featured in the picture. Several other songs will be sung in this production such as “I’m Funky Folks But I’ve Got Bad Little You,” “There’s a Lot You Don’t Know About Me,” “You and I,” and “The World Is Yours and Mine.”

The new United Artists film, “Evangelista,” starring Dolores Del Rio, has a theme song also called “Evangelista” which was composed by Al Jolson.

BEAT SAKS and SONGS

MY CASTLE IN SPAIN IS A SHACK IN THE LAND—Lowe, Feit, Inc.—Is one of the best of the dream songs out now. In fact, with the play the Lombardo band is giving it is already selling well. The melody is fine and the words are by Charles Newman, music by Carmen Lombardo.

PLEASE LET ME DREAM IN YOUR ARMS—(Leo, Feit, Inc.).—Is another of the best of the dream songs out now. In fact, with the play the Lombardo band is giving it is already selling well. The melody is fine and the words are by Charles Newman, music by Al Shermam, Al Lewis and Carmen Lombardo.

I WISH I HAD DIED IN MY CRADLE—(Before I Grew Up to Love You)—(Shapiro-Berinstein)—An old song that is being revived. It’s a sad song and has a powerful story. There have been calls for this song and that’s the main reason for its revival. Words by Lew Brown, music by Max Friedman.

STAIRWAY OF DREAMS—(Villa Maret, Inc.)—A dream song. There are quite a few dream songs on the market right now. This is a very good song and if the competition on that kind of a song is not too stiff it should make some money. Words by Gene Stone, music by Al Mack.

AKE UP! CHILL’N UP! WAKE UP!—Donaldson, Douglas & Gomberg—a song on the social order that is really a classic. The lyrics make one think. The tune is perfect. Out to go a long way. Lyric by Jo Trent, music by Willard Robinson.

MY HEART IS BLUER THAN YOUR EYES—(Joe Hiller Music Corp.)—A new publisher makes his bow with a very good song. After all that’s all that counts. One is as big as her song is, an old saying in the music business. This new publisher has a very big following and should click. This song is the kind that will follow and it is a novelty song and yet commercial. Words by Alfred Bryan, music by Monte Wilshire.
THE THEATRE

Big Music Tieup Opens New Sound Theatre

By W. M. GLADISH

OTTAWA, March 12.—Something quite out of the ordinary in the way of an introduction of sound programs in a theatre was seen here on March 4, when Manager Ambrose Nolan secured a tieup with local music houses for the presentation of the first sound bill in the new Avalon theatre. This house, which is a picturesque atmospheric theatre, was completed and opened last December and it was built with a view to sound projection, but the equipment could not be procured and installed until March.

Manager Nolan made a direct tieup with the music stores not only on the theme song of the opening sound picture, "Four Sons," but also on a musical angle involving the name of the theatre. A full-page combination display appearing in the Ottawa Journal, contained announcements in the individual advertisements that a free ticket to the Avalon would be presented to each person purchasing "Avalon Town." It was either a phonograph record or sheet music form. These were available in the Victor, Brunswick and Apex recordings in practically all of the stores.

A typical dealer announcement appearing on that page read as follows: "Special Free Offer." "One complimentary admission ticket to the Avalon Theatre will be given with every purchase of 'Avalon Town,'" the new Brunswick Record No. 4199, featuring the Colonial Club Orchestra with a vocal chorus by Scappy Lambert.

The Victor and Brunswick dealers also made advertising reference to the theme song of the screen feature, namely "Little Mother," in their respective advertisements.

Sound Boosts Music

The special page also served to emphasize the growing relationship between the art of music and synchronized pictures, the music dealers of Ottawa declaring that sound films already have resulted in a big boost for music enthusiasm and interest. The advertisers on the page included some of the largest music houses in the Dominion and those comprised the John Raper Piano Company, C. W. Lindsey & Company, Robertson, Pingle and Tilley, McKeehnke Music Company, the Charles Kirke Music Company, Limited, and other advertisers.

The Avalon theatre is of the Spanish mission type with both atmospheric exterior and interior being the first of its kind in Canada. Although the house seats only 900 persons, the equipment is complete in every respect, including two of the very latest Simplex projection machines, a Brenkert color projector, a double stage, Wurlitzer organ, grand piano, a moving cloud sky effect on the arched sky ceiling, complete stage equipment and a suite of projection rooms that were part of the original construction of the theater.

One of the projection rooms accommodates the film projection and Brunckert equipment, the other with the non-synchronous equipment of Western Electric make, while the third room has the publicity and adjuncts for the presentation of Movietone and Vitaphone pictures, the installation being Western Electric throughout. The three projection rooms have solid concrete walls and are integral with the building, not being an addition or afterthought.

Manager Ambrose Nolan often makes good use of the statement that the Avalon is the "first theatre in Canada to be scientifically constructed for the showing of sound pictures." Incidentally, P. J. Nolan, father of the manager of the Avalon, is the owner of three theatres in Ottawa, the Avalon, the Rex and Columbia. The Avalon is the second theatre of this group to be wired, sound equipment having been installed in the Rex several weeks previously.

Fox Gives Daily Paper To Milwaukee Patrons

One of the finest exploitation and service stunts ever pulled in Milwaukee, is being carried out right now by the Midwesco Theatres, Inc. Each evening all the patrons of the Merrill and the Strand theatres (Fox houses), are given a copy of the "Budgog" edition of the Milwaukee Sentinel, a morning newspaper, with the compliments of the Fox Enterprises in Milwaukee.

On the newspaper is a sticker which says that the copy of the paper is complimentary and that a certain picture is showing at the Wisconsin theatre this week. This has proved to be an excellent way of advertising for the Midwesco circuit for its largest theatre in Milwaukee, and the stunt, of course, has been received very favorably by the Sentinel. Cliff Gill and his lady, in the publicity and advertising department of the Midwesco Theatres, Inc., thought up the idea, and it no doubt will be continued for some time.

No One Is Seated During Last 15 Minutes of Audien

(KANSAS CITY, March 12.—Legitimate theatre methods are being used by several motion picture theatres here. The Newman, first run downtown house, and the Isis theatre, suburban house, advertised last week that no one would be seated during the last fifteen minutes of a talking picture.

Holds Cooking School And Draws Big Crowds

(MANITOWOC, WIS., Mar. 12.—The Capitol Theatre recently packed e house three afternoons by offering the use of the theatre for a cooking school. Many farmers came to attend the school and many stayed over for the evening show. This was a good idea that worked out very successfully for the theatre.

The new Avalon theatre, at Ottawa, Ontario, where Ambrose Nolan, manager, gave sound picture a deluxe introduction.
Music in Audiences Opens Up New Tieup, Says Victor Executive
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK. March 12.—The close parallel between the talking picture and the subsequent popularization of the song and musical numbers from the screen has opened up new avenues of exploitation for motion pictures houses, says H. S. Maraniss, head of the Victor Record Exploitation Department of the Victor Talking Machine Company.

Maraniss is responsible for the exploitation tieup between his company and R.K.O on the first Radio Picture, "Syncopation," which has been the most thorough that has yet been made. In an interview with the Herald-World today, Maraniss stressed the value of such tieups to exhibitors, and in particular the line of advice to the managers of wired houses.

"When you have set your date for a showing of a talking picture incorporating a Victor song hit," he said, "be sure to establish contact with your local Victor dealers at once. Arrange for your initial tieup campaign sufficiently in advance to be assured of a smooth running campaign."

"For instance, we have effected a tieup with R.K.O Productions on "Syncopation." Literally hundreds of thousands of car cards are being used in this campaign. Many suggestions for cooperation with theatre managers have been sent to our dealers. Special window cards, inserts for records and suggestions for window display have been forwarded to them. "Syncopation Festival Week" is to be celebrated. And R.K.O's elaborate, twelve page press book of this picture has incorporated the major details of these cooperative tieups.

"The thing for the theatre manager to do," Maraniss concluded, "is to get in immediate touch with these Victor dealers and arrange for a smooth and successful continuity on this and other Victor campaigns."

"Broadway Babies" in National Tieup with Jansen Sun-Suit Co.

A national tieup of Alice White in "Broadway Babies" and the Jansen Sun-Suit Company has been arranged and will be carried by the retail dealers in all parts of the country. Window displays were made, advertising, photographs in the fashion sections and national magazine advertising will be given, as well as the "Broadway Babies" has its first run showings.

The Jansen Company assures the fullest co-operation of more than 10,000 dealers and the heaviest advertising will be launched to coincide with the run of the picture.

Because of her physical qualifications, Alice White is the ideal star for this picture.

Hula Maid, Savage On Roller Skates Do Trick at Texas

In the exploitation of "White Shadows in the South Seas," M.G.M.'s drama of the ocean isles, the Texas theatre, San Antonio, pulled two ballyhoo stunts resultant of good box office effects. One week in advance of the showing, a thrashed hut was erected in the patio of the theatre. A local girl was rigged out as a hula maid. A parrot, a monkey, some coconuts and other articles associated with life on the islands were attracted. The girl was used to portray the shaming terpsichorean of the islands—at luncheon clubs, in hotel dances, and in the music stores.

A man dressed up as a savage appeared on the streets on roller skates, with breech cloth, beads, top hat, and white cuffs, together with a high brown makeup. Around his waist was a big cow rope, attached to a new auto which pulled him. The International Newsreel cameraman was set up in the rear seat of the touring car, supposedly making a picture of this wildman. The anti-ballyhoo law has no clauses prohibiting the making of a picture in the streets. On the car was a banner with a sign reading, "You May Be Amazed at This, but You Will Be More Amazed at 'White Shadows in the South Seas,' Now Playing at the Texas Theatre." Newspapers came through with unsolicited stories and cuts.

Raquel Torres, by virtue of the great Spanish population of San Antonio, was given a big newspaper, screen and billing campaign. La Prensa, the Spanish paper, carried front page stories every day on the new star, during the showing. The Hearst ads helped build up patronage on the picture.

A tri-motor plane of the West Coast Air Transportation Company was used, and the showing was made at 1,500 feet altitude.

“Last Warning” Gets Big Teaser Play for New Haven Olympia

Wallace Allen, publicity director for the Olympia, New Haven gave unusual exploitation to the Universal picture, “The Last Warning,” with the assistance of Lee Balsley, Universal exploiter. George Labey is in charge, the manager of the house.

Starting one week in advance of the picture the teaser ads were run, the same ad being used on five different pages of the same paper, all papers being used. Here were the ads.

Thursday: “This Is The First Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Friday: “This Is The Second Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Saturday: “Doctors This Is The Last Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Sunday: “Bootleggers This Is The Last Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Monday: “Pedestrians This Is The Last Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Tuesday: “Speeders This Is The Last Warning.” See Wednesday’s paper.

Wednesday: “See The Last Warning Ad on page 4.”

The house has a Thursday opening. The Register ran a dress designing contest using Laura La Plante’s figure with over 1,500 answers being received and the window where the winning drawings were displayed blocked traffic all day. The theatre called up various people using the following message: OLYMPIA THEATRE CALLING THIS IS THE LAST WARNING, and the caller hung up. During the run of the picture the message was changed. 200 hangers were used in the lobby a full week in advance. A radio program also helped to pull the picture. 5000 ballot heralds were used door to door in advance. 10,000 programs used in the theatre heralded the coming of the picture two weeks in advance. The result was a large opening day in spite of bad weather.

Pep Up the Managers By Exchanging Ideas In Weekly Chain Sheet

There is nothing like a good weekly “pop” sheet to stimulate interest among theatre managers in a chain theatre system. It is the weekly meeting place and exchange shop for ideas, news and items of interest to everyone in the chain.

Eugene Arnstein of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., has one of these weekly sheets called the “MTC Sneakos,” which is terse, to the point, and full of many helpful suggestions to the boys working for the firm. As an editor, Gene sums down exploits, services, etc., very well, and in a way that makes very interesting reading. He has succeeded in working up a lot of pep by this little weekly sheet.

Van Norman Calls Premiums N. G., Says They Cheapen Show

It is not a good policy for a theatre to give premiums in order to gain attendance, according to Eugene Van Norman, manager of the Venetian theatre, Milwaukee. He believes that the giving of premiums in order to gain attendance is an admission on the part of the theatre manager that the picture is not good enough to attract attention, and that he must give premiums to get people to attend the show.

“When you are managing a theatre you are, of course, interested in filling the house,” declared Van Norman. “However, you do not want to give people the idea that your theatre is a traffic box, where each can expect to get something. You are in the theatre field to give people amusement for a certain price, but why cheapen it by the constant giving of premiums?”

It is Van Norman’s opinion that theatres of the country constantly are trying to outdo another by giving premiums, the publicity produced being interesting and the public is constantly expecting more for the money, he says.

In viewing a picture of proven merit the theatre patron is getting his money’s worth, Van Norman believes.

Fans Write Dialogue for Six Silent Scenes of Film

When the “Last Warning” played the Stanley theatre at Pittsburgh, A. J. Sharrick devised the gag of having the fans write the dialogue for the six silent scenes in the picture. Pictures of these silent scenes were run in the Press and prizes were offered for the best conversations.

Pathe Signs Gromon

NEW YORK—Dr. Francis Gromon has been signed to assist Josiah Zorn, director general of music for Palace. For the past two years Gromon has been musical director of Paramount-Publix theatres. He formerly conducted a number of musical operatic productions for the Shuberts.

"Women Take Over Honors at Palace" was the heading with which E. F. Rogers, resident manager of B. F. Keith’s Palace theatre in New York, featured this board in which he played up the newspaper writeups on a bill at the Palace.

"DESERT NIGHTS"

NOW, if I may hark back from this distance to the initial paragraph, can a picture be really bad if it has Ernest Torrence, John Gilbert and Mary Nolan as principals. (I hasten to add that I think it was Mary Nolan and have not looked up the file to make sure.) But it can be pointless. And that is the only thing wrong with "Desert Nights." It tells interesting events interestingly and works up to a finish which suddenly reveals that there isn't any story after all. Too bad, but just one of those things. Maybe I'm wrong.

The titanic Torrence (neat, eh?) is in this the bold bad guy he's been before with John Gilbert across from him. This time the big fellow's all for stealing diamonds from the little guy's mine in Africa somewhere. And the gal, blonde but by no means dumb, is in on the deal. So they steal the diamonds and the guard and romp off across the desert headed for somewhere or other and freedom.

There is the usual thirst stuff of course, and if these folks can't look thirsty nobody can, but nobody dies. Maybe that's one of the things wrong with the yarn, although death in moderate measures is thrown about the background and helps but little. And eventually everybody gets back to where they started and the big fellow is given the works for being a crook but the gal gets by because the boss has fallen for her. I guess this is the break in the thing. It really isn't done in Kimbery.

A CHRISTIE COMEDY

DUE to the cock-eyed custom of drawing red drapes across the screen at the close of a feature picture and forgetting to draw them aside until the title of the next picture has run through, I don't know the title of an all-colored, all-talking and all-right Christie comedy I bumped into unexpectedly at a loop theatre last evening. But I do know that if this type of comedy is available in any substantial quantity somebody might just as well launch that long-contemplated short-feature cinema right now and get ready to pick up the million.

The folks in this thing are all colored and if I'm not mistaken the thing was written by Octave Roy Cohen. The action begins and continues quite some time in a colored cabaret. And if you ain't never seen no colored cabaret this is where you discover a great gap in your total experience. The very upholstered cinema where they shot the picture was plain black-and-tan ten seconds after the big boy at the ivories bore down. (Including your earnest and this morning, for some obscure reason, illiterate reporter.)

Then they go into the lines. Seems the boy what owns the joint's been married to the blues singer, whose never matrimonial risk is the rotund gent at the piano forte. But the boss' new and heavier mamma don't know about this. Wherefore jealousy, bickering—as the genteel lady who didn't care for Weber and Fields designated their routine, and a series of gags I'd call blackouts if that wouldn't be a wheeze. (If it isn't, I will. All right, I do.)

But this fickle mechanical invention of the devil that makes deadline writing speedier but dumber is no match for the leisurely colloquialisms of Mr. Cohen or the equally leisurely humor of his characters. This, if I may fall back upon my old familiar crutch, is one of those pictures you've got to witness (the word to use, by the way, in spots where "see" used to suffice) to learn about. I humbly and sincerely suggest that you get a load of it.

TELEGRAPH TIDINGS

I HAVE firsthand and eminently reliable reports at hand concerning two pictures recently geared to Broadway's more or less eager gaze. They are "Sonny Boy," the inevitable Jolson companion piece, and "Hearts in Dixie," which seems to be another Fox innovation and to contain a heavily if not completely negroid cast.

Frankly, I'd tell you all that my good friend has to say about these pictures were they not two that I feel certain I'm going to paragraph at great and groggy length when they eventually crash Balaban & Katz. (I struggle through unimportant paragraphs on so many unimportant pictures that I'm selfish about things like this.) However, I may mention that the first named production is reported excellent and the second one not so good. The first one is reported lacking in the sloppy sentimentality that breaks up so many kid pictures and the second one is said to lack a plot. And I think you may take these pronouncements at their face value. (And, for a final and, I hope my earnest associate will condone this treatment at the hands of a veteran whose declining years—Gag: Declining what?—contain all too few occasions for really unlimbering the adjectival artillery.)

Send the following letter to your patrons on your mailing list:

Dear Friend and Patron:

It is merely that I am able to offer you the distinctly different film fare that "The Red Sword" will afford at the theatre.

"The Red Sword" is a flaming romance laid against the colorful background of the falling Russian Empire. All the color of the Romanoffs and their Cossack cohorts is shown vividly on the screen.

The cast including Marian Nixon, William Collier Jnr., leading "talkie" star, and Carmel Myers, act as they have never done before and seem to actually live the thrilling story.

All in all, it is a picture to remember, one crowded with interest from start to finish. Also one that you will thank me for booking you to see.

Exhibitors-Herald World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organizers all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word payable with order, 10% discount if run for 3 insertions. See this week's classified pages. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.
Digging Out of Snow

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—To the Editor:

Am sending you, with a few reports, the way things have been in the Great Cold. It is so long since I've sent any in that I presume you think we are all snowed under out here. You notice I've not reported any percentage as I do not keep records to the figures. These last few weeks have been terrible for business out here. Country roads have been almost impassable, and the severe weather keeps people at home, but we are hoping for better times soon.

I see T. O. Service has been getting panned again recently; but let me tell you any, tell him I always read Service Talks first, Jenkins, letters next, when the Herald-World comes, and so on. I do not disagree with his opinions on pictures. So, of course, I think he's a pretty clever reviewer.

Also liked Mrs. Record's letter in the Feb-uary 16th issue. What she says about "price fixing" for small towns is just the way we feel about it here after five years of more or less strenuous experience.

With much praise for your splendid paper and best wishes for its success.—GEORGE BEN-SON, The Community theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

Argentine Exhibitor Wires Five Houses

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—Max Glucksmansohn, assistant in the Argentine, has decided to wire his houses with Western Electric sound equipment. This is another instance of an immediate wiring of five houses.

Work will start at once and the first house is the Grandspindl.

To the Editor:

Concerning your broadcast, I feel that it is impractical to subscribe to it.

Exhibitor Herald-World

March 16, 1929
WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

Copyright, 1929

Columbia

OBJECT ALIMONY: Lois Wilson—Pleaseing picture, many good comments. I have yet to play a bad one from Columbia.—A. C. Spinks, Rivoli theatre, Thomasville, Ala.—General patronage.

POWER OF THE PRESS: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—About as good a little program attraction as has shown this year. There were certain slips in the direction but they were hardly noticeable, and the general consensus of opinion was that the Columbia was good. The wind-up was full of action. Also strong suspense through the entire picture. Seven reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, L.a.—General patronage.

SUBMARINE: Jack Holt—43%. January 20-21-22. If you're looking for a real picture here to please everyone, here it is. Our patrons say it is the best it has here in three years, and we haven't been playing any junk. A good story that is full of action and suspense. If some of the "big outings" hadn't done such a splendid job for it, I'm pretty sure it wouldn't be afraid of it. It will live up to anything you say about it. Business below normal, but not the fault of the film.—John E. Wallack, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

MOTHER'S RELATIONS: Helen Chadwick—43%. January 4-11. Excellent melodrama. All right if your fans are not too particular.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

SIREN: Special cost—Very good program picture.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, L.a.—General patronage.

RANSON: Lois Wilson—20%. February 17-18. Sensational melodrama with some illogical moments, but it seemed to pass muster with my fans.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

COLLEGE HERO: Entertaining college story with plenty of comedy.—J. L. Seiler, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

THE SPORTING LIFE: Belle Bennett—10%. January 27-28. Excellent melodrama; all right if your fans are not too particular.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

First National

OUT OF THE RUINS: Richard Barthelmess—February 19. They liked this one—even when I got my effects mixed and gave them the auto horn on the airplane raid.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

OUT OF THE RUINS: Richard Barthelmess—Very good.—D. A. Border, Mystic theatre, Warren, Ind.—Small town patronage.

OUT OF THE RUINS: Richard Barthelmess. 49%. January 19. Ted star is good, but why hand him a good story? Poorest Saturday offering for a long time. Please some of the ladies, but the rest of the customers just said, "Blah!" Seven reels.—R. Holshue, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

DO YOUR PLANNING EARLY!

The first intimations of the 1929 gathering of the Herald-World Family have been given. A few weeks ago J. C. Jenkins had a word or two to say about it, and a sly little picture was slipped into this department to whet your appetite for the summer delights of Minnesota, beautiful land o' lakes.

Brother Andy Anderson of the State theatre in Detroit Lakes, Minn., has been getting things under way for the 1929 host, and he is as anxious as the Herald-World is—slyly, doublet, as you are—that the second annual gathering, to be held probably in July, is a perfect success. Let us henceforth call it the "Exhibitors Own Convention," and what is more, make it. One those who will attend are absolutely assured of much excellent entertainment, in surroundings that only summertime-daydreaming can make us imagine.

The Businessmen's Association of Detroit Lakes has promised Brother Anderson and the Herald-World that it will cooperate to every extent possible to provide comfortable quarters and a score of good films for Mr. and Mrs. Exhibitor and the youngsters. A letter to H. C. Correll of the businessmen's association reads:

"Inform the patronage regarding lodging accommodations—or write direct to this department. There are 412 lakes within 25 miles of Detroit Lakes. Detroit Lakes is the home of the finest golf courses in the state of Minnesota. But more of that anon. Just now we only want to remind you of the 1929 Exhibitors' Own Convention, requesting, to paraphrase the Christmas slogan, that you "Do your planning early."

THE BAKER: Milton Sills—51%. February 20-21. Milton Sills well liked here, but judging from comments, this was the weakest Sills picture we ever played. Seven reels.—Beatty & Johnston, Crescent theatre, Red Deer, Alberta.—Small town patronage.

DO YOUR DUTY: Charles Murray—50%. January 9-10. This is a good clean comedy, full of laughs, and it pleased. Six reels.—Beatty & Johnston, Crescent theatre, Red Deer, Alta.—Small town patronage.

DO YOUR DUTY: Charlie Murray—It's too bad First National went "Haywire," like all the producers, over-gave and ruined the man. Charlie Murray. He never fails to please my customers, and this picture was extra good. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaugham, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

SEVEN FOOTPRINTS TO SATAN: Special cost—No draft at the box office. Too many of these mystery stories. Seven reels.—Leah Halves, Eiel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

HIS CAPTIVE WOMAN: Milton Sills—A court-room scene with witnesses telling their stories, but it is so well done that the audience remained seated to their seats until the end. There's some good acting by Milton and Dot Mackall in this number, and the director did a town patronage much action for a Sills picture, but it proved very entertaining. Eight reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, L.a.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BABY: Alice White—This one pleased a nice Sunday gathering. Not a big picture but the blonde heroine was all a person can desire.—Small town patronage.

THE GLADIATORS TRAIL: Ken Maynard—February 1. A very good Western.—F. W. Carroll, Liberty theatre, Chapman, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE PHANTOM CITY: Ken Maynard—Good mystery western that held their interest throughout. Six reels.—Leah Halves, Eiel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE PHANTOM CITY: Ken Maynard.—A Western that turned out to be a mystery thriller that makes F-N's "Haunted House" look like a wide open space. Plenty of razzle-dazzle. Reel and general compliments we have heard on a Western feature in a long, long time. There is a plentiful supply of comedy furnished by a Negro actor who knows his spuds. Ken Maynard surely hit the bull's eye with this number. Six reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, L.a.—General patronage.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—January 30. This picture caused a lot of favorable talk, although the titles were considered somewhat misleading and hot. But as it turned out at the end, they all pleased.—F. W. Carroll, L. 0. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—January 19. Pleasured the Miss carrot. Well, Miss Colleen, you should have a lot of new fans from this picture. Finally acted, wonderfully directed. S. R. Capone out before showing started. It was the paller and they came. The star's followers all returned home happy.—G. L. Salisbury, L. 0. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

THE HAWK'S NEST: Milton Sills—A very good picture that went over big. Seven reels.—Colin Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

This picture gave very good satisfaction to our

LADIES IN A TURKISH BATH: Dorothy Mackaill—15%.

THE MAD MAD: Sally O'Neil—February 5. The press book said this was from Glyn's "The Man and His Woman." Adams, oh, how he lied! It bears no more relation to that Glyn epic than it does to "Frankie and Johnnie"—not so much, in fact. It is a sad and tragic tale of a pathetic little brainless flapper who got drunk and married and got a dirty deal all around, and finally drove her car off one of the numerous bridges. —Patronage: Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE YELLOW LILY: Billie Dove—50%.

THE UPLAND RIDER: Ken Maynard—32%.

SAILORS' WIVES: Mary Astor—Considered a very fine picture, caused a lot of very favorable comment, therefore no regrets. —L. S. Sibley, I. O. O. F. theatre, Wyoming, Neb.—General patronage.

The Fox

THE AIR CIRCUS: Special cast.—Splendid program. The following show is the best we have ever seen. The entertainment value is there, but patrons kick when price is based on the number of reels. Several reels, why the tax is increased. Some good air stuff in this is probably what save the producers the encouragement in making the exhibitor pay more. Give this number good advertising, as it will please if you can set them in Eight reels.—H. H. Helberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

HOMESICK: Hamer Cohen—February 19. Sammy tries hard, but the picture isn't much. There are a few laughs, but two reels were done against the will of Mr. Ira Garland, Hallo, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

HOMESICK: Hamer Cohen—15%.

MOTHER MACHERE: Belle Bennett—15%.

MOTHER MACHERE: Belle Bennett—Something different and very beautifully done. A good production. —General patronage. —Patronage: Belle Bennett in a moving picture we stood it up big. It will stand up.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Lincoln, N. H.—General patronage.

CAPTAIN LASH: Various—February 21-22. Just fair. Not nearly as good as "The River Pirates." —Patronage: Captain Lash will and will not help this star. McLane and Clyde Cook hard to get it over, it but it is a hopeless task. Give McLane and Clyde Cook and they will be in demand. Ten reels.—M. B. Quire, Star theatre, Kanawa, La.—Small town patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—The best picture of the year, barring none. They just don't make 'em any better than this one. If you can only let your patrons see this picture, it will be seen the world over on fire with it, but everyone that saw it was a booster. Many stopped to say how well they enjoyed it. —Patronage: Four Sons will be a good market. —Patronage: M. B. Quire, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—January 31, February 1. Very good picture, pleased 100 per cent of those who saw it in show. Worth the price they ask. I think this picture will stand a raise in admission. Exhibitors, give this picture the extra advertising and good promotion. Ten reels.—M. G. Goldberg, Opera house, Oakfield, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—100%.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—February 16. A very fine picture. We hung the S. B. O. sign out for the first time in many moons. Ten reels.—M. B. Quire, Star theatre, Kanawa, La.—Small town patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—January 21-22. Good sweet picture, only after the serious acting was good and fine, but why put in so many real silly, silly parts in it? I was raised in a German home and I know that old German men act so silly. But then that doesn't condemn the picture or acting. Ten reels.—Mrs. J. D. Swabb, Strand theatre, Oxford, Kan.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—35%.

FOUR SONS: Special cast.—February 16-11. Cold weather and what not, but it is a good picture. —General patronage. —Patronage: Some of the reels do a little bit too high for small town theatres, but they are good pictures. Eleven reels.—Simsons & Asmussen, Palace theatre, Clearwater, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE RIVER PIRATE: Victer McCaulin—30%.

THE STRIPED WAVE: Special cast.—February 5-15. A good educational picture. Some women say they do not wish to see any women, so why worry? Six reels.—J. I. Conlan, Charkroben-Hall theatre, Lincoln, N. H.—General patronage.

TRUE HEAVEN: Special cast.—Just a good ordinary picture. Will satisfy—Paul E. Anderson, Lincoln, Neb.—General patronage.

THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER: Special cast.—Here is another good comedy feature. A picture like this is one for a change and the audience is safe as it is, to show too much of it? This little girl is going to be good, if she has good directors as she has now. —Mrs. J. D. Swabb, Strand theatre, Oxford, Kan.—General patronage.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE: Special cast—February 9. Never cared for O'Brien's acting this time. The general public did, but the exhibitor should use more taste and please his hat off to George. —F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE DEADWOOD pilot: Tom Mix—29%. January 23-24. This old reissue is a fair Western, but audiences will not go for it. Ten reels.—J. M. Adams, Watson theatre, Watson, Neb.—General patronage.

THE ARIZONA WILDCAT: Tom Mix—Very poor. Didn't even please the Mix fan.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

GOTHAM

THE RIVER WOMAN: Special cast—Still another endless picture. We paid our money and laid down on the Mississippi river front somewhere. A little different and not a bad picture. Seven reels.—P. C. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

WILD ORCHIDS: Greta Garbo—49%. February 18-19. Garbo, with Nils Asther and Lewis Stone, in a superbly directed drama of the trials of a woman. A delightful picture. At all small-town patrons have said it is a far better than the special. It is not a special, but the special cast that they said it was. Eight reels.—Leslie Miller, Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—This one sure did a 20% for me. It is a fair picture, but not the special cast that they said it was. Eight reels.—Donald Johnson, Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

WEST OF ZANZIBAR: Lon Chaney—A mighty good picture, Pete Harrison to the contrary. We cannot understand why this Harrison is so bad, but has been entirely fooled by him on several occasions, we concluded to take a chance and were glad that we did, as it made us some money, and we had many complimentary remarks on it and NO kics. By the way, how many of you exhibitors are aware of "AT THE PASTIME CLOUD OF TEN" and boosted the picture accordingly? Well, we did, and pray for such a razzing on any picture. We cannot estimate the harm that it did to our house. Seven reels.—H. M. Face & Sons, Elmhurst theatre, Maple Rapids, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE MISTERYIOUS LADY: Greta Garbo—A corkscrew gorgeous picture, but not a star picture. Here we come to a verdict. In connection with this, had 2,000 feet of talkies which created no interest other than curiosity. Eight reels.—Glacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

BROTHERLY LOVE: Dana-Arthur—February 21. A fairly good comedy by a pair that seemed to go over pretty good. Seven reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

BROTHERLY LOVE: Dana-Arthur—Good average comedy that pleased a Saturday afternoon crowd. Seven reels.—Leslie Haben, Red Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

BEYOND THE SIERRAS: Tim McCoy—February 16. Mystery, snow, sleet and to very good Saturday crowds. Print and photography good. Six reels.—O. G. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

BEYOND THE SIERRAS: Tim McCoy—February 22-23. Story of the days of gold discovery in California with good star cast of bandits. Six reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Mineo, Minn.—Small town patronage.

MORGAN'S LAST RAID: Tim McCoy.—Tim McCoy—February 16. If you like Tim McCoy, you'll probably like this. He belongs in a military role, instead of in Westerns or as a sentimental villain. He was over better than usual in this one. The presence of Dorothy Sebastian also helps. However, our people seem to stay away when we advertise a McCoy picture. Good print and fair photography. Average attendance to a less than average Saturday attendance of six reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

MORGAN'S LAST RAID: Tim McCoy—Weather cold. A Western picture for Saturday night. Had good business. Picture pleased all. We need some good Westerns. People have been on tight rope with thrills and not so much crime. Six reels.—K. Hahn, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

MASKS OF THE DEVIL: John Gilbert—Without Theodore Roberts it would have been nothing at all. People didn't know what it was all about. Another good film, well acted. Give Gilbert the picture and he can make a good picture. This is a very good picture in this one. A 100 per cent flop.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

BRINGING UP FATHER: Special cast—25%. January 6-7. A silly lot of trash, but it seemed to tickle the few who came to see it.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

MADEMOISELLE FROM ARMENTIERES: Special cast—This got by, but was no real hit with our patrons. Five reels.—Glacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

EXCESS BAGGAGE: William Haines—February 21-22. Had a larger crowd the second night than the first, so it must have been good. Les, this is the good picture we worked up to, and so far, so good. Eight reels.—O. G. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

EXCESS BAGGAGE: William Haines—January

STARTED SOMETHING

The criticism of T. O. Service some time ago by Mrs. Grace Dimmick of the Majestic theatre in Weiner, Ark., seems to have been intended for something less than it turned out to be. A picture which Mrs. Dimmick called "There's Heart." The picture, a while, but inasmuch as Phil Rand, the real smell, Salmon, Idaho, exhibitor, called T. O. Service rather vigorously last week, the incident is double to any rate.

"We seem to have started something," Mrs. Dimmick writes, "when we mentioned that T. O. Service has wrecked our pictures for it was unintentional. That letter was not meant for publication, and we were surprised when we found it in circulation. However, we hasten to say that AT LAST we have had a feature that he raised highly, that met the heart approval of practically all our audience and most certainly did please the personnel staff and that that first film, for "Heart to Heart." This is called 'Zanzibar' and sounds like it might be a mush love story, but it is one of the finest of the home type of comedy we ever played.

"I have ordered 'Zanzibar' on the previous night, and of all the sorrowful things we have ever seen, it takes first place. Fortunately, we have read the press and on this picture, so we hunted up the press sheet and promptly sent a hurried call to F.N. to send one of the pictures we had under contract, for us to use on Saturday night, carrying the statement that this is the prize of the picture. This one issue of the Herald-World was worth a year's subscription to us!"

"The folks who did come on Friday night complimented us on our not allowing the children to see such worldly horrors. W'll admit that it is the first M G M picture we have to condemn, but hope we never have another like it. Or the other hand, 'Heart to Heart' is one we could have probably played two nights. As one patron remarked, 'Every picture kick out of that picture.' Just another reason why we voted for Lloyd Hughes! Mary Astor was excellent also, as was Louise Fazenda."
This was rather a disappointment for the Haines fans, as they look for more comedy in his pictures. However, they liked it pretty well. Seven reels—George Benson, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The story is also very good and it made a good Saturday night picture with most of the patrons present in the theatre. Red Deer, Alta.—Small town patronage.

FOUR WALLS: John Gilbert—December 16.-Since it was a very good picture and how it worked after his release. Good. Seven reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Special cast—January 15. Did biggest Saturday business in weeks. Everything about the picture was to boost it. Nine reels.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Special cast—January 29-31. This picture received praise and knocks in about equal quantities from our patrons. Personally, I liked it and think it's influence, if any, good rather than bad. Nine reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Special cast—February 15-16. Good picture, but had basketball tournament going on and pleases a very good crowd, but the picture is fine. Some of the close-ups were blurred, but the rest was clear and plain. Nine reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Manassas, Mo.—General patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Special cast—A very good picture. Nine reels.—Paul H. Dufy, best we had from M.G.M.—A. J. Cuhel, Opera House, Bruno, Neb.—General patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Special cast: Weather fair and cold. Good business and a good picture, a picture that will please 90 per cent of the audience. But the picture is worth it to them. Pictures with a good story is what we need.—W. E. Hahn, Centennial theatre, Warwaw, Ind.—General patronage.

10-11. Did not see this myself because of the snow, but everyone praised it highly. Eight reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

THE Cossacks: John Gilbert—February 8-9. So many reports have been very flattering on this picture but we couldn't get it. It's worth the value for our clients. Too rough and gruesome. Arce E. McLeod, Rex theatre, Mayaguez, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE Cossacks: John Gilbert—Here's a real picture. Plenty of action, thrills, wonderful riding and most exclusive treatment of the women in it.—George E. Fuller, The Playhouse, Fallopa, Ala.—General patronage.

19-20. A very good Haines picture, not his best. But few who saw it liked it. My patrons liked it. My patrons liked it. With some life to them. Pictures with a good story is what we need.—Paul H. Dufy, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.

THE ACTRESS: Norma Shearer—February 19. This puppy came and have a swell play? that's what makes you feel glad you're in the game, and they will tell you. It's worth a cent.—Grand theatre, Dunkirk, N. Y.—General patronage.

THE FIRST KISS: Wray-Coo—When your first kiss, have and will ever have a swell play? that's what makes you feel glad you're in the game, and they will tell you. It's worth a cent.—Grand theatre, Dunkirk, N. Y.—General patronage.

THE LADY: Roy Del Ruth—February 6. This is a very fair program picture that did not do as well as expected. Seven reels.—Roy Del Ruth, Community theatre, Minn.—Small town patronage.
THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—February 13-14. This is a snappy, delightful comedy throughout, except for the desert scene, where the characters are talking from their throats, and this scene Bohler's is superb. The prologue is in colors.—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE PATRIOT: Emil Jannings—February 7-8. One of the biggest flops of the season for me. Not the kind of pictures that carry over in this neighborhood. Twelve reels.—Leise Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

HUNTINGWALKER: Harry Lander.—Terrible picture we have ever shown. Don't run it as a gift, and Schottenheim don't give away anything.—Paul E. Anderson, Liberty theatre, Kaitelphi, Mont.—General patronage.

THE MATING CALL: Thomas Meighan—February 15-16. Good pictures are better late, and any picture that has Rene Adoree and Greysun Brent in it, is bound to be good. Seven reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

SING OF THE FATHERS: Emil Jannings—February 17: This is an excellent picture, more or less the same order of "The Way of All Flesh." It is the best kind of sentimental picture that picture was, it did not draw. Jannings spoiled himself here with "The Street of Sin" and "The Patriot." Ten reels.—W. Chilton, Colonial theatre, Salit Ste. Marie, Mich.—General patronage.

TAKE ME HOME: Bebe Daniels.—Nothing to rave over. Just a fair program picture. Business only fair. Basketball tournament for opposition, and usherberry to lark up against. Pretty tough weather for the theatre man.—Marion Reynolds, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, III.—General patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Richard Dix—January 13-14. Fairly good story, well done but not up to what they expect of Dix. Seven reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—Small town patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Richard Dix—February 15-16. This is a picture that was well received by me, regular Saturday night crowd. Seven reels.—Leise Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Richard Dix—February 15. A picture that seems to be a hit and this is no exception. Many favorable comments. Too bad the roads and weather have been so bad. It takes all the profits.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WINGS: Special cast.—A 15-reel war picture with Clara Bow, Charles Rogers and Richard Arlen and other big stars, and most every man and woman in this big world must have had kin folks in this picture, because it looked as though half the population of every country under the sun was in this picture. We call it a big picture but of days, now the war is over. Fifteen reels.—Walter Odom & Sons, Dixie theatre, Durant, Miss.—General patronage.

WINGS: Special cast.—Very good aviation story and good business.—J. L. Selter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—General patronage.

WINGS: Special cast—February 11-12-13. One of the best war pictures I have ever seen. Great service on roads and walks, but played to good business each night. Everybody liked the picture. One show news.—We never have good pictures like "Wings." Twelve reels.—W. E. Hahn, Centennial theatre, Prineville, Ore.—Small town patronage.

WINGS: Special cast.—Played this one three days. Business only fair. Picture seemed to please. Played at 45 cent admission and am positive that we played the picture, the crowd would have if we had the price to 50 cents. The picture is worth it all right. Many people don't get it. You can't set it. Fifteen reels.—Marion F. Bodwell, Paramount theatre, Wyoming, III.—General patronage.

STREET OF SIN: Emil Jannings—February 12-13. The poorest Jannings to date. No good for the small town. Jannings is a wonderful actor, but he does not pull any with my patrons.—Arch E. McCord, Rex theatre, Mayville, Mo.—Small town patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—December 5-6. Terrible business on this. Not a bad little comedy, nothing against it except a too liberal display of Bow legs.—Roy W. Adams, Patine theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

KIT CARSON: Fred Thomson—February 21. A good Western, but poor photography in spots. Too bad that Thomson is gone as he was popular here. Eight reels.—G. A. Dills, Sun theatre, Fairwell, Neb.—General patronage.

FORGOTTEN FACES: Clive Brook—January 18-19. Crook drama but very interesting. One of the best pictures I have seen in a long time. Eight reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.—Small town patronage.

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Richard Arlen—Any Western, but poor photography in spots.—Arno G. Weigang, Community theatre, Kenedy, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE VANISHING PIONEER: Jack Holt.—Jack Holt-Zane Grey combination still goes good and this one especially pleased. A little more action in this one.—Arno G. Weigang, Community theatre, Kenedy, Tex.—Small town patronage.

WARMING UP: Richard Dix—February 19. This was a good baseball story, and patrones were pleased. What got my "nanny" was, why send a film out on a good picture like this that is full of spilpes! Had patrons that saw this about two months ago and they said that two or three good scenes were cut out. Paramount has given me several pictures like this but it won't happen very many more times. Eight reels.—G. A. Dills, Sun theatre, Fairwell, Neb.—General patronage.

WARMING UP: Richard Dix—February 15-16. This was a good picture. Everybody who saw it enjoyed it. Dix doesn't have the drawing power here that he seems to have elsewhere. Don't he fear of this one. Eight reels.—G. H. Wright, Jr., Star theatre, Wendell, N. C.—Small town patronage.

WARMING UP: Richard Dix—February 17-18, We used one of the new cueing devices on the market in connection with this subject and it sure did please my patrons. By all means use a cueing device when showing this program, because your patrons will boost for you to beat the band.—Walker C.
J. C. Jenkins—His Colyun

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:
The most popular indoor sport today is city theatre. It's a long time since there has been the "reason" for what some call an "indifference of the public toward motion pictures." Tom, Dick and Harry keep the electric and gas meters working overtime trying to convince the public that they have solved the question. Tom says one thing, Dick says another and Harry says they are both all right.

Tom has a desk on Broadway and every time he crosses the Harlem river he takes a bodyguard with him to protect him from the Indians. Dick has an office across the street from Tom and he thinks that Ohio is a country occupied by a race of people called Flinders. He has his bodyguards jump on the discords of sound, drinks cocktails down at the "Blue Moon" and says that prohibition is a failure.

We have before us an editorial in one of the magazines supposed to be published in the interests of the public. It is an excellent thing when the writer attempts to prove that unless something is done, and done quickly, the small theatres will be a thing of the past, because little or no thought is being paid to these theatres by the producers, and he winds up by saying that the silent houses of today will be the sound houses of tomorrow and that the writer will recognize that fact. In one sentence he says that the small theatres are doomed, and in the next he says they will be the market for sound tomorrow. There's logic for you. In other words, you sing the hair all off a tomatoc, then show him the picture of a woolly airacle, and Mr. Thomas, will feel all right about it.

We are not an editorial writer. We never were. We never expect to be—we are just one of those goofy hacks in the short grass country where people try 'em by law before they shoot 'em, and where "Sunday" means something besides an ice cream dish, and where it doesn't matter whether a man's clothes were made in Paris or Oshkosh-gosh, Vis, so long as he behaves himself. But we want to say just a few words to you small town thespians. We've heard it before, when they used to say the little, so don't you pay attention to 'em.

It is said that there are two sides to every question. We knew a girl once who had four sides, and when we looked at her we couldn't tell which side we were on. But this picture business is an octagon. It has eight sides. You look at it from one side and it looks terrible. You look around it, it begins to change, and gets a damnsite worse. Today the producers won't talk about anything but "sound" and the product they are offering the people is making them hard of hearing. There's so much "sound" at the production head today that they are not only not becoming deaf, but dumb as well, for nothing matter—now but "sound," and the picture is of secondary importance—if, indeed, it is of any importance at all.

Some of these editorial writers whose feet have never been of the pavement, and who think that plurius amum is a new kind of breakfast food, remind us of the boy when the teacher asked him if his father helped him with the problem, and he replied, "Nope, I got it wrong myself." A

Well, that's about editorials and "sound," but there is another question that confronts the industry. Every time Congress and state legislatures meet, the question of censorship comes up for consideration. Well informed folks contend that the people are the proper ones to act as censors, and well informed people are correct, but do the people in reality exercise censorship?

The producer produce whatever they please—good, bad, indifferent. sexy, cheesy and putrid, and under the block booking system and the uniform contract, the exhibitor is forced to accept the whole works to do his part to the box pleasant. That's what block booking and the uniform contract was intended for and it works like a charm. The exhibitor mus play and pay, or pay and not play, as suits his fancy, and the public the picture by staying away from the show and the exhibitor is the gabbaz who gets the barroom.

The exhibitor in turn puts up a squawk and the producer puts up a picture, and the closest he squawk gets to the head desk is the boy on the front door.

That kid on the front door is of more importance to the industry than he is given credit for being. He's the guy who censors the stuff intended for the head desk. How could men drawing $100,000 a year be isolated by squawks from goofy exhibitors? They just couldn't, that's all, and it's nonsense to expect it.

Now, now, but isn't it just terrible to talk that way? But do you know that when we were a boy, we could call upon to recite "Darius Green and His Flying Machine" at every literary society and school entertainment given in the community, and we sometimes wonder if possibly that old poem might not have been the inspiration to the Wright Brothers to start making flying machines. And without flying machines, where would "Lindy" be today? Just runnin' on that ashville, will you?

This isn't an editorial. It's just a luke-warm expression by one who has got flat feet from wandering around in the sage brush and cactus. "Out Where the West Begins." Some day we may get all het up, then we'll say something. But speaking of Arthur Chapman's famous poem, we're reminded of it here:

Out where the sun and moon shine brighter.
Out where the trials of life are lighter.
That's where the West begins.
Out where the world is larger.
Out where they never tolerate the grayer.
That's where the West begins.

Don't it beat all how unappreciative some people are? When we were out to Salmon, Ida., a year ago and called on "Fibby" Phil Rand, we were as considerate of his cellar as we could be under the circumstances, and now he breaks forth in our favorite magazine and says that we are getting "giddy" and are at "the dancing grandpop stage when we want to appear young." It is awfully discouraging to have folks talk that way about us, especially when we can run farther, kick higher and squawk louder than any exhibitor in Idaho outside of the Mormon church. Nancy, Carroll and Polly Moran never would say that about us—no, sir, not on your life! And one more crick that from Phil and he will be a ripe cucumber—so far as the girls in Hollywood are concerned. We expect to go to the West Coast next fall and have intended to have included Salmon in our itinerary, but now we won't have the pleasure of seeing Phil and his balcony.

Phil will try to discourage this, of course, because he is jealous of us and has heard that we are going out to Hollywood and is afraid we will meet his Colleen and he wants to throw cold water on us. But if Nancy and Polly are there, he need have no fear about his Colleen, for there will be plenty busy around other homes. And wash the hair.

Somehow, every time we think of Polly Moran there are 'some verses that come up in our mind and we've just got to get out of our system, so be considerate, brother, be considerate. Remember that Phil says we are getting old and childish. But anyhow, be that as it may, here we go:

When they go out to hunt a comedy gal
Who can burn up the film in the can,
They should soon forget all about Mary and Sal
And take no instructions from Sennett or Hal,
But take the advice of a goody old pal,
And grab onto Polly Moran.

Every time we hear a jazz orchestra it increases our sympathy for the feelings of Mozart and Beethoven. If those two boys have a radio, how they must suffer. They shoo bootleggers gang in this country, but they are shooting at the wrong target.

We don't believe it is conducive to good morals to show a picture of a man going into a woman's bedroom, especially before the reverend of justice of the peace has performed his official duties. And if there is anything that we are a crank on—and there is no doubt but that there are lots of 'em—it is morals. Outside of this particular and a few rare posters at a pin party, we would say that "CHILDREN OF THE RITZ" is a picture well worth your while to see. Jack Mulhall is listed in our catalogue along side of what we consider the best and finest stars on the screen, and in good company—no disappointing. And when you see Dorothy Mackaill, if you are a married man, be sure that your wife is not familiar with the map of Nevada and the location of Reno, because you will talk about her in your sleep, and your wife won't like that.

It has been rather hard for me to drive a taxi of nights to keep the wolf from scratching the varnish off the front door, when she brought in that coat that cost $4,000, we'd have taken her over our knee whether there was any armoire in the house or not. Dorothy needed a darn good spunking, that's what she did, and I'd like to see Whitehall—lots of good children. But contrary to the rule with most women, she learned her lesson and finally got down to brass tacks, and from then on everything was lovely, and not a word was mentioned about grandpa and grandma, although that was understood. We like the picture, and when we like 'em you can consider that they are good, as we see pictures but sometimes we are a little mooneyed.

Iowa ought to be annexed to Alaska. From what he hear from over there, the snowdrifts resemble the Sawtooth range and they won't know where their roads are until July 8, just in time to start for that HERALD-WORLD family convention at Detroit Lakes. Of course we don't want to mention any names, but we know a bunch of exhibitors over there who are regular Eklomos. Some of them are pretty good fellows, nevertheless, and we hope to see them before long. As Bill Weaver said to me, "We'll be in to see you soon."

THE LITTLE YELLOW HOUSE: Special cast—February 4, 1928. Jan. 29. There is nothing about this picture that 'passes muster.' It is a little better than usual.

W. T. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE LITTLE YELLOW HOUSE: Special cast—February 5. Not much to it. Fair business. MGM comedy saved the day. Seven reels.—Frank Orben, Surry theatre, Mooresville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

Tiffany-Stahl

WILD GEISE: Belle Bennett—75%. January 18-19. This picture, owing to publicity given it by O. W. Carpenter, a good bet for any theatre it was well liked here. —B. H. Bolles, Reel joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

United Artists

STEAMBOAT BILL Jr.: Buster Keaton—49%. February 15-16. A comedy made more enjoyable by the fact that we have had only one week of the film. —Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

SULLIVAN AND SON: Special cast—21%. February 15-16. One of the best pictures ever made clean, beautiful. H. B. Warner excelled himself in this one. Every one praised it to the highest and said it was the finest picture they had ever seen. The percentage on this picture was low due to very bad weather conditions. The hottest snow for the last five years was falling. This kept many away. Ten reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax, Kilmanock, Va.—General patronage.

SULLIVAN AND SON: Special cast—January 30-31. One of the best pictures we have played this season.—F. N. prickel, Liberty theatre, Chapman, Kan.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGE: Buster Keaton—36%. February 5-24. Failed to live up to expectations as it was as good as any of his late ones. Not much of a story. Some good gags that get the laughs. Might make some money if you don't have to mortgage your dump to buy it. Six reels.—John E. Wallam, Orpheus theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.—General patronage.

Universal

THE GATE CRASHER: Glenn Tryon—24%. February 3-4. This boy is good, but I can't get them out to see it. —B. H. Bolles, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—75%. February 15-16. This is the best picture we have had this season. —B. H. Bolles, Rose theatre, Sumas, Wash.—Small town patronage.

SON OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Tom Mix—Good. Tom always good here. Seven reels.—Mrs. J. D. Swab, Strand theatre, Oxford, Kan.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—not a very strong picture. Ran it as a benefit for church, and it played very well and they were disappointed. Seven reels.—Leslie Halloc, Reel joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

The MAN WHO LAUGHS—Special cast—49%. February 23. Yes, we ran it. Now you laugh. —R. D. Carter, Fairfax, Kilmanock, Va.—Small town patronage.

TOM'S CABIN: Good comedy—D. W. Griffith.—February 3-4. A good picture, even for the home town. —W. C. Martin, Liberty theatre, Chapman, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THERE'S SOMETHING IN THE AIR—Very good. Good seven.—M. B. Quire, Star theatre, Kanawha, Va.—Small town patronage.

RED HOT SPEED: Reginald Denny.—Not a good picture. —H. B. Bolles, Reel joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS: Special cast—49%. February 23. Not a very fine feature, but the folks thought it put, mixed with a whack of a lot of advertising, we made a little money, by gosh, at that! Ten reels.—L. B. Conant, Chris Thompson hall, Lincoln, N. B.—Small town patronage.

RED LIPS: Special cast—49%. February 11. Not a very fine feature, but the folks thought it put, mixed with a whack of a lot of advertising, we made a little money, by gosh, at that! Ten reels.—L. B. Conant, Chris Thompson hall, Lincoln, N. B.—Small town patronage.

MAD: Special cast—49%. February 23. Not a very fine feature, but the folks thought it put, mixed with a whack of a lot of advertising, we made a little money, by gosh, at that! Ten reels.—L. B. Conant, Chris Thompson hall, Lincoln, N. B.—Small town patronage.

THE CHAINS AND KELLYS IN PARIS: Special cast—75%. February 23-24. A much better picture than we expected and well liked. Laughs are plentiful.—F. E. Shane, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE COWBOY: Tom Moore—Good comedy-drama. Seven reels.—M. B. Quire, Star theatre, Kanawha, Va.—Small town patronage.

THAT'S MY DADDY: Reginald Denny.—February 16. Sure it's good. Denny seldom fails us. Buy it and clean up.—F. E. Shane, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—General patronage.

HOW TO HANDLE WOMEN: Glenn Tryon—86%. February 5-8. Delightful and funny. Six reels.—Clarke Green, Lake theatre, Upper Lake, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE RANGER RIDE: Glenn Tryon—February 13-16. As satisfactory a Gibson as we ever had.—J. E. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Kids Bring 'Em In

A box office stunt worth special mention is reported by G. H. Wright, Jr., of the Star theatre in Wendell, N. C., so although it is included in his report on a picture, it is lifted out so that no one will choose to skip over it. Says Brother Wright:

"Here is a stunt that will give you some publicity and help you at the box office: We admit that we are free to see this picture on condition that they would bring along some adult at regular prices. To the kids we express their appreciation. This was done on the first night, the second night took care of itself after this. We scored a good average although it rained both days and nights."

EDUCATIONAL

THE CLOUD PATROL: Reed Howes—Probably more action packed into this little gem than in any other two-reel subject on the market. A running gag with a good laugh. Great stunt for your own death warrant.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST LAUGH: Cameo—Good.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

LIVE NEWS: Punk: This is the first poor one from Educational, and believe me, it's plenty poor. No fine good laugh. Two reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

PICKLE SHINES: Just silly. Not a laugh.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selikirg, Man.—General patronage.

NEVER TO LATE: Wallace Lupino—Good single reel with a few laughs. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

NO FARE: Big joke—very good comedy. Two reels.—B. G. Howes & D. A. Lyrice theatre, Elendale, N. D.—General patronage.

ONLY ME: Lupino Lane—A little different from the usual Production. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

SAILOR BOY: Pretty Collins—Pretty good. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

SPRING HAS COME: Good. A moving day story that keeps 'em laughing.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selikirg, Man.—General patronage.

STAGE FRIGHTS: Mertard—Very funny. Two reels.—F. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

FOX NEWS: This is a good news—cost only $1.50 and is only one week old. This same print goes to many many towns.—Mr. Charles Babbs, T. L. Babbs theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

LADY LION: Animal—Hardly fair. The hitches like human animals. But they are very poor for grown-up. Two reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

BIG BUSINESS: Laurel-Hardy—Good. The boys try selling Christmas trees in Hollywood and meet an obstinate customer.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selikirg, Man.—General patronage.

CHASING HUSBANDS: Charlie Chase—Best chase comedy we have had. They are getting better. The problem is getting harder and harder. They are very entertaining. Two reels.—Mr. James Tunstall, Star theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

CRAZY HOUSE: Our Gang—Not much. Real comedies are becoming quite rare. The gang seems to be fading out. One reel.—Mr. Charles Babbs, T. L. Babbs theatre, Martinsville, Va.—Small town patronage.

DO GENTLEMEN SNEEZE?: Not a snore in it. But it was very good.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

ELECTION DAY: Our Gang—By golly, we don't want another one like this for a long, long time. Rather poor for the gang, and the print we had must have been some kind of freak, as the screen result looked like someone had painted our projection lenses with axle grease. Titles as clear and sharp as any we ever projected, but the picture itself was chloroformed to a little lifeless and too much trickery, both kid and camera, in these gang pictures have made it seem to have dropped from first to last place with our average patron. Too bad.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

STUFF OF GENERAL ROBERT E. LEE: Very fine, interesting subject. Two reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THREE KEYBOARD MEN: Jerry the Monkey—One of the best comedies shown in my house. Two reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarock, Va.—Small town patronage.

STATE RIGHTS: JAWS: Boys trying to get boys.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

STATE RIGHTS: Bring 'Em In: Kids trying to get kids.—Frank Orban, Savoy theatre, Hooversville, Pa.—Small town patronage.

CRAZY TO FLY: Jimmie Adams—A good real comedy. Can't understand why it doesn't rank much higher or go as far as it should. Reports against this group. They please here.—Arno G. Weller, Community theatre, Kenned, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE HOME GIRL: Here's where Paramount should star Jannings, with Stroheim and Menjou, as far as box office for us is concerned. Two reels.—C. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

RICHARDS: A. K. Fair—Fairly good.—Grand theatre, Dun- kirk, 0.—General patronage.

KOKO ACT: Fair—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

NIFTY NAIJI: Jack Duffy—Pretty fair comedy. Duffy always seems to get the laughs here.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, 0.—Small town patronage.

ORIENTAL HUGS: Billy Dooley—Punk comedy. Billy Dooley is a pain in the neck to our patrons. Two reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

LAUREL-HARDY—“Our Gang” — An auto comedy that was a riot. Whoever takes them for an expected surprise in a home-made flyer in the average theatre is justified. This is in no way a dull lot that we lot in a kids free to see this comedy. Two reels. Diamond & Son, Majestic theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

LIMOUSINE LOVE: Charlie Chase—Good—yes, very good. Made them laugh, and that's what it's all about. Second of his comedies are good. Two reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

NAPOLEON'S HOMELAND: Oddly—Very interesting one reel subject. Exceptional photography in this subject. One reel.—A. B. Kreiser, Majestic theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

The new talking motion picture, I submit

"Tawkamon!" is not so dignified as some other name, say "Superdrama," but it would be popular. It is easily said, and readily un-derstood by the under 19 age American, and after all, that is what you want. It is the only name, in my opinion, that would root out the popular but vulgar term.

If "Tawkamon!" should be generally approved, I shall feel honored to have served such a popular, worthy, and necessary institution as the motion picture industry. It is certainly due a popular, worthy, and necessary name.-A. M. RISEMAN, Llano, Texas.

Pictures for Working Class

PIPER, ALA.—To the Editor: I very seldom express my opinion regarding pictures I use. However, I will say just a few words regarding the working class of people, including myself.

I am very glad to state that at the present time we are enjoying our programs very much amid one and one from our old, old, old pictures, the crowds. It is true, the writer has had his ups and downs, caused from not knowing will other people over heard, but I do think know their wants, and have given them pictures according to my judgment as to what they would enjoy, and the box office is all right.

Now for the benefit of small towns ranging around 1,000 to 2,000 people. The question may be raised and buy what they want. The moving picture salesmen are nearly all nice boys, but they do not know what you need, and if you don’t happen to know, then you are liable to get some pictures that will be a loss. Some of my best friends are moving picture salesmen and they would do their best to help you, but that would box office, but they can’t do it.

"King of Kings" and other big specials are all right for many towns but I don’t think they would suit for mining towns, cotton mills and other factory towns.

We pay the regular price to exchanges and charge 10 cents and 25 cents and find the picture business all right.—C. E. PARNELL, Auditorium theater, Piper, Ala.

Coolidge Poses for Camera But—Wont Talk

NORTHAMPTON, MASS., March 12.—Calvin Coolidge, who is now enjoying the privilege of a private life, posed for motion picture photographers on the back porch of his home. He refused, however, to speak over one of the newswires.

March 16, 1929 — EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

EXHIBITORS is generally popular, use.

In short, what we have to do is cut the old-time play that is too slow and for the authors to write them, and they revolve the entire plot and left only the title. We suggested they poll the exhibitors to see which ones people enjoyed, and they deluged us with underworld crime stuff, and in short everything we asked for was a reproduction of their own returns. They assumed that they could call off the old only to plunge into the worse—"New.

These producers in fact did anything and everything but listen to reason and think.

I have every reason in the world to believe that the subscribers of this magazine could get together with their feet under the same table and iron out most of the trade difficulties. But will those subscribers be asked to do any such thing? It is sufficient if the brain of our industry is substituted for the producers now in power.

Yes, very likely we need a tremendous house-cleaning. Perhaps it will continually pound them with the same idea, and their interests behind these producer-overlords may throw the present crowd out and make a fresh start, and perhaps things will start in producing and selling methods will save us. —PHILIP RAND, Rex theater, Salmon, Idaho.

Attack of "Bluesyitis"

CARBERRY, MAN.—To the Editor: Holy mackerel! Hattie Mizzelle, Alcazar theater had a bad attack of "Bluesyitis" when he wrote that letter in your issue of February 21, and, what’s more, he infected his public with the same disease. A very bad complaint and very hard to cure.

How can they possibly expect to make pictures to suit the public when the public don’t know themselves. One picture will go strong with some people and flop with others. The kind of a show what does a good picture make is that crazy, rotten closeups of two kissing. If ever I kissed a girl with that half-baked, gooned-up look, my face that the actor have, may be I’d be stooled, and if I had the power, I would fire every director that put it on the screen. It is very bad stuff that makes the people sick of pictures.

Hattie, why book the big pictures? You may say "for prestige," but what is the use of prestige if you don’t make any money. I would turn down "Wings" because I knew it would not make me any money for the price I was asked to pay. "Ben Hur" went over big and MGM did not get it all. I got my share and also prestige. Lloyd Taylor, salesman for MGM out of Winnipeg, has helped me turn a lemon in Winnipeg not any worse then it is right now. But it’s turning. My experience with the exchanges at Winnipeg is that if you show them how to do their work, they will do their best to help you along. Why not try the ten and twenty-five cent admissions if you can make an extra forty cents on getting the family in? You mention good, clean pictures. Well, speaking for Manitoba, I venture to say that I am not scared to put on any picture that the censor for board asks a print from the back porch of his home. He refused, however, to speak over one of the newswires.

Suggests Three Sound Names

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—To the Editor: Many thanks for calling our attention to our overuse in sending you two money orders for $3.00.

If business continues as it has for the last three months we will not have any use for your valuable paper, as we and a great many may be out of business in two years. This is the limit that Grandpa Jenkins gives us. Then Grandpa Jenkins is right when he says "P. S. —‘The Herald-World covers the field like an April shower."—ROBERT J. HOCK, Central theatre, Goshen, N. Y.

Sydney, N. S. W.—To the Editor: If you can suggest three names for the new sound pictures.

These names are all quite familiar (1) Movieland, (2) Movie-talk, (3) Hear-see pictures.

Hoping one of these names will meet with approval. I am, yours truly, ROBERTS, T. S.—Stray P. O., Sydney, N. S. W., Canada.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

SOUND has brought a large number of rapidly shifting changes in the industry, and not the least is the development of the musical director of productions. It's a he-man's job, and one of those who already has learned that is Josiah Zuro, newly appointed director-general of music for Pathe, who dropped into Harry Lorch's office at the Pathe exchange last week enroute to the West Coast, where he will seek suitable locations for the outdoor presentation of several grand operas which he is to supervise as two-reel "Film Operas." Among them will be "Niebelungen Ring," "Carmen," "Faust" and "Aida." Zuro said the radio and the theme songs of audiences make a wonderful combination for exploitation, but if the radio artist is not so good, the exploitation is worse. So say we all. It is safe to add that no "alleged" singers will exploit Pathe theme songs over the bounding waves of ether. They'll have to be real warblers.

The Twentieth Century, a small house at 335 New Fore Street, will present "Hog Wild" for a week's run. It's quite a show when a picture plays seven days at a theatre of this size.

"Captain Lash," Fox picture starring Victor McLaglen, was shown at the Monroe theatre last week. McLaglen was once a professional boxer, and if he really is pulling his punches, he's an artist at fooling the camera. We rather suspect his opposition didn't consider them pulled.

Vitaphone and Movietone has been installed in the Chatham theatre on Broadway near Grand. "Lights of New York," Warner Brothers picture, will be the first to be shown with the new equipment, following with "White Shadows of the South Seas" and "Lion and the Mouse." Edward Trimmer is the enterprising manager of the Chatham.

The new Mont Clare theatre building was dedicated last week and film folk of the Grand avenue district are enjoying the realization of a dream they've cherished a long time. The 1,500 seat house was dedicated with real ceremonies. State's Attorney John A. Swanson made the chief address and Bennett Dolan acted as master of ceremonies. In addition to the theatre, the new building contains seven stores, five offices and 24 apartments.

Buck Jones, the cowboy from the wide open spaces, arrived in Chicago last week minus his horse. With the help of one of Chicago's traffic cops, Buck obtained a steed, however, and posed for the many photographers that gathered to snap him. Buck is in Chicago to arrange for a wild west show.

William F. Swift, handling theatre supplies, was seen rambling along the row with a brand new Foreign, running played the rambling along too for Swift. He is permanently located in Springfield, Illinois, but was in Chicago buying some equipment.

Joe Wolf, special representative for Pathe, has returned to his headquarters in the Chicago exchange after making rounds in the St. Louis and Indianapolis territories. Wolf is handling "Godless Girl" and "Strange Cargo" at present.

Mrs. Nat Wolf, wife of the film booker at Radio-Keith-Orpheum, recently opened a sales office for the company in Texas. Mrs. Wolf, wife of the special representative for Pathe, left for San Antonio, Texas, recently for visits with their mothers. They plan on returning to Chicago in the early spring.

Joseph Kennedy passed through Chicago last week enroute to the Coast.

The boys on Film Row will have their jobs, and now Eddie Rosecan, salesman for R.K.O., has much to ponder. Eddie is country salesman and comes into the Chicago office once a week, on Saturday. Arriving at the usual time last week end, Eddie found a galaxy of letters that were at least surprising. After opening the mail he found that someone has been clipping coupons out of magazines and papers and signing Eddie's name and address to them. The harvest was hundredfold, or something like that, with samples of poems, roll cakes, books on "How to Grow Hair," and only Eddie knows what else.

Harry Lorch and Tom North of Pathe went to Pontiac, Ill., last week to attend the opening of "Godless Girl" in sound. The house is owned by Eddie Zorn.

R.C.A. Photophone will open at the State-Lake theatre on March 17 with Pathe's "Godless Girl." Vaudeville will also be shown at this house.

Nat Wolf, of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, returned to Chicago last week after making his regular monthly trip to New York. Wolf now has offices in both cities.

The Exhibitors Association, Midwest Ticket Supply Company and Photophone will make new headquarters in the Standard Oil building in the Near future. The 35c will Wolf, the third floor and Tess Heraty says they're going to be so polished up that no mirrors will be required.

One more oldtimer has entered the "Oldest in the Industry" club, and he's none other than Joe Lyon, who is now with DeForest Phonofilm as salesman. Joe began his film career in 1907 as owner of the Broadway theatre on Chicago's Loop. The theatre housed 110 and played one-reel pictures with a change of vaudeville four times a week. Joe says that Senator Murphy, who is now touring the United States appearing in legitimate houses played at the Broadway in 1907. On Sundays Joe ran as high as 18 to 20 performances. Each show lasted about 20 minutes. In 1908 Lyon went to Evanston and opened the first picture house there for Charles S. Franklin, who is now a judge. The theatre was called the Beaudette and seated 350. Bothert and Kearn took over the house together with several other theatres and Joe was retained to run a few of them. In 1913 Joe went to Fox Film Corporation, where he was employed as salesman for ten years. He also was employed at various times with other film distributors until recently, when he joined the DeForest Phonofilm organization.

Ludwig Seigel entertained the entire force of the Exhibitors Association at his home last week. He has taken over the Prairie theatre, where they witnessed the performance of a new colored stock company. The house has a five-piece colored orchestra.

Neil D. Thompson, who has been connected with the Photophone Company for a long time, is now making his headquarters in Chicago as partner with L. V. Kitnauer. All producing organizations have approved the Photophone equipment, Kitnauer says.

Another "Film Row" special by Joe Lyon: Joe says that all exhibitors should get wise and invest in a sound device because he was passing a 35c theatre book and透过 the window was printed an immense sign reading "Sound Investments." There you are.

Dr. Lee DeForest was in Chicago last week, and attended a convention at the Stevens hotel. Dr. DeForest made a speech—yes, on sound—and then returned to New York.

Mrs. Joe Lyon is another who would like to join the "Film Industry Club" of the Herald-World, so, Frank Ishmael, rise and duly administer the oath. Mrs. Lyon is now considered a member, if she resolves to read "Chicago Personalities" every week for one year. Mrs. Lyon operated a theatre on 47th and Ashland in 1906. She also managed the Verdi on West 35th street the same year. In 1913 she took over the Archer theatre and some time later she met her husband Joe. Thereupon she gave up the theatre business. Fair enough.

That Makes Successful Showmen Exclusive Users of “A. S. C.” Chairs

Successful showmen... shrewd buyers... keen judges of value and merit specify “American” chairs because the price they pay includes more than the specifications set forth. With a nationwide distributing and installation system... every “American” purchase includes a service that never has failed in an emergency... a service that guarantees to meet advertised opening dates... an organization big enough to solve unforeseen problems as they may arise. That large-scale operators look to the service as well as the chair is attested to by their long years of loyalty to and patronage of this company.

Blower Bill says: "Don't sign up for any kind of a cooling system until you get the facts on this new 1929 Supreme Cooling System."

Consider these exclusive Supreme Features

A full six foot cooling blower of correct design and sturdy construction that is tested for quietness at all speeds.

An all-steel, electrically welded integral unit blower wheel 45 inches in diameter, guaranteed to be perfectly balanced. Heavy ten arm semi-steel spiders give it strength to last a lifetime.

Timken Tapered Roller Bearings reduce power consumption, and insure smooth running and quiet operation.

A new type Belt, an exclusive feature in the Supreme System that eliminates all belt trouble. It is positively stretch-proof, needs no tighteners, and has been found to be better than leather and strand belts.

A new all-steel construction adjustable air diffuser directs the cooling breezes from the blower wherever you want them.

An all enclosed ballbearing three-speed motor assures perfect operation of the unit.

An electric speed regulator that adjusts the speed of the blower and the volume of air handled to suit weather conditions that is a real contribution to the cooling of theatres.

Positively Cools

The popularity of Supreme Cooling Systems among theatre owners everywhere indicates positive cooling ability. The comfortable conditions it creates in the theatre is shown by the increase in box receipts wherever installed.

Dependable

Hundreds of Supreme Cooling Systems in every part of the country are proving their dependability by responding immediately to the call for comfort by patrons. A Supreme Cooling System changes the entire volume of air in the theatre from 20 to 40 times per hour, and develops a refreshing breeze on the hottest night. Simple in construction, rugged in structure, positive in action.

Positive Speed Control

The 1929 Supreme Cooling System is regulated to meet weather conditions by a mere turn of an electric switch. No variable speed pulleys or complicated oil switches to reckon with. It is by far the greatest step forward in speed control for cooling systems.

Quiet in Operation

The 1929 Supreme Cooling System has been tested with Talking Pictures, and has been found not to interfere with sound. It is almost silent in operation even when running at its highest speed.

This latest Supreme Cooling System meets every requirement for Summer Cooling and Ventilation, and gives 100% cooling results. Hundreds of Supreme Systems are in daily use, and this 1929 Model with added refinements and improvements is the greatest Supreme System ever built. It is just as unsurpassed in performance as in dollar value.

Send for catalog and complete information about it. Don't buy your cooling system until you get the facts about this new improved Supreme Cooling System, and the moderate cost and easy monthly payment plan.

Poor Reproduction of Sound Films marks any House as Behind the Times

YOU cannot offer sound films with any hope of success unless the acoustics of your theatre are suitable. You might just as well go back to the "one-minute-to-change-reels" days. The public enjoys sound films that are well reproduced but no such film can be well reproduced if the sound bounds and reverberates around the auditorium as it does in many cases.

-Your audiences may have been partly unaware of poor acoustics when they heard only an orchestra or an organ. But now it is different. Unless you offer sound films properly your audiences will not be as large as you would like. Often they do not know what is wrong themselves. But they stay away.

Everywhere theatre owners are finding that poor acoustics are reflected in the box office, that sound films must be perfectly reproduced. This good reproduction is possible only when acoustics are good.

Authorities on Auditorium Design

Johns-Manville Acoustical Engineers as a result of years of success in this field, are the world authorities on acoustics for every type of auditorium. The Johns-Manville Method of Sound Control does not require any changes in your plans for decorations, or any revision of the architectural scheme. It is equally applicable and successful in new or old auditoriums. And by its use in many theatres the J-M system has conclusively been proved an entire success. Without any obligation you can discuss your acoustical problems with a J-M Acoustical Engineer.

Why they play to Full Houses

They put on good attractions? ... yes, we grant that.

But continuing to draw large houses is more of a matter than just reputation for good shows. The public must be constantly reminded of that fact by dominating display of the theatre’s name and location. This, for these theatres, is accomplished quite as vividly by day as well as by night—for Flexlume theatre electrics are designed and erected to be as outstandingly prominent and clearly legible against a background of daylight as of darkness.

Unique displays either in the flaming red of electric-tubes, spectacular exposed lamp, colorful glass letter designs or combinations of these illuminations can be planned for you by Flexlume, the largest and most widely experienced electric sign organization in the world. Write us to send one of your specialists (offices in all principal cities) to confer and submit, without obligation, color sketch of an electric to strongly identify your theatre. Select Dimmers Like You Choose Pictures

WHEN you select a picture you rely upon the box-office pulling power of its "star"—based upon your own past experience and that of other showmen with pictures in which the same actor appeared.

In choosing Dimmers you have the same reliable guide—the experience of leading showmen everywhere. For C-H Simplicity Dimmers have been preferred by experienced showmen since the beginning of motion pictures... preferred because of the velvet-smooth control of lighting effects assured... because of electrical and mechanical excellence which guarantee low maintenance... and because C-H Simplicity Dimmers are easily adaptable to future needs.

Any theater, regardless of seating capacity or decorative scheme, can have these and the other advantages by installing C-H Simplicity Dimmers. Ask your electrical contractor or architect how easily this improvement can be made. And also be sure to get complete details by writing for the C-H booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

The beautiful Uptown Theater, Chicago, Illinois, like so many fine theaters operated by experienced showmen, is equipped with C-H Simplicity Lighting Dimmers. Balaban & Katz are the owners and C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp were the architects.

THE SHOW GOES ON

in spite of power failure

No sudden darkness ... confusion ... refunds in the theatre protected with reliable Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries

THE show must go on ... always! Sudden darkness ... stopping the show ... could cost money or result in confusion and loss of good will. And the theatre lives on good will.

This does not happen when Exide Emergency Lighting Batteries guard the house. Should normal power fail, current for lights and projector is furnished by the Exide Battery ... instantly and automatically. The show goes on for two hours if necessary.

These batteries are available in sizes to suit your needs and budget. Your present staff can readily care for them.

A letter will bring an Exide representative, promptly, from one of our 17 branches. This entails no obligation, but you will be completely posted on lighting protection. Write today.

THE FILM GUILD CINEMA
An Experiment in Theatre Design

Important among the features of the Film Art Guild's new theatre in New York is the "screenoscope," designed by Frederick Kiesler of Vienna. In 1918 Kiesler began his plans for an "ideal motion picture theatre." It was Kiesler who designed the Film Art Cinema.

By DOUGLAS FOX

into a cathedral by means of this side wall lighting. If "Jeanne D'Arc" were being played, the whole auditorium could be bathed in flames during the scene in which the heroine is burned at the stake by her British captors.

There are 35 projection holes to facilitate this process, which is said to be uniquely adapted to imbue the audience with the mood of the picture.

The theatre, including the screenoscope, was designed by Frederick Kiesler, the Austrian architect, and was constructed at a cost of $420,000. The mechanics of the screenoscope, in conjunction with those of the ring, are held in secret by Kiesler, who had to create many inventions in order to properly present his ideas of what a cinema should be.

There is a process which overcomes the problem of projecting on black. The projectors which do this work—they were designed by the architect—were made by the National Theatre Supply Company.

It is the aim of the theatre, which is under the direction of Symon Gould, to bring before a public not otherwise attracted to motion pictures, what is best in cinema art. Thus it is pointed out, patronage is not taken from the so-called popular theatres.

In the main booth are three Peerless projectors and a big Brinkert. They were furnished by the National Theatre Supply Company, and together with the side wall machines, cost $9,000. There is a 12-lever dimmer system, and all mechanical processes are controlled from the main booth. Not all the wiring has yet been installed, so the mechanism of the screenoscope lens, which was made by Peter Clark, is now worked on.

The W. W. Kimball Orchestral Organ was specially made and toned for the Film Guild Cinema. It is hidden from the audience by a fan near the proscenium on the right of the auditorium. Opposite it, the orchestra, at present a quartet, is concealed in a similar manner. The orchestra is played only through the main feature, and there is no newsread.

The organ furnishes other accompaniments. There are light pauses, growing from blue to red to green to amber and then reversing between presentations, so that the audience shall not be taken too abruptly from the mood of one picture to that of another.

The seats, also designed by Kiesler, are in blue and silver leather, low-slung, comfortably upholstered and they have wooden arm rests. They were made by the Heywood-Wakefield Company. A black carpet which covers the entire auditorium floor, was specially woven by the Mohawk Mills and cost $5,000. It was laid by the Aetna Carpet Company.

All woodwork was done by the Architectural Woodcraft Company, and Monel Metal was used on all fixtures, doors and lighting, by the Metal Craftsmen Company under the direction of Theodore Shapiro.

The modernistic chairs and tables of the lounge and mezzanine lounge (where coffee, tea and cigarettes are served)
The lobby and vestibule are 32 feet long and silver doors of the latter have great sunken brass handles. They appear like the doors of safes—it is with surprise that patrons find that they swing open easily.

In the lobby there is a traffic stripe leading up to the ticket seller’s booth, where from a circle in the center of a silver disc on a red wall, the vender deals with the patrons through a semicircular office directly below the opening for his face.

A narrow stairway on the left of the lounge as one enters from the lobby, leads to the mezzanine lounge, rest rooms and projection booths. The make-up room, as the retiring place for women is called, is done in mauve and silver. Shelves around the walls accommodate lipstick, powder and other feminine accessories. The lighting as throughout the theatre, is indirect. There is not a bulb to be seen in the whole building.

The typhoon heating and cooling plant is located on the roof of the three-story building. The basement, which is 38 feet wide and 140 feet long, is being turned into a dance floor and restaurant, and plans are under way to sell patrons two dollar combination tickets which will entitle them to a meal and dancing and then to a cinema performance later, so that they can spend the whole evening, from 7 o’clock until midnight, in the building.

The building belongs to the 52 West Eighth Street Corporation and has been leased by the Film Art Guild for 21 years. The front of it not touched up by the vestibule, is leased for shops, and above them, offices. The roof of the auditorium, externally, is peaked and sloping. But from the building line to the connecting wall between lounge and auditorium, the structure rises for three stories to a flat roof.

A few words about Frederick Kiesler, the architect, will not be out of place. Kiesler, an Austrian about 40 years old, began his research on an ideal film theatre in 1918. In four years he realized his conception for the screenoscope in the Kurfurstendamm theatre in Berlin. The next year, in the European staging of “Emperor Jones,” he took his first step toward creating the tunnel-shaped auditorium. In 1924, for the Music Festival of Vienna, he achieved transformable walls through light and mechanics. Since then his progress has been rapid. One of his minor accomplishments, which brought him considerable notice, was his design and execution of the Saks Fifth Avenue windows in New York.

The three functional parts of his cinema, as he explains them, are the projectoscope, the screenoscope and the seating plan. The projectoscope he calls “a gallery of light stations encircling the auditorium and sending rays in all directions.” The screenoscope, which embraces the auditorium, he calls “a device for the main screen with three auxiliary screens spanning the auditorium.”

In the office of his organization, The Decithe Company, he explained for better theatres some of his ideas on projection and acoustics. “The whole idea,” he said, “is to get the utmost out of projection, to increase the effects with the minimum of expense. We want to better the presentation and to interest the audience as much as possible. It is not just a modernistic scheme, but from the highest point of view, it is both practical and functional. It is practical not only functionally but also psychologically, from the point of view of the audience.

“Flying and lighting are the greatest inventions of our century. Until today there has been no house especially built for projection. All theatres in design have been old theatre with new lighting. It is only reasonable that in architecture we keep pace with what we have achieved in light mechanics.

“And the same thing applies to acoustics. All your sound theatres are not made to mechanical sound. They may be good for a actual orchestra, but they do not often function properly for the sharper quality of mechanical sound.

“What may be good for natural music often unfit for that of the mechanical variety but what is smooth and controlled for mechanical music must needs be perfect for the acoustics of nature.

“So the film Guild Cinema has been especially constructed with acoustics in mind a much as projection. And although mechanical sound has not yet been installed, it doubt less will in the future. In this, the front row of the seats, the selection of materials, the placing of the projection holes and space be hind the walls, and the three linings of the walls themselves, have played a very important part. But the acoustics in that building were almost perfect before the carpet had been laid or the seats put in. Now you can speak in a natural voice at the prosenium and be perfectly heard in the rear row.”

Kiesler has plans along a similar line for 25 theatres and motion picture houses ranging in size from a seating capacity of 200 to one of 10,000. In these, arrangements have been made for the production of Vaudeville and regular musical shows. He expects to manufacture the screenoscope and sell it to theatres all over the country.

Now let us go back to Symon Gould, under whose direction the Film Guild Cinema is run. The founder of the Little Film Theatre movement in America, he was born on the lower East Side of New York in 1895. In the course of his existence he has been a newspaperman, an editor, a “bohohemian,” a government clerk, a hotel manager, a lecturer, a debate promoter, exponent of the Cone craze and a dauber in the art of the motion picture. In Berlin he saw the film Three

DIAGRAMMATIC PERSPECTIVE OF THE FILM GUILD CINEMA

Architecture and the Motion Picture

In Mr. Louis Magaziner's article on the new Stanley house in Philadelphia, the Uptown, a statement appears that is very familiar. Mr. Magaziner, who is one of the designers of the Uptown, was entirely original in his thought, we assume—and it is of no importance whether he was. The statement interests us because it comes from one of the nation's most eminent architects, and because it has been in the pages of Better Theatres before.

"The motion picture theatre," states Mr. Magaziner, "from its very nature, should be the most modern of all buildings. . . ."

He means by the phrase, "from its very nature," that the motion picture itself is one of the most modern of all phenomena. It is as modern as the airplane—as modern as radio, of which it is now a part. The motion picture is as exclusively of our revolutionary present as we are ourselves. As we think and play and work and live differently from all the people who preceded us on this planet, so does the motion picture function among the arts as no previous art could. This is a machine age, and the motion picture is a machine art. Our thoughts, our culture and the motion picture spring from the same tremendous changes in all life which this industry-scientific age has wrought. Mr. Magaziner explains this clearly.

"We have at our command," he states, "materials for construction and tools that were unknown in earlier periods. Why not use them to the fullest of their possibilities? We have steel and machines to fashion it. This must enter vitally into our thoughts."

This does not mean, however, that architecture should be expected to develop a standard manner, a fixed style of design to interpret this modern life. There is always a tendency to strive toward a formula as soon as a new conception arrives in any field of thought. In the arts at present has arisen a manner quite appropriately called modernism. Growth and betterment are only threatened in those circles which would capitalize the word—or make a dogma of it under some such fetishistic name as Art Moderne.

In this issue alone are represented three motion picture theatres the design of which is definitely modernistic. But one is vastly different from the other two—and there can be many more designs just as different from each of these three. The artist in architecture will not decide of a sud-
A NEW THEATRE IN THE MODERN MOTIF

The Uptown, recently opened in Philadelphia, presents an interesting adaptation of modernistic design to the theatre. This motif, born of life today, has sometimes been called too severe—too harsh. Of that the Uptown is a complete refutation. The architects were Magaziner, Eberhard & Harris of Philadelphia.

MACHINE AGE BEAUTY

Beauty is plastic, taking cast from the living age in which it is reared. In the new Uptown theater in Philadelphia our age—But let one of the architects tell the story

By LOUIS MAGAZINER
Member of Magaziner, Eberhard & Harris

No serious discussion of the trend in modern design may be had without first accepting generally the forces that, singly and united, influence the thoughts of the creative arts consciously and subconsciously. We see ourselves emerging from the mist and confusion, from the lack of comprehension and interpretation of its own meritorious accomplishments and the prevailing false notions which attended the closing years of the 19th Century.

Political and social changes, the recognition of industrialism, the results of inventive genius, scientific discoveries, the broadening of views through increased travel, all have given impetus to new life and have become articulate in our arts. The wealth of our country has permitted the erection of costly buildings for the service of our communities. Tactfully we recognize that the old order has changed, that the palace of autocracy is the playhouse of democracy. Where royalty deemed it as its own particularly ordained right to revel in the created beauty of its artists and craftsmen, democracy is now privileged to enjoy such creations for its hours of leisure.

The motion picture theatre, from its very nature, should be the most modern of all buildings, supplying a daily need to hundreds of thousands, keeping in touch with all current happenings, sensitive and alive to all new developments; it in itself should be conceived and executed in the best manner and taste of today.

It is a truism that architecture reflects the history of its times and in its best phases is a development speaking in definite form of the thoughts, dreams, aspirations and accomplishment of its generation. Sensing this the owners and architects naturally tended toward the style of the 18th century as answering in the most suitable manner the architectural expression of the modern theater; a conviction the old order has changed.

The present mode speaks to us of seeking restless movement. Through many generations we were laxly satisfied to jog safely along in the created styles of the past, to do this in the Italian Renaissance that in the Spanish; again to copy the art of the great French periods to our aid, to seek refuge in the Tudor, the Georgian, the Colonial, etc.

Independent thinkers dissatisfied with clothing the versatile spirit of the present in the trite garb of the past rebelled. They have been steadily hewing a new way, and attracting increasing numbers of disciples as their following until the movement has taken an irresistible force, surging forward with growing momentum and with an appeal convincing as it is enchanting.

This we know must undoubtedly be so, because of honest purpose of the new style and the directness of its method.

We have at our command materials for construction and tools hitherto unknown in earlier periods. Why not use them to the fullest of their possibilities? We have seen and may proceed to fashion it. This must enter vitally into our thoughts. We have new methods of using concrete, steel and glass, and many of the plastic materials; machines for molding all these to our designs to create new forms—no longer to apologize for the powers and potentialities of the machine, but frankly to accept and recognize and develop the beauty of its products. Devices for heating, cooling, lighting and sound distribution are all a service and these must take their proper place and influence our design.

Above all we are in an age and atmosphere of space an nihilating movement. We dart along our smooth highways and through our waterways. We fly across land and sea. Sound and light waves are directed by us to where we will.

And so in myriad ways we are approaching an elusive, ever beckoning fourth dimension and infinity.

And fittingly then a building devised for the display of the marvelous inventions of our recent years, should be conceived in the spirit that will... express the dynamics of the time. The lines of the structure must be lithe, direct and swift, color reserved and metallic, craftsmanship sure and unaburred, detail graceful and exquisite, mechanically complete and coherent and functioning in rhythmic cadence.

To bring this into being we must gather together the best talent, artist craftsmen of all trades — masons, in cementers, workers in steel and iron, in marbles and bronzes, molders of plaster and glass, frescoers and painters, makers of furniture, weavers of rugs and tapestries. All these it is necessary to find and direct, to impress with the one all absorbing thought, light airy movement and direct line. To swing them into unison, their labors inspired with the visions of harmonious creation, working expressively and in sympathy, united in building a symphony of form, rhythm and color.

Added to all this there is the charm of the enchanting and elusive magic of modern lighting. No longer satisfied with the empiric formulae for lighting, the art of the present has fastened itself with making light to flow where subtle and beautiful effects will be called forth in shaded and reflecting surfaces. New glass with delicate facets fashioned by cutting and carving, etching and sanding, give a mysterious appeal to the rays which they guide and direct.

With such seriousness of purpose, the arts and crafts which are now being nurtured and developed on a new scale, envelop the workers and must make a deep and holy impress on all who are fortunate enough to have part in their fresh unfolding.

There has been much earnest thought given to the design and detail of the Uptown. In describing it we will show points of interest peculiar to the new mode and design and the new methods of using materials representative of this modern trend.

On entering the lobby, our first interest is the iron work designed and detailed by the architects and also inspired by the beautiful work of Brand of Paris. It was executed by d’Ancona.

In the foyer a fresco suggested by the recent work of Gaetan Jeannin and composed by Vollmar Clarke depicts this interesting decoration of this entresol. The foyer and lobby ceiling lights are modern German in treatment.

Entering the first promenade the points of interest are many. The open well is outlined in Brescian black gold Rosso marble, the colors well brought out by the introduction of Bologna black and softened by bands of the Escalite Black. The large iron gates are delicate modern wrought iron panels, also executed by the d’Ancona in the spirit of Raymond Subes. The staircases are lit with the direction of Mr. Flood of Voigt Company. The lustre of the glass used gives the feeling of freshness in conception and design.

Ascending the stairways which flank either side of the promenade to the mezzanine promenade, we find at the landings panels of Jezzo work designed and beautifully executed by Eastman Brothers of New York. Lighting of the stairway is by means of mirrored recesses in the angles of landings. Black and silver pedestals support modern bronzes.

Giving off from the promenade are the various retiring rooms. The reading room in the center is done in lemon yellow, silver and black. A modern fireplace forms the center feature, with carving by Schaffer, a panel in Jezzo, by Nat Eastman, and all intensified by the glazed black leather divans and easy chairs. The table is in Macassar. The triangular mirrors at each side give the reflecting surfaces.

The women’s rest room is in soft greens and silver. The top of the dressing table is carved glass illuminated from below, and the side brackets are mounted on a mirrored wall.

Stained glass windows in the auditorium. The left allegory depicts this industrial age with stenciled border. The murals are done in warm tangerine red and soft brown. The promenade decoration by Cahen, of New York, is in soft shades of silver and gold, with ceiling panels in rose tinted fluted columns. The recessed vitrines displaying objets d’art lend brilliancy to the room.

Leading from the promenade by broad, generous stairs, one reaches the lobby, and is afforded a striking view of the auditorium. On its lateral walls are three bays formed by two reeded columns in black and gold, crowned by fluted capitals, the cornice and pediment of stone, in the modern spirit, extend full height of auditorium.

For the glass beautifully conceived and painted by the Eastman Studios, enclose recesses in side walls. The ceiling and light chandelier represents a central orb radiating in myriad rays of silver and gold delineated by the varied hue lighting. The proscenium arch, mainly featured by the two fountain organ grilles with ceiling mural by Eastman, is garnished by a valance and torch Anti in glass, with hidden lighting in color.

A theme of interest forms the inspiration of the glass panels and mural, to quote the author—"The four wall windows will depict the passage of a human being (man and woman) through the ages of civilization. Beginning with the Garden of Eden through the Babylonian period, into the Middle Ages, and into the early Renaissance, then to our present day and finally their arrival into the age of the New World of modern skyscrapers, aeroplanes, radios and big business, elimination of time and space, romanticism of the future.

"For the proscenium mural, the subject is ‘Lo! The New Day Has Come.’ The heroic figure of woman is the symbol of the new progress of our dynamic civilization. She is being worshiped by artisans and craftsmen, who have at last found the true course for the expression of their art. On the old traditions of the royal kings and queens, against the glittering fountains and gardens of Versailles; grimly retiring into the shadowy court, giving way on the left to the new youth, personifying the new tendencies, traditions and thoughts in the modern arts, literature and architecture, coming in a joyful dance to live in their world.

The background is the future world dynamically

THE UNIFORM STYLE NETOCO HAS ADOPTED

They're part of a new service system in over 40 theatres

A SEMI-MILITARY uniform, plus a semi-military carriage in the wearer, is the basis of the service plan which Samuel Pinanski, president of the New England Theatres Operating Corporation, has now put into effect in the more than forty motion picture houses which comprise the Netoco chain.

The 400 members of the uniformed staff, from chief usher to girl cashier and man stationed on the sidewalk, are picked with care and are taken, if possible, from high school students living in the immediate neighborhood of the various theatres.

This, according to Pinanski, who even designed the uniforms, gives a personal touch to the service. As new theatres have been taken over the system has been installed under the supervision of William Savitz, one of the home office executives.

Each week the chief ushers are called to a meeting where particular problems are discussed. On return to their theatres these ushers pass along to the rank and file whatever information they may have gleaned.
PROJECTION COMES FIRST!

Mr. Theatre Builder, Tell That to Mr. Architect

The newly organized Projection Advisory Council declares that the motion picture industry is paying for its projection room blunders. Why and how the council is striving to correct this is told by M. D. O'Brien and—

By HARRY E. HOLQUIST

The wide influence which the Projection Advisory Council is destined to wield in the promotion of a better understanding and appreciation of the art and science of projection is clearly indicated in the progressive work of this new organization during the first few weeks of its existence. Projection abuses and misuses, amenable to treatment by the industry for many years, will, under the plans of the Projection Advisory Council, be met and dealt with by men who have been influential in all sections of the country. That an organized effort such as the Projection Advisory Council is putting forth will be productive of much good, seems a foregone conclusion. An example of the work which the Council has undertaken is indicated in a report of M. D. O'Brien, chairman of the committee on projection room planning, in which he attacks methods widely current in the planning and operation of theatres as regards projection. Declares O'Brien:

"The motion picture industry is paying and will continue to pay for many years on the failure of architects, owners and builders to realize that the time to consider projection room designing is when the plans are on paper and not when the building is almost finished. It is far easier to consider projection room requirements on the plans than to have mistakes made which cannot be rectified, or correct errors by extensive alterations. The history of errors of omission and commission in the planning of projection rooms is a long and interesting one and many specific instances could be given of the serious blunders that have been made. The blunders range from the failure to build any projection room at all, so that the opening of the theatre had to be held up for a considerable period, down through the thousands of more or less serious errors which handicap projection.

"Yet this condition exists through the country today. Projection rooms are put in as more or less an afterthought. They are placed in a part of the house most agreeable to other considerations whether it be the general style of interior architecture which cannot be marred under any conditions or what not.

"But patrons do not come to a theatre to feast their eyes exclusively on the beauty of a house's interior. They come to see a picture—a good picture. And they cannot see such with imperfect projection. And there cannot be perfect projection, if the projectors must do all but walk around corners to get the images on the screen.

"Motion picture theatre architects have a duty that is greater than the mere designing of edifices that are pleasing to the eye. Their task is to design a structure in which motion pictures may be seen to the greatest advantage—which means nothing more than that it must be possible to project films at the greatest advantage.

"If it is not a part of the equipment of such architects to know where and how to place such projection rooms, then it should behoove them to consult some competent projection engineer who is fortified with the necessary knowledge. In a word, the cinema house should be built around the projection appointments, rather than the latter's being built into the theatre.

"Those who erect theatres are in the key position. It is they who may insist not only that their houses have the best projection equipment obtainable, but that, in addition, this best equipment be provided at that place in the house most suited to maximum results. Mr. Theatre Builder, tell that to Mr. Architect:

"Do not lose sight of the fact that the whole show in many instances emanates from the projection room. The orchestra and organ are mere adjuncts and the mural decorations, the wonderful lighting effects, the gold and blue lobby, etc., are only the 'frames' to set off the picture to better advantage.

"The theatre owner is a retailer of a highly popular form of public entertainment which must go through various chemical processes before it becomes the merchandise for which the public pays. The raw stock is made in Rochester, finished in Hollywood and, by means of the projection, carbons and lens is manufactured into the product which the public consumes. Up to this point the money spent in frozen capital, the material valueless. The theatre is the building in which the product is sold and nothing should be overlooked to get the customer into the store and make him as comfortable as possible. But the owner must fully realize the vital importance of that little 'factory' he is operating away up in the back of his theatre.

"If the equipment, if the man in charge, if the facilities or the materials used are lacking the quality of the product will suffer. No good merchant need be told that it is his duty and to his lasting benefit to do everything to maintain the quality of the merchandise he sells to the public. Upon success of the theatre owner every department of this industry depends.

"Not so long ago, the projection room in the motion picture theatre consisted of the housing around the projectors, sufficiently large for two 'man and a man to operate them. Its sole purpose apparently was to conceal the machines or machine which was merely tolerated as a necessary evil. We all

WHILE the atmospheric theatre has become fairly familiar to the American theatregoing public, especially in the larger cities, Boston up to the present time has lacked a theatre of this design. Now it has the Seville in East Boston, erected by the New England Theatres Operating Corporation, commonly referred to as Netoco. The new Seville theatre at Central Square in East Boston, which opened its doors to the public February 17, is the first atmospheric theatre in Greater Boston. As its name denotes, the Seville is Spanish in architecture and appointments. Erected at an approximate cost of $1,000,000, the Netoco Seville possesses dignity skillfully blended with striking originality in every line and shadow.

An exhaustive search of books on Spanish architecture was conducted by Samuel Pinanski, Netoco’s president aided by his staff of technical experts, before the plans for the Seville were drawn up. Every line, and every detail of decoration is therefore authentic. Personal visitations to atmospheric theatres all over the country were also conducted to note all modern improvements that could be incorporated into the Seville plans.

A marquee 34 feet long overhanging the sidewalk, announces in electric lights the current attractions. The outside lobby is spacious, with a large ticket booth and also an advance ticket sales parlor. A small vestibule stands between the lobby and the Grand Foyer, which is 88 feet long and 24 feet wide. The foyer, which is of almost severe simplicity, is relieved by characteristic decorative touches. The floor is of tiles, and the walls of stucco, done according to the predominating Spanish note. Wall lights are spaced so as to give soft, clear illumination and have as their bases, copies of Spanish family shields. Three loggias, equipped with antique Spanish benches, open off the foyer. One of these loggias contains a fireplace. Three large vomitories lead from the foyer to the stadium, as well as an emergency exit to Border Street.

The auditorium is 134 feet long and 88 feet wide. Boxes, loges and balcony were omitted. The Seville is of the stadium type. The seats number 1,725 and are upholstered in red Jacquard velour. The floor gradually elevates toward the back of the house into the stadium.

The walls represent various types of Spanish homes, tastefully juxtaposed so that they blend into another to form a continuous panorama. In this respect, the architect made judicious use of pillars, wrought iron balconies and various types of Spanish lanterns. On the walls are painted coats of arms of the Spanish nobility. This interior is a pleasing harmony of architecture, color, luxurious hangings and furnishings, intended not so much to impress the patron as to prepare him for the pleasure of the show.

Six exits, leading from the auditorium, three to Border Street, and three to Meridian Street, assure quick evacuation of the house without confusion.

THE VARIATION IN THE SEVILLE WALL DESIGNS

Above are sketches indicating the basic lines of the atmospheric designs of the auditorium in Netoco's Seville theatre, showing the difference between the left and right walls, as is usual in atmospheric theatres. The right wall has been traced in its proper direction, but the left wall has been reversed to make comparison of proportion and contrast of treatment simpler.
When CAN YOU REST From Competing

Generally speaking, a contract of a single theatre, may be held valid, whereas a contract restricting the seller of a business from engaging in a similar business "for any and all time" in the state of Massachusetts is invalid, unless it is a direct restraint of trade, but also the effect of its validity would be to drive out of the state the seller of stable business. The court said:

"Whatever may be the extent of the state, the monopoly restricts the citizen from pursuing his business, unless he transfers his domicile and his allegiance to some other state or country. Its tendency is to drive business and citizens who are skilled in business from this to other states. If one is not at liberty to carry on his business here, but is at liberty to do so elsewhere, he will likely time enter into the kind of business being conducted or carried on by said purchaser in Hamilton county, state of Ohio, or at any place within such distance of said county as will interfere with said business, whether carried on by said seller, directly or indirectly; said seller agrees that he will not at any time within 35 years from the date of this agreement enter into nor be concerned directly or indirectly in the kind of business which has heretofore or now been conducted or carried on by the said firm, or any branch thereof, within the state of Ohio."

In this case the part of the contract relating to Hamilton county was held valid, whereas the restrictions including the state of Ohio was held void.

Therefore, it is quite apparent that although an unreasonable portion of a contract may be invalid, a clause in the same contract may be valid if the restrictions referring to the duration of time or the area of the territory are reasonable.

Moreover, when a contract is formulated so that the restrictions are reasonable and therefore valid, the courts will not permit the seller of a theatre to avoid liability on more technicality or obscurity.

The higher court thoroughly reviewed an unusual phase of this question in the very recent case of Clay v. Richardson (290 S. W. 235). The facts are that W. T. Clay and B. T. Sanders owned and operated a local theatre and sold the same to John Richardson for $10,500. Clay and Sanders agreed in writing not to enter into a competing business in the same town. The contracts of sale provided:

"We further agree, in consideration of the premises, that we, nor either of us, will never again enter into or engage in the theatre or moving picture business in Olney, Texas."

However, at the time the business was sold, Clay owned a lot in Olney, Tex., upon which he later built a building and fully equipped it with theatre equipment. He rented the building and its equipment to a man named L. K. Bray, who thereafter operated a com-

SOUND IN THE THEATRE

A THEATRE REPRODUCER
Light, No Thicker Than Your Hand

About five years ago a young school teacher had the idea you could make a loud speaker employing the condenser principle. He was right. And the result is of interest to the sound picture theatre

By GEORGE SCHUTZ

If you had a reproducer for your sound pictures which was only as thick as your hand, you wouldn't spend much time figuring where to place it. You'd put it at your screen, so that you could pull your sound screen up into the grid as easily as you could a silent one. And if you had no stage, you wouldn't need any more room behind your sound screen than you had for your silent one.

It wasn't sound pictures that Conlin Kyle was thinking about, however. Kyle, a 36-year-old California school teacher, was thinking about radio in the home when he began working on a new type of reproducer. There had originally been the air-column reproducer. Then the dynamic type came into prominence. Kyle's was to employ the static principle. For five years he worked on his idea. The idea was adopted by the industry.

The Kyle condenser-type reproducer is still in the laboratory. There may yet be considerable work to be done on it, I don't know. The Newcombe-Hawley Company of St. Charles, Ill., with which Kyle became associated for the development of his invention, is close-mouthed about the present models. No matter how I heard this reproducer, I didn't immediately it was apparent that here was a speaker eminently adapted to the requirements of a theatre.

A complete explanation of the condenser-type reproducer leads one into technicalities intended only for the consumption of radio engineers. For the information of the exhibitor, it may be said that the Kyle reproducer employs the electrical principle of the condenser—two plates which become charged, repelling or attracting each other as the charge is respectively positive or negative. Between these two plates is the diaphragm which vibrates, according to the charge on the plates, thus causing the sound-waves. This diaphragm, acting as a dielectric, is the basic Kyle invention—it is made of a rubberized substance called Kyleite.

As thick as your hand, made in small sections which can be placed together to accommodate any amount of volume, weighing but little, the Kyle reproducer has a wide and constant range of tone and is capable of reproducing both music and the voice with remarkable clarity. Particularly well adapted to the reproduction of the speaking voice does this new type of speaker seem.

To describe it physically, the Kyle reproducer appears as an aluminum tray, measuring about 8 by 12 inches, and being made of an aluminum alloy, it is very light. This tray has many rows of narrow rectangular slits, forming a sort of gridiron, and as one of the illustrations shows, the inner surface of this tray is uneven, forming regular depressions and elevations. The slits are for the passage of air, so that the diaphragm is not impeded in its free movement. It is on the elevations that the Kyle diaphragm rests. The tray, as I've called it for descriptive purposes, acts as one plate of the condenser; the other plate is formed by a tissue-thin layer of gold leaf "glued" on to the Kyleite. A glance at the illustrations will make the appearance of this condenser more clear.

The condenser is given a charge of low-current, high-voltage electricity, which originally (and to some extent constantly) is provided by a polarizer. The latter consists of a small transformer capable of 450 volts, a blocking condenser and a rectifier tube such as is used in an ordinary radio set. The polarizer is intended to make the unit adaptable to any standard radio receiver, and consequently, to any type of theatre amplification.

In adapting the Kyle reproducer to the theatre, one could mount enough of these grids to make a reproducing area of, say, four by eight feet. This area is great enough for a theatre having 1,000 to 2,000 seats—perhaps.

The "grid," sound medium of the Kyle condenser-type reproducer. At left is shown the forward side, on which gold leaf forms a plate. The other plate is the aluminum alloy gridiron shown in the photograph of the rear side.

"KERSTEN'S" SUPREME FOR EVERY PURPOSE

No. 5401—For the medium sized theatre. An exponential dynamic horn that brings the voice of the speaker or the music to every ear with vivid naturalism. Height, 42 in.; Depth, 33 in.; Width, 41 in.; 15 foot air passage. Great reproduction, price $55.00. (Pictured especially for Kersten Dynamic Exponential Unit No. K39.)

The skill, genius and research of Kersten Radio Engineers has resulted in the development of the world's finest and most effective reproductions of voice and music. Regardless of the size of house, you will find nothing to compare with Kersten equipment. It offers everything that you have sought in the way of perfect reception and reproduction. More than this, Kersten equipment is built for long and satisfactory service. It is the ultimate in theatrical satisfaction.

Two other Kersten models very popular for theatre use are described below:

No. 820—Kersten Dynamic built to handle even the greatest capacity. Brings out the most minute detail of total quality. So real that it rivals the original production.

No. K5—Kersten Unit especially built for large theatres and public address systems. Positively marvelous in power and reality of total reproduction.

KINOTONE

The most complete synchronizer on the market.
Two volume controls—two push buttons—master switches—nationally known parts. Kinotone has ample record space, allows full vision ahead, simple to operate. Installation is easy—only eight well marked connections to make.
The tone quality of Kinotone is unsurpassed, say those who have heard it. We offer most for your money—our price is only $324.50.

Send us dimensions of your theatre. Our engineers will do the rest. Write or wire for complete details.

CABINET THAT HELPS OPERATOR

A CABINET which has the earmarks of being very handy for use with non-synchronous devices has been conceived by Lester L. Nichols of Peterboro, N. H. Nichols operates a theatre there and having bought a non-synchronous machine, set out to devise some means of keeping his records so that the operator could most conveniently select them while the picture was going on.

In this respect, Nichols states that the cabinet works out very well, he having found that when he played pictures requiring the use of the same record many times, his cabinet made certainty of selection easy.

In this theatre, he has the cabinet placed above the device—not against it, but with an aperture between it and the device for the operator to look through at the screen. The records, however, are only two or three inches above the head of the operator and can therefore be easily reached.

Your Picture House!

A Metropolitan type of sight-sound program never before available to the average moving picture theatre

THREE great institutions interested in solving the cueing problems of the theater possessing non-synchronizing sound equipment join in and are responsible for a great new service which is giving the smallest outlying theater the same intelligent cueing and the same masterly thematic programs heretofore restricted to the greatest picture palaces.

The service includes a special cue sheet for every production and a record library containing all of the records listed in the cue sheets. These include many accompaniment-records especially written for this service and recorded by one of America's greatest symphony orchestras. Also available at slight extra cost, special sound records—shrills, groans, toots, whistles, bells, crashes, etc.—made by a new process which makes it easier to cue the sound to the action.

The service was inaugurated and is endorsed by Cameo Music Service Corporation; makers of Thematic Music Cue Sheets; The Phototone Co. and the Gennett Record Division of the Starr Piano Co.

A whole year’s cuing—complete with thematic records—only $228.00. Less than year service, if desired. Mail the coupon for full details.

SOUND SERVICE

In this column published regularly as a feature of the Sound Department of "Better Theatres," are presented answers prepared by electrical and synchronization engineers, to problems in the installation, operation and maintenance of sound equipment in theatres.

Q.—What are the principal differences, advantages and disadvantages of the large and small cone dynamic speakers?

A.—In design and construction the two are very similar. The large cone type has a cone which is made of a heavier material and is formed more securely to the moving coil. In general the large ones are more "sensitive" or efficient, due to the use of more power in the field.

The advantage of the large type lies in its ability to carry large powers continuously. The greatest movement of the cone takes place on low frequency notes. When the bass reproducing power is heavy, the cone movement or excursions is limited by the cone supporting material, resulting in deterioration of the cone and supporting material. The cone movement varies inversely with the cone area; that is, the large cone moves about half the distance of the small one to produce the same sound pressure. The larger cone, therefore, permits heavy bass reproduction without cone "fatigue."

The advantage of the small cone type lies in its better high frequency reproduction, which is important for good speech articulation. (This results from the higher coil and cone unit.) In the case of theatres, its limited carrying capacity is usually not important, because experiments show that after a sufficient number of cones are used to provide uniform sound intensity distribution and uniform reproduction of all frequencies, in the music range, throughout the house, a sufficient number of speakers have been used to keep the input down to the values that a small cone will handle. In the case of amusement parks or dance floors in which the sound intensity per speaker may be much higher, the large type is preferable. Even at low inputs the life of the large type is much better, due to the cone construction, so that where longevity is important this type is also preferable.

Q.—How high should one or more speakers which are intended to carry the orchestra seats be placed above the stage?

A.—In houses that were designed for the drama or for vaudeville use the orchestra seats are usually so arranged that those in the rear seats can hear very satisfactorily any sound source which is about five feet above the stage or corresponding to the sound source from an individual on the stage. In houses that were designed solely for the silent drama a higher source may be necessary or one corresponding roughly to the average height of the screen. The speakers are frequently set directly on the stage as a matter of convenience, and this is undesirable, since the rear seats who have either receive too little sound energy or the high frequencies are largely lost. As the sound wave moves over the audience in the front seats there is not only a loss of the sound, but rapid absorption or attenuation of the high frequencies, resulting in a muffled sound of the speech in the rear seats. The speakers should be placed so that they provide best coverage of the seats about half or two-thirds of the way to the rear of the house.

Q.—I notice a very common tendency among those who monitor sound programs to increase the intensity of the voice in places where the speech is unusually indistinct. This does not seem to make the speech any more understandable. Is there any theoretical basis for it?

A.—The naturalness of probably 75 per cent of the sound installations is spoiled by the high intensity at which the managers insist on running both the musical score and speech. The sensitivity of the ear at different frequencies or notes varies with the intensity so that if a voice is to be natural the intensity must correspond as closely as possible to the original. If either a musical score or a voice were perfectly amplified and operated at several times its normal intensity, the reproduction would seem distorted.

The effect of reverberation in an auditorium or theatre is much more apparent at high intensities, due to the fact that the sound source, which is of higher intensity, persists for a longer time. This results in successive syllables overlapping and in correspondingly poor articulation. The effect is closely analogous to that produced in a piano when the sustain pedal is held down continuously. It is, therefore, very important to use normal and not high intensities.

Q.—Does the location of the ventilating ducts and the direction of the air stream in a theatre have any effect on the sound reproduction?

A.—The idea is prevalent that the sound will carry very much better if the direction of the air movement is from the screen toward the audience. This fallacy probably arose from the fact that no air has passed quite a distance by a wind in a large field. This effect is not due to the wind itself, but to velocity changes, which are not present in a theatre. The average air velocity in a theatre is so small compared with the velocity of the sound wave that negligible difference in its arrival time exists whether the air moves toward or away from the screen.

Q.—The record amplifier in my theatre echoes at times, and in addition there is a heavy hum. This effect is absent when the theatre is full.

A.—Your trouble is probably not in the amplifier. We suspect that a small orchestra playing at the times you have mentioned would likewise produce unsatisfactory results. The remedy is to add sufficient sound-absorbing materials to dampen the echo in your theatre, as the higher frequencies (his) are resonated in an empty house. Of course, a scratch filter should be used with all theatre amplifiers. A Silver-Marshall 278 Needle Scratch Filter is excellent for the purpose. One terminal of this filter is connected to a 0.005 mfd. condenser; the other terminal of the condenser is connected to the pickup lead, as is the remaining terminal of the filter choke.

New Important Bookings

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—The first all-talking pictures of Columbia had their world premieres at the Roxy and Colony theatres within one week. The pictures to play these houses were "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" and "The Younger Generation." Baltimore's Rivoli also has contracted to run these specials as well as Stanley's, Pittsburgh; the Grand, Columbus, and the Lafayette, Buffalo.

CUEING DEVICE PRICED AT $275

A non-synchronous device, designed for small theatres and priced as low as $275, has been developed by the Gates Radio & Supply Company of Quincy, Ill. It consists of a single electric-driven turntable, pick-up, volume control, and the Gates "True-Q" device, and practically the same accessories that are on the Gates "Versatile" model. The amplifying unit is the same on both. In announcing the new model, the company states:

"The turntable equipment is so constructed that quick changes can be made in records, in which the music and "sound" will practically be uninterrupted. At any time that the exhibitor desires to add additional turntable equipment, we can furnish him the duplicate of this particular table with its equipment, less the power plant, for $125. They can therefore have as many turntables as they desire, operated from the same power plant."

"We are also making up what we call the 'Xtra Table,' which we are announcing this month.

"We also have the same class of table equipped with a 33 1/3 RPM turntable, on which we have made a number of tests, and it is very easy for the theatre to run any sound records on them of a musical score, and synchronize with the picture."
HERE’S ONE YOU CAN AFFORD

You’ve been wanting—QUICKLY—a low-priced synchronizing machine that will produce disc sound and talking pictures with perfect results.

We have the machine you’re after! It is the

Chrest Sound System

Here is a machine that places your theatre on a par with any in the country. Designed last September by a veteran exhibitor and operator, perfected by skilled engineers after months of experiment, backed by a large Ohio corporation, the equipment has won the hearty approval of every exhibitor who has heard it demonstrated.

The Chrest synchronizer is strong, simple, guaranteed for years, no parts to wear out, no parts to break, NO “service” charge to the exhibitor.

It is small and compact. IT CAN BE ATTACHED TO ANY PROJECTOR. You won’t have to rebuild your booth for this device.

It is SUPERB IN TONAL QUALITY. It reproduces the voice naturally, perfectly. It adds genuine human warmth to your “all talkie.” It gives the audience the full strength, range, of all synchronized music and sound effects.

It can be installed in YOUR THEATRE BEFORE APRIL 15. We guarantee you a perfect installation, ready for public showing SEVERAL HOURS after installation is started. You won’t miss a single performance.

AND BEST OF ALL—THE PRICE IS RIGHT. The entire system—everything required—is priced at $1500 f. o. b. Dover, Ohio. Terms easy and fair to the smallest exhibitor.

THE CHREST EQUIPMENT IS BEING MANUFACTURED RAPIDLY. Installations have been started. Orders are being received daily. Production in our own factory is growing regularly.

We recognize that numerous devices are being promised, but we are delivering as well as promising. We have not rushed into this clamoring market. We have voluntarily passed up dozens of installations by being cautious and careful. On the other hand, we have devoted months and thousands of dollars to make our machine right.

You will not be dissatisfied. Our first installation has been in constant operation in a local theatre for weeks. The public, the distributors and the producers have approved it.

CUEING PICTURES WITH SCOREDISC

The Scoredisc Service Corporation states that it has had exhibitor inquiries concerning the properties of Scoredisc in the art of talking picture reproduction which show that the majority of the exhibitors seem to have an idea that Scoredisc is a cue sheet service.

"I would like to make clear the intent and purpose of our Scoredisc service so that there may be no doubt in the minds of producers or exhibitor concerning the properties of this service," Arthur J. Abrams, inventor of the Scoredisc and president of the company, writes to BETTER THEATRES.

"Scoredisc is not a cue sheet service. Scoredisc is a mechanical appliance invented to provide an absolutely perfect synchronized sound accompaniment for any feature picture released after August 1, 1926. Scoredisc is made for any type of non-synchronous machine using the record or disc system of sound reproduction.

"An analysis of the word Scoredisc will explain its true meaning; the word 'Score.' in its grammatical definition, means 'to mark' with significant lines or notches any object intended as a record or an account. That, precisely, is the first half of our service.

"The word 'disc,' according to its definition, is a flat round object. Therefore we have Score, the marking with significant line or notches, on Discs, flat round objects. In the case of our service, we take a print of a feature picture, project and re-project, it working out a musical and sound effect score during the screening of the action.

"Next, having determined those musical excerpts and sound effects which will form a proper sound accompaniment for the picture, we select from the thousands of standard records at our disposal, those bearing the precise selections and effects which will be incorporated in the score.

"The following step in the evolution of the Scoredisc is to discover what portion of the records bear the precise music and effects to be used. Again the process of projection is followed, though, this time it is music and sound effects from the records that is broadcast. In this manner we select the exact number of bars of music and the amount of effects to be used.

"Thus far we have screened the picture and selected just what music and sound effects will prove appropriate accompaniment and have selected these records bearing the precise melodies and sound which we will need. Half the work is finished.

"Now we take our disc, a flat round object made of heavy cardboard, place it over the individual records previously selected and score our disc by cutting through to the grooves of the record containing the predetermined melodies and sounds. The 'slots' thus formed in our SCOREDISC represent the portions of the records which will be reproduced.

"Scorediscs come in pairs, marked A and B, one for each turntable of the non-synchronous sound reproducer. On each pair of Scorediscs is contained the automatic score for an entire feature picture sound accompaniment.

"The slots on the Scoredisc which, when placed over the records to be used, permit only the playing of certain portions of the records, are numbered consecutively, 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., corresponding to the consecutive scenes in the picture, starting with the title of the production. Records to be used also are numbered and indicated on the scoredisc.

"So much for the process of manufacture. The method of operation of the Scoredisc is so simple and so fool-proof that any person, without any mechanical knowledge whatever, can work the device perfectly after a half-hour's instruction; and that is placing the time of instruction at the maximum, for it has...

Dear Mr. Smith:

During this era of "Canned Music", Jazz Stage Bands, three-piece so-called Orchestras, etc., it is indeed a pleasure to view a picture accompanied by the beautiful, pure tones of a Kilgen Organ. The Organ is unquestionably the "Soul of the modern Motion Picture Theatre".

The Kilgen Organ has, unquestionably, the purest, fullest tone of any Organ the writer has ever heard, and it lends a distinct individuality to any theatre. Ours has ably served the public the past two seasons, without any mechanical attention whatsoever, and no one, in our estimation, can embody the qualities it possesses, in a two-manual Organ at a comparable price.

We wish to thank you and your employees for the many courtesies shown, and wish you only the best of success.

In using Scorediscs at the theatre, there are but few steps in the process of application. All that is necessary is that the person operating the non-synchronous machine select from the records furnished, those bearing the numbers indicated on the Scoredisc, and run them through on the machine.

In picking out the records to be used, the person should first find the highest "slot" numbers on both A and B Scorediscs which bear in addition, the number of the record to be used with those "slots." The next step is to set them, the record to be used last with Scoredisc A on that side of the turntable, that for Scoredisc B, beside that turntable. The last records to be used should be first picked out so that they will be at the bottom of the stacks when operation of the sound device is started.

"Selecting records in this manner brings the first records to be used at the top of the stacks within reach of the person operating the machine.

"The person operating then takes the first record off the stack on the A side and places it on one of the turntables, placing the A Scorediscs over it. The needle is inserted in slot number one, penetrating to the record grooves which are to be played, the motor operating the machine is started, and the music begins for.

"While the needle is traversing the length of 'slot' 1 on Scoredisc A, the first record to be played with Scoredisc B is placed on the other turntable, and Scoredisc B is placed over it. The person operating the machine will find that A and B Scoredisc 'slot' numbers are numbered alternately. For example, No. 1 will be on A, No. 2 on B, No. 3 on A, and No. 4 on B.

"With the first record to be played with Scoredisc B on the turntable and the proper Scoredisc placed over it, the needle of that turntable is placed in 'slot' No. 2. However, the motor of that turntable is not yet started. Having completed that part of the operation, attention again is turned to the needle in Scoredisc A, 'slot' No. 1. By this time, the needle has had traversed the length of that 'slot' and the music for the particular scene has about run its course.

"The motor of the turntable bearing Scoredisc B now is started, and by the time it has the turntable running at the proper speed, slot No. 1 of Scoredisc A is finished. The sound volume indicator is turned slowly from the turntable bearing Scoredisc A, to that bearing B, bringing about a fade-out of music from the record under Scoredisc A, and a fade-in for the music which will be played under 'slot' No. 2 of Scoredisc B.

"This operation is repeated working one turntable and then the other, picking the next record and placing the needle in the consecutively numbered 'slots' until the highest 'slot' numbers on A and B Scoredisc have been used."

"MAKES FRIENDS IN THE AUDIENCE"

THERE'S a risky factor to this new problem of tonal reproduction. The public not only demands sound reproduction but expects that it shall be loud, clear and mechanically perfect. Better to give them no "sound" at all, than to experiment with unscientific amplifying systems which cannot begin to cope with your ever-present job of satisfying your audience. For the exhibitor bent upon giving his patrons acoustical precision, there's only one amplifying system, and that system is POWERIZER.

Power amplification is an art, a science and a business. With years of valuable experience to our credit, we pioneered in the task of adapting power amplification to the needs of the theatre. The studied construction of our powerful, life-like amplifiers need never concern you. It is their PERFORMANCE you will hail with delight, realizing after you have let our skilled engineers install POWERIZER in your house that your acoustical troubles are over.

The Elevator System for the Mounting of Sound Horns

While great advancements are being made by engineers of various concerns manufacturing sound devices for theatres, there is always the present problem which confronts the exhibitor in installing and handling his new sound equipment. Theatres featuring varied programs, which include vaudeville and sound pictures, are usually located on valuable property, and floor space is always at a premium. Every stage manager knows what it means to have a clear stage in order to put over his show.

Sound horns must necessarily be large in order to send out a volume of tone to fill the theatre. What to do with the horns when a stage act is being put on has been a problem.

In addition to his established line of electro-hydraulic console lifts, Earl B. Hough of Chicago, an engineer experienced in building elevators and lifts for theatres, has developed and placed on the market a new automatic horn lift, which has been designed for the purpose of relieving the congestion on the stage.

These horn lifts take up the least space possible, and their cost of installation has been reduced to a minimum. It requires but 45 seconds for a complete operation, and they are made to handle one, two and three horns.

The accompanying illustration shows just how the lifts are installed, and the operating sequence is as follows:

Starting from the down position when the horns are below the stage floor, the lift is put into motion by means of a push button station located in the projection booth, or on the stage switchboard. As the lift goes up the trap doors in the stage floor are automatically opened, and when the horns have reached a predetermined height back of the screen the lift stops the same as any electric elevator.

A special hinge is provided for the trap doors, so that when closed the smoothness of the stage flooring is maintained, there being no noticeable space around the edge of the doors when down.

The power unit operated by a one-horse power motor can be located in any convenient space under the stage. Anti-freeze oil is used as a hydraulic fluid, and the remote controlled magnetic valve device is the same as used by Hough in his organ lifts.

Compactness in design is an outstanding feature, no guides or side rails being needed, owing to the rigidity of the steel elevating tubes, which range from six to ten inches in diameter, and telescope one within the other. The bottom and largest tube is firmly cemented in the concrete floor beneath the stage. A full upward travel of 15 feet is obtained, yet the lowest point of installation does not project more than eight feet below the level of the basement floor.

In the illustration the relation of the horn to the screen is shown. The travel of the horns up and down varies, and for this reason these lifts are built in two sizes—a 12-foot stroke and a 15-foot stroke.

The average minimum head room below most stages is eight feet, and with a horn having a bell four feet in diameter the entire arrangement, including the lift, when in a down position under the stage can be confined within a height of eight feet.

Owing to their flexible control, these lifts help in determining just the right position in which to locate the horns, and the special carrier frame permits the swinging of the horns in any desired position in order to secure the best sound results, so as to make the entire sound installation an integral part of the theatre, with full appreciation of its individual acoustical properties.

In order to adapt his lift to all types and sizes of horns, the manufacturer has designed a special carrier frame subject to an almost universal adjustment. All parts of the lift are made of metal, and all electrical equipment conforms with the fire underwriters' code.

Facts You Want to Know

1. GUARANTEE—Every Reproducer and Talkie is guaranteed to produce perfect synchronization, perfect tone qualities and to be free from mechanical defects and imperfections for one year. What more could you ask for?

2. INTERCHANGEABILITY—Good-All Reproducers and Talkies are being served by all leading producers, with sound on disc.

3. IMMEDIATE DELIVERIES—Deliveries will be made within fifteen days after receipt of bona-fide order with 40% cash deposit.

4. EQUIPMENT—Complete equipment, including two units as illustrated, amplifier, tubes, fader, booth and stage wiring, suitable speaker equipment, automatic gates, and all other parts necessary for a complete installation, are furnished with each machine.

5. INSTALLATION—Under ordinary circumstances, complete installation will be made by your factory representative in one or two days, at an additional cost of $20.00 per day plus railroad fare from nearest service point. No interruption of your shows or change in booth is required.

6. HOW IT OPERATES—Each Good-All Reproducer or Talkie is operated by individual synchronous motors, the power not being derived from the projector. The projector, operating as an electric governor, holds the unit in perfect synchronization at all times.

7. QUALITY AT A LOW PRICE—Exceeding simplicity of construction and operation and the use of standard interchangeable parts, give you an instrument of the highest quality at a price you can afford to pay.

8. ACOUSTICS—For good results you must eliminate the "echo" in your theatre. All theatres installing Good-All instruments will be given the engineering advice of the Johns-Manville Corporation without cost. Send them complete information on your theatre at 18th and Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

PRICES

JUNIOR Good-All Talkie . . . . $1,100.00

This wonderful instrument is designed up to 350 seats, but will handle nicely any theatre having twice that number. Strictly quality product.

SENIOR Good-All Reproducer, $1,400.00

Designed for theatres up to 750 seats. Similar in all respects to the Junior but including larger and more powerful amplification and additional horn equipment.

MASTER Good-All Reproducer, $1,800.00

Results equal to the finest of any machine made are secured. This instrument uses an entirely different speaker than any other machine now on the American market, which is the New Good-All Condenser Speaker. It is the only speaker made which is non-directional, and which will reproduce with perfect fidelity any sound or cycle from 8 to 8,800 cycles. We claim the reproduction of this instrument to be better than any instrument made, regardless of price. The Master Model will give perfect reproduction in any theatre up to 3,000 seats. Includes double channel amplification and many other wonderful features.

RCA OUTLINES GROWTH DURING 1928 IN REPORT

A TOTAL gross income of $101,851,603, and net income of $23,661,990, for the Radio Corporation of America, during the year ended December 31, 1928, was reported to the stockholders by Owen D.
Young, chairman of the board, and General
James G. Harbord, president of the corporation. After reserves for amortization of patents, Federal income tax, foreign investments and the employees' pension fund, the net sum of $19,834,799 remains to be transferred to surplus. The comparative figure for 1926, 1927 and 1928, are summarized in the report as follows:

1928 1927 1926
Income $101,851,603 $65,445,200 $61,157,286
Net income 23,661,990 11,799,650.28 7,396,487.18

Total current assets at the end of 1928 were $55,577,250, and total current liabilities were $16,073,015, a ratio of nearly three and one-half to one. In 1927 the total current assets were $33,379,916, and total current liabilities were $10,910,619. The corporation has no bonded debt or notes outstanding.

Patents and patent rights, carried in the 1927 assets at $5,515,543, have been written down in the 1928 report to one dollar.

General Harbord, in submitting the 1928 report to stockholders for the board of directors analyzes the company's activities as follows:

"This period has been significant in the history of the corporation. It has sold more radio apparatus and handled more radioograms than in any previous year. The earnings of its communications business for the first time has been sufficient to meet the dividends on its preferred stock. Its facilities have been increased to meet the demands of its business. It has taken the last preliminary steps for entering the domestic telegraph field. It has definitely become a factor in the amusemen world.
For this enlargement of its usefulness in different directions it has created such subsidiary companies and contracted such allicances as were necessary."

Radio Broadcasting created for itself a new and important role in the presidential campaign, General Harbord stated. "It carried to the American people the proceedings of the national conventions of the two great political parties, the campaign speeches of candidates of all political parties and other formities of publicity and closed accounts, and 1928, have had an exciting four months with the election returns. So clearly and completely were the issues of the campaign laid before the electorate, that the possibility is visualized of future presidential campaigns being shortened to perhaps a month, thus minimizing the demoralization and interruption to business hitherto characteristic of the quadrennial campaigns.

The report refers to the unification of Radio Corporation and Victor Talking Ma-fine facilities as follows:

"After several months of negotiation, the board of directors, subject to the approval of the stockholders, authorized the acquisition of common stock of the Victor Talking Machine Corporation. This coordination is a logical development of the radio and phonograph industries and will be of substantial benefit to the companies themselves and to the public."

The activities in the amusement field are summarized as follows: * * *

"In the early part of the year, in association with the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, your corporation organized a subsidiary company, RCA Photophone, Inc., for the development and distribution of sound-motion picture projection equipment and the recordin of sound films. Contracts have been made with the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation for the furnishing of Photophone equipment to theatres owned or controlled by that company. Contracts have also been executed for the installation of Photophone equipment in approximately one hundred other theatres.

"Under a contract made between the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and the Radio Corporation of America providing for use of patents, exchange of services and co-operation in research in the amusement field, the Radio Corporation of America acquired a substantial interest in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. Stock owned by Radio Corporation of America in FBO Productions, was exchanged for stock of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation."

Further commenting on developments in this field, the report states:

"Through the arrangements above outlined, the Radio Corporation of America acquires an important position in the amusement field. It has a substantial interest in the production, distribution and exhibition of sound-motion pictures, it has increased facilities for furnishing entertainment on records, on films and through the air, in the theatre and in the home."

"According to the report states, "resold in a net income of $23,661, 900, of which $3,627,191 has been set aside as reserve for federal income taxes and amortization of patents, and $200,000 set aside to foreign investments and for the employees' pension fund, leaving a net sum of $19,834,799, which has been trans-furred to surplus account."

Horns and Speakers

A continuing of the directory of reproducers and manufacturers of interest to exhibitors contemplating installation of sound equipment, begun the last issue, is presented here.

Among companies which are manufacturing horns and speakers designed for use in motion picture theatres, several more are added here to those presented in the last issue of Better Theatres. Only fundamental information is given as to type of horn or speaker so that exhibitors may select the kind they are most interested in and get a touch with the manufacturer.

Miles Mfg. Corp.,
81 West 21st St.,
New York, N. Y.

Model M9—Coiled air column horn adaptable to both music and talking, declared by the manufacturer to have exceptional clarity and range.

The Rola Co.,
Oakland, Cal.

Model D-110—Dynamic speaker, equipped with rectifier element for operation directly on 110-volt AC current. Sells for $50.

Wright-DeCoster Dynamic

Racon Electric Co., Inc.,
18 Washington Place,
New York, N. Y.

Model 4320—Horn. Bell measures 40x40 inches, with a depth of 34½ inches. It measures ten feet along the center line, and has a cut-off of 75 cycles on the lower end, and up to 8,000 on the upper. Constructed to project forward and distribute in all directions equally. Used with a dynamic unit, one horn will fill a 1,200-seat theatre equally, according to the manufacturer. Constructed of fabric, impregnated and hardened.

Giant Dynamic Horn Unit—Designed for only long air column horns. Is of the electrodynamic moving coil type, and will handle the output of a 15-watt amplifier. Has a consumption of 1.1 amperes from a six-volt battery. Has an input capacity of 30 watts, and the dynamic cone unit will carry from two to five watts with a frequency cut-off of about 4,000 cycles.

Macy Mfg. Corp., 1451 39th St.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Air Column Exponential Horn—Designed especially for use in theatres. Now available in new light-weight construction. Built on same plan as other Macy exponential horns but lighter in weight and planned for needs of the theatre.

Wright-DeCoster, Inc.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Model No. 108—Dynamic reproducer which has had considerable success in large auditoriums. Specially capable of reproducing the lower frequencies. Has 2,700 ampere turns. Magnetic lines in air gap number 50,000 per square inch. Cone eight inches. Will handle the output of a push-pull 250 amplifier without distortion or cracking, it is claimed.

rotating in continuous motion."

After having viewed the theatre from this point and returning to the main auditorium floor, we find niches decorated by cutouts in metal of silver, gold, brass and copper, in the manner of Reiss, of Budapest. These are floodlighted and spotlighted in color from recesses in the bases and heads of the niches.

The seats, luxurious and generous, covered in modern fabrics, and the woodwork in silver, were furnished by the American Seating company. Carpets are by Wanamaker.

The Uptown is further interesting as the first picture theatre to employ the new principle of acoustics invented by Emile Berliner of Washington, D. C., widely known as the inventor of the telephone transmitter, the radio microphone, the helicopter and the continuous current transformer.

The Berliner invention consists of a series of vibrating diaphragms which are set in cement panels. The auditorium walls, in between art glass panels and other decorative effects, are built of these vibratory cellular panels.

Before applying the top coat of plaster, Berliner specifies that discs of galvanized wire netting be nailed in rows over the wall. These discs are really microphone diaphragms. Between the wall base and cell surface there is a space of about half an inch. Just as faint vibrations passing through a telephone wire vibrate the diaphragm of a telephone receiver, so sound waves striking a "diaphragmed" cement wall vibrate the surface of each acoustical cell and not only soften words and music, but amplify them.

The panels are of fireproof material and present a smooth surface susceptible to being painted or finished in harmony with any decorative motif. It has been Berliner's aim, through these vibrating cells, to achieve an auditorium wall which would act as a resonator and enhance sound just as a violin case, for example, magnifies the vibration of the violin strings. Thus he has taken a vibrating diaphragm, set it in a cement wall and covered the diaphragm with acoustic cement.

The diaphragms reflect some of the sound in diffused sprays, it is explained, while some of the sound energy is transmuted into mechanical vibratory motion, which actually originates new sound, having the identical pitch. This alteration of sound wave energy into beneficial form, is called the vital point in the Berliner invention.

A few words as to other qualities afforded:

For heating, ventilating and cooling, a complete system for both summer and winter designed by Leopold and built by the American Heating and Ventilating company and the Carrier Engineering corporation are provided. Purified air is brought into the theatre through outlets covered by ceiling plagues and circulated through floor mushrooms. The electric lighting and diming was designed by Davy, and installed by Nusbahn.

Stage equipment and elevators, all designed by Peter Clark of New York, are the last word in modern stage architecture.

The Uptown is owned by Samuel Shapiro, who has other theatres in Philadelphia and who operates the Uptown in association with the Stanley Company of America.
Motor Control Box of Western Electric
By F. H. RICHARDSON

The above named subject has been selected for consideration this month because of the many letters asking how the projector motor speed is controlled in the Western Electric sound equipment. It really is a most interesting subject.

When engineers tackled the problem of synchronizing sound with motion in motion pictures, it was quickly discovered that not only must the sound be in practically perfect synchronism with the motion, but there also must be very duplication of picture taking and sound recording speed when reproduction is undertaken.

While it is possible to project silent pictures at a materially higher or lower speed than the speed at which they were taken, without very serious injury, this most emphatically is not the case where the picture is synchronized with sound. With sound, any difference between the recording and reproduction speed is instantly and objectionably noticeable. If the speed of reproduction (projection) be higher than that of recording, then all voices will be more shrill, and all music will have a higher pitch. There will be distortion. If the speed of reproduction be less than that of taking, then the voices will be lower—more hoarse—and the music will have a lower pitch. In either case will the voices or music be the same thing to the microphone "heard." In either case the results will be good.

The speed at which the pictures are taken and the sound recorded is always the same, it is ninety (90) feet of film per minute, or 3 inches per second. While Movietone used the disc record system, and with others which make the picture and sound record simultaneously, and on the same film, if a film be used for both records, this of course cannot possibly be otherwise. With those systems which employ two separate films for making the sound and picture record, combining them afterward, there might, theoretically, be a difference, but in practice there never is. The oh of the motor control box then is to so control the speed of the motor driving the motion picture projector and the disc turntable that exactly 90 feet of film will pass the projector aperture per minute, regardless of variations in either load or power voltage.

The motor control has three duties to perform. First, the gearing is such that a motor speed of 1,200 r.p.m. is required to project 90 feet of film per minute. It is the duty of the motor control box to compel the motor to perform at exactly that speed, not sometimes, but always, regardless of voltage or load variations. The second point I have inadvertently included in my first. It is the maintenance of regular speed under varying conditions of voltage and load. Thirdly, it must enable the projectionist to instantly alter the motor speed to accommodate silent picture projection. Let us now examine the gadgetry of this clever little doodad and see what makes it go!

Doubtless some of the Wise Ones will be tempted to ask why it would not be possible to use a compound wound d. c. motor or a synchronous a. c. motor, both of which are rated as constant speed machines. They are flat, too, for all ordinary commercial work, but they would not regulate closely enough to meet the very exact requirements of this work, especially when we consider the possible changes of load and line voltage, particularly the latter. Another serious objection to the synchronous motor is its relatively low starting torque. Moreover, if those motors were used how would we handle silent picture projection, which calls for a much lower projection speed than does sound.

The motor control box depends for its operation upon what is known as a "tuned" or "resonant" circuit, which means a circuit which will let a. c. of a certain, pre-determined frequency, pass with slight resistance, but which offers high resistance to alternating currents of all other frequencies.

The current frequency which such a circuit is designed to pass is called the "critical" the "tuned" or the "resonant" frequency. The phenomenon is rather difficult to explain to the layman, but fortunately it is possible to cite a fairly close mechanical analogy.

Cut into two an ordinary rubber band such as you put around papers. Fasten some suitable weight of sufficient weight to stretch it a bit, to one end, and, holding it by the other end, if you give it a bit of a jerk you will find the weight will bob up and down at a certain speed, that speed depending upon the length and strength of the band and the weight of the weight. The rate of bobbing will be perfectly regular; a mere touch will keep it going at that rate.

However, if you attempt to make the movement either faster or slower you will find the band will give you very little assistance. It will in fact be more of a hindrance than a help, so that in this we have a mechanical arrangement permitting an up and down movement of a certain, fixed frequency, but offering resistance to movements of any other frequency. Any combination of mass and elasticity will act in exactly the same manner. The well-known and another example. If the wheel of the fork be of a certain length, a certain material and a certain cross section, they will vibrate at a certain, fixed rate of speed, and at no other rate.

In electrics a choke coil or inductance has the same effect upon an a.c. circuit that the weight has upon the rubber band, or more properly speaking, upon a spring, as a wheel, has upon a mechanical device, and an electrical condenser plays exactly the same part as a rubber band, a spring or any other elastic member plays in a mechanical arrangement.

An alternating current is, as you all know, nothing more than a back and forth movement of electric current, hence by connecting a choke coil and a condenser into an a.c. circuit it is possible to produce resonance effects. When a circuit is thus "tuned" to a certain frequency, that circuit will permit that frequency to pass freely, but slap any other frequency, on the wire and tell them to turn right back and go home to mother. That, fundamentally, is all there is to a "tuned" circuit.

In making provision for motor speed control, the first necessary thing is to provide some means by which the regulating device can at all times "know" at what speed the motor is running. In this case this is done by building into the motor a small a.c. generator. This generator is on the motor shaft, and when the motor is running, it will of course produce a c current whenever the motor is running; also of course the frequency of this current will be exactly proportional to the speed of the motor. And thus the little generator acts as a speed indicator to the motor control box.

When the motor is running at exactly the required 1,200 r.p.m., the small generator is producing 720 cycle current. Of course if the speed is either above or below 1,200 r.p.m., then the current frequency produced will be over or under 720.

The tuned frequency of the circuit in the motor control box is 720 cycles per second. Therefore it has a mass current, in other words the same frequency, but at no other, hence at starting, the motor takes full power and speeds up until it reaches 1,200 r.p.m., whereupon, the small generator is producing the cycle, the tuned circuit comes into action in such manner that any further increase in speed is prevented.

Treated more in detail, the motor used on a c supply is an ordinary compound wound motor, except for the fact that in addition to the regular windings it is provided with a special speed regulating winding, for which current is supplied by the motor control box.

We all know that the speed of a d c motor is increased as the field current is weakened, and inductance is increased, hence as the negative bias is decreased. It is this feature which is utilized to control the motor speed in this case.

The field winding of the small generator, called the "pilot" generator, is supplied with current directly from the power mains. In the d c motor control box are three vacuum tubes (figure 2) two of which act as rectifiers, changing the d.c. generator current from a.c. to a d.c. This rectified current supplies the regulating field of the motor, which is the special field before described.

The amount of current these tubes will pass is, however, much controlled by a grid bias, which is controlled by a third tube operated as a current amplifier by the tuned circuit.

Now follow me closely: When the speed drops below 1,200 r.p.m. the grids of the rectifier tubes are made negative, and hence the rectified current passing through the motor regulating field is small. The action of this is to permit the motor to speed up, whereupon the negative bias is decreased, causing the strengthening of the regulating field, which slows up the motor.

From the above, one might presume that this potential is the speed, and only it does; but the variation is very slight indeed. The action is such that the speed is increased from 1,200 r.p.m. to 1,300 r.p.m., and in other words the action is so delicate that even the most slight deviation from 1,200 r.p.m. causes the tuned circuit to act and rectify it.

Indeed, when the regulating switch is at "Reg," the motor controller has all its functions as before described. When it is at "Var," the tuned circuit is cut out, and does not function at all. This is accomplished by a switch then supplied with current (d.c.) from the power mains, through a rheostat connected with the control knob. By the use of this knob the motor speed may be hand regulated at will.

The motor used on a c supply is of the repulsion type, which has two windings, viz., the stator winding, which is fixed and takes current directly from the mains, and the rotor winding, which is on the rotating part of the motor, and is not connected to the power supply at all.

This latter winding is connected to the motor commutator through its two opposite brushes, therefore the speed of the motor will be directly dependent upon the strength of the current which is supplied to this circuit. We therefore can regulate the speed of the motor by regulating the current strength of this circuit.

The a. c. motor control box contains four vacuum tubes connected as per figure 2. One of these is used to supply rectified current for the field winding of the motor. Two of them act as rectifiers, supplying current to one winding of a special choke coil which has a second winding placed in the circuit which connects with the rotor brushes. The fourth is used as an amplifier.

When the current flow through the first winding of the choke coil is heavy, its action is to reduce the slight variation in current, and hence the heavy rotor (driving) current can pass and the motor speed is increased. Conversely, as the current flowing through the first winding is decreased, the choking action of the coil is increased and the motor speed is reduced.

It then follows that the motor speed may be controlled by regulating the output of the rectifying tubes, and this depends upon the bias supplied to their grids, and this is in turn controlled by the fourth vacuum tube which is supplied with an amplifying tube by the tuned circuit, the action is fairly obvious.

At speeds below 1,200 r.p.m. the grids of the two rectifier tubes have very little negative bias, hence these tubes pass a relatively strong current through the first winding of the choke coil. This of course permits a strong current to flow through the second winding of the motor, and hence the motor tends to speed up. But when 1,200 r.p.m. is reached, the tuned circuit functions, causing the negative bias of the rectifier tubes to be increased, which of course decreases their output and causes the choke coil to reduce the rotor current, and thus the speed is maintained at 1,200 r.p.m., with only a very narrow tolerance.

As with the d.c. motor control box, the a.c. box functions thus when the switch is at "Reg." The motor controller box is cut out and the regulation of protection speed is accomplished by means of the hand regulating knob provided.

Of course it must be understood that figures 1 and 2 show only a simplified form of diagram. There are further refinements, not shown, which tend to make the speed regulation more close indeed. For we are building this device and its circuits that any ordinary supply voltage variation would not affect the speed of the motor. It is possible to produce a remarkable change in load. It is a very, very cleverly designed device and we should all remove our chapeaus to the one or ones who doped all that out. Don't you think so?

Volume Three of Bluebook Due Soon

For a year past your editor has been working on Volume 3 of the Bluebook, which will deal entirely with sound projection and sound apparatus. It has been a very large task—that is, if I desired to give you something really well. We could, if we get together a bunch of stuff, some of which will really have some value, produce a showy book and call it a sound handbook or "authoritative book on sound."

But when it comes to compiling a real honest-to-gosh book on such a subject—we can count on the Bluebook for the best possible aid and facilities, which I really think I have had.

In this book I am giving full, detailed description of the five systems which promise to be the leading ones. I am giving you a basic understanding of fundamentals. I am giving you some practical suggestions in practical work, but am not giving operating directions, because if given they would very soon have wore out than no value, due to the still rapid improvements in equipment.

I shall not include wiring diagrams for the same reasons. Each system will supply you with a wiring diagram of your installation, and hookups will, of necessity, change with improvements in apparatus, which are going forward rapidly even now. They, too, then, would soon be misleading and worse than useless.

I am giving you all that it seems possible to give with safety. No use include a lot.

Words Fail Me Utterly

In this latter day the improvement in knowledge on the part of motion picture projectionists and the ability of theatre managers has startlingly improved as against what it was even a little as ten years ago. In a now high percentage of theatres, what might be properly termed outrages upon the film and upon the motion picture industry and upon the public are rarely found, except in relatively minor form. The fact, however, remains that we are still, as a whole, very far from perfection. The fact also remains that even today there remains with us Mr. Solido Boneveddo, both in the projection room and in the manager’s office. Of this last statement I shall, in the course of this article, proceed to offer what we may, I believe, term proof absolute, in photographic form.

I shall start off by displaying to your admiring gaze an intermittent sprocket removed from a projector returned to a certain factory for repairs. Looking at the star, we wonder what gave the manager and “projectionist” (?) the idea that the projector really needed a bit of attention! And has thing actually projected, before audiences—paying audiences—that purported to be a motion picture. Personally I think I would recommend it to them to some of our crooked “dancers.” What with the stunts they could themselves supply, plus what acrobatics this thing would add to the rough, the results ought to be distinctly good.

What is your idea as to the sanity of the theatre “manager” and the “projectionist” who kept this in use until—see figure 1. In expressing your views, please be as moderate as you can. Swearing is strictly taboo, whatever you may feel like.

Now, gentlemen, I would suggest that you be careful about investing in “sound books.” By that I mean emphatically do not mean you should buy nothing but my own. I do mean, however, that you will do well to buy only after careful examination, unless you know the author and have full confidence in his integrity and ability. I would suggest that you take a lot if you are members of a union. I believe there will be three books, including my own, offered soon. Let the union purchase one copy of each, and have a competent committee make honest comparison as to their relative worth, recommending to the body the one they consider as best. That is of course merely a suggestion, but to me it seems a very good one. I don’t want your money unless Volume 3 is honest and best value.

What’s that? No, it is positively not a buffing wheel. It is an intermittent sprocket, removed from a projector sent in for repairs! Look closely and I guess you may see the “teeth.” Anyhow, I can in the photograph—some of them.

And now you who hold to the idea that the motion picture industry, as a business enterprise, is so perfectly perfect, take a good rubber at Figure 2, in which I permit you to gaze upon another true classic.

What is it? you ask.

Why, Willie, that’s a has been intermittent sprocket which was removed from a Powers projector by some guy who got real reckless one day and sent in to have some few rather minor repairs made on. I believe he told them they might even put in a new intermittent sprocket, provided they thought one was really needed! The picture gives you the top and side view. By looking closely you may see nearly all the teeth, which is more than you can see in the one shown in Figure 3 (below), still another beautiful example of what an intermittent sprocket should not be.

Figure 4 proudly displays to your vision an intermittent sprocket with a lot of teeth, though they’ve been on a film diet so long they’ve become a bit thin and are drooping, round shoul-dered or what have you. Those that have slumped clear down were not that way when the sprocket was taken off the projector. Some one carelessly laid the sprocket down on the bench, and the “teeth” were unable to bear the weight. Anyhow I guess that’s how they got slouched.

And I’ve some more, too, but maybe you’ve seen sufficient to convince you that really some “projectionists” and some theatre “managers” still rely on us who should have their brains (I compliment them) examined.

Figure 5

And now I’ll give you a slant at something else, just to show you the poor sprocket is not the only goat we have. What you see in Figure 5 is an aperture film track which some real live wire theatre manager consented to have replaced, even though there still was a lotta metal left. What did he care for expenses? Keep the projection equipment in perfect condition regardless, was his slogan! Evidently he lived up to it too! Observe the “graceful” curve the film made as it passed the aperture. Nearly a perfect rainbow, what? And now, gentlemen, that you have examined these few pretty terrible examples, kindly remember that you do not have to wait until your projector gets into such utterly disgraceful condition as is here shown to work great injury to the thing you are selling to the public, and that to deal your box office a solar plexus whop!!

The sprockets shown have, beyond the quescondemns them. They should be replaced immediately.

Any wear in the projector gear train sufficient to permit of rocking the shuttering as much as three-quarters of an inch at its rim demands that the gear train have immediate expert attention. Any excess aperture tension is just plain outrage upon the films, and upon the intermission movement as well. There are other things, but that will do for a starter.

Sound Cue Schedule

Mr. Harry F. Storin, manager, Leroy Theatre Company, Pawtucket, R. I., sends the editor a sound schedule intended primarily to be used in the Movietone Bulletin. I am using it there, but since it seems to be such a really helpful stunt I have decided to rewrite it and give it the wide circulation enjoyed by this department. I am sure you will all be glad to have it, and to show it to your manager when Movietone reaches your theatre, as it truly will in due time, if it has not already.

Examining the schedule, column one is, of course, devoted to the name of the subject or projectionist. The next column carries "S" for Movietone and "V" for Vitaphone. The "Time" column gives the number of minutes required for the projection of the subject.

In the "Rehearsal" column "F" indicates the fader and "H" the horn setting. "Official Change" columns are for the purpose of marking note of any desired change from the settings marked "Rehearsal." Manager Storin hands us the following explanatory letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: This sheet, which is my own idea, is not designed to deal with such details as change-over cues, etc., but only to supply definite information with regard to sound projection. The projection staff make their own cue sheet for change-overs, etc. This sheet is designed as a concise, simple, easily understood reference chart for use in sound projection. I am gratified to know that since we have been using it the show has been running very much more smoothly. The projection staff has advised me that they find it of real value. It has eliminated arguments, made unnecessary the constant interruptions caused by the use of the telephone, stopped disputes among the men concerning proper pre-arranged settings, and has made more of a thing of the past. We may therefore fairly say that it has helped to provide better sound projection.

"The preparation of the schedule is simple. Before rehearsal I send to the projection room a form somewhat similar to the attached schedule, but containing only the names of the subjects to be run, in the order of their projection. On this schedule I mark the setting in pencil, which I believe the subject shows started a look at, each subject is started at the setting, and then, as the rehearsal progress I telephone such changes which seem best. These they mark on the paper in the proper place.

"Immediately after rehearsal this schedule is returned to me and from it I make up its regular schedule, reference chart on mimeo graph forms, for use in projection. The markings in the "Rehearsal" column are then determined upon at rehearsal. Should it seem advisable to change any of them, they are noted in the "Official Change" column, it same automatically canceling that setting in the rehearsal column. Such changes are often necessary because of changing house conditions. Special cues, such as a change from the regular 'A', 'B' or 'C' hour settings, are not detailed in the 'Special Cues' column.

"This is what I call helpful suggestion. I might be very helpful, even though it is not agreed with or found useful, because it publication would see others thinking along similar lines, and that always is helpful. Don't get the idea, however, that because I said that I doubt the value of this chart, for don't. Moreover I think it will be welcomed by projectionists and managers everywhere. I thank Manager Storin most cordially for having submitted it. May I suggest that a great many of you might submit such helpful things as this, dealing with both with silent picture projection and with sound projection. It doesn't help you to keep to yourself the "stunt" you have found useful. And if you can help your brother projectionist, help projection and thus help the motion picture industry, why not be generous and do it??!! Let me hear from you.

For Consumption by Theatre Managers

Near my winter home is a motion picture theatre to which I often repair when the need for relaxation is felt. I attend that theatre because of the fact that in it I am assured certain projection faults will not occur to annoy and mar my enjoyment of the show.

This latter is due to two important reasons what I will set forth for your consideration. First, the projection staff is composed of men who are real motion picture projectionists. They attend strictly to business and take keen interest in their work and pride in its perfection. I have attended this theatre during winter months for several years; usually at least once week. In all that time, until my last visit, due from having to direct attention at very sight travel ghost (which is inexcusable, even though slight), I have nothing but commendations for the professional work of these men. However, I believe—in fact, I know—that some degree of this state of affairs is due to “secondly,” which is the fact that the manager of this theatre is a real manager. He knows his business and attends strictly to it. Once his is a strictly motion picture theatre, if a six-piece orchestra, he realizes that the box-in-trade of that theatre, aside from the music, consists entirely of what the audiences see upon its screen, which may be well displayed (projected) before them, or poorly displayed before them, according to the excellence of the work of projection.

* * *

He also realizes that as a motion picture theatre manager it is imperatively necessary that he be able to intelligently criticize projection; that he must know the difference between the grade and low-grade display of the good theatre, which is selling to the public, that he must know what projection faults are and the projectionists must know that he knows. He senses that improper display of the picture before audiences will lower the enjoyment of programmes and make patrons less keen to return, and that the box office is affected to the injury. He realizes that it is up to him to demand from the men perfection in the work of projection, but before he can make it effective he must himself determine as to the projection staff the fact that he is himself able to and will detect projection faults.

Gentlemen, it would be idle to say that projectionists, no matter how good they may be, will not do better work for such a manager, as they will for one who would remain fully undisturbed with a six-inch travel post on the screen, an unevenness in screen illumination which this manager would not for a moment tolerate, or some other projection fault which he would not permit.

Such a manager would not appreciate high grade work, and that is in itself a decidedly encouraging factor. The projection staff would soon know that high grade work means prestige or nothing to them, and it requires not a great deal of imagination to understand the fact that they will therefore not go to much trouble to produce it.

* * *

But with such a manager as this one, the men are kept on “their toes.” First, they know he appreciates good work. They also know that whereas he will speak an occasional word of praise and appreciation for good work, he will literally raise the roof if he doesn’t get it. They can’t put anything over on him, and knowing that fact they don’t try. It is good to them, as well as good for the manager, to have the theatre box office. It compels them to attend to their “knitting” when on duty, id after all may we not all agree that projectionists are not employed merely as ornamentals. The projectionist is employed with the idea that he will give to the theatre every ounce of knowledge, skill, painstaking care, and energy he is possessed of during the hours he is on duty. That is the general idea, though occasionally man seems not yet to have discovered that fact.

We still have with us men who feel no real urge to give the best in them, but rather to try to get by with the least possible effort. They will do it if they can, too, but with managers such as I have described, the “least possible fort” they can get by with is the best that can be produced upon the theatre screen, and they soon learn that fact or—involuntarily in.

Theatre managers cannot be expected to know the mechanical and optical details of projection. It is not necessary, or even desirable, that they should. They should, however,
SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL
Aids Good Projection

One of the biggest assets SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL brings to good projection is the utter freedom it gives the projectionist.

The man in charge of projection in a room equipped with SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL knows he is free from the menace of film-fires.

A marvelous advantage at a nominal cost!

For the first time, DA-LITE SCREENS are now available to the individual theatre owner direct from the manufacturer. This includes all types of metallic and white surfaces listed in our 1928 catalog. The quality is identically the same, Tear-proof and Seamless, up to 24 x 32.

FIFTY CENTS PER SQUARE FOOT
50 cents per square foot NOW, will buy exactly the same screen you have paid $1.50 for heretofore. What your screen shows makes your theatre what it is. At these prices there is absolutely no reason for dirty, cloudy, inferior screens. This tremendous saving takes the screen out of the luxury class. It no longer pays to recoat a screen. Get a new one that will permit you to cash in on your film rentals by showing them to best advantage.

Measure that old screen and tell us whether you are using, High intensity, Hi-Low, Reflector type, Straight arc, or Mazda, and we will furnish a surface to fit your requirements. Our catalog is yours for the asking.

I am now, with the aid of two engineering departments, preparing such a lecture. It will be pretty complete and finished. When completed it will have the approval and official sanction of the Powers That Be in sound projection.

On the trip in question I could drive such a trip in a day and a half, as there is plenty of time and garage and hotel expense. However, the trip could be made to include certain cities the trip book shows. The passenger would be willing to include them, provided the men of each city, through the local union, would be willing to arrange for such a meeting and help with provisions and hotel, and the place of selecting a hotel and garage bill. I would, I think, be willing to give the time and stand the not considerable added expense, but feel that if the men don't want such a thing enough to be willing to stand some proportion of the added expense, then they don't want it enough to justify doing it, as it is quite simple and plain, and that reef has wrecked many such ventures.

You see, in almost every city there are members of the B.P. who are anxious for education in projection. They are strict, practical men. Book knowledge is to them but the keys into the doors of the halls in which the meetings are held, andProjection departments they declare are not a help, but more in the nature of a curse. Such men don't want to move ahead or up and they want someone else trying to do so! They react against such movements as you propose in a cab because they realize that if the movement starts, they refuse to participate—unless they didn't look so very good. They are the aw-it's-good-enough type of man. They therefore do one of two possible things. They say away from any such meetings, be it very busy, or they ostensibly join, but with that ammper up their sleeves all ready to use on very possible occasion. Either way they do discourage those who are willing to try, and thus discourage new recruits from joining. Professor Lindbergh has wrecked it, though it would be very hard to pin that fact on them.

Personally I would suggest that if you have enough members who are really in earnest about this matter, you would do better to have the whole idea put together as men you know, or believe to be willing to go into such a matter, elect a chairman and secretary and arrange to hold meetings regularly, say once a week. One such educational organization I know of cinched things by requiring each man to deposit $25. They arranged to meet twice a week. Every time a man was absent from a meeting he was charged one dollar. At the end of the series every man received back all the deposits, minus the money required for each missed meeting. The remainder was to be and was sed to supply a dinner for all members. "Here we are," said members, and total of eleven dollars must be raised for each dinner. Don't know about the dinner, but the course was a distinct success.

What's that? Oh yes. Certainly $25 is a lot of money to throw away, but if you men are really in earnest can they and will dig into, knowing they will get it all back if they stick. There is no arrangement for which the meetings were missed for a really good and efficient reason, such as illness or unavoidable absence from the city, there was no forfeit, but the absentee must present answers to the questions propounded.

In general the plan pursued was to ask a certain number of questions each week, selected in this case, from the Bluebook of Projection index, the answers to all to be read and discussed at the next meeting.

And now I'll make this tentative offer: In the near future, with a friend, daughter, to head my Go-Devil in the direction of Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, explore its depths and then travel on to Centerville, Iowa. On this trip, if it is, I'll make the longest Go-Devil lecture with the content of the letter came. If the local wishes it and is willing to share the expense of the stop by paying the hotel bill and garage expense, I will stop one night there and give them an illustrated lecture on sound projection and sound projection equipment.

Better Projection Pays

The Young Man And Projection

The editor occasionally receives letters from young men, usually just leaving school, asking his advice as to whether or not motion picture projection offers a field of sufficient traction to justify them entering it.

This is a question it is impossible to reply personally, for the reason that success in a field of human endeavor depends so very much upon the individual himself or herself. The man who might make a pronounced success in one field, might make a pronounced failure in another. Some men and women are not capable of pronounced success in anything requiring any considerable amount of mental or physical exertion. Other men could not succeed in anything requiring any large amount of physical exertion. Some are mentally lazy. Some are physically lazy. Some are both.

Assuming a young man to have a reasonable amount of mental ability and a willingness to exert himself physically and mentally, to a reasonable extent, there is no reason why he should not find motion picture and sound projection an attractive field, remembering that it offers few opportunities for advancement to executive position or in fact to any position other than that of motion picture projectionist, chief projectionist or supervisor of projection.

However, nowadays the rate of remuneration for motion picture projection is far more favorably with that of other work which is paid by the day; also it is steady work the year around. The indication is at present that the pay will advance rather than decrease since sound has brought to the projectionist added responsibilities, as well as the need for far greater ability than heretofore has been demanded.

Of course the work has its drawbacks, one of which is that just when other men are out with their families, their best girls or some other chap's best girl, the projectionist must be working. Holidays and Sundays are usually the theatre's big days; also theatres do their heaviest business in the evening, which usually is the playtime for other men. Those who decide to enter motion picture projection must make up their minds to put up with those things. It is a "part of the game."

Then, too, projectionists are about the only men in the entire motion picture industry who occupy a strategically important position who receive almost no credit at all from any one for excellence in their work, though they may expect a "cussing out" real promptly if anything goes wrong—often entirely regardless of whether it is through any fault of theirs or not.

I remember once, when along about 1905, I was projecting pictures in Chicago, and had for some while been protesting concerning the wretched conditions of films received from the exchange—one of "Billy" Swanson's exchanges, by the way. Chicago oldtimers will remember it. One day the films were received...
SaturdaY night, February second, the witching (it is presumed to be witching, anyhow) hour of midnight, found one of the beautiful, stately ballrooms of the Hotel ator at Times Square in New York City, the very heart of the Great White Way and in what may perhaps be termed the theatrical heart of the world, filled with members of the American Projection Society, their wives, sweethearts, children and friends. The occasion was the 15th an-iversary dinner and dance of the above amed organization, which now has branches in New York City, Washington, folk, VA.; Pittsburgh, Wichita, Kans.; arrisburg, Pa.; Toronto, Providence, Vanouver, B. C., and one state branch in Caliandria, located at Los Angeles. There are ow several charter applications pending.
For the information of those who may not know, the American Projection Society wholly social and educational. It has gathered the storm and stress of 15 years, and during the past five years, it has been eadily growing. Its formation was originally, of my own knowledge, very largely rought about through the efforts of Joseph son, a Broadway projectionist and past resident of the New York City motion mpective projectionists' local union, No. 306,
T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., but its connience through the past few years has en due to the efforts of men who have ever freely of their time, energy and even oney. George Edwards, president of the American Projection Society, is one of em. Lawrence Jones is another. Sam Ruin, present treasurer, is another. A. P. ish is now general secretary, and Ben en, vice president.

The organization has accomplished much good work in the projection educational fields. It is composed entirely of I. A. men.
To come back to the dinner, however, there were 20 tables, each seating twelve persons, so you see the affair, which was at seven dollars per plate, was well attended.
This really means something in this case, because there was no reason on earth why any one need attend unless he wished.
President Edwards did what little presiding was done, the affair being entirely ormal. A really excellent orchestra provided music, and that it was good, is proven by the fact that it was 6 a. m. before I was able to pry friend daughter off that dance floor and out into broad daylight for the twelve mile shin hometo.
A very few brief talks were made, consuming in their entirety not more than 15 minutes. President Edwards welcomed the guests and told of the progress the organization is making. Joseph Basson was in-introduced as one of its founders. He spoke very briefly. Lester Isaacs was introduced as president of the Projection Advisory Council, and he spoke of that innovation.
He said the Council did not propose to recognize anyone as an authority upon projection, which is a perfectly correct procedure for that body, though presumably some outside its august ranks may be assumed still to know a few things and to offer advice, through the Council, of course, upon projection matters. I hope so, anyhow.

Otto Kafka, past president, spoke briefly, as did Lew Hammond. I was introduced as the "grandfather of projection," and spoke briefly upon the many differences between the early days and now, and of the battle I waged for many years, almost alone, to secure or force some sort of recognition for projection in the days before it became respectable to be in any way connected with it. Those, said I, were the days when to insist that projection really was of any importance, was to be derided, scoffed at and even laughed at by the men themselves. It it different now. The battle has been won and there are now many who, having discovered that projection really is something more than "operating a machine," are willing to assume the projection toga and lead the procession.
The affair was a pronounced success. All the women guests were given a charming souvenir in the form of a powder compact, whereupon a wonderful activity was instantly apparent and cheeks soon vied with the blushing.
The Society publishes the American Pro-jectionist, which I strongly advise all progressive projectionists to subscribe for, in addition to this paper. You may send your subscriptions ($1.50 per year) to me if you wish, and I will see they reach the "right spot."

The new model Cutawl is entirely portable. It is not attached in any way except by electric cord, and can be operated in any plane horizontal, vertical or oblique.

It is powerful having a two-speed motor, allowing the operator to use low speed, fine and intricate work, at high speed where rapid cutting is practicable and desirable.

It has a variable cutting stroke up to 3/4 inch and is convertible for sawing by substituting saw-blade for the chisel. Thus it is possible to cut several thicknesses of cardboard or wallboard and one cutting. Note example in soldiers shown to the left.

There is practically no limit to the range of its usefulness, other than the ingenuity and ability of its user.

The Right Course
Millard T. Howell, projectionist, Pasadena Cal., has the following to say—and says it:
"Dear Friend Richardson: Nineteen years in the past I started out to and did learn the then 'trade' of motion picture machine operating followed it for six years, during which time your first and second handbook editions were my guides and helped me develop. After that I drifted away from the theatre and for years was engaged in the electrical field.

But the old 'reign of terror' at the theatre and the projection room—the land of amusement and make-believe made itself felt. In 1927 it drew me back, and you, friend of old days, were my first thoughts, because I well knew I must have the best means for keeping up to date in what is now the art of motion picture projection.

So as a technical book I found I obtained your brand new Fifth Edition Bluebook of Projection and get busy catching up. Finally I obtained a position in a first class theatre, where I've been shooting the screen for the last eighteen months. I want to bring myself right up to date in all matters, including sound projection."

Friend Howell goes on at some length. Wants to know where certain books, S M P E papers, etc, can be had. Sends check for three dollars for American Projectionist and one for two dollars for S M P E papers. Send them back, of course, because the American Projectionist is only $1.50 a year and the papers desired must be obtained by purchasing... whole proceeding or maybe two or three them. Asked SMPTE secretary to send me the correct dope on that. He also wants me to join the SMPTE and American Projection society.

Now my reason for printing all this is that there is a man who has absolutely the right ideas. He don't just come back into what amounts to a profession, succeed in getting himself a job and then setting right smack down in it. At least, that's what I said. No sir! I first studies the changes which have occurred. Spends a few dollars in securing information and knowledge in the form of books. Wants everything he can get which will help him to become a thoroughly competent motion picture projectionist, and is willing to spend a bit of money to get it. Wise in!

However, this is by no manner of means the story. The really important thing in this is the fact that "The Man Who Does these Things, Or Does Things in this Way, must Be Defended Upon To Have the Energy and Go-aheadness Necessary To Apply knowledge After He Has Obtained It!" That is really the BIG item.

There are many, many men who really have a goodly fund of knowledge of the technique of motion picture projection, but who are not or less lacking in the necessary energy that knowledge to practical use. They'll read what comes their way though many of them make little or no effort to get printed information. They have the intelligence to simulate much of it or all of it, but when energy which may be avoided by applying it—"oh, well, I guess it's good enough,"—they yawn and it is not done.

This man tells me he has not yet, due to his family, felt able to make application to the projectionists' organization, ATSE & MPMO, but that he proposes to do so. When that application comes in my opinion it should be received and acted upon favorably and pronto. The formation of motion picture projection and the ATSE & MPMO needs such men, and don't mean maybe either.

This department of its editor cordially welcomes friends who dwell back into the new profession. May's tribe increase.

In closing permit me to suggest that application to the projectionists' organization ATSE & MPMO should be made as soon as possible.

The Prometheus Organ Heater protects the delicate mechanism of the organ by heating the lower part of the chamber in a scientific way. Unlike other devices which send heat upward, thus neglecting the equally important base, Prometheus deflates the warm air downward. The heat naturally rises throughout the organ chamber giving a constant, unvarying degree of temperature. Proper heating avoids expensive repairs and maintenance costs due to destructive cold, moisture and climatic changes. It also keeps pitch accurate.

Automatic Thermostat regulates heat to the proper degree required. Finished in Aluminum. Occupies only 14½ x 4 inches. Sturdy. Durable.

Complete Lighting Systems Designed as Harmonious Units

THAT'S the big job that this company is doing for the enterprising motion picture theatre operators.

The rapidly growing vogue for stage presentations has brought many new lighting problems in its wake. No longer does the stage and auditorium remain uniformly dark throughout the entire program. Now several different lighting combinations are required in the course of a single program.

The installation of lighting systems and stage switchboards is no longer a mail order catalogue proposition. It is now a matter of scientific design and careful study by experience in stage and auditorium lighting.

That's the reason why Hub Systems are being installed in the newest and finest theatres! The up-to-the-minute theatre operators know that this company is the best equipped of all to design and build systems on the most scientific and highly artistic basis.

We can help you with your lighting. A Hub Switchboard is a necessity in up-to-date theatres.

The American Projection Society

From Chicago comes this brief letter:

"Dear Brother Richardson: I think it would well that you advise us concerning the American Projection Society. Just what is it and what are its aims? Does it or does it not conflict with or infringe upon the field of the I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M.? Any information will be appreciated, for we, or at least some of us, have heard different yarns concerning it."

I might add, Brother Richardson, that you have many warm friends in this city who follow your work closely. True we may have thought you were pretty harsh when you raised several varieties of some things here, but after all the most of us are really aware that it was deserved—and, though it fact was not made it hurt just a little bit worse, I would suppose, and I know I myself and no printer would use much less print, when I re-read what you once said about us, and at least among us, but after all I guess that in the end it did us good."

I have never regretted what I said about affairs in your city, brother. I said them because it seemed my plain duty to say them, though I know it would make me lots of enemies in that great city. I spoke only in truth, confident that in due time the men in your city would come to realize that fact, and that even if I was not exactly complimentary, I was their true friend just the same. Chicago has many high grade men. It had that at the time you spoke of. I gave them my unstinted praise, but because I also told "other side," that fact was overlooked.

And now as to the American Projection Society: This is not at all a new society. I have functioned continuously for 15 years. During that time three international president of the I. A. T. S. E. have held office, and never yet has there been the slightest friction between the two organizations. The membership consists of projectionists and individuals of allied industrial interests, but if you are a projectionist you had better see that you card is paid up in the local union, otherwise the ballot will not be counted like a good one.

The society does not interest itself in any matters which are the work of the local union. The bylaws state: "As this society and its chapters are strictly an educational and social organization, it is strictly forbidden to discuss matters, formally or informally during the meetings, pertaining to trade unions."

There was published in the American Projectionist last summer a letter from Brother Carman which ought to be sufficient answer to those who may tell you the society conflicts with the I. A. or in any manner infringe upon its field of endeavors.

The American Projection Society is a social and educational club, and that is all it is. A union is a strictly business organization. It is the organization formed for the one purpose of improving working conditions and wages. It is not a social organization in any sense of the word. It is not an educational organization, though it is quite true it would be possible to incorporate social and educational features into its local unions.

However, such efforts, though often made, have up to this time never met with any considerable degree of success. Mostly they have failed for the reason that some of the general membership do not care to take part in such activities, and may even actively oppose any attempt to maintain either purely social or educational features as a part of the union, especially objecting to the use of union funds for such purposes.

Many attempts have been made by locals to carry on such work through an auxiliary to the union, but so far as I know they have all failed. The fact remains, however, that a goodly percentage of the union members do believe in carrying forward educational work and having something in the nature of a purely educational and social organization, for the American Projection Society, which has endured now for many years, is the direct outgrowth of that desire.

The society now has several "chapters," and can have twice as many just as soon as it is able to take care of the work involved.
MUSIC IN THE THEATRE

It's the Personal Touch That the Audience Always Demands

Has the advent of sound jeopardized the security of the organist in the hearts of music-loving patrons? Perhaps that depends on the organist. Anyway, here's what a leading console artist thinks about it

By EDDIE DUNSTEDTER
Organist, Minnesota Theatre, Minneapolis

ORGAN music is still an integral part of every theatre program. The advent of synchronized music is a novelty and still is, to a certain extent. However, the first effects, at least in the larger metropolitan theatres, have already begun to wear off. Synchronized music is dead. As an accompaniment to a film, where it plays only a secondary role, it has its place. However, when people want music for the sake of music, they want something that is real, that is tangible. Only a musician or musicians on the stage or in the orchestra pit can satisfy that desire for the human touch.

An excellent example of this is the enthusiasm with which an audience receives the act on the screen of some famous stage star. In most of these shorts, the music plays an important part; yet it is not the music but the person that makes or breaks the act. It's the personal touch again that the audience, whether it is conscious of the act or not, always demands.

When it comes to getting up the week's organlogue, there are a number of factors to be considered. The most important one is that the organ solo must not interfere in any of the other features of the program. This includes the symphony orchestra, the stage unit, the feature picture, and to a certain extent, the shorts.

Looking at this list of "don'ts," one might be inclined to throw up his hands and ask, "What's the use?" The safest way out of the dilemma is to be contrary. Try and get far away from the type of thing which the other units present—that is, with the exception of the feature picture. Of course, here are some times other exceptions. It is a safe venture, however, always to present something entirely different from the number which the orchestra presents.

If the orchestra bursts forth into " Cavaliers Rusticana," it is up to the organist to live the jazz-loving flappers or the sentimental elderly women something that is more to their liking and understanding, in order to offset the effects of the orchestra on these people. This is where the feature picture comes into importance. If it happens to be a Clara Bow or a Colleen Moore, the organist can come to the rescue with the organ solo. If it's a Jannings opus, there is almost sure to be something rather sentimental about the organ solo that hits the more mature audience in the right spot.

Of course, none of these rules is hard and fast. Every week presents new possibilities and new problems that must be solved. When theme songs were more of a rarity than they are at the present stage of the game, it was always an excellent policy to bring them into prominence the week preceding the showing of the picture. They helped to advertise the picture immensely, and furthermore, most of the songs were absolutely new as far as the audience's memory was concerned. We still do use theme songs for the organ solo, particularly when they happen to meet the requirements—that is, when they do not infringe on any of the other numbers on the program, and when it is possible to place the number close to the feature picture, of the current week.

In addition to following these general rules, I also believe in novelty programs for the sake of variety. Thus one week I gave "The Clock Store," an extremely effective number that pleased everyone. The range of the modern organ is too far apart from the feature picture of the current week.

To add to its effect, I also use a brief lecture on the piano for the sake of variety. Thus one week I gave "The Clock Store," an extremely effective number that pleased everyone. The range of the modern organ is too far apart from the feature picture of the current week.

In addition to following these general rules, I also believe in novelty programs for the sake of variety. Thus one week I gave "The Clock Store," an extremely effective number that pleased everyone. The range of the modern organ is too far apart from the feature picture of the current week. However, we are not satisfied with this. We try to find a way to express the idea that it is possible for a skillful organist to do imitations of this sort. In my number, I suggest a stylus of a character, I will say, and the audience is asked to take the imaginary trip up Broadway to the various theatrical successes.

One novelty which I do not advocate is the policy of having a singer accompany the organist. One experience was enough. The young woman who did the singing was not at fault. She was an experienced public performer with an excellent voice, but the organ soprano solo just did not work out. I assumed the difficulty to that fact that the singer and the organ were too far apart, both with the consequence of difficulty of uncertainty of pitch and time.

It happens to be a pianist as well as an organist. I sometimes replace my organ numbers by piano solos and orchestral numbers. Shortly before Christmas, I transposed "Flapperette" and gave that as a piano solo in connection with the stage band show. At other times I have moves orchestrated arrangements of popular numbers and assumed the baton. It is all for the sake of variety and to satisfy the numerous demands which come into the theatre.

Quite recently, I have been giving afternoon piano concerts on the mezzanine, between the two afternoon appearances in the theatre. The concert has proved very successful. Knowing that I am to appear, an ever growing number of fans make up the theatre parties for the Minnesota. They either go into the show first and then come out to listen to the mezzanine concert, or else come for the concert and then see the show. At the present time, most of these afternoon concerts are made up of request numbers, which proves their popularity and is a sure sign that the number of requests that come in usually means just that many more patrons.

These afternoon concerts are somewhat of a companion of public desire. They are one way of deciding just what sort of organ solos to put on and in what proportion to divide the weekly solos between jazzy, sentimental and classical numbers.

AN ORGAN WITH 32,000 PIPES!

ATLANTIC CITY has let preliminary contracts for what will be the largest pipe organ in existence, to be installed in its $15,000,000 municipal auditorium. There is, of course a well defined limit to the possible physical size of the pipes that go into a musical instrument of this kind. The largest practical, for the bourdons and discipans, is 32 feet in length, and the largest conceivable would be the necessary double of that, 64 feet, which would give the deepest note perceptible, as such, to the human ear. But even that note can scarcely be called such, as its vibration is so slow as to be rather a series of pulsations than a true tone. For this reason the dimension of the pipes is limited, but not so the variations in tone quality produced by different kinds of pipes and pipe materials and their attachments.

So when it is said that the Atlantic City organ will be the largest, it is meant that the instrument will possess no less than 30,000 pipes, three times more than in the instrument now under construction for the Liverpool, England, Cathedral. The largest in America is but one-fourth the size. Another indication of the dimensions of the Atlantic City creation is that it will require 175-horsepower to blow it. In olden days, pipe organs of the largest size were operated by bellows run by tread-mills driven by human power. Imagine if you can the long rows of men, behind the scenes in the great pedals in constant rhythm to supply the air for the big instrument.

Novelties Are the Vogue

Yes, sir—they like novelties, these theatregoing people. And they always will. Not even such an astounding modern instrument as the organ is excepted in the demand for something new. Nor novelists. Nor symphony orchestras. When you deal with the public, you've got to have what is technically—or otherwise—known as ideas.

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

A FEW issues ago the writer tried to impress upon the readers of this publication that the one and only thing which will cause the organist to survive in neighborhood houses, is novelty. The word "novelty" covers a great deal of territory and may be used with almost any idea suitable to entertain a thrifty audience and old its interest from week to week.

There is no need of repeating things that have been said before relative to the condition existing in the motion picture theatre field and the temporary replacement that theatre organist has been put through an account of mechanical means of supplying music. The present status of this new invention has little, if anything, to do with the situation.

Suppose we take it for granted that in the next year or so the dialogue motion picture will be improved to such an extent that it will be in great demand, and, suppose that at the same time means if mechanical sound and musical accompaniment will be entirely replaced by orchestras and organists. Were that to happen suddenly, there would be such a tremendous demand for versatile organists, that the industry would not be prepared to fulfill it.

There are thousands of organists all over the country, but how many of them are equipped to cue motion pictures and prepare a high type of musical score in keeping with the theme of the photoplay. Organists with vision and talent did not accept the sound motion picture as a mechanical substitute for music, and while they others were letting out cries of alarm, they spent their spare time creating novel jobs and original stunts that have made them more popular than ever.

It is safe to say that a theatre manager could never eliminate any good feature of his program if that feature were a box office attraction. Whether or not his theatre offered sound or silent pictures, if his organist had such a following that his display would react at the admission gate, he would not jeopardize the support of his patrons by trying to cut down his overhead. Of course no theatre would ever dream of keeping an organist on payroll merely for a few minutes of chores, unless that particular theatre was compelled by the local union to carry a man.

In the present run of things, almost any theatre of consequence is equipped for dialogue or sound pictures. Those which are not able to have synchronous devices, and the non-synchronous machines a fine space in their particular purposes. It is almost impossible with this existing condition to expect a theatre, unless it is in a special classification, to carry an organist on payroll without having him do any worthwhile work.

The deluxe theatres do not mind paying a good solo organist a large salary, whether he works every week or not, because as a rule they are covered on additional overtures that they do on a weekly gross. Theatre managers are not trying to do without organists or orchestras but merely want to give their audience exactly what they like the best, and if a number of them find that a policy of sound pictures goes over well, then you cannot blame the manager for trying to keep up the policy, for after all, he is in business, and in order to survive, must meet public demand.

This situation does not necessarily exist in every theatre neighborhood, and it is taken for granted that within a reasonable space of time, mechanical music will be replaced by the human element, but until that time comes, an organist must keep himself constantly in the public eye and always in the favor of his manager by presenting different types of music to suit different screen subjects. We could almost count on our two hands the featured organists who have continually given their theatres and their particular public marketable entertainment. These organists have never had to fear the sound picture situation and in fact have a terrific time even trying to get away for a week or so.

Some of the organists whom we have in mind and who have made a name for themselves in the motion picture field are: Henri A. Keates, known as the "man who has put community singing on the map"; Albert J. Brown, creator of the Scrimophone; Eddie Melker, originator of the Harding Organ Club, and several others.

In order to give you a better idea why it pays to be on the alert, we will publish with this article a few letters written by popular organists from various sections of the country, who have found organ novelties to be as much in demand as any other feature of a motion picture theatre program. For instance, Roy E. Churchill, featured organist of the Burns theatre in Colorado Springs, Colo., writes the following letter:

"I have a very unique stunt for the kiddies each Saturday, one hour before the regular show. We have a regular broadcast hour from twelve to one each day, and on Saturdays we invite the kiddies and the parents down for a big song fest, and what a wow it is."

"We have buttons and membership cards and novelties, such as candy for one week, through the courtesy of some candy shop; and the next week some cookies from some enterprise bakery company. And with the singing over the radio and all the tie-ups we can get, we are able to get a real nice bunch of kiddies."

"This next Saturday we will have the local Fathe News man take pictures of the song festival, and it looks very much like we will have the SRO sign up long before the time the show starts.

"If you can get some ideas from this letter, I will be very glad to let any organist know the entire particulars by writing to me. Also I am looking forward to seeing your Organists Column in the Herald-World."

J. Virgil Huffman, featured organist of the New American theatre in Roanoke, Va., writes this letter:

"I am enclosing a description of a novelty which I recently worked and which you might care to use in the Herald-World. The stunt went over fine and I might mention that using the P. A. "mike," in plain view of the audience, seemed to create a very favorable impression, as the audience seemed to like the way they were allowed to see the 'working' of the amplifying system."

Billy Muth, featured organist of the Greater Palace theatre in Dallas, Texas, writes this letter:

"In order to plug the theme song of 'Wolf of Wall Street' a week in advance at the Greater Palace theatre in Dallas, I obtained the services of a popular singer of the city, Miss Virginia Anderson, winner of the district Atwater-Kent radio contest. The singer was presented at the regular organ solo with appropriate announcement slide, singing 'Love Take My Heart.' Copies of the number were sold in the lobby and plugged by a Panatrode loud speaker arrangement to standees and on the breaks. An announcement was run on the screen to the effect that the song could be obtained in the lobby. On the big breaks ushers sold copies, and at other times during the day they were obtained from the information girl."

No, there's nothing the matter with the organ. But the one who operates it must have his art back, or for that matter, musicianship. He must have ideas.
Wax Figures' and that, he says set him thinking.
So in 1925 he started the Little Theatre movement in New York. As director of the Cameo on 42nd Street, he made this theatre widely known for its motion pictures and musica-lrevivals.
For the opening of the Film Guild Cinema, he arranged a program not particular-designed for either the acoustic or projection properties of the house.
It was treated rather roughly by some of the better critics and got a better reception only from the "arty" ones.
The inaugural piece was entitled "Life and Love—Ballet of Hands," a far-fetched, glibly thing in which simous, treacherous digs demonstrated all the world activities of Haiti humanity is capable. Also on the program was "The Frog Princess," a delightful pic-turization in color of an old Russian folk tale which captivated a fairly sophisticated audi-ence.
"The Fall of the House of Usher" was a gruesome, futuristic piece, slightly reminiscent of the "Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," but lacking in the subjectivity of that presentation. It wound through endless sequences of cubes and whirls, executed by means of men in accordance with William Bolotho, in the New York World wrote of the opening night as follows: "The Film Art Guild's new theatre in Eighth Street, is interesting. The architect, a short Austrian named Frederick Kiesler, showed me with his pastelboard models that his idea was new, simple and the definite prototype of the small cinema hall; he is quite likely to be right, I felt. "None of its special features were used by Symon Gould, who ran the show; neither the saucer-shaped screen, nor its diaphragm con-trivance, for the camera was not well focused. Nor the black wall and roof screens, which were to allow of the 'spectators' being sud-denly and literally immersed in the drama," for the films shown had no use for them.
"The peculiar screen is to correct the angle of vision for spectators in any part of the house. My own allotted seat was two feet away from it but I did not test this improve-ment, because I object to a crick in the neck even if I am guaranteed against a squint. Nor did I test any other so far as I could see. The front seats were empty, just as they are in any other cinema.
"Lastly, Kiesler has solved the acoustics a hall by the funnel shape, and special wall singing. But, again, all this was too much in advance of what Symon Gould knew how to use. The overture from "Cavalleria Rusti-ca" and other strictly worn-out favorites on a sentimental organ don't need acoustics, but wooden stockings in the pipes."
This exaggerating and sudden lapse be-tween the instrument and the use made of it ached still more when they came to the pro-gram. The Kiesler-model cinema is destined. I hope, to spring up all over the city in odd corners and allow of amusing, good film shows with a minimum of inconvenience and fabric overheating. And tosherahin its manu-facture, a potent, snuggly mysterious form, full of the right sort of illusion and force. All this was wasted on its opening night.
"The program was, in fact, Mr. Symon Gould's idea of what is good, and it is not mine. I am forced therefore into that foggy world, art criticism, which I dislike as much as garden suburbs, or a fox-hunting party held up on a bright frosty morning with a belated funeral."
Symon Gould himself calls this theatre a "function in architecture as opposed to decor-a- tion."
How far the screenoscope will go, it is im-possible to say. Kiesler, counting on the acoustic properties it incorporates, predicts the day when its use will be nation-wide. In the meantime, the Film Guild Cinema is affording a chance to experiment with it.

TEN COMMANDMENTS
Only Ten—But Theatre Managers, Do You Keep Them?
By RAY LEGRANCE
(1) Thou must be sure that lettering is well placed on marquee and that no "dead" lights appear therein.
(2) Thou must be careful of thy lobby and see to it that every decorative box, sign and accessories are well placed, and neatly— the impression of a theatre is gained upon entering the lobby.
(3) Thou must likewise remember that a manager's place is not sitting down in the office resting but on the main floor of the theatre, meeting and greeting patrons, entering or leaving.
(4) Honor thy patrons, and see that they get courtesy and attention at all times; also watch broken seats, keeping same in repair, for there is nothing so irritating as to have clothing torn on broken seats.
(5) Thou shalt not maintain a shady theatre; watch ventilating system closely; see that exhaust fans are opened at least once every performance, preferably during picture programs.
(6) Thou must be particularly caution-concerning thy music; see that said music con-forms to the picture; also be sure that thy organ is kept tuned and in good repair; music can make or break a picture.
(7) Thou must never lose sight of the fact that projection is vitally important; that proper light is thrown on picture; also, that picture is focused properly; and that projection room is kept clean.
(8) Thou must be cautious about advertis-ing, remembering that words cost money; carefully plan publicity and exploitation, working with a definite objective in mind.
(9) Thou must not neglect to get around the locality, check up on the opposition, and be active in civic organizations; that means business.
(10) Thou must also see that all attachments of theatre are neatly and cleanly dressed; that doorman upon tearing ticket thanks patrons; remember that a polite "Good evening, Sir," places patron in a receptive mood for the entertainment and costs nothing.

Made of aeroplane spruce, and sci-entifically designed for strength, the Dayton Safety Ladder is many pounds lighter in weight than any other safety ladder.
With its strongly braced wide leg-spread, it stands solidly secure when in use, yet folds easily and compactly for carrying or storage. Has a folding auxiliary step for extra height; its straight back permits close work against walls. There is no other ladder like the Dayton; yet it is not high priced. Made in sizes 3 to 16 feet.
We also make Type "B" Dayton Ladder, a smaller popular priced safety ladder.

PROJECTION COMES FIRST

remember the familiar old slide, "One Minute Please to Change Reels," due to the fact that one machine was considered enough. Today the projection room is the 'heart of the house,' upon which the theatre depends for its existing and successful operation.

"There are still a few exhibitors and quite a few architects, who are of the opinion that after the theatre is practically completed, some out-of-the-way place can be found to install two projectors and a spot light.

"This, however, is a great error, as there are so many facts to be taken into consideration, that no one man is capable of properly locating the projectors and other equipment without hours of careful study of the individual characteristics of each theatre.

"For instance: How many seats will the theatre contain? How wide will it be? How long? How high? How large will the Proscenium opening be? How deep will the stage be? How high above datum? At what angle would a patron in the front row be compelled to look at the picture? The back row? The most extreme right and left seats? Will people walking back and forth, obstruct the light rays of the projection room? Are there any mechanical obstructions to the light rays such as chandeliers and decorations? Will the decorations be of a character to pick up and reflect light rays to the screen or the patrons?

"Will the location of orchestra lights, chandeliers or bracket lights reflect light to the screen? Will there be any possibility of daylight reaching the screen? Will the size of the screen be commensurate with the dimensions of the house?

"What type of equipment will give the best results, Incandescent Lamp, Mirror Arc Lamp, Ordinary Arc Lamp, or H. J. Arc Lamp? What type generator will give the best results with a minimum cost of maintenance? What type lens will be best suited to the particular theatre?

"The kind of performance to be put on will raise the question of placing the screen or screens, also the necessary equipment in the projection room for the projection of lighting and scenic effects to the stage. Will stage lighting be controlled from stage or projection room? Will curtains be controlled from stage or projection room? Will house lights be controlled from stage or projection room?

"With the advent of sound in motion picture theatres, of course there are many more problems which will enter into the correct design of the projection room. Heretofore, we have not had to worry about the projection room being actually sound proof. But now we may have to materially change the design of projection ports in order to eliminate the undesirable tendency of having the audience hear the monitor horns blasting through the ports. Again with the advent of sound, it became necessary to install the complete system for the sound equipment in such a manner that it would be a permanent installation and not look like an afterthought.

"This necessitated close cooperation with the organizations who were furnishing the talking equipment. New projection room standards were necessarily introduced in order to increase the space between the projectors and accommodate room for the sound equipment.

"In view of the fact that this sound equip-

"Only after considering a vast number of important details, is it possible to intelligently plan and design a projection room and recommend the proper projection equipment to be installed therein.

"Equipment distributors should have facilities to handle all installation work to the most minute detail, including their staff men who are thorough theoretical and practical electricians. Draftsmen who are thoroughly familiar with projection room equipment and requirements. Men versed in the study of reflection and refraction, and who are familiar with every type of screen and its characteristics. Men familiar with every type of motion picture projector from the smallest to the smallest toy projector.

"The above serves to merely indicate the variety of work which must be taken into consideration before it is possible to plan the projection room and to illustrate to what extent equipment distributors can be of service to the exhibitor, architect and contractor, as well as to the projectionist.

"At the earliest possible moment the architect should confer with the engineers of the equipment distributors, the supervision of a circuit, the chief projectionist or local projectionist of some standing. In some instances it would be advisable to consult the secretary of the Local of the I. A. T. S. E. of the territory in which the theatre is being erected. The plans of the theatre should always be submitted to a practical projectionist and after consulta tion with the owner the architect must receive directions which will enable him to properly prepare the floor plan of the projection room. The right time to do this is in the early stages of preparing the plans in order that the full requirements of the projection room may be considered before construction makes it difficult or costly to give the projection room the proper size, location, etc.

"After a decision has been arrived at, as to the type of equipment most suitable for use in the theatre, the engineer should get in touch with the architect who designed the theatre. He should acquire copies of the orchestra floor plan, projection room floor plan, and longitudinal cross section through center line of theatre. These plans should be studied from each of the above mentioned angles, the distance of projection determined, the correct size screen decided upon, and the angle of projection worked out.

"This necessitates quite a little bit of mathematical calculation and geometric drawing, and should not be left to mere guesswork or to someone relying on a keen eye to determine the proper angle.

"A case is known in which a man working in a projection room for twelve years was under the impression that his projectors were setting at an angle of approxi-
Incandescent "Klieglights" for Sound Photography

These new Kliegl lights, in which high-candle-power incandescent lamps are used for the light source, furnish brilliant evenly diffused light high in actinic qualities, permitting photography with clearest of detail, full color values, sharp definition, and freedom from sound interference. They are absolutely noiseless in operation and cause no disturbance in the recording of sound photography; are efficient in light control and utilization; afford complete command over direction, diffusion, and divergence of the light beam; are light in weight; can be easily and quickly handled; operate on the service line, whether a.c. or d.c. They are modern in every respect, and adapted to present-day studio conditions.

Write for Bulletin No. 101, which fully describes and illustrates these new Kliegl studio lights—and explains how they are used in motion picture and sound photography.

diplomacy. Confidence in old and arbitrary regulations is not easily lost but friendly discussion can almost invariably straighten matters out.

"To illustrate how such situations can be handled, the writer will describe an incident that occurred recently in a large Southern city. The fire commissioner, acting solutely, forbade the use of spot and stereoscopic projectors unless they were cut down to 12-in. square. He also insisted that the projection room should be provided with opening covered with wire located in all four walls close to the floor. Permission was requested to see a copy of the local code and to our surprise we found that it was his purpose to compel us to adhere to specifications laid down for asbestos 'booths' of twenty years ago.

"The theatre in question was a large modern one being built for a great circus with a well organized construction and projection department. We were able to point out to him that the theatres in his own city were violating the code, and that our precautions were quite a little advance of those laid down for the asbestos booth. The fire commissioner proved quite open-minded and it was a satisfaction to us to have him state that there after our requirements would be adopted as standard for his locality.

"This incident indicates to what extent local authorities may be in error and how practical experience combined with good judgment may be used to correct mistakes.

"Another diagram must be made to show the actual connection of every wire, switch and piece of projection room equipment as well as the panel. Two of the wiring diagrams should then be furnished, showing complete electrical connection of speed indicators, voltmeters, ammeters and any other instrument which may be used in the projection room. The architect construction engineers, builder and su pervising projectionist of the circuit should then be supplied with blue print drawings of these five drawings after a conference with these, if there are no changes to be made, the plans are ready to be taken to the theatre under construction.

"Several weeks prior to the opening of the theatre, one of the engineers visits and together with the projectionist, building contractor, and electrical engineers makes a complete check-up of the work as far as it has progressed. From this time on, a constant check should be kept on the theatre until it is time to install the projection equipment.

"The distributor's representatives then proceed with the actual installation of the equipment. After this in conjunction with the projectionist has been completed, test and retest every piece of apparatus, run in the projectors, calibrate the instruments, focus the lens, and set the screen until the theatre actually opens its doors for the first performance.

"One or more of the engineers should then remain in the projection room until the closing of the theatre on its premier night.

"The foregoing is an excellent method of planning and designing a projection room where a circuit or theatre is not capable of having a competent projection engineer on its staff. Of course, where there is such a man, it would be the duty of the chief projectionist and his staff to supervise the designing and the layout of the projection room completely from the date of the filing of the plans with the building department."
LEGAL PHASES OF THEATRE
peining business in the town of Olney.
Richardson filed suit to enjoin Clay and Brady from operating the business, and alleged that these two men had conspired together to avoid the agreement made with Clay and Sanders. Both Clay and Brady denied the conspiracy, and testified that Brady was operating the business in the new building under a lease, and that Clay was not interested in the new business.

Court Explains Legal Interpretations
After thoroughly considering all of the evidence in the case, the lower court issued an order preventing Brady from operating the theatre and preventing Clay from leasing it. The higher court sustained the verdict, and in explaining the law on the subject in part said:

"While Brady was not a party to the contract between Clay and Richardson, he has injected himself into the subject-matter in such a manner and way as to render himself liable to the restrictions. A seller, property may, by a restrictive promise, reasonably limited, agree to refrain from himself engaging in a business or from disposing of his property in such a way that others engaged in a business which would impair the value of the property to the buyer for the purpose for which he intended to use it, is not to be questioned."

Also, it is important to know that a seller of a theatre cannot avoid legal liability by organizing a corporation in an attempt to avoid a contract of this nature.

For illustration, in the leading case of Kalopoulus v. Lumm (141 Atl. 440), decided during the past few weeks, it was disclosed that the owner of a local business sold it for $50,000. The contract of sale contained the following clause:

"And it is hereby agreed and understood by and between the parties hereto, and a part of the consideration of the purchase price hereof, that the said party of the first part (seller) is not to enter into, conduct, or finance any competing business within the corporate limits of Hagerstown, Md., for a period of ten years from June 1, 1921."

About one year later, the purchaser sued the seller, contending that the latter had financed a corporation which conducted a competing business. Some of the stock was purchased by the employees of the new corporation, at the instance and with the cooperation and the financial and other support of the seller, as a mere cover or blind to conceal his interest.

The seller of the business attempted to avoid liability on the contention that since the business was being operated by a corporation, he was not personally liable. However, the court held the purchaser entitled to relief, explaining the law, as follows:

"The corporation was the convenor's (seller's) conscious tool, and bound by its notice of the original contract to refrain from a breach. The corporation is therefore the fraudulent instrumentality behind which the defendant (seller) masks and carries on a competitive business for his personal gain. Under the circumstances set forth, the corporation is in no accurate sense a third party but is, in effect, the convenor in disguise, and hence a person whose substantial rights are shown by the allegations to be necessarily involved and must be passed on."

Laine v. Aarino (164 N. E. 238). Here the seller of a business established a competing business in violation to a valid contract. The lower court held him liable in damages and refused to permit him to sell or operate the new business.

He appealed to the higher court requesting modification of the judgment so that he might dispose of the fixtures and equipment that he had purchased for utilization in the new business. However, the higher court refused to permit him to dispose of the equipment to any one likely to conduct a competing business, saying:

"He cannot complain if he is forbidden to work in a new business established, though indirectly, by him; nor if, having created a new business there, he is hampered to some extent in disposing of what he has wrongfully put into it, and thus prevented from inflicting injury upon the plaintiff which he had contracted not to inflict.

On the other hand, although the courts will compel the seller of a theatre to fulfill the terms of a reasonable agreement not to enter into a competing business, yet the seller is privileged to establish a theatre in a locality not specified in the contract, and he may accept any business from persons living in the town in which he operated his original business.

For example, in McCarty v. Constable (223 N. Y. S. 481), decided recently, it was shown that a man named Constable sold a business, conducted in Sidney, N. Y., to a man named McCarty. In addition, he sold to McCarty the good will of the business for the sum of $300 and agreed not to engage in the same business or to be interested directly or indirectly for himself or any one else in such business in the village of Sidney.

Three years later Constable became engaged in a competing business in the village of Unadilla, about five miles from Sidney. In the same year many persons who lived in Sidney patronized the new business in Unadilla. However, the seller did not solicit the business from the Sidney patrons.

McCarty filed suit against the court to issue an order restraining Constable from accepting patrons from persons who lived in Sidney. However, the court held that Constable may not be restrained from operating a theatre in a territory not specified in the contract, nor is he liable for selling tickets to persons who live in the town specified in the contract.

On the other hand, if the seller makes special effort to solicit business from persons living in the town or locality in which he was formerly located, he may be liable because the legal effect of soliciting such patronage is engaging in competing business in violation of the contract.

Liable for Creating Competition

Still another important phase of the law is discussed in the recent case of Bolt v. Ligon (142 S. E. 564). Here a man named Ligon sold his business to a purchaser named Bolt and contracted not to engage in a competing business in the same city for a period of five years.

Soon thereafter Ligon opened a different business and began advertising this business in the local papers. He attempted to avoid liability on the contract by advertising his business to be of a different character from that which he sold to Bolt. However, he would occasionally perform acts in the conduct of the new business which he had performed in his original business.

The purchaser sued Ligon and asked the court for an injunction to prevent the latter from doing anything in the conduct of his new business that he had previously done in he business purchased by Bolt. It is important to know that the higher court rendered a verdict in favor of Bolt, saying:

"Generally stated, the cardinal rule, in the interpretation of contracts, is to ascertain the intention of the parties and to give effect to that intention if it can be done consistently with legal principles. . . . The parties should be bound for what they intended to be bound or and no more. . . . In other words, the subject to be obtained in construing a contract to ascertain the meaning and intent of the parties as expressed in the language used."

On the other hand, it is interesting to observe that an oral contract is invalid by the terms of which the seller of a theatre agrees to enter into a competing business. For example, in Diller v. Schindler (263 N.E. 277), it was disclosed that a proprietor of a theatre verbally promised that he would not at any time conduct or operate a competing business in the neighborhood of the old business.

Notwithstanding this agreement, about six months later, the seller opened a competing business which was situated two blocks away from his former place of business. The purchaser thereupon brought suit to recover damages and asked for an injunction restraining the seller from conducting the competing business, on the grounds that he had violated a valid verbal agreement not to engage in a competing business.

The lower court held that the purchaser was entitled to a permanent injunction and damages in the sum of $1,000, but the higher court reversed this verdict, and in holding the oral agreement invalid, said:

"Schindler (seller) did orally agree not to engage in said business, but so long as this stipulation was not incorporated in the written agreement which was subsequently made . . . the parties agreed to a valid verbal agreement not to engage in a competing business."

Moreover, any agreement is invalid and unenforceable by which a seller of a theatre agrees not to compete with the purchaser in any business or branch thereof in which he engages after the engagement of the purchaser at a later date.

For illustration, in the leading case of Thomas v. Miles (30 S. 274), it was disclosed that a proprietor entered into a contract, the important paragraph of which is as follows:

"The parties agreed not to engage in the business of which a seller of a theatre agrees not to engage in the business of the said seller, or any branch thereof, within the city and shall not in any way interfere with any business therefor which has been established. . . . or that may hereafter be established.

In this instance, the court held the part of the contract relating to the restriction of the right of the seller to compete with the purchaser to be unenforceable by the seller of the theatre. Under the contract, the holder of the contract had the right to engage in any business or branch thereof in which he engages after the contract was signed.

When Damages Are Collectable

Another important phase of the law on this subject is that frequently it is difficult for the purchaser of a business to collect money which the seller agrees to pay should he es-establish a competing business. It is well es-that where the restrictions in a contract of this nature are reasonable and enforceable, the amount specified as liquidated damages is collectible, provided the courts determine with reasonable assurance that the damages sustained by the purchaser of the business equal the amount of liquidated damages specified in the contract.

For instance, in the very recently decided leading case of Robbins v. Plant (297 S.W.
1027) it was disclosed that the seller of a business agreed to pay the purchaser $10,000 as liquidated damages if within 25 years the seller should establish a competing business in the same county.
After contract was signed, the seller of the business leased a lot to another person who constructed a building and established a competing business, in close proximity to the location of the business which previously had been sold.
In this case the court promptly held the purchaser of the business entitled to recover $10,000 damages, because the testimony produced that the seller, although not directly interested in the competing business, was the instigator of it and authorized the use of his land in its conduction, as a result of which the purchaser actually sustained damages amounting to $10,000. This court construed the presently established law on this subject in the following language:
"There is no hard and fast rule as to what contracts are void as being in restraint of trade, and care must be taken to judge according to facts and circumstances. It is also well settled that a person may legally purchase the business of another for the purpose of removing the restriction with an agreement on the part of the seller not to carry on the same business in the same place for a limited period of time."
On the other hand, frequently contracts restricting the seller of a theatre from engaging in a competing business provide that the seller shall be required to pay the purchaser a stipulated amount of money, without regard to the actual damages which may be sustained by the buyer, should the seller fail to fulfill the terms of the contract.

Contract Void if It Contains a Penalty

Generally speaking, a contract is void which contains a penalty for failure of the seller of a business to fulfill the terms of the contract.
This is true because a penalty in a contract which is disproportionate to the actual damages that are resultant from breach of the contract, is unreasonable and therefore void.
Liquidated damages, on the other hand, is a supposed compensation made by the buyer and seller, at the time the contract is signed, of the extent of the injury which a breach of the contract will cause. A provision for a penalty is, therefore, necessarily invalid whether the parties call it a penalty or damages, whereas liquidated damages are collectable.
A provision for a forfeiture instead of payment or liquidated damages, though not favored by the law, is not necessarily invalid unless the amount is so large that it may be held a penalty. Even though the amount forfeited by the penalty is not necessarily slightly disproportionate to the actual damage suffered by the other party, in many instances the courts may declare the contract valid to avoid future litigation. However this is not true when the amount to be forfeited greatly exceeds the actual damage sustained by the other party.
For instance, if the seller of a business agrees to pay liquidated damages amounting to $10,000 and the actual damages sustained by the purchaser of the business do not exceed $5,000, the contract is likely to be held void because payment of $10,000 is deemed a penalty and not permissible in law, because the amount fixed is too great to be construed as a forfeiture.
Therefore, the amount of liquidated damages which the seller of a theatre agrees to pay in the event he establishes a competing business, should be a reasonable amount consideration of the damages likely to be sustained by the purchaser if the seller breach the contract.

AS AN ARCHITECT SEES CONDITIONS IN SMALL TOWNS

By R. L. SIMMONS

THE theatre owner is facing much the same problem today as the independent merchant. The merchants are holding conventions, meetings and conferences debating the chain store situation—which affects the theatre owners, although they may not have the solace of company to talk to.

The independent must have an investment outlet and naturally look to make these investments double acting as an investment and as a definite market for products, without sales cost or resistance. This action is good business and may not harm the theatre business to the public, but is not of the independent owner, and to some extent, the material and supply houses—reduce the number of purchasing agents and increase their purchasing power and you have a problem for the salesmen of supply houses—an advantage to some, a disadvantage to many. But if this does not produce better products or reduce prices, just what is the benefit to the public, and what to the independent exhibitors?

The independent exhibitor has a very vital role in the box office. He runs that single box office that he depends on, and it has no equalizing factor. Then, too, the owner feels his position in the community a responsibility and a pride. He feels a responsibility to himself and family, as well as to the public; he has lived in and studied the local area and dislikes, tendencies and wishes, and he selects his pictures accordingly. If he is practically in contact with his friends, he knows will not be well received in his particular case, or for certain nights for a certain class of attendance, although using a variety program. Some smaller towns have distinctive class fans, and the private owner can cater to this class preference. Surprising indeed how positive is community preference. If pictures are unlooked for at times, and occasionally how unrecognized by the exhibitor. This is not often done, and there is a case where the owner usually has a complaint about lack of attendance, or that the people prefer going out of town.

Take the silk stocking statistics. The lower wage girls spend proportionately more for silk stockings and underwear than do the high salary girls, and this parallel in theatre patronage,—but high grade silk hose must be carried in stock by the merchant for the minority trade. In the larger centers, exclusive shops can and do exist; so too with pictures. In some communities, the desire for the best may predominate, and another reverse of the above program should be adapted.

Now, let us consider the appeal of the theatre building on much the same basis as the pictures on the big stage. In this business each class of theatres has a type of building. One class expects it, the other wants it. Many a small theatre owner, having an old or incorrectly designed building, is fully convinced of the necessity of a new theatre. Although holding most of the patronage, he knows that they come in spite of the building. He would like to give himself the question of a new theatre and meeting the public demand, or retaining the old.

All phases of the undertaking should be considered then, if the building is an urgent need, proper steps should be taken to secure the desired results. Carefully work out the seating estimate. There are ways of calculating this, and a rule of thumb too small is preferable to too large one.

Western Electric sound picture equipment is now going all in New York as they sell to assume new duties in foreign lands. R. M. Hatfield (right) becomes E. manager in Australia, and F. D. Hurlbut is assigned to London.

People go where the crowd goes, or to a show that seems to be popular. Then cost of site, building and furnishings should be considered, in relationship to seating capacity and patronage. The design and decorations must be in keeping with the taste of patrons rather. This seems to be an age of color, but care should be used, for cheapness often is the result. Then there is the question of financing and locating the building, and this needless to say, is uppermost to the owner.

If some outside interests plan to build a new house, the local exhibitor faces a grave problem. Only one theatre can be supported, and he must drop out or rush proceedings. Bluffing on his part will have to be of a high order, for the foreign interests expect a good bluff and may beat him at the game, for the outside capital is no doubt superior to that of the small town, but with remarkable rapidity, but the one making the most progress and showing determination will win, for both know the result of two theatres in a one theatre town. Usually money is lost in a race of this nature, but I know one case where the second was run at an average profit of $500 a week.

An owner selected an architect, and together they selected a site. An opinion on it was taken—and that very day news reached him that the adjoining site was sold to an out-of-town theatre corporation. Plans for excavating were hastily made, and work was begun the next morning. Two new storeroom and a few dressing room jobs were being pushed, and in the meantime the architect was putting forth every effort on the plans.

The other project was going ahead without plans. Another building was being copied. Not even a contractor was in charge. There was a lot of work hurriedly done, but little accomplished. At this stage the chain operator began to make offers. The owner was in a quandary, for he wanted to build and he felt the other party was more or less at sea as to building and gave an unfavorable impression as to their sincerity, and with this in mind, asked for enough to clear all expense he had been to and the old theatre business, and his terms were accepted.

Dropping out of the contest, he watched the new theatre progress to more than half completion, when work stopped, and for some time nothing was heard of the proposition. Then the chain offered to sell to the local man, he to make the offer. The truth leaked out that they could not finance the building. They had “saved” the cost of the site, the store building and a lot of material in order to copy another building they had acquired and had spent all the appropriation for it building without completing it. Not only this situation, but also, than likely the circuit is well financed as can and will carry the work through, as this local man should consider the added “sound risk.”

In another case the local man saw the necessity of having a theatre, as he foresaw, contracted to buy a double on the ideal corner of the little city, as in due time he sent a survey made, and with this building, according to the plans, rush the financing. But he made the very common mistake of ordering complete plans as specifications, but later, before completing the financing. He intended organizing a stock company and using bond and was proceeding on the right principle but not the right sequence, was sure of his substatute position, for he laid himself liable to cost of property and plans and specifications. Fortunately, it company as finally organized accepted actions, but ordered new plans, as they had their own ideas regarding shops and office in the theatre. The plans were rejected, and were finally issued, and there was an old agreement attached to property rights. The same suggestions from all manner of sources, so that the new owner was a little unfamiliar with such proceedings and responsibilities, got nowhere. Finally, a man came in and established a new theatre.

Another case is of an owner with a very poor building who found himself looking to expand the business. A questionnaire inquiry revealed a chain theatre project. He hustled over to the book and was agreeably surprised to find he could borrow $5,000 upon his theatre. The building was sold, then he wired the writer to make plans and followed it by a letter, and within a short time plans and work was started on his site. As part of the plans were completed, in the order of construction, they were sent to the owner, who kept work progressing at fever heat, and as walls started up and steel and other material was delivered on the site, the foreign owner investigated and found the town behind the local man and that he seemed determined to build. They sold the site and dropped from the picture. Compliances, plan number, and lot sold, and the building completed for a full opening.

This man went heavily in debt. He saw that his building must meet expectation, and that his business must be competitive and he carried these ideas through. But he found he could pay off one-fifth of his plates at the last auction, and has maintained good ratio now for four years. His building, equipment and shows have met with wholehearted approval.

A theatre owner, although probably good for the future, is often a hardship at first, when interest is heaviest, and usually when patronage is the least. One case was that of a local man using coupons by both newspaper and house distribution. This method kept the house filled sufficiently to give the effect of popularity. The result was the cheapening of both pictures and vaudeville. The coupons or reduced price method gradually was dropped, for it had caused the revenue to be halved, so that the revenue was about the same. Income was figured on percentage of seating, and the building was marked down, made for a slowing up in debt retirement.

In spite of this situation, the management has installed the “talkies,” all of which goes to show that the business location with reasonable management will at least make some money. But how much better the investment and security if all was correctly analyzed before building started.
AMERICA LIGHTS SPANISH FAIR IN MAZE OF COLOR

The largest and most elaborate mobile color lighting feature yet built, costing $250,000, will be shipped from America to Barcelona, Spain, for use there in lighting the World’s Fair there from May to December. This latest in the Avers motor-driven equipment will see a spectacle of outdoor color lighting never before approached, according to Mr. Avers, who inspected the apparatus prior to sending it.

The main avenue of the exposition, leading to a gently sloping hillside, will be made the center of attraction and interest. The effect will be that of a mammoth staircase a half-mile long, illuminated with slowly moving waves of color. Blues will start first in the cycle from the National Palace on top of the hill, and move slowly down. When the blue has gone 100 metres, it will slowly end with red, the next color in the cycle. The sequence will continue, leaving the hillside from the National Palace to the entrance to the exhibition, a distance of 600 metres.

The color panorama also takes in five cas- des and three fountains, which are illuminated in a fascinating, ever changing color sequence. These three outside exhibits, designated as “elements” E, J, and G,” will be included in the motion color effect.

One hundred twenty-four Siemens Westinghouse lanterns, built lighting standards are employed on the Avenue de America, the main avenue of the exhibit. Numerous color screens, or “blenders,” also play to complete the moving light effects.

The color in motion lighting spectacle, running through an automatic cycle of 12 min- utes, is secured by means of a huge motor driven Vitrohm dimmer bank, designed and built by the Ward Leonard Electric Company, count Veron, eight-milliammeter Avers, equipment, the largest of its kind ever built, is the heart of the mobile color lighting installation.

The entire mobile system costs $250,000, the automated machinery is not available. Mr. Avers, who compiled the detail of the system, states that it is impossible to tell just what a projector mechanism will need in the way of repairs until it is taken apart and the parts carefully examined. Replaces that may look all right may be found otherwise under close examination with proper instruments. The price of such instruments (measuring to one thousandth of an inch) are not within the reach of the average projectorist. Then, too, the projectorist has to select from some of them must be correctly selected from oversize stock.

The new equipment for synchronized produc- tions brings up another problem in projection upkeep. In the larger houses the added draw- ing will be easy to offset the added expense. An expert projectorist will be needed to properly handle the equipment.

There is no doubt that the synchronized product has come to stay, and projectorists should be ready to make the equipment at the first possible opportunity.

The upkeep, as I stated before, will be a little added expense to the exhibitor and a little more trouble to the projectorist, but both will receive ample compensation for this added service to the public.

A “MOVING SNAPSHOT” machine, a nameless device for the quick-taking of moving picture films and a series of 1 to indicate the station on his radio, are among the interesting recent inventions by Avers, a Western Electric engineer, who is said to be most interested in projection devices, in Portage, Wis.

The “animated movie camera” he hopes to sell soon, and is making machines which have already been patented for some time, will do no more than go the way of all good inventions. But the contrivances on his radio, he says, were put there only for his own amusement.

In construction, the moving picture machine, whereby Avers hopes to put the tak- ing of pictures on such a new expensive basis that all can afford to have “movies” of their friends, is similar to other moving picture cameras, except that the cartridge or film is smaller and that it can be used as a projection machine as well.

Also, in exposing the film, half of it is exposed by an automatic process, and then, when the film is reached, the machine automatically reverses it, exposing the other half. Similarly in projecting the developed film, half is shown, and the machine automatically reverses the cartridge with no apparent break, says the inventor, in the continuity of the picture. This eliminates the necessity of rewinding.

The cartridges for this camera are made from regular moving picture films which come 200 feet long, but Avers cuts these up and makes them suit the needs of his camera. When developed they can be pro- cessed in a small album-like box in an undarkened room or upon a screen in a dark room. Avers’ projection box has the word “memories” in gilt letters on its lid, which carries out the idea of the “snapshot album.”

“People think several times before they invest in a moving picture camera now,” he explains, “because every time they buy a film it costs $6. But these little cartridges, I hope, can be made cheap enough for everyone. Everyone I know would enjoy having moving pictures of their friends, and there is no reason why such a machine cannot be at everyone’s disposal.

A device for the checking of films with the continuity sheets in laboratories and for checking up scenes without the slow method of reading, has also been developed by Avers. It looks simple enough—made from a block of wood, a cleverly concealed elec- tric light bulb and a few spools of film, its moving shutter and sprocket, arranged for screening the film on the rewind, is different from anything on the market, according to Avers.

It will be particularly useful in sound pic- tures and for measuring the length of the picture, so that the exhibitor can be certain that the picture can be run off, as fast as desired with no ill effects to the film.

Avers’ radio is another object which displays the vičtrola. He has worked on it for some time. The “dashboard” of his radio looks as complicated as a mariner’s chart, but when one begins to analyze it isn’t so hard to understand, after all. Aside from the two dials, the meters for volts, amperes and milliammeters, there are two tiny red and green lights which indicate whether the radio or the vičtrola is turned on.

REPAIRS IN TIME SAVES MANY A DIME

By CLELL JAY

PROJECTION experts have for some time advanced the theory that equipment in anything but the best of repair is expen- sive for the exhibitor. Today, with the steady advance in projection standards and its necessary equipment, this should be apparent to the most skeptical. The man that is hardest hit by the very thing is the author of such articles in his trade paper and doesn’t try to keep abreast of projection advance. The man-}
THE WARWICK—NEW THOUGH REMODELED

Over $100,000 was spent to rebuild this Kansas City theatre—and well spent, apparently.
A NOTABLE achievement in remodeling is that of the Warwick theatre in Kansas City, in which the owner, E. W. Werner, spent $108,000 for new decorations and furnishings and other changes. That is a prodigious sum for remodeling, but as these views of the new theatre indicate, it was worthwhile. The Warwick is truly a new theatre—one that could not be duplicated, when considered as an entire building, for anywhere near the amount Werner spent.

The whole remodeling task was carefully planned and covered almost every department of the enterprise. A new front of terra cotta was built at a cost of $17,000. Store space on the street was installed at a cost of another $10,000. The new lobby and foyer cost $20,000, while the auditorium was remodeled at a cost of $29,000. New upholstered Heywood-Wakefield seats cost $12,000, while an addition to the Wurlitzer cost $10,000. The total price of new draperies and carpets, furniture and fixtures ran to $10,000.

The result is a modern theatre in the place of one that could hardly be expected to compete with the fine new theatres in Kansas City. In brief, Werner elected to spend money to make money.
Preliminary figures submitted by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, of American motion picture projectors. Standard 35-millimeter and 16-millimeter home projectors for the year 1928, show an increase of 2,911 projectors during the corresponding period of 1927. During 1928, 5,933 American projectors, with a declared value of $890,202, were exported to 71 different countries throughout the world, compared with 3,047 projectors valued at $641,461 exported in 1927. As mentioned above, these figures include both 35 and 16-millimeter projectors and proving the fact that new and improved projectors are being built as the world desires them. The condition of the steel industry plays an important role in the manufacture of projector lenses. As the demand for projector lenses increased, so did the steel industry which manufactures these lenses. The decrease in the number of projectors imported during 1927, as compared with 1926, is due to the fact that the steel industry was not as busy during that period. However, this condition will not last long as a distinction between the different size projectors is being made at the port of exportation in the new table of classifications, which became operative January 1, 1929.

Europe, our best market for motion pictures, is likewise our leading market for the instrument required to show motion pictures. During 1928, there were exported to this region 2,092 American projectors of both types valued at $348,910, as compared with 991 projectors valued at $241,859, in 1927. Closely following Europe is the Far East, which imported 1,918 of our projectors with a value of $330,732 during 1928, as against 1,913, valued at $241,801, in 1927. Next comes Canada, which imported 1,257 projectors with a value of $137,442 in 1928, as compared with 483 projectors valued at $91,059 in 1927. Following Canada comes Latin America, which imported during 1928, 1,598 projectors with a declared value of $11,495, as against 300 projectors valued at $76,463 in 1927.

Africa and the Near East imported the remaining 88 American projectors with a value of $21,653 during 1928, as against 75 projectors valued at $17,279 in 1927.

American projector exports have increased in all but two of the ten leading countries. Canada has supplanted Japan as our leading purchaser of American projectors. Projectors for former imported during 1928, 1,257 projectors, as against 483 in 1927, while the latter imported 1,216 projectors in 1927, as compared with 641 imported in 1927. United Kingdom, remains third leading market, increasing its 1927 imports of 391 American projectors to 952 projectors in 1928. Australia continued next with a slight increase over the preceding year. During 1928, 295 American projectors were imported as against 243 in 1927. France, has jumped from seventh position in 1927, to fifth for the year 1928, importing during the year just closed 267 projectors, as compared with the 188 imported in 1927. Spain, as a purchaser of American projectors, has for the first time come into the list of the ten leading countries. During 1928 Spain imported 184 projectors, as against 30 in 1927. Belgium, has also secured a place as one of the ten leading countries. Projectors imported in 1928 by Belgium, were 276, as compared with the 58 imported in 1927. The eighth leading market is Germany, which shows a decrease, importing during 1928 206 projectors, as against the 188 imported in 1927. Switzerland, likewise shows a slight decrease for the 1928 period, as compared with the 1927 period. Projectors imported in 1927 were 235, as against the 188 imported in 1927. The Projector
By Frank Dudiak

Whereupon The Projector comes to life with a walkup for the miles who covers its eyes with oil and dirt, but with a kind word for the ones who helps it to do its stuff.

I am the projector! I shoot light rays and COWBOYS and Buildings and tin lizzies and rivers and female vamps and Prove that I am yours to dream. I am made of wheels and oops and Shape of good or bad Glass lenses and
A five feet broad big Electric are!

They feel fillums into me and
I try to see if they're Nee fillums.
Both, they’re full cracks and Busted uprook holes and Burn pockets I eat myself all mad
And chew ‘em up.
Yes verily,
Often they treat me mean.
They stick me way
Up an’ way back
And stand me on my Reference loud
Nearby
And then they gimme an Oil bath in!
I smear the fillums
With Dawn!

And some poor fish who
Only wish to me.
Projectioneerist
Let me get all covered
With oil and dirt so
I can’t see the Screen and then he Knows because the picture is буду.
Re-ver-er? He’s a bum Himself.
But after all they’re
Not all that way. Some of ‘em are very nice to me. They put me where I Ought to be. They gimme good oil to Drink and not too Much of it.
They keep me clean and gimme good fillums and
Gobs, how do I stuff
Just grand!

I am the projector! My gizzard is steel
My eyes are glass, drinking and eat fillums. I am the Projectioneer.

Jeanne Eagels in 'THE LETTER' gives one of the most gorgeous portrayals ever caught upon the silver sheet. A talking picture triumph." —New York American Intelligently produced and most competently acted. True passages of life-like drama. Compellingly performed." —New York Times

"'THE LETTER' accomplishes still another step forward in the eye-opening development of the talking film. Miss Eagels gives a performance that holds the spectator from first to last with compelling intensity. Reginald Owen as the husband and O. P. Heggie are admirable. Herbert Marshall is his own engaging self." —New York Telegram
"THE LETTER is certainly the best serious picture the audible screen has produced to date."

—New York Evening Post

"THE LETTER" is the best all-talking picture we have seen so far. Paramount seems to have the way to make talking pictures sound as well as they appear.

—New York Journal of Commerce

"THE LETTER" proves that both the legitimate stage and the silent drama have a real menace close upon their heels. It marks a new epoch in the talking screen.

—New York Morning Telegraph
“THE LETTER is the best all-talking melodramatic picture yet produced.”

—New York American

Anne Eagels does a magnificent piece of work. The most ambitious 100% dialogue picture to reach a cinema house. Scenes are well synchronized, all registering well. Certainly talkies have done right by this one.”

—New York Daily News

"THE LETTER" represents another step forward toward mechanical perfection in the audible photodrama. None of the jarring crudities that marked the earlier talking films is present. The film progresses with all the smoothness that one would expect of a workmanlike stage play.”

—Brooklyn Daily Eagle
"THE LETTER—must certainly be the best talking screen play that has yet been devised."

Some Exhibitor’s letters that Exhibitors should Read

From Andrew Battiston, Manager of Ritz Theatre, Irwin, Pa.

“We have finished a two-day engagement of your first subject, ‘Moulin Rouge,’ and want to tell you how well pleased we were with the results obtained on this picture. The picture did as well for us, in fact, better, than some of the specials which we have played. On the opening day we came within a few dollars of equalling our box office record for one of the biggest specials of the year. On the second day of the showing we exceeded the record on the special by more than thirty per cent.”

From C. C. Dunsmoor, Capitol Theatre, Marshalltown, Iowa.

“I thought ‘Moulin Rouge’ might have been an accident, but when I played ‘Tommy Atkins’ I knew you have some real productions. Story and direction smooth, appeal positively what we Americans want—real locations, no sham. More power to you fellows, you have got something and will reach the top with such productions. Advise availability of other four. They will make me money.”

From H. G. Steely, Shiloh, Ala.

“We were more than well pleased with ‘Tommy Atkins’ and ‘Honeymoon Abroad.’ The players were good and the directing excellent, and everything about them were real. We are glad we have several more of World Wide pictures.”

From Henry J. Mader, Clifton Theatre, Circleville, Ohio.

“I was very much pleased with the ‘Tommy Atkins’ picture which I screened Saturday. The picture was above my expectations.”

“I booked the picture ‘Woman in the Night’ for my theatres, and I wish every independent exhibitor in the United States believed in the World Wide proposition as much as I do. I am also looking forward to equally good results from both ‘Honeymoon Abroad’ and ‘Tommy Atkins.’ If you do one-half the things you claim you are going to do, you will be a Godsend to the independent exhibitors. Good luck to you!”

From Fred J. Greene, Rialto Theatre, Woonsocket, R. I.

“I have just received the approved contracts on World Wide Pictures for my town. As an independent exhibitor, I feel that I should like to take this opportunity to wish Mr. Williams and yourself the greatest success in your new venture. It is concerns such as yours that give the independent exhibitor a ray of hope, and I’m sure that every Independent exhibitor in this great country of ours will give you full co-operation.”

From S. P. Briggs, State Theatre, Denver, Col.

“I fully expect my patrons at the State Theatre to back up my judgment that ‘Tommy Atkins’ and ‘Honeymoon Abroad’ are two well worth while productions. I am convinced that a hearty welcome awaits the entrance of World Wide Pictures in the distribution field. I have always been an advocate of the internationalization of the screen (with apologies to ‘Jaydee Williams’). Our people like variety—in fact, it is the life of the entertainment business—and they like the truth. I believe World Wide will give them both. There is nothing too good for the State Theatre, and therefore, I expect to do a lot of business with you.”

Thank you, Gentlemen—
But we’re barely started. Better and Better Pictures and "Exhibitor’s Choice Selling" must win.

NEWS

No further action by the federal government in regard to the motion picture industry is expected until William J. Donovan’s successor is named.

Sound pictures will benefit musicians, Edward Canavan, musicians’ union head, tells the Herald-World, in denying that a parade would be held in protest to sound.

“Noah’s Ark” wins approval as brilliant spectacle at New York premiere, while at Palm Beach “Show Boat” is acclaimed by the elite.

Sound causes First National to realign 1928-29 releases in groups for each type of policy; M G M to put out third group of Movietone shorts starting April 6.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Healthy Competition

The industry is assured that William Fox has no intention, certainly not at the present time, of making a single producing unit out of Fox Films and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Fox has let it be known that he believes in the keesnest competition between these two producing units now linked under his banner.

This is a decision that deserves commendation. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has earned its spurs in the motion picture industry and it would be a pity to see this strong organization completely wiped out by merger with another. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has made some unique contributions to the American theatre and it is gratifying to know that opportunity to make more will not be lacking.

Information from New York, where a series of conferences were concluded last week between Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg of the Metro organization and the dominant Fox officials, indicates that Fox will permit the new member of his family as much freedom as possible. Metro is to be permitted to make pictures in its own particular way.

This is a matter of some importance to the exhibitor. With great mergers making the industry smaller, in a sense, rather than larger, the exhibitor can find renewed confidence in the assurance that plenty of product will always be available—pictures he needs for his personal success and pictures the industry needs for general prosperity.

Keen competition makes good pictures. There is no reason why two units of the William Fox organization should not be aided just as much by rivalry and competition with each other as with organizations on the outside.

In Place of a Five Cent Cigar

An eminent critic of the arts has said that what this country needs is not a good five cent cigar but a good German tenor. I venture that this is a requirement of small significance; what this country needs is a great comedienne.

This is not a responsibility for the motion picture industry alone. It is a matter for creators of any creed or color, for the stage and the bookshops have been equally unsuccessful with the screen in the search for this rare creature. And the screen has contributed at least one comic genius far overshadowing any in the history of the stage or any other art, Charlie Chaplin.

The motion picture has given the public some exceedingly deft comedienne. Constance Talmadge has done some admirable work with a delicious comic touch. Marion Davies, particularly in her later pictures, has a superb touch. Colleen Moore has a wide circle of admirers. Mary Pickford, in the old days, was a neat comedienne, while Mabel Normand was a real contributor to the difficult art of slapstick. And there are others worthy of mention, Louise Fazenda and this promising newcomer from Mexico, Lupe Velez.

I tip my hat to these ladies and bow from the waist. What I say here is in no way in disparagement of them, because it is obvious that they cannot all be great. Great is a word reserved for one apart, a word to be wrapped in cotton batting and placed gently on the furthestmost corner of the shelf, for very special dusting on some particular occasion. Great is a word that should be saved for one who has dominated his field quite as extraordinarily as Chaplin has.

Therefore, I repeat, the world could use a great comedienne. Frankly, I have never heard of one. I have heard of many to whom the term has been applied, in later years most particularly to Beatrice Lillie, but I have never seen one who might stand side by side with Chaplin.

Here is an ambitious task for motion pictures that would make a real contribution to the world’s gaiety. I don’t pretend that something should be done about it this moment, that the corners of the lots should be searched for this rare Phoenix bird, or that her name will be found somewhere in the lists of extras. I don’t imagine she will arrive next week, hat in hand, and apply for the job.

I do think, though, that there will be such a person some day and that the wise director will not be forcing her to turn on glycerine tears opposite some sleek-haired sheik when she ought to be doing something uproariously funny.

Charles R. Traub

It was all in the line of his regular work, this filming of speed on Daytona Beach. He knew the chances he was taking even as he had known them a few weeks before when he went down into the depths of the sea to film the escape from the submarine S4. And because he knew these things it is an everlasting credit to him and his fellows that he ground away at his camera until the skidding juggernaut, headed towards him, was less than three seconds away. Charles Traub will go down into motion picture history as a symbol of the quiet courage, the unquestioning devotion to duty which has made possible the progress of mankind.

Buy Sound Equipment Now, Woodhull Advises Exhibitors

Belief Audien Here to Stay Strongly Voiced at Meeting

250 Owners Attend Great M P T O A Convention; New Jersey Joins Allied States

[By a Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—”Buy sound equipment now!” was the keynote of the advice given by R. F. Woodhull, president of the M P T O A, in his address before the Sound convention conducted at the Elks Club here last Friday, under the auspices of the M P T O of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

Woodhull voiced his conviction that sound pictures are here to stay and that the prosperity of the exhibitor lay in his immediate action in procuring equipment with which to satisfy the demand of his patrons for them.

The entire meeting, which was attended by about 250 exhibitors, displayed an enthusiastic belief in sound as a part of the motion picture theatre business, and although there were, as might be expected, a number of exhibitors who feared that sound pictures were only a novelty which would eventually lose its appeal, they were in a small minority. The tenor of the gathering was emphatically expressive of a favorable reception of sound and had an unequivocal supporter in Woodhull.

Other speakers were Dr. Lee DeForest of DeForest Phonofilm, who spoke on the development of his various amplifying and sound inventions; and Pete Harrison, publisher of the widely circulated Little Rock weekly which was recently conducted in the Strand.

Sound Stirs Censor Issue

In Pennsylvania, another newly-aggravated issue is censorship, the advent of sound having caused Senator Max Aron of this city to introduce a bill to exempt exhibitors from the jurisdiction of the state board of censorship.

The bill has aroused women’s clubs, churches and other social reform organizations to bitter opposition, it being argued that by adding a little dialogue to a picture, the producers could eliminate any chance that the production would be censored.

The Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Delaware organization re-elected Charles H. Goodwin chairman of the board of managers.

The M P T O of New Jersey has voted to join the Allied States Exhibitor Association.

Measure Would Change Present Law Concerning Admission of Children

[Special to the Herald-World]

ALBANY, March 19.—A bill of interest to the motion picture theatre owners in New York state was introduced in the New York legislature last week by Senator Freiberg of Buffalo. The bill, which amends the general municipal law relating to the care of children in motion picture theatres, would permit the governing body of any city with a population of more than 50,000 and less than one million, to adopt an ordinance enabling the city to issue a license to a motion picture theatre that will permit the admission of children between the ages of 10 and 16 years, between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m., on Saturday and legal holidays, with Sunday excepted.

Films shown, however, would have to bear the words "No Family." Unaccompanied children, under the provisions of the bill, must be segregated in a special section of the theatre on the street level, with a matron in charge of each unit of 200 children.

Owing to the fact that the legislature is scheduled to adjourn on March 29, there is little likelihood of the bill’s getting far.
She Who Goes on Forever

WOMAN—despite new ideas that each age thinks revolutionary, eternally woman! A story about her is inevitably of love, and sometimes of revenge. And Columbia's, "The Eternal Woman" contains both, with the setting in the Argentine. It is a hot-tempered tale of mental processes and attendant customs near the Equator, where love and revenge are partners.

 Guinan **

La Guinan from Texas has suddenly become a figure in the motion picture industry.

She appeared with her night club, her father and mother, her friends and a houseful of suckers at a special showing of her new Warner picture, "Queen of the Night Clubs," at a gala midnight event at the Strand last week. She was given an uproarious reception.

Texas Guinan has made a name for herself that should prove a great box office attraction wherever her new picture is shown. Constantly on the front pages, for one reason or another, she is a public figure, and there will be plenty to go and take a look at her—that is, if you can see her for the price of one admission, that certain part of a dollar, instead of leaving your shirt and your top hat with the boy at the door.

Texas Guinan had quite a party with Charlie Winninger, Will Rogers, Dorothy Stone, Ruby Keeler, Bryan Foy, Zelma O'Neal, Walter Winchell and a thousand or more others, including Harry Warner, president of the House of Warner, who made a graceful little speech about how it all happened.

Major A. P. Waxman, resplendent in silk hat and stick, was the impresario of this pretty swanky evening.

 Broadway Abroad **

Broadway sent an unofficial ambassador pleurisotymary (well, he wouldn't know how it's spelled) to Baltimore last week in the person of Mike Simmons.

Mike went into the Southland to introduce "Times Square" to the gullible public. He got himself an airplane, boys, and went up over the big city for his first experience in the clouds. Mike gazed out over the side, looked things over carefully, and dropped a few well-chosen words and well-salted tears over the home of Mencken and Nathan.

Then Mike got out a hand and a parade. I didn't see it, as I can't travel as Mike does, but I assume there were elephants and giraffes and banters and everything that belongs in a Simmons parade. (Sounds like a society ad, "I use the Simmons parade.")

"Times Square" was quite a hit in Baltimore. The picture is coming to home plate pretty soon, and there will be a lot of eager watchers peering at it. A great deal is expected of "Times Square."

Trade Matters Before Government Expected to Be at a Standstill

Until Donovan's Successor Becomes Familiar With Office

—Paramount Suit Holds Up Trade Commission

By FRANCIS L. BURT

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Resignation of William J. Donovan as assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the antitrust work of the Department of Justice will serve, it is anticipated, to delay any proceedings which may be instituted against the motion picture industry as a result of cases now pending.

Until a successor is appointed and he familiarizes himself with the work of the division, it is not expected that any new important suits will be started.

The department has before it at the present time a number of matters affecting the film industry, the most important of which is Allied States' complaint regarding interchangeability, of which a thorough investigation is being made.

The work of the Federal Trade Commission in having the motion picture industry "clean house" is also being held up, not because of changes in personnel, but as a result of the Paramount suit, which is now being tried in federal court in New York. Officials of the commission do not believe that anything further should be done toward the trade the commission on the Paramount antitrust trial held in New York in October, 1927, until this suit has been settled, as it revolves around matters which were the subject of resolutions adopted at the conference.

Matters at a Standstill

The present time, therefore, finds motion picture matters in the prosecuting branches of the federal government almost at a standstill, but it is anticipated that this situation will not continue long, as a successor to Colonel Donovan is expected to be named in the near future.

The coming special session of Congress is not expected to take up any matters affecting the industry, but it is understood that attempts will be made to have the measures on block booking and Sunday closing for the District of Columbia introduced immediately, with a view to having the committees in charge of the proposals adopt similar legislation.

Another important matter pending is the censorship which has been voiced for a considerable time was that delivered a week ago by Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, former Assistant Attorney General.

Sees Tax Reduction

A possible further reduction in taxes, probably confined to those on corporations and large incomes, is seen by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon as a result of the prosperous level at which the business of the country has been maintained for some months past.

The story will be told when the tax returns for 1928, now being filed, have been analyzed, and the department is able to estimate how much revenue will be derived from income, corporation and miscellaneous taxes during the forthcoming calendar year.

Any reduction in taxes, however, is contingent upon the refusal of Congress to make heavy appropriations for farm relief or other purposes. If a big fund is provided for farm relief, even though it may be a revolving fund, large sums will be required to handle it and the chance of a tax reduction will be nullified.

Houses in Albany and Troy Do Biggest Lenten Business in Careers

(ALBANY, March 19—Motion picture theatres in Albany and Troy are doing the biggest business during the present Lenten season in their history.

One new house record was established last week in Troy, when the Lincoln theatre, using MGM's "Alias Jimmy Valentine," went over the $100,000 mark in a week. Crowds of such proportions flocked to the Leland in Albany, to witness Fox's "Hearts in Dixie," that midnight shows were given three nights during the week.

At the Mark, Nautilus, and First National's "Weary River," came within a few hundred dollars of beating the best week in the history of the house.

Warners Rename House

(Atlantic City, March 19—The name of Atlantic City's largest theatre, now under construction, has been changed from Embassy to Warner. The house is owned by Warner Brothers and plans are made to make this the showplace of the chain, with a seating capacity of 3,500.

Thalberg Declares Fox and MGM to Operate Separately

(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—The following statement was issued by Irving Thalberg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production executive on his arrival here:

"1929-1930 will be our greatest picture season.

"We have a conference with our associates Mr. Louis B. Mayer and Mr. J. Robert Rubin, in New York, we have completed our plans for 50 talking pictures with complete silent versions,and in the planning of producing pictures to have the greatest cast, directors and stories that can be acquired.

"Mr. Mayer and I wish to give assurance to the people in our studio that we are to continue to be a progressive, separate organization.

"We state unequivocally that the confidence that the theatre-going public of the world has shown in our product during the last five years will be more than justified in the coming season. We preach with pride to 'The Broadway Melody,' now being viewed by the public, and promise that 'The Trial of Mary Dugan,' Madame DuBarry, and a number of other talking pictures already completed and in the making, will show to the amusement world more progress in the production of talking pictures than we achieved in silent pictures.

E. V. Richards Named President of Saengers; Julian Saenger, Chairman

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, March 19.—E. V. Richards, Jr., has been elected president of Saenger Theatres, Inc., succeeding Julian H. Saenger, who has become chairman of the board of directors. The promotion of Richards was made February 25 but no formal announcement of the election was made public until March 14.

With Julian H. Saenger, A. D. Saenger, and L. M. Ash, treasurer, Richards founded the Saenger Theatres, Inc., serving after the organization was incorporated as vice-president and general manager. It is understood that as president he will continue in charge of the general management of the business.

"White Shadows" Rated Most Popular Picture Now Playing in London

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—"White Shadows in the South Seas," MGM picture made on location in Tahiti, which had a long run at the Astor in New York, is proving a big hit in London, according to reports from the British capital.

F. L. Pergande, British correspondent for the New York Times on cinema affairs abroad, said in a signed article in the Times: At the moment, "White Shadows in the South Seas," is proving a successor to the record-breaking box-office takings of 'The Singing Fool,' and is rated the most popular film of the day.

Fox to Let MGM Retain Autonomy

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is to be kept intact as a separate producing unit, despite the purchase of the company by Fox.

No announcement has been made to that effect, but it is known that Irving Thalberg, production executive who has been here, went back to California after a series of conferences with Fox, Winfield R. Sheehan and others with the assurance that MGM would not be interfered with in its work. How long autonomy will be granted to Metro is a matter for the future to decide.
“Noah’s Ark” Scores Big as Huge Procession of Spectacles

Even the Ballyhoo Holds Throngs Fascinated at Premiere of Warner Brothers’ Lavish Production in New York

By DOUGLAS FOX

NEW YORK, March 19.—The spectacular ballyhoo preceding the opening of the equally spectacular “Noah’s Ark” and continuing into the small hours helped to make the Warner Brothers’ affair one of the big premieres of the season.

Eight sunlight arcs, embracing most of the colors of the spectrum, mounted on the roof of the building on the northwest corner of 51st Street, played a convincing rainbow over an already colorful Broadway and took turns in concentrating on a captive bivouac higher over the Winter Garden. The lighter-than-air craft, which appeared to be about 40 feet long, traveled horizontally, then dipped and swayed as it was manipulated by wires from the roof of the theatre.

BROADWAY, always leisurely in the evening, took time off to watch. Celebrities under the marquee crossed the street to get a better view. From the other side they could get the full effect of the immense sign over the Winter Garden, a great wall, itself flooded with electric rain and clouds of steam, giving form to the allegory of the deluge, were shot with sparkling colors.

Effect Inside Brilliant, Too

Inside the theatre, after the preliminary Vitaphone shorts, which always seem to take the edge off a major production, similar paraphernalia was used to emphasize the impression of the flood.

A drop across full stage was lowered and electric projectors in the wings played clouds and rain across it, sound machines produced rumbling thunder, lightning flashed across the prosenium arch and other contraptions gave birth to sounds calculated to make the theatre less timid. Clouds of steam rolled upwards to complete the impression as the deep opening strains of the overture throbbed through the house.

The applause was spontaneous. People said it was well deserved. As spectacle after spectacle unfolded, the particular picture ran across the screen, “ohs” and “ahs” could be heard from the well-groomed audience. Here a casual finance age, obliviously impressed by the mass expenditure of wealth, there a cynical producer marveled at the mass destruction.

Scenes Bring Gasp

There was the hiss of indrawn breath at the center, the larger picture ran across the picture, and an audible gasp of horror as the wicked men of Japheth burned out the eyes of Japheth, son of Noah.

Yes, it was a big affair. People came out marveling at what they had seen. They stayed in the vicinity and talked about it, watching intently the steam-surrounded ark and the rays of the lights on the galloping limb over Broadway. The Warner Brothers, they said, had outdone themselves.

And it was a real crowd. With tickets at eleven dollars each, the house was sold out, packed to the hilt with a public Callable to the glitter of premieres, Warner Brothers, in “Noah’s Ark,” the big Biblical allegory, has left its mark on the Main Stem.

Sound Doubles Canadian Famous Stock Valuation

TORONTO, March 19.—A sensational rise in the stock of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, is directly attributed to the introduction of sound film programs in theatres of the Famous Players chain in important cities of the Dominion. Having a nominal value of $25, the Canadian shares have jumped to more than double their face value, a recent quotation on the Toronto and Montreal exchanges being $32.25.

Educational Launches Third Series of All-Audience Comedies

Jack White Group Goes Out to Exchanges to Follow Sennett and Coronet Productions—Dialogue and Sound Furnish Fun of Circus in First Picture

NEW YORK, March 19.—A brand launched this week by Educational as line-up of two-reel dialogue comedies, comedy have already been received by will be ready for preview within a few

This is the third series of all-talking comedies introduced by Educational, following the inauguration of the Mack Sennett and Coronet series, which have already played first-runs in practically every key center in the country.

Production activity on the three sound stages at the Educational Studios has been going at full blast both day and night, is a result of the extensive talking program Educational has outlined.

Jack White's initial all-talking effort is titled "Zip! Boom! Bang!", a circus comedy in which the characteristic Jack White fast action is given added impetus by the employment of dialogue and sound. White personally directed the first of this new talking series and he has undoubtedly got off to a flying start with his first effort.

In this he has ingeniously added the natural sounds of the "big top" to the photographic atmosphere of the circus, and the effect is called remarkably realistic. Through an amusing story about the Jumbo, which is forced to take his family to the circus, are interspersed with the cry of the Barker, the laugh of the hyena, the roar of the lions, the snarl of the tigers, the chatter of the monkeys, the inescapable sounds of the seals, elephants, lambs, and other gargantuan inhabitants.

Raymond McKeel essays the leading role in "Zip! Boom! Bang!", receiving support from the widely famed vaudeville team, Conlin and Glass.

Publix Student Manager Class Pays Van Beuren Studio Its Yearly Visit

NEW YORK, March 19.—The second annual visit of the Publix Theatre Managers School to the studios and editorial offices of the Van Beuren Corporation, was made last Thursday. The class was turned over to Paul Terry, who explained the intricate methods of making "Aesop's Film Fables.

Leaving the studios of "Aesop's Film Fables," the class was directed through the new all-talking comedy series is being the latest addition to this company's library of "Topics of the Day," and here a detailed description of how the jokes are selected by the editorial staff for the weekly release was given. The young men also evidenced interest in the library containing over 10,000 jokes.

A short talk on Grandland Rice's "Sporting Life" was the next item on the program. The visit came to a close following a short talk by Amedee J. Van Beuren, president of the Van Beuren Corporation.

Montreal Council Votes Daylight Savings Time

April 28 to Sept. 29

(Special to the Herald-World)

MONTREAL, March 19.—The city of Montreal has adopted daylight saving time, the council having fixed the period of April 28 to September 29 for advanced time. No objection was raised at the time of passing the bylaw, as the people had approved the measure in a referendum last summer.

"The Flying Fleet" Is Praised by Leaders

NEW YORK, March 19.—Mrs. Thos. A. McGoldrick, chairman of the motion picture committee of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, highly praised "The Flying Fleet." In her semi-monthly speech over radio station WJZ, in her speech she said that it was a fine piece of entertainment that was being recommended for Catholic high schools and colleges.

Rear Admiral People, general inspector of the supply corps on the West Coast for the United States Navy, wrote a letter of praise on "The Flying Fleet" to D. McLean, manager of the Grand Lake theatre in Oakland. He went out of his way in commending the producers on their portrayal of Navy life.

"Canary Murder Case" Is Held Over at Paramount

NEW YORK, March 19.—For the first time in the history of the Paramount theatre, a picture is to be held over for the second week. This honor goes to the all-talking Paramount picture, "The Canary Murder Case." Because of the enormous crowds it was considered wise to go beyond the usual one-week policy and extend the run.

Court Awards Goudal $31,000 and Hollywood Scans Star System

"Artist" and "Temperament" Play Important Roles in Suit Against DeMille Brought to Recover Losses Due to Unemployment

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Jetta Goudal's victory in court over DeMille Pictures, Inc., yesterday was pointed out by producers and legal representatives of studios as the approach of a distinct change in the star system in pictures.

Goudal was given $31,000 in the verdict. She had asked damages amounting to $90,000. The court ruled, however, that her delay in bringing suit and the fact that she did not try diligently to obtain employment following her break with DeMille prevented him from ordering the full amount paid.

He completely upheld her contentions that she was an artist whose wishes should have been regarded by her employers. Her value, the court ruled, lay "not in her ability to obey slavishly, for the humblest extra can rule that, but in her ability to inject the force of her personality experience and intelligence in her acting."

All of Goudal's difficulties with her employers had grown out of her temperamental outbreaks over the manner in which scenes should be made. The judge declared that she was with her rights in objecting to scenes which did not give her full scope in her artistic abilities. And the decision started production people on a new line of thought.

It has been the tendency, especially of late months, to check all forms of so-called temperament with players. Players have become extremely cautious about their behavior and have, in fact, submitted to arguments that courts would uphold producers. Fox has made a rule prohibiting directors from enlisting roles in their own productions. It has been a rather old Hollywood gag among all directors to step into a minor part during the making of the picture.

Farewell Luncheon Given Paula Gould, Publicist

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—A farewell luncheon was tendered Paula Gould by New York journalists at Sardi's previous to Miss Gould's departure for the Coast.

Radio Harris of the Cosmos Syndicate and Verne Harris of Warners acted as hostesses. Representatives of the Daily News, Mirror, Graphic, Sun, Herald-Tribune, Screenland, Moving Picture Stories and Screen Book were present.

Tiffany-Stahl Features Will Be Available for Houses Wired or Not

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Tiffany-Stahl announces that all features in dialogue and sound will be available to all classes of exhibitors. Pictures are being made with the RCA Photophone sound track on the film. They will be played on disc for such theatres that have only disc wiring, and silent prints for theatres having no wiring at all.

The first discs to be completed are on "Lucky Boy" and will be followed by the other dialogue and sound pictures, including "Molly and Me," "Midstream," "Whispering Winds," "New Orleans," "My Lady's Past," and "Two Men and a Maid."

Joseph Schenck Signs Fannie Brice to Be Star of All-Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Fannie Brice has been signed to make an all-talking film for United Artists. This will be the first that Joseph Schenck, Billy Rose, the song writer to whom Miss Brice was recently married, is writing the story and putting the music.

Miss Brice will arrive in Hollywood about June 1 and will be greeted by half of Times Square, as Harry Richman, Barabara Stanwyck, Chester Morris, Regis Toomey, Eleanor Gould, Joan Bennett and other Broadway players will be there.

Rumors have been circulating to the effect that Miss Brice would make a United Artists picture, but these were not confirmed until Schenck announced the signing of contracts.

First National Busy With Big Productions

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Preliminary preparations are now under way at the First National studio for the production of three important productions, which will probably face the cameras next month.

They are "The Great Divide," which Reginald Barker will direct, probably featuring an all-star cast; "Johnny Jones," to be produced under the direction of Mervyn LeRoy, and "A Most Immoral Lady," Corinne Griffith vehicle which William A. Seiter will direct.

License Fee for Traveling Shows Raised In Measure Instigated by Theatre Man

(Special to the Herald-World)

KLAMATH FALLS, ORE., March 19.—The tent show bill introduced by Senator Upton for H. W. Poole, theatre owner here, was passed without a dissenting vote by both houses. The measure provides that tent shows operating just outside the city limits, and therefore under the jurisdiction of the county clerk, pay a license fee ranging from $50 to $250, according to seating capacity. Therefore, dramatic stock and other tent shows could operate for six months for a fee of $10.

The real benefit from the adoption of the bill, which is technically an amendment to the old measure passed in 1892, will naturally go to the larger towns out in the state, whose theatre interests have been preyed upon every summer by these non-taxpaying traveling shows and carnivals.

Elite of Palm Beach Applaud U’s “Show Boat” at Premiere

Fashionables Boost Gross to $7,000 for Single Performance—
Similar Reception at Miami All Set When Projectionists Are Kidnapped and Show Is Called Off

Palm Beach, March 19.—“Show Boat” opened Saturday night at the Paramount theatre here to a smart and important audience. National figures of social and industrial importance were present to increase the notability of the occasion. Financially, gross receipts of one show amounted to $7,000, as compared to previous house record of one day, amounting to $1,200.

The audience applauded almost every sequence. Helen Morgan and Florenz Ziegfeld made personal appearances and were greeted enthusiastically. Many of the elite attending gave dinner and theatre parties. Although the seats sold at $5 and $10, several hundred were turned away.

The picture made a great hit with the audience, with special plaudits going to Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut and Kenneth Harlan. Helen Morgan and Jules Bledsoe clicked in the Movietone prologue.

The Palm Beach performance Saturday night came as a gay climax to the Florida showings of “Show Boat,” which had a rather sorry beginning at Miami the night before when the picture was to have its premiere at the Capitol theatre there. With a capacity house at $5 a seat, consisting of everyone who was anyone in the famous Rolled-Rexal gale dress, with three blocks of the street roped off by the police; with Helen Morgan especially imported from New York for a personal appearance; and with $6,500 in the box-office, the projectionists were kidnapped and sound equipment smashed. The reason is not known.

Citizens Up in Arms

Civic and social Miami is up in arms over the outrage. Both the theatre and the city are offering rewards for the conviction of the perpetrators. In the audience were Eugene Zukor and Abe Warner, both of whom made every effort to obtain a suitable theatre for the presentation of the premiere that night, but without success. The money had to be refunded and the audience went home, after a few songs by Helen Morgan and a few remarks by Harry Reichenbach.

Among the box holders at the Palm Beach showing were J. W. Raskob, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, E. T. Storer, J. Repogle, Drexel Biddle, J. T. King, H. C. Phipps, J. S. Phipps, Florenz Ziegfeld, E. T. Satterthwaite, E. R. Bradley, Jules Bache, E. F. Hutton, Frank Hutton and Gerald Dahl. All the loges and seats in the Paramount theatre had been sold out three days before the opening.

Give Special Parties

The Colony Club, the smartest club in Palm Beach, revamped all of its rooms to represent scenes in “Show Boat,” while the Patio Lamaze held a special “Show Boat” dance on Saturday night. Hotel guests and movie people were invited to this dance, and were served a “showboat” meal.

Pathe Will Supply Silent Version of All Sound Features

New York, March 19.—Pathe, while presenting talking and sound features of high entertainment value to meet the popular vogue, is likewise offering these same attractions in silent edition to meet the demands of the houses that are unversed, according to an announcement from the home office.

Among the features available both silent and with sound are “Captain Swagger,” “Show Folks,” “Sal of Singapore,” “Marked Money,” “Annapolis,” “The Speler,” “The Shady Lady,” “Geraldine,” “Noisy Neighbors,” and the “Office Scandal.”

Sound Leads First National
To Realign 1928-29 Releases

New Marketing Conditions Due to Synchronization Given as Reason for Change in Line-up—Product Grouped for Houses Wired and Non-Wired

NEW YORK, March 19.—The new marketing conditions brought about by talking pictures have led Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager of First National, to make a new line-up of First National product to be sold during the remaining season. The managers of the 38 First National branches have been advised of the new release schedule, which includes four road-shows, 18 dialogue pictures, 15 with music and effects, and 13 silent pictures.

The new line-up makes a clear division of the First National product. Houses wired for sound will find material in the 18 all-talking pictures and in those with music and effects. The road-shows form another class, and the silent pictures still another, for they are not all-talking pictures not equipped with sound mechanism.

The Four Roadshows

The road-show pictures, most of which are already completed or nearly completed, are as follows:

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Iron Mask" Break

Seattle House Records

(Exclusive to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, March 19.—"Uncle Tom's Cabin," Universal production playing with sound and in conjunction with two talkie acts, broke all house records at the Paramount theatre, according to manager Earl Cook. The Iron Mask," now in its third week at the Music, box office, has broken all house records and the United Artists picture will be held over for another week, says Manager John Hammond.

"The Iron Mask" is getting two extra performances at the United Artists in Portland and has exceeded the house record by at least 30 per cent.

"Coquette" to Follow

"Iron Mask" at Rivoli

(Exclusive to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Mary Pickford's first all-talking picture, "Coquette," will have its world premiere at the Rivoli theatre here when "The Iron Mask" has completed its run. Miss Pickford, minus her curls and plus her voice, will play her first grown-up, dramatic role. The pugilists and alley fights are already part of the past, history, so far as her new picture is concerned.

MG M to Start Release of New Movietone Acts April 6

Third Group of 26 Short Audios to Be Distributed at Rate of Two a Week—From 3 to 6 Subjects Being Produced Weekly at New York Studio

NEW YORK, March 19.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has announced its release schedule for the third series of 26 Movietone acts. These will be released at the rate of two weekly, beginning April 6. Featured among the group are Gus Edwards’ International Revue, the Metro Movietone Revue, Emil Bereo, Titta Ruffo, The Happiness Boys, Van & Schenck, and The Revelers.

Rapid progress is reported from the MG M Eastern sound studio, located at 127th Street and Second Avenue, where most of these Movietone acts were filmed. From three to six Metro Movietone features are being produced here weekly, under the supervision of Major Edward Bowes and Louis K. Sydney. Nick Grinde is guest director at this studio, and Larry Williams chief cameraman.

The latest addition to the up-to-date talking picture equipment installed at the New York studio is an automotive recording apparatus, placed on a truck which can be used for atmospheric shooting in New York City, as well as for inside work.

Fifty-two Metro Movietone acts had been released prior to the new series. Among the most popular artists are Van & Schenck, who have made five recordings; George Dewey Washington, the negro baritone; Marion Harris and the Four Republians.

The Third Series

List of the third series of the Metro-Movietone acts is given below:

April 6.—Al Wholman, (a) "What You Gonna Do Do Now?," (b) "Mamie Potus in Porter Parade," (c) "The Spell of the Blues;" Bernard & Henrie, (a) "Blackbirds Are Bluebirds Now," (b) "He’s Wonderful," (c) "Happy Go Lucky Lane."

April 13.—The Revelers, (a) "Comin’ Home," (b) "Evenin’," (c) "I Know That You Know."

April 20.—Carl Emmy’s Pets; Pathe Spitalty Band Revue; "Ship Ahoy," featuring Al Wholman as master of ceremonies, Chester Hales Girls, Ponce Sisters and Peggy O’Neil.

April 27.—Van & Schenck, (a) "Broadway’s Not a Bad Place After All," (b) "Real Big Papa," (c) "Chico;" Metro Movietone Revue No. 4, featuring George Dewey Washington, Ponce Sisters, Ella Shields, Joseph Regan, and Jack Pepper as master of ceremonies.

May 4.—Ukeele Ike, (a) "Half Way to Heaven," (b) "Good Little Bad Little You," (c) "I Remember That" (d) "It Goes Like This," (e) "Bridal Rose Overture."

May 11.—"The Man Higher Up;" Jan Garber’s Band, (a) "Washington and Louisville," (b) "Oh Baby," (c) "That’s My Weakness Now."

Opera Star Presented

May 18.—Eight Victor Artists: "At the Club," Titta Ruffo in "Figaro" from "The Barber of Seville."

May 25.—Robert Chisholm, (a) "When the Sergeant Major’s on Parade," (b) "When Summer Is Gone," (c) "The Two Grenadiers;" Happiness Boys, (a) "How O’ya Do," (b) "Who’s That Pretty Baby," (c) "If You Don’t Know a Hunk of George Cake," (d) "I’m Wild About Horses on Automobiles That Go Ta Ta Ta Ta Ta."

June 1.—Craig Campbell, (a) "There’ll Never Be Another You," (b) "Iris," (c) "You, Just You and I;" Irving Aaronson’s Commanders, (a) "Oh, You Sweet Old Whatchama Call It," (b) "Low Down," (c) "Woha-ha Walk."

June 8.—Fuzzy Knight, (a) "My Cinematography at Ohio Home," (b) "Backwater Cakes;" Raymond Hitchcock, "Sardines a La Carte."

June 15.—Vivette Rugeis, (a) "Gianinna Mia" from "Firefly," (b) "Way Down Upon the Swannee Riv," (c) "Roses of Yesterday;" Biltmore Trio, "Taking the Air."

June 22.—Gilbert and Sullivan Male Ensemble; Emil Bereo, (a) "Sur les Ba," (b) "Ike," (c) "Parade of the Woody Soldiers;" (d) "Napoleon’s Big Parade."

June 29.—Ed and Lou Miller, (a) "Aaf Weidersehnen," (b) "Rigoletto," (c) "High Up on the Hilltop;" Bob Nelson, (a) "That’s a Drop in the Bucket Compared to My Love for You," (b) "Just When I Thought I Thought I Found the Sunrise the Rain Came Pouring Down," (c) "Canna Boola Boola."

Movietone Shows Mistake In Inauguration Oath

Movietone has proved that the inauguration of Justice Taft was a bit wet. The mistake was noticed by Helen Tervilliger, 13, of Walden, N.Y., who listened in over the radio and heard Justice Taft say, "preserve, maintain and protect," instead of "preserve, protect and defend." Chief Justice Taft wrote the girl admitting his mistake. And Movietone News is "rubbing it in."
Greater Friendship Than This No Man Hath
(Special to the Herald-World)

CORNWALL, ONTARIO, March 19.—A fine of $5 and costs was imposed by Magistrate Milligan in pink. Mr. Charles Coleman when he was found guilty of disorderly conduct in the Capitol theatre. Coleman wanted to find a friend in the theatre despite the efforts of Manager Markell, paged him in a loud voice, disturbing everybody in the house. The arrest followed.

106 Features Produced
In England During 1928;
Doubles Figures of 1927
(Washington Bureau of the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Production of feature pictures in England has more than doubled since the passing of the quota law early in 1928, according to a report to the Department of Commerce. Features made during 1928 numbered 106, as compared with 45 during 1927, and 30 in 1926.

The number of film renters licensed under the act is now more than 80, while licenses have been issued to 4,100 exhibitors.

During the past eighteen months, 13 producing companies with an aggregate issued capital of nearly $6,000,000 have obtained new capital for the production of British pictures.

Three entirely new studios have been built, one at Eeltree, one at Wembley and one at Wembley. Existing studios have been enlarged, and studios which were only in occasional use are now fully occupied.

Horton in All-Audien
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Betty Boyd, Wampas star this year, has been selected to play the leading feminine role with Edward Everett Horton in his new all-talking film, "The Right Bed." Adriene Dore and Tania Akron will play in "Delicious and Refreshing," and Educational two-reel comedy.

New Called Fox-Oakland
OAKLAND, CAL., March 19.—The West Coast Oakland theatre, conducted under the management of Frank Newman, has changed its name to Fox Oakland. This is one of the first individual theatres on the Pacific Coast to add "Fox" to its name.

Washington Exhibitors Wage Long Battle
With Stench Bomb Fingers and Vandals
(Special to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, March 19.—Western Washington exhibitors have been having a contin- ual battle with high operating costs on the one side and arbitrary actions on the part of the unions.

Starting with the Victory theatre in Tacoma, there was trouble with the opera- tors, and later the theatre was broken open at night and the organ and screen were smashed. The Grey theatre here had almost identical trouble the following week. The Madison Street theatre did not employ an organist by the union, and later the house was stench bombed by unknown persons.

The Roycroft, operating as a union house connected with the John Dancy circuit, was broken into at night and much damage done. Other theatres have similarly suffered.

Then on the night of March 1, 1929, the Mt. Baker theatre here was broken into at night, stench-bomb crystals were spread over the floor, the machines were dis- mantled and smashed, the talking equipment ruined beyond repair, the rectifier smashed and muriatic acid was liberally poured over the entire mess. Manager Williams blames the union with which he had a dispute.

Harry Charnas and A. P. Waxman Head
Warner Film Tours
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Harry Charnas and A. P. Waxman will head the newly orga- nized road show department of Warner Brothers, Charnas, working as his right-hand man, will be in charge of the road engagements of "Noah's Ark."

One of the first assignments to be taken by the two will be the opening of Al Jollien in "The Singing Fool" at Shubert's Majestic theatre in Brooklyn April 7.

In addition to their new work, both Charnas and Waxman will continue filling the posts they held previously, Charnas as managing director of Warner houses on Broadway, and Waxman as director of advertising and publicity for the company.

Killing Indiana Censor Bill Brings Editorial Approval
(Special to the Herald-World)

FORT WAYNE, March 19.—"Among bad bills which have been good, the Indiana legislature is that for creating state censorship of the movies," says the Journal "proudly acknowledge the session.

That was the thing to do with it and the process would have been more satisfactory if applied sooner.

"If these powers are not to be trusted for keeping the movies in order, censorship by a commission of tea-tables will likely result in little beyond destroying the movie theatre business."

$150,000 Theatre Estate
Granted to B. Mulligan
(Special to the Herald-World)

RAYMOND, WASH., March 19.—Final settlement of the estate of George H. Keizer, Willapa Harbor theatre magnate, has been effected, and makes Bernard Mulligan, the sole beneficiary.

Mulligan, youthful manager of the theatre properties here, proved a contract of adoption and was awarded the $150,000 estate, and has been made manager of the theatre properties. He immediately organized the Willapa Har- bor Theatre. The Willapa has been sold, and operates the Peck Theatre at Peck Island.

Morgan Returns to Coast
NEW YORK.—Having completed his task of or- ganizing the M.G.M. eastern studio camera staff here, Morgan has returned to the Hollywood studios. Tony Williams was left as chief cinematographer at the 121th Street plant.

Van Dyke Takes a Young Store to Africa
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Harry Carey, Duncan Renaldo and Edwin Booth have been given roles in M.G.M.’s "Trader Horn," directed by W. S. Van Dyke, and the company will go to the coast of Africa to shoot exteriors for the picture, which Van Dyke made out manifold sheets before shipping from California, which include everything from a 10-ton truck to an elephant.

The list includes such items as razor blades, 100 cases of cigarettes, five cases of small arms, automatic lighter filler, tooth paste, a shoe repairing equipment, medical supplies, guns, carpenter and plumber tools, thermos bottles, by swatters, and what have you.

Toronto Independents and Famous "Fight It Out"
(Special to the Herald-World)

TORONTO, March 19.—An interesting bit of rivalry is to be seen here as a result of the competition between independent exhibitors and the numerous suburban theatres of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation. The corporation opened some of its theatres throughout Toronto, apart from its big houses in the main business section of the city. On the other hand, there are 20 independent houses which are owned by exhibitors who are members of the M.P.T.O.

Both interests publish a tabulated list of their respective houses, in advertising form, in the local evening papers, details of current attractions being shown opposite each theatre name. Those of the M.P.T.O. mem- bers are headed, "Great Merchandise Thursnes To- day," with the underline, "Members Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association." A number of the houses specialize in double-feature programs.

"You Can’t Buy Love"
Goes Into Production
(Special to the Herald-World)

UNIVERSAL CITY, March 19.—"You Can’t Buy Love," Universal's drama of mod- ern youth, has gone into production here with Ernest Laslett, producer, and Charlie Chace are those chosen for the cast so far.

Mackane to Distribute Columbia Films Abroad

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—Clarence MacKane, New York representative of Colum- bia, has sailed for Australia to arrange for the distribution of Columbia pictures there.

Will Vacation Abroad
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Corinne Griffith, here to attend the opening of her first Na- tional-Vitaphone picture, "The Divine Lady," which was released by the Vitaphone Co. for the Continent, will sail for Europe for a brief vacation in the various capitols on the Continent, following the premiere.

Fetchit in Movietone Follies
NEW YORK.—Stephen Fetchit, who looked into- town overnight with quite a dashy caper, "Hairs in Dixie," has been shifted from one Fox produc- tion to another in which his services are required more advantageous. He will be replaced in "Cape Smokey" by Blue Washington, and will appear in- stead in story sequences, which are being introduced into Fox Movietone Follies."
Dr. Lee DeForest, who has just been awarded by the board of trustees of the City of Philadelphia, certificate and prize, the John Scott Medal, sum of $1,000, for audion used in radio, discloses that it is this same invention which made long distance communication possible for theatres. The audion is used for the amplification of the sound picture to give the projectionist the volume necessary for a theatre.

Dr. DeForest was the principal speaker at a special meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania for the purpose of discussing sound and talking pictures, and he declared that the invention which gained him this distinguished award was first applied to telephone and made long distance communication possible, and was then applied to radio when he turned his attention to talking pictures in 1918. In 1919 he applied for his first patents on the DeForest Phonofilm.

"Perhaps the one consideration which prompted me more than any other to enter the talking picture field was the recognition of the fact that, in order to have talking pictures, there had to be a device to produce the sound that could be transmitted for miles and could be reconstructed in a theatre without distortion to reproduce the original. Therefore, it was a matter of long experimentation.

"Of the three methods of recording sound-on-film in use at the present, the oldest is the R.C.A. Photophone. This system employs the vibrating mirror, whose vibrations follow the sound waves to be recorded. It is a development of the Frits method mentioned in the previous article. This method and incidentally Photophone is the name which Bell and Tainter gave to their beam of light telephone.

"When the audion is employed, it is called the Phonofilm method. This method gives off a brilliant actinic light when an electric current is passed through it. The intensity of the light is proportional to the electric current passing at an instant to the light, its fluctuations give rise to the sound waves. This fluctuating light is photographed through a tiny slit upon a film traveling at standard speed behind this small slit. This is also the method that is known as Movietone.

"The third method of sound photography utilizes, instead of a vibrating mirror or a gas discharge tube, some type of light valve, whereby the rays from a constant source of light are transmitted through a shutter operated by the telephonic currents from the microphone. The Western Electric system employs this method.

Of the three methods I have described, the original which first obtained the phonograph or gas discharge lamp, are at least equal and, frequently superior to, those from the other two, while from the standpoint of simplicity, reliability and ease of practical manipulation in the sound studio and especially outdoors, the audion method is much to be preferred.

"The system of reproduction in the theatre, no matter what method of recording, is practically identical in design. The variation in performance comes from mechanical accomplishment. A small lamp, called the exciting light, throws its beams through lenses to focus its rays upon the sound track as it passes over. At the instant an exciting light is caused to fall on the photoelectric cell, the function of the cell is to translate these rapid fluctuations of light into corresponding fluctuations of electric current. These currents upon become a duplication of the original telephonic currents from the microphone when the sound was recorded. The next step in the process of reproduction is to amplify these exceedingly weak electronic currents from the microphone to the strength required for the use of the loudspeaker.

"Show Must Go On"

"Naturally, the thing which is of most interest to the theatre owner is the performance of the reproducing apparatus in his theatre. A realization of this caused me to withdraw Phonofilm from the market for a year to make improvements. The results of these improvements are reported by a number of observers.

"The task I set for myself then was to make a reproducer that would be so simple that it required no skill of the Princess to attend to it, and so reliable that it could be left alone to keep it at the top of its performance all the time.

"The numerous changes made were a double exciting lamp to guard against any stoppage in case one doesn't function, a sound box so simple that a novice can thread it properly without instruction, every amplification tube in plain sight and others. Each was made with the old show rule in mind that no matter what the conditions, 'show must go on.'

"The first Phonofilm installation was at Canton, O., in December, 1928.

"The last decade has seen talking pictures developed to a point where they are capable of reproducing and producing in a manner above any demands that have yet been made on them. The next decade must look to the producers for the developments."

Western Electric, working with producers and exhibitors, has made possible a new art of entertainment . . .

Out of a half century's experience, engineers in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, developed for Western Electric the first successful system of sound pictures. This system, which embraces both Vitaphone and Movietone, has been adopted as standard by the country's leading motion picture producers.

These producers, on their part, have had to create a new studio technique to introduce desired sounds into the picture and to keep undesired sounds out.

Yesterday's dream is today's fact.

MOVING pictures with sound are here! This new, popular entertainment made possible by Western Electric is less than three years old, but already it has taken such strides as to make certain of continuing development and wide application.

Hear leading stars of motion pictures, opera, concert and stage in lifelike renderings when you see them on the screen.

Hear and see the world's greatest personalities as they talk from the screen.

Hear magnificent orchestral accompaniment to feature pictures—played from the screen.

Hear the usual roar of the airplane, the thunder of galloping horses, the scream of the locomotive's whistle.

What was yesterday's dream is today's fact. And tomorrow? Here is an art now in the early stages of its development which is revolutionizing the field of motion picture entertainment.

Big Sound Films Start Coming Into New York Production Field

(This is the second and last of a series of articles on the return of New York to ranking as a production center, a result of sound. In this article, the Eastern work of the following companies is discussed: R C A Photophone, Columbia, American Sound Films Productions, Talking Pictures Corporation, and Biophone.)

R C A Photophone completed its first sound film in its newly-constructed Gramercy Studios on East 24th street last week when Godfrey Ludlow, concert violinist, played a couple of concertos in the first of a series of sound pictures which will be released by R K O. He was accompanied by a 75-piece symphony orchestra which should be enough for any man. The piece was filmed in a giant replica of a Greek amphitheatre constructed in the studio on the main stage which measures 160 by 70 feet.

In the center of this stage there is a large swimming tank which, under ordinary circumstances, is floored over. With the flooring lifted and the water drained off, the pit becomes a stage within a stage, allowing unusual photographic and sound effects. There is a third stage, 80 by 35 feet, for other production work. Instead of the usual projection room a little theatre has been fitted out in the style of a motion picture auditorium. The studio is completely equipped.

Soundproofing Deluxe

As far as soundproofing is concerned, R C A Photophone has gone the whole hog. Every inch of the walls and ceiling is lined with a carpet of felt, three inches thick. E. F. Bucher, executive vice-president, was correct when he said the place was going to cost a lot of money. It has.

In line with the new synchronizing laboratory for applying sound effects to silent pictures is included.

Richard Currier is production director. The production schedule, so far as full length dialogue features are concerned, is still tentative at the time of writing. R K O is expected to absorb a major portion of what is turned out, however.

Columbia Uses Victor Studios

Columbia has synchronized "Trial Marriage" at the Victor Talking Machine Studios in Camden, N. J. The talking sequences of "The Lone Wolf in Danger" were also done at the Camden Studios (once an old church with perfect acoustical properties), which have been working on sound stuff ever since the snake hissed at Eve (that was the first surface noise).

The Columbia organization plans to make 24 all-talking shorts which will be released as soon as they are produced—they will probably start to appear within a month or so. There has been no announcement of the personnel as yet. In all, about 40 talking shorts will be made by Columbia this year (in the Victor studios using Victor equipment) and something like 20 to 26 major talking productions.

Sound Films Plans Twelve

The American Sound Films Productions, at 318 West 48th street, have their own De Forest Phonofilm system with the General Talking Pictures Corporation (which has absorbed the De Forest part of it) and license producing companies to use it. There are two large, all soundproof stages (allegedly the first to be built in America) which were made by Dr. De Forest in 1923. They measure 50 by 80 feet.

The building was formerly known as the Talmadge Studios, and is one of the Tech Art Studios. About 250 shorts were made there soon after the stages were built. Some of them were shown at the Rivoli and Rialto in 1923, which, at that time, were the only New York theatres to have phonofilm equipment.

The pictures, if we remember correctly, flopped. Sound Films is planning to make 12 dialogue feature productions this year. But since the General Talking Pictures Corporation has made up its mind to go with sound, the former organization may have to rent space elsewhere. At the present moment the studio is rented to three independent companies which will occupy it to the middle of this month. The people think they have something new and are tightmouthed about their productions.

Biophone Active

Biophone's Metropolitan studios at Fort Lee are working night and day on talking shorts and also on synchronization. Among the pictures to which they have given sound effects are "The Great Lover," "The Half-Dead Millionaire" and "Rain.."

In the March 16 issue of Better Theaters this picture of Western Electric portable sound projection equipment was published, with a caption stating that the apparatus is for use "on location." That was incorrect. The apparatus pictured was recently developed by Western Electric for the projection of sound motion pictures. It is thus portable projection equipment, not portable projection equipment.

Shows Sound Pictures In Home of Sick Actress

NEW YORK, March 19.—What is believed to be the first time sound motion pictures have been shown in a home, other than probably the production room of the producer's home, was given the other night at the home of Dorothea Antel, actress of other days, now bed-ridden. At her home on East 58th street, inventor of the Simotone, projected four short acts, independently made, and synchronized them on his Simotone, a disc device.

During the foregoing it is easy to see that New York is not exactly out on its feet as a production center. As a matter of fact things have just started to move. Shorts have monopolized, with one or two exceptions, the program. They are largely experimental. Soon major productions in sound will come from New York. Some of them have already. The prospect is bright.

M G M Making Audien Of Little Theatre Play

(Exclusive to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—"Casualties," a one-act play which has had a marked success in the Little Theatre movement and one of three purchased recently by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from Martin Flavin, is being produced as an all-talking film.

Robert O'Brien, who had the principal role when this piece was presented by the Writers Club in Hollywood, has the same part in the picture, which he is directing. Mary Daron, who played the bored and bleached chorus girl in "The Broadway Melody," has the chief feminine part in "Casualties."

Prize Beauties Are Cast In Pathe Audien Roles

(Exclusive to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Lilian Bond and Nita Andre, who were selected by George LeMaire at the Hollywood Masque Ball as the most eligible talent for his Pathe talking comedies, will make their first appearances before the cameras and "mikes" next week at Sound Studios in New York.

Miss Bond, who won first prize, is the British beauty who came to America for the Galveston Beauty Pageant and is now in Earl Carroll's "Fioretti." Miss Andre is a New Jersey girl whose looks and dancing ability brought her to the attention of Carroll who cast her in his "Vanities."

Columbia Building Sound Plant Based on Latest Discoveries

Several sound stages are now in the course of construction, under the supervision of Harry Cohn, vice president in charge of production, at the Columbia studios in Hollywood. A crew of over 200 men, builders, carpenters, electricians, plumbers, painters and bricklayers, is working at top speed to complete these structures for use as early as possible, and the plan is to incorporate the latest discoveries in the science of sound production. Cohn declares:

“We did not build sound studios until the experimental stages had been passed, an in consequence, we now find ourselves able to profit greatly by the errors that have been committed. The time that we have devoted to the study of these problems will, we believe, enable us to eliminate these mistakes of faulty construction and to overcome obstacles that were considered unsurmountable only a few months ago. The Western Electric recording system will be used.”

The main stage of the new Columbia sound studio measures 92x140 feet, all in one spread, the roof towering 47 feet above the floor. The latest developments in sound deadening have been applied to the construction of the main stage as well as the minor stages. Several companies will be able to shoot at the same time without interfering with each other.

The monitor room, measuring 55x47 feet, represents the last word in design and arrangement. The projection booth, 14x16 feet, is built of concrete and brick construction throughout. The recording building, 51x72 feet, is of reinforced concrete and steel frame.

Scientifically and specially constructed air ducts between the studding of these buildings provides ventilation. A complete change of air from every nook and corner every 30 minutes will allow production to continue without any interruption and without discomfort to actors, director and crew, according to the plan. The Byrd Ventilating Company is responsible for the construction and installation of this system. The entire building contract is being handled by the Austin Company of California.

[This article will be continued pictorially in the next issue, in which photographs of the Columbia Sound Studio as so far constructed will be presented.]

Eminent Musician Signs In Dual Role for DeMille
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Jack King is the latest eminent musician to hear the call of the audience. He has been signed by DeMille in the dual role of composer and actor. His first composition is “Home am I to know,” the theme song of “Dynamite,” DeMille’s first production for MGM.

For many years King was one of the leading concert pianists. As a “jazz king” he toured the Orpheum and Keith circuit and just recently closed in the London production of “Clowns in Clover.”

Altschuler Directs Music For United Artist Picture
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—A symphony orchestra under the direction of Doctor Altschuler rendered the synchronized musical score for “She Goes to War,” United Artists picture just completed.

More than 130 musical selections were used in this picture, ranging from Grand Opera to ultra-modern military melodies. One effect achieved at the end of the film is this: As fades out the picture occurs, the sound of the orchestra also fades out, then the music fades into a stirring march.

"Iron Mask" Seats Go for $25 Per Copy at Carthy

First Jack White Talking Comedy Preview Panics Figueras—Lily Danita and Her Hollywood English—Paging Mark Sandrich!

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Seats for the opening of "The Iron Mask" here this week brought $5.50, $10, $15 and in some cases as much as $25. The studio ordered twice as many as it received. Speculators got hold of blocks and held on for dear life. But speculators were not the cause for the arrogant prices; it was miscalculation.

An opening night always means a extra price. But it doesn't follow that the prices are inflated. These Hollywood-Iowans know what they want and if they decide to pay $25 to see Billie Dove step gracefully down the aisle at the Carthy Circle it is ten to one that it's worth the $25.

Billie was there, so was Mary Pickford; Sid Grauman; Norma Shearer; Conrad Niel, Fred Niblo and a lot of silk hatted producers.

The show was a great success, as was expected following its Eastern premiere. Fairbanks' contemporaries voted it one of his finest productions.

It is one of the most concise stories he has ever filmed. Although it is a sequel to "Three Musketeers" it is a different theme and is told in a different way. The older picture is a vivid romance that does not live out the sequel. The "Iron Mask" is a story of Louis XIV of France and D'Artagnan who managed to keep him on his throne. It contains more of melodrama and less of both romance and comedy than its predecessor. It also contains less (and here is the hurt) of the real Fairbanks.

Fairbanks has been one of our favorites because he ran, jumped and fought like a tiger. His fencing and riding, even clowning and eating, made him famous. He did only three jumps that I recall in "The Iron Mask." He fended a little. He rode a little. And loved a little. But he remained out of the picture too much. That was the way the story was written.

William Bakewell was the young Louis XIV who was the central part of the plot and who might have been the star if it were not for a Fairbanks picture. Bakewell's work is extraordinarily good. He doesn't miss a trick.

Marguerite De La Motte is the heroine who dies in the first half of the picture. Her acting is careful and complete.

First Jack White Talking Comedy

Educational's first Jack White talking comedy previewed at the Figueras theatre set a fast pace for the company to keep. It is called "Zip Boom Bah!" and—you've guessed it—it is a circus picture.

Raymond McKee's personality is well suited to auiden work. I've seen him before in dialogue film but never saw him work to such good advantage as in this.

White who personally directed the picture has courageously thrown himself into a pioneering task. He undertook situations with his movietone equipment which other studios have not attempted. There is nothing in his story which he left untold because of production handicaps.

I had expected to be confronted with a pre-viewer's orthodox duty of opening the quality of the picture. The audience saved me the trouble. It wasn't one to be "clocked" either. The laughs began when McKee stepped into the circus tent and ended when he started home. There was no letup in the laugh throughout 2,000 feet of film. My job was simple.

There's nothing very funny about an income tax. A revenue department collector was interviewing George O'Brien not long ago. A "sweat shirt" used in a picture had been listed among exemptions. The collector looked at Bankhead and asked, "What is a sweat shirt?"

Authorities are trying to stamp out numerous "Income Tax Experts." They point out that one of the biggest stars in town employs an "expert" to make up his tax return. They have investigated the star's boasts that he has degrees in college mathematics, calculus and analytical geometry and chemistry. Yet, the report is too complex for his brain.

It seems to me it only proves the experts' point.

Sam Goldwyn signed Lily Danita to a player's contract four months ago and provided that the option would be renewed at the end of six months if Lily had learned to speak perfect English at that time. The six months isn't up but S. G. has taken up the option. He admits she still speaks with an accent but he likes the accent. "In fact," says Mr. Goldwyn, "I have asked her to discontinue her English lessons for the present as I hope to have her play at least one role where her accent can be heard."

Here while I am wondering what has become to Mark Sandrich comes word from him in the East. The word fails to enlighten me on a lot of things. It is simply that he is in New York. My informants tell me he is directing a series of pictures. My reason tells me he is making a success of them. But what I want is more information about the pictures he is making.

True Bill Voted Against Income Tax Advisor to Many Picture Celebrities

(HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Edward H. Hayden, income tax advisor for film folks, was indicted Friday by the federal grand jury on a charge of perpetrating a fraud against the United States treasury department. Hayden has represented many such people as Fred Niblo, Ramon Navarro, Alfred E. Green, and numerous stars in internal revenue returns. The treasury department is making no case against clients who have employed Hayden to represent them.

Hayden took up the work eight years ago after having spent a long term as secretary to William G. McAdoo, secretary of the roads under President Wilson. In the past two years he has given the major part of his time to his duties as business manager for one of Hollywood's best known directors.

Overwork during the past few years is claimed to have strained his nervous system greatly and his clients believe it is the nervous strain that has brought about any lack of competence that the government may be able to show.

Bebe Daniels Signs with Radio Pictures for Four 1929 Dialogue Pictures

(HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Bebe Daniels is soon to return to the screen after a six months vacation which cost her $75,000, having signed a contract this week with Radio Pictures. She will star in four auditions during 1929, according to the agreement.

Miss Daniels left Paramount in September, when her contract had nine months yet to run, because, she stated, Paramount would not use her in talking roles. At that time it was believed she was negotiating with Joseph Schenck.

O'Brien Recovers from Injury; Back at Studio

(HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—George O'Brien has completely recovered from injuries to his foot and returned to work at the Fox lot today. His injury at Monterey, Cal., a month ago, happened while shooting "The Son of Anak." Work on the picture was immediately discontinued and was resumed today.

David Butler who directed the first part of the story, has been assigned to another unit and has been replaced by Howard Hawks.

Columbia Loans Revier

(HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Dorothy Revier, Columbia star, has been loaned to Paramount to play an important role in that company's "Burlesque." She is now completing a picture for Columbia.
New Sets Made Portable; It's Another Effect of Audien (Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, March 19.—All new sets are being built in portable sections so that they may be erected or dismantled without loss of sound stages. Old settings gradually are being torn down. M.G.M is maintaining a special set warehouse in which sets already used are kept intact until the picture is released.

Directorial Triumph To Lionel Barrymore In His First Audien (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—"Madame X," marks Lionel Barrymore's debut as a feature director, and critics present at a preview dedicate it as one of the top-notch directorials of the season. Barrymore had built up a reputation as an adroit character actor, but it was only after he had turned out the all-talking short subject, "Confession," that the M.G.M executives gave him a chance to fulfill his directorial ambitions.

"Madame X" is starring Ruth Chatterton and is supported by Raymond Hackett and Lewis Stone.

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Ken Maynard, having his own production unit, began his first picture for Universal release this week. Harry (Joe) Brown is at the microphone.

Frank Keenan Estate Listed as Over $10,000 (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—The will of the late Frank Keenan was admitted to probate court here this week. Lea May Keenan, the widow, is executrix of the will without bond. She was bequeathed the bulk of the estate, which was listed as more than $10,000.

Patsy Ruth Miller Signed (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—First National-Vitaphone has just announced that Patsy Ruth Miller has been signed to play opposite Jack Hullah in his next picture, "Twin Beds." Alfred Santell will be the director in charge and production will start within a week at the Bunklau studios.

Paul Hosier to Wed (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Paul Hosier, who is managing publicity for the Mack Sennett comedies this year, will marry Blanche Nelson, actress and dancer.

Oscar Shaw in "Marianne" (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Marion Davies' first all-talking picture, "Marianne," has been completed and is expected to be one of the season's biggest hits. Shaw has been making M.G.M Movietone acts and has just finished "The Cocoaanuts." "Marianne" is described as a French war comedy and will contain a good deal of singing and dancing.

Annual Film Slump Ends; 40 In Work; M.G.M to Do 'Revue's'

Most Are Synchronized: Nearly Half Are Dialogues: Metro's Song Picture to Follow "Follies" Idea: Colleen Moore Starts First Audien at F.N (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Production, at a low ebb for two months, is now on its feet again with 40 feature pictures shooting. Most of them are synchronized. Almost half of them will have audien versions.

Shooting starts next week on "The M.G.M. Revue of Revues," which will be directed by William A. Seiter, who held the megaphone on Miss Moore's latest picture, "Please Be Gay." This feature was written by Tom J. Geraghty, and the picture will be produced by John McCormick.

Billie Dove has completed her first dialogue picture, "Cagney." It was directed by John Francis Dillon, and the cast includes Antonio Moreno, Noah Beery, Carmel Myers, Holmes Herbert, Robert Frazer and many others.

Jack Sennett's new Feature, "First National-Vitaphone Pictures," "Twin Beds," was started this week under the direction of Al Santell.

Stern Out of "U" Coast Office; Joins Paratone (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—With the announcement that Walter Stern is no longer at Universal comes word that a long line of officials and executives will soon be removed from their positions at Universal City.

Stern's position as business manager is expected to be filled this week. He has joined the Paratone Company.

Earl Wingart to Handle Alline's Duties in N. Y. (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Earl Wingart left Sunday for New York where he will handle the duties of Glendon Alline, director of publicity for Fox, while the latter is on the Coast.

Wingart's duties as publicity director of the studio are to be taken up by Victor Shapiro this week. Alline is slated to leave New York next Saturday.

Mabel Normand Fails in Struggle with Illness (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—It is reported that Mabel Normand is rapidly losing in her fight for recovery of her health. Announcement that Mabel's condition has been suppressed lately due to the critical condition of her husband, Lew Cody, who is convalescing at Palm Springs, Calif. Cody has not been told of Mabel Normand's illness.

It is said that her lungs have been affected by an infection.

Opposite Maynard (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—Edith Roberts will return to the screen after many years of absence, during the later half of the month. Ken Maynard's first production for Universal, "The Wagon Master," Production will commence in two weeks.

Barthelmess Sculptor's Model

HOLLYWOOD.—Richard Barthelmess is the subject of a sculpture mask which has won the distinction of honor at the exhibition of sculpture and painting being held at the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce. The mask is by Ricardo, said to be the youngest sculptor in Hollywood.

36 and Married

He was about 36 years of age and married. In recent years he lived at Miami Beach. Immediately upon confirmation of his death, Ray Hall dispatched a Pathe News representative. Roy was the key man of the Florida to represent the company and news staff and take care of the funeral arrangements. In a booklet on the tragic news, Hall writes of his intrepid effort as follows:

“Devotion to duty, fearless, willingness to do without question the slim of adventure wherever it might be is the mark of the men who gather for you the news of the world in motion pictures.

“Charley R. Traub was true to his traditions. No calling that he might have chosen requires more of those qualities that measure the character of a man. To his friends he was endeared by a sunny disposition and an upright sturdiness of character. He died a member of the great profession that serves the public. He was a soldier of peace.”

As a result, Pathe’s “Race To Death,” part of the newsreel shown this week, is one of the most gripping news sequences that the screen has seen.

Spotlighted with time on Daytona Beach, and death in this case was the goal for cameraman as well as driver. One of the scenes, showing the wreck with Bible’s wife in a bathing suit and white duck trousers, shaking her head above the ruins, an empty shoe beside the twisted car, is the ultimate in silent tragedy.

The picture shows Seagray make his mark in the Golden Arrow, Bible make his trial run, and Lockhart going to his death a year ago. Then the huge Triple Crown tears down the sands—500 yards away it swerves—skids towards the camera. Less than three seconds later, Charles R. Traub, the cameraman who filmed it, and Lee, the driver, were dead under the tangled mass of wreckage. A final shot gives another close up of the debris.

Producers Have Feast

Of Great Men in Great Events for News Films

Important men in nationally interesting events, producers unusual “stories” for the current releases. The departure of Calvin Coolidge from the White House inspired Pathe to put out a Review in the current Movietone News. Secretary Mellon discusses good government. The Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic expedition afforded thrilling “shots” in M.G.M. News, the pictures having been taken by Sir George Hubert, commander of the expedition, in this remote region, some parts of which had never before been seen by man.

B & K Starts Stage Talent Contest

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Oriental
Week Ending March 15

Jack Osterman, the chief of ceremonies, for the third week as the master of ceremonies here and from all appearances he will be here for many more weeks to come.

This week Osterman staged a contest called "A Dude Ranch" with everybody in the band dressed in cowboy regalia, including Osterman—at least forty and probably more of the boys sported black hats.

A Nat Spector in black face was the cook of the ranch house and started things humming with a good selection of "If You Want the Rainbow You Must Have the Rain." This chap possess a melodically voice on the type of Al Jolson and certainly knows how to put a number across. He doesn't seem to care whether he is acting or not, but by being natural and having good pluck he is good over big. He favored with an encore of "Golden Gate," which brought him more applause.

Right after this number Jack Osterman, who, in the meantime, went into the orchestra pit and directed an imaginative routine of the boys singing "This is the way the West was won," worked up enough interest for the audience to hear him sing "Whoopee." The number, which is the comedy hit of the Eddie Cantor show, just came out in this type of stage show, in spite of the fact that Jack sort of sang-talked it. But then Jack might have had a cold and people don't usually judge him for his voice anyway.

Ned Miller followed with a vocal selection of "My Angeline" in which some pretty rendition could have been stored, but comedy prevailed in this way with Jack the chief merry maker. It's a shame that they had to resort to hokum in this scene, for with the beautiful ranch setting the song could have some color and the value of the melody. Of course no one could have put over the presentation in the same style that Osterman did, for he was one of the best ad libbers on the stage today. His profound flow of humorous situations and his ability to put a combination of jokes and a few of his own turns on the Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuit. He has also appeared in several Vitaphone shorts.

Leo Wood, for a number of years on the staff of Leo Fosl, Inc., as a version and song writer, is replacing Lester Santly, as manager of the Special Service Department. Mr. Wood is well known in the music profession as a successful song writer and his talent alone these lines will be very valuable for his contact and assistance with presentation bands and orchestras.

Lester Santly, his predecessor, has formed a music publishing company of his own with his two brothers, after being with the firm for a number of years.

Meet Mr. Crafts

A new master of ceremonies makes his debut this week in Chicago when the National Playhouses, Inc., present Charlie Crafts as the band leader in place of Dell Lampe. Crafts is a recording artist and has appeared in a number of New York night clubs as master of ceremonies with his band and in this house, still utilizing the ballet, which made their entrance one by one, each carrying a portion of a house while the band played a special tune on the order of the "love nest." When the house was completed Jack and Alice Roy entered its small door just as the curtain came down. This same idea was used in a musical comedy not so long ago and though not original is

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD
March 25, 1929

These contests, if properly staged and well exploited through a representative newspaper, can do a great deal in building public interest as well as off-night performances in the neighborhood theatres. Unless your theatre belongs to a chain organization that is equipped to furnish the necessary staff, it is our suggestion that you employ some contest expert or novelty exploiter such as Sam Herman, who has made this part of the amusement business his specialty.

In doing this you will always eliminate the possibility of antagonizing any of your patrons who might receive the impression that favoritism is being shown, and you will also run a lesser risk of fizzling the contest which might prove a great asset both to future novelty types. This is a specialized branch and those who are equipped with sufficient knowledge along those lines should be given the responsibility to conduct them properly.

War in the Loop

The State-Lake theatre, Chicago, celebrated its tenth anniversary on St. Patrick’s day with the premiere of the new R.C.A. Photophone. This is an improved sound equipment perfected by the Radio Corporation of America.

It will also mark the change of policy for the house by presenting a series of full programs featuring the modern and high class vaudeville acts. The house is right across the street from Balaban & Katz’ Chicago theatre and it is expected to give its rival some pretty stiff competition.

Drop Sam a Line

Sam Lerner, the well known and liked director of publicity and advertising for De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., sends word that he is also in charge of all material and service for masters of ceremonies and will be glad to give his personal attention to any requests.

Any of you listen singers who desire some particular service should get in touch with Sam. He’s a great fellow and won’t try to make you write a song with him. By the way, Sam’s address is the home office of the firm, 745 Seventh Ave., New York City.

Hoxie Here

Jack Hoxie, the well known cowboy motion picture star, is in Chicago this week making his personal appearance at the Pershing ballroom. While in town Hoxie is also preparing plans for the production of a series of westerns which will open in St. Louis.

Lon Chaney with his staff are also in Chicago shooting scenes for one of his new film productions.

Charles Previn is conducting the orchestra at the new theatre in Philadelphia while Stuart Barrie is the solo organist...

Arthur Nealy is the staff tenor... Gene Moreland is to return to the old theatre in San Francisco after a long tour of other Public theatres.
Chicago Paradise
Week Ending March 15

“A Mobile Menu” was the stage presentation here this week and the products contained some choice novelties. It opened with the ten Petrie Sisters as cheerettes in front of a scrim curtain bearing the outline of the serving pot as they sang special lyrics all about the bill-of-fare. Right after this number the serving pot was displayed as raised on a platform in a beautiful setting of a large dining room with beautiful chandelier hanging and the serving pot holding most of the band. This was followed by a set of raised Mark Fishers in tuxedos, which made quite a contrast to the band boys’ costumes as chefs, and brought out the marching “Chicago Rhythm” which was played in real hot style by the Mercury Orchestra.

All the acts on the program were introduced in typical style and the first one to start the proceedings was the Lassiter and Larimer, who called the “natty beans.” These boys have been reported many times before and as usual gave a fine interpretation of country and western, and brought them in a style all their own. Their clever comedy posses not only brought them an encore but robbed the show. They were followed by Parkinson in a series of costumes and a novel routine of Tillers steps. Mark Fisher next introduced the Chicago favorites, Heller and Riley and to prove how popular these entertainers are, their introduction received a very fine reception after which they came on to sing in that beautiful voice of hers, “Where Is the Song of Songs For Me.” In this number she interpolated several verses of which it is the number over in great style. Right after this, her partner, George Riley, made his entrance in his usual happy-go-lucky way and from then on the audience ate heartily of this portion of the menu. The team brought along some songs that made quite a mistake in selecting such a song as “Why Can’t We” for their closing duet number. Having seen and reported this feeling before it is our opinion that the song is too weak for their ability and not strong enough for their closing. Judging from the audience this is the number too. The rear outfronters were still hungry for them and right into that with an encore and stopped the show they probably could have done more if they had wanted to.

Robbin & Co. followed them in a comedy routine of balancing on ladders. Robbin, the male part of the team, attired as Robinhood the well known book character has a sort of holiday element caused laughter from his very entrance. His partner, a girl, dressed as a good workman, and both offered some unusual stunts on a ladder. George Riley assisted in the latter part of this number, when he and Richard Lassiter frolicked across the stage on hobby-horses. It is quite a relief to see a novelty act of this sort served as good dessert on the bill.

Mark Fisher next sang a ballad called “He, She and Me” with a recitation embodying a few lines of “Brother Can You Spare a Dime” This was the center piece of the song that Fisher knows how to put his best into and explains some of the harmonies straight into the finale without taking an encore and as he sang “My Champagne Lady” the Petrie Girls stripped off and sang a semi-nude number. Mark sat down at a small table and poured himself some of the supposed champagne. During this number the surprised audience was able to see several girls sitting in large champagne glasses, all of which was pretty effective and made quite a flashy finale. This was followed by several Petrie presentations over reported at this house, and each one on the menu contributed considerable effort to make it so.

Philadelphia Mastbaum
Week Ending March 16

Nothing to equal the spectacular stage presentations offered at the Mastbaum has ever before been offered either in Philadelphia or the second great stage show, with 125 people on the stage at one time. The companies are large and excellent presentations. Musie, song and dance in greatest profusion are shown with such magnificence of setting, costumes and lighting as to resemble a typical Arabian Nights’ entertainment.

A wealth of melody and tone color is found in the overture, “The Shadow of a疑” which features the famous Orchestra under the direction of Charles Pravin. During the course of the performance twenty-one men on the stand were used. The Court scene is given with the ballet in pastille and white wigs in various beautiful dances and formations. The dancing to, dance, probably Katherine Littlefield, in pink and silver, adds to the beauty of the scene.

Stuart Barrie, one of the leading organizers of the company, formerly at the Chicago, Chicago, and the Ambassadors, 56th Street, was one of the magnificient organ was well received. His “Melodies on Trial” in which he first played classical compositions and then the popular songs based on them as the words were thrown on the screen illustrated in colors was a popular number.

Santy Brothers Latest
To Go in Music Business

The last twelve months has brought more surprises and progress to the music world than we have been able to cover in the history of the music business. Not only have the large publishing profit by affiliating themselves with movie picture production, but it seems that the new improvements have brought to the surface better business ability and better song making for the music business.

For instance, there have been a number of new music enterprises started in the last few months, one of which has already gained a stronghold. The latest to join the forces are the three Santy Brothers—Joseph C. C., Henry W., and Lester. Lester has been an executive manager in charge of exploitation and sale, when he started his own enterprise for many years. Joseph has been associated with the Irving Berlin firm for several years as a professional manager, while his brother Henry held a similar position with Remick.

He was received by well known among them are Gus Kahn, Billy Rose, Turk & Ahlert, Tobias, Lewis & Sherman, and many others.

The first two songs published by the new firm were with type lines in keeping with the public appeal of today, and are titled “On A Summery Night,” and “I’ve Got A Code In My Vein” and are confident that the Santy boys are going to put these numbers over big and that their new enterprise will soon become an institution.

Milwaukee Wisconsin
Week Ending March 16
At the Wisconsin this week we greet a new master of ceremonies, penal Al Lyons whoantics from the sunny clime of California. In order to greet him properly the stage of the Wisconsin is all decked out to resemble a villa in California, while walls, window cases, and in the drapery the long rows of orange bushes stretching far back to the high mountains in the rear, and above the mountains shows the sky, blue sky of California is famous. It's a darn good setting and goes over big with the audience.
Lyons, a likely chap, who knows his stuff, comes forth and gives a little speech, saying he's glad to be in the City Which Was Once Famous Because of a Certain Boer. He then dons a curtain to come down and in front of the curtain is one, Senator Murphy. Murphy is quite an orator. He has lots of funny stories about Hoover, prohibition, Italy and girls in general that makes a hit with the crowd. They envy the gent, but he can't come back as time is short.

Ruby Gillette, a fairly blond girl, but good looking, and dressed in a light green dress that enhances her blond beauty, comes out and sings a little. One of her numbers is "The Song I Love." The crowd seems to like it and she gets plenty of applause.

Next on the scene is Buddy Howe who sure can dance a lot for a small fellow. He starts out kind of slow but winds up with a whizwind finish that has the crowd aquapling. Yes. Buddy is O. K. and will get a warm reception his next trip out this way.

The Gaiters pull off next what is known as the Bowery stuff and the apache dance combined. They are kind of hard handed and the next lack the lady plenty with that big hand of his. However, that outfit does its stuff all right and the crowd comes through with plenty of applause.

Ross and Edwards make a hit because they have a lot of wise cracks that are sable and keep the crowd laughing. There ought to be more of these fellows on the Wisconsin program instead of clod dancers. The boys are dressed in duck outfits with a pale blue and light brown coat, so you can imagine the near sighted people getting their glasses farther up on their nose.

The Torney Girls come on for a dance that is real smart. They're red and white plaid costumes and snap through a dance that is pretty difficult. The program was snappy all the way through and the crowd liked it.

Chicago Tower
Week Ending March 15
This week's stage show is called "Tulip Time" and is the same unit that played Chicago Oriental several weeks ago. With the exception of a hand number and one act the show remains the same. The orchestra is a nucleus of the new Tower and the pit and Eddie Perry conducted the music while Lou Kosloff was the master of ceremonies and kept up the interest of the show by his smart remarks. We wish to state here that since Kosloff has been given more cooperation he is one of the most propety handled men in town and has surrounded himself with a bunch of good musicians who know how to procure music from their instruments. The hand played a medley of tunes with solos offered by Swing Allen, Lou Storry and Jack Laurie. Kosloff also favored with a violin solo of "Lover Come Back To Me," theme song of the "New Moon." It is appropriate at this time to mention that Kosloff plays the violin with considerable feeling and splendid technique and is probably one of the best soloists on the presentation.

The acts on the bill were Grace Druso, the pianist entertainer, Nick Lang and a comic who was very good. Nick Lewis was given new leeway in displaying his acting ability and put over the theme of the show with considerable zest. Whenever the song called "It Happened In Holland" had a cute idea and surrounded it with appropriate costumes and scenery. Although this show was reported at the last performance during the week when few were in the audience it nevertheless got quite a representative hand and also proved that Kosloff is the box office favorite here week. Hero A. Keates at the organ helped put a climax at the finish. The orchestra and organ played the special tune.

Seattle Seattle
Week Ending March 8
"Bars and Stripes" stage presentation was far in advance of former Pacific stage productions. Guild Girls had good routine dancing that scored. Followed by Ray Carey up in the comics with which landed. Two boys with much good dancing were J. and Duthers, can make spot anytime. Phil Lampkin's "Gay Rag Doll" was a consistent number. Girls, three fens know their harmony and two numbers clicked. Lamberti with xylophone also. Number led into finale with pretty picture effect.

Proceeding presentation overture staged by Manager Bob Blair. Seattle grand orchestra under Arthur Clausen played "Robespierre" during which picture made on stage with twenty people. Scored heavily. Ron and Don at organ with "Sun Is At My Window" given heavy hand.

Kansas City Pantages
Week Ending March 15
Merit and variety were plentiful in the stage program at the Pantages theatre, the program opening with the regular and Lunt and Luntz, and two of the prettiest girls, to use the words of one critic, that have been seen on the Pantages stage in some time. They sing and dance well, playing the violin as well as whistling, which should be variety enough for any act.

The Six Amexlos are a youthful group of tumblers who do not allow one second of time to go to waste during their act. Jack Russell & Company present an elaborate medley hand called "Dixie Stompers," dancing in blackface. Russell is the handsomest dancing fellow who got his start with Eddie Leonard. Jack & Stanislav's number called "Ragtime" also, offer a bit of comic dialogue, then a song, then some more dialogue. Louise Charnyanski and his Pantages orchestra render popular selections as the overture.

Detroit Capitol
Week Ending March 15
Del Delbridge, that most popular master of ceremonies in the Capitol, opened the gospel season this week with a country club fiddling entitled "Pore. El Clee, who calls himself a "Jelly-xylophonist," sliced away right merrily at his instrument, extracting much harmony from his tune and much applause from his audiences.

Clementine and J. Leon hardines if there ever was a such a word, went dancing on the green to the accompaniment of some music of applause and Barret and the fiddler who, after a few bars of the golf setting, called themselves "birdies," warbled and danced in an oh so pleasing manner.

The attractive Capitol Girls, dressed of course as caddy-ettes, had some nice dance routines and Del and his merry troupe of musicians were right there with themful music. Del, in whom we detected something of a slump not long ago, has recovered his old time pep and is playing as ever on the stage.

Emil Hollandier conducted the Capitol Symphony Orchestra in a rendition of "La Glaciosa."
New York Paramount

Week Ending March 15

The Paramount pit orchestra led by one of the most popular leaders in the country, David Rubinoff, offered a "Cowboy" version this week. They included a light touch on the "Silo Mio" that was very touching. They were accorded very fine fare, as was the orchestra.

The C. A. Nigmeyer stage show, "Happy-go-Lucky" followed. Ted Claire (billed as the Joy Boy of Broadway) first of a series of well-known radio and motion picture actor was seen "Looking For a Horsehoe" as the Twelve Ballet Girls offered a popular Ballet. In the many pictures for their motion picture special, five dressed and danced and finished with a doll dance, in which they used two small dolls. They were very well received.

Dance Blues and Blondes by Al Newman, a song that is still talked about. The orchestra boys in mounted police uniforms played an introductory chorus and the Adda Kaufman Girls, as squaws sang. Marry May made a fine appearance in his uniform as he entered to a nice reception while singing the band tune.

This stage show opened in a fine forest scene, as the orchestra boys in mounted police uniforms played an introductory chorus and the Adda Kaufman Girls, as squaws sang. Marry May made a fine appearance in his uniform as he entered to a nice reception while singing the band tune.

Then in a clear and distinctive voice, announced, "Totem Pole Dance" by the Kaufman Girls. The girls, in vivid colored costumes, represented totem poles offered a unique and novel dance. May next conducted his orchestra through a fine arrangement of "Rosebud," with a vocal chorus by Ethel Payne. He then played a violin solo of "Souvenir" as the musicians inject comedy into it by playing a "hot" tune. June Kote sang, playfully, "Tell Me Ask For More" and "If I Had You." She offered her second choruses in a trick voice, but only received a fair hand.

Two young fellows, The DeCarlos Brothers, received a good hand for their "drunk" interpretations and tumbling stunts. The next act introduced by Marry May, as the background was made the backdrop for the scene.

The latest arrivals, with a high-kicking and acrobatic routine that was well done and received a good hand. This fine show closed with a song and dance routine by the American Sistars, while the orchestra boys in the ballet entered with the ponies and formed a pretty picture.

New Orleans Saenger

Week Ending March 9

A wow of a show, is the opinion of the thousands who followed their way into the Florentine palace of splendors to welcome Ray Teal, the new personality leader. Castro Carazo, leader of the Saenger grand orchestra just returned from a three-months' visit to South America and visited the Public "High Hat" with Art Frank a "sugar daddy," one of the few really good comedians seen and heard in this city for a while.

Art Frank impersonates a 71-year-old coed who visits a night club and shows the girls how to shake a wiggled foot after seeing rights he never dared dream of at home.

Marge Burton, a comedy dance, sings and dances her way into the hearts of the audience and made a hit. To use the language of the drug store hanger-on "Marge Burton" is a credit to the orchestra, of another entirely different type—not the peach, but the character—and both should be on the so-called "big time."

She has good material, good timing, has good voice and knows how to use them to advantage. The eight Gamby Girls, who opened the show, did a good job. The blonde and brunettes—know how to wear their clothes, that is the few they have, can dance blouses and wear shoes on their feet and hands. They have the revival of the chorus of the "Black Crook" staged this week in New York beat four wars from the audience as the "Black Crook" was the original.

Ray Teal, the new personality leader is a regular he-man, has good clothes, makes his announcements distinct, handles the stage and his band as he should, and to date has not attempted to murder the saxophone, but is suffering from a severe attack of Jumonstritis. Ray is from Texas where they don't stand still; some part of his body is jigging—too much pep or jazz. Too bad, he's so young.

Castro Carazo conducts "La Rosita" a medley of Spanish and Mexican music and restful. A feature this week is Los Morcocos, Spanish dancers direct from Havana, who do some wonderful steps. The film is Don't Miss It. "The Iron Mask," a sound picture which was well received.

Jersey City Studios

Week Ending March 15

As a special addition this week, Lee Dunce and his world famous dog, Rin-Tin-Tin in person offered "Fifteen Minutes in Hollywood." This was in the form of a short motion picture sketch, in which pictures this wonderful dog has played in. Dunce, appears on the stage and tells of Rin-Tin-Tin's really-told story of his own, also.

The dog then makes his bow and fulfills the wish of all the roommates. Rin is ten years old and has been starred in pictures for eight years. A novel film shot of Rin-Tin-Tin opposite Marcy May, the Stanely's new master of movement, in the set of winging his way to Jersey City in an airplane, aroused the enthusiasm of the audience to a high pitch, so much so that when he did his personal appearance in the Harry V. Croll production "The Northwest Mounted," was accepted as an old time favorite.

This stage show opened in a fine forest scene, as the orchestra boys in mounted police uniforms played an introductory chorus and the Adda Kaufman Girls, as squaws sang. Marry May made a fine appearance in his uniform as he entered to a nice reception while singing the band tune.

Then in a clear and distinctive voice, announced, "Totem Pole Dance" by the Kaufman Girls. The girls, in vivid colored costumes, represented totem poles offered a unique and novel dance. May next conducted his orchestra through a fine arrangement of "Blow in," with a vocal chorus by Ethel Payne. He then played a violin solo of "Souvenir" as the musicians inject comedy into it by playing a "hot" tune. June Kote sang, playfully, "Tell Me Ask For More" and "If I Had You." She offered her second choruses in a trick voice, but only received a fair hand.

Two young fellows, The DeCarlos Brothers, received a good hand for their "drunk" interpretations and tumbling stunts. The next act introduced by Marry May, as the background was made the backdrop for the scene.

New Haven Olympia

Week Ending March 13

For a Boris Petroff пользу роль was the featured stage attraction of the week. Alex Morrison, well-known trick golf shot headed the stage cast with his specialty. The revue had a slight plot with special songs and dances, Wilton Crawler, color-ordered performer from "Blackbirds" stopped the show cold with his clarinet playing while doing musical dance with costumes. Ken Whitmer and the stageband did their usual band numbers this week it being "A Precious Little Thing Called Love."
ORGAN SOLOS

Fred Kinsey (New York Post's 55th St.) Kinsey, director of organists for Radio-Kithar-Orpheum was guest organist at this house, and offered one of the most novel organ solos yet witnessed by this reporter. A trailer announced the "Duo-Unique," an original organ novelty by Fred Kinsey. Then Fred rose into the organ loft, with a well known pianist, with a Steinway Duo-Art piano comprised the duo. Kinsey, at the organ opened with "Rhapsody in Blue" followed by Moran, who was seen through a scrim, playing a cadenza of "Rhapsody in Blue." They both played "Blue Shadows" together. The curtain parted, disclosing the Duo-Art reproducing piano which played a cadenza of "Rhapsody in Blue." Kinsey and the Duo-Art then played the popular 2nd movement of "Rhapsody in Blue." Moran followed with an introduction of "St. Louis Blues." The Duo Art, playing a roll of "Blue Shadows," was audience pleaser, as did Moran at the organ. Kinsey's dialogue, about the audience enjoying their experiment, was interrupted by the Duo-Art, playing "How About a Love Letter," Kinsey answered it and it followed with "I'll Get By," which it played wrong, Kinsey then shot at it, with a cup pistol, played "I Faw Down an' Go Boom" and finished with a funeral dirge. The comedy over, Kinsey and Moran finished with a fine rendition of the "Doll Dance."

Lew White (New York Book) has returned to this house as its chief organist after an absence of nearly a year. During this year, he had devoted most of his time to various jobs, and also broadcasting and recording. White's first solo, after getting back in the fold, was offered as a straight spot, and featured "Theme Songs of the Photoplay." As the console rose, White played an introductory number, and he had tuned it up to this, with a modulation into "Lover, Come Back." Two other famous theme songs, "Marie" and "Precious Little Thing Called Love," were followed by "The Blues," and played with full organ as the final punch closed this fine arrangement.

Arlie Collis (Brooklyn Kenmore) offered a pleasing solo that consisted of a fine variety of spot roll, ballad and dance. He closed his solo, "Gypsy Melodie." Arlie used six title slides, opening with "The Second Hungarian Rhapsody." The balance of the program was "Lovely Night Sweetheart" and "Play, Gypsy, Dance Gypsy." Hults opened with vocal rolls with the spotlight on his feet. This was very well done and received the wholehearted response of the audience.

Jack Taylor (Newark Bradford) offered a clever community stunt called "A Singing Rodeo." Special slides with very clever lyrics helped everyone to sing. The program consisted of the following numbers, "The Sun Is at My Window," "Carolina Moon," "Me and My Blue Eyes," "South Wind," and "Where the Shy Little Violets Grow." During the playing of each comedy slide, Jack played "Pony Boy." He got a nice reception.

Harold Reider (Jersey City Stanley) played an original composition, which he called, "My Adventures With a Tune." In this clever stunt, Reider conveys the idea that the melody of "You We Have No Banana's" has been so impressed on his mind, that he has difficulty in playing a number without inserting bits of the "Banana's" song, "Gummin Song," "Minuet in G," "Blue Danube Waltz," "Funeral March," "Tannhausser," "Souza's March," each have bits of "Yes We Have No Banana's" interpolated.

Have You Sent Yours?
Larry Spier is exceptionally pleased with the results of the search for organists' biographies. In fact, most of the biographies are coming in large lots and wants we have are sure to get in plenty, as there are plenty as likely as anyone can. In doing so sufficient time will be given to each one for editing and the necessary space in the paper permits the author to copy it in print.

I know this is a fine service and that every reader, in addition to the organists, will enjoy this information that may be a valuable reference for future use.

at night and on Sundays, Billy got a job in a printing establishment as delivery boy and stayed there four years, during which time he had learned the trade thoroughly, he still held on after leaving school and piano, paying his own tuition and helping to support his family.

After four months at the Strand theatre, the manager quit on short notice and the owner asked Billy if he could handle the managerial duties alone with his organ playing. He said he would do his best, so he was given the opportunity. Another year of hard work and 24 hours followed, the answer was that Billy Wright had made good.

From the Strand theatre in Chiloicohe, Billy went to the Newman theatre in Kansas City where he was assistant organist until the summer of 1916. He then took a tour of the Midland Circuit of Theatres as guest organist for Mr. M. B. Sandburg. In October of the same year, he came back to Kansas City and Billy was given the position as assistant organist there. It wasn't long before he was given the responsibility and has now in his second year in this berth.

Billy William Wright is one of the youngest regular player in the Kansas City area, and has the reputation for being a very clever showman and an efficient organist. He has made thousands of friends for himself at the Midland and is slated to remain there as solo organist for a long time.

WILLIAM (BILLY) WRIGHT

Billy Wright was born in Liverpool, England, in July 1906. When he was seven years of age, his father decided to move the family to "The Land of Folk" and the family came to America and settled in the city of Pittsburgh. His father decided at that time that one of his sons should be a musician. So he bought a piano and Billy, who seemed to be more musical inclined than his brothers, was selected to be the artist of the family.

After studying piano for four years the family moved to Kansas City in the fall of 1908. While there, he became acquainted with Mr. John W. White, a well known pianist, and was introduced to the correct way of playing the organ. He studied the organ for two years and at the age of 14 he was playing at St. Ann's Church in Kansas City, though playing at the church Billy was still going to school, but found it necessary to leave school to go to work because of financial circumstances at home. THE THEATRE

Making the Novel Make the Film Succeed

Do tie-ups with book shops pay the exhibitor? Is it worth a showman's time and effort to take advantage of window and advertising tie-ups offered on motion picture productions from published works? Frank Rinehart, sales promotion manager for Doubleday Doran, is convinced from experience that they do.

"This is an age of high-pressure salesmanship. And more so, perhaps, in the motion picture business than in any other. The time element in picture exhibition makes this so.

"In the marketing of other products, time is not so essential a factor. Even the style market lacks the picture industry. It has at least three months to run its course. But in pictures the show is here today and gone tomorrow. Therefore, sales pressure must be applied at its highest, most intense peak. You must be quick, fast and comprehensively. You must cover every avenue of sales approach with lightning speed and reach every potential theatre goer within the radius of your theatre. And you must reach them consistently."

Key Novel Releases

"It is for these very reasons that the book tie-up appeals with such force to exhibitors. In the first place, we key the release of our novels to the release dates of pictures. We see that the book shop is supplied with sufficient copies of the book from which the film is made sufficiently in advance of the showing of the picture to arrange a striking window display. The bookseller is supplied also with advertising material, window cards, ideas for novel displays which tie up with the picture, sell the book and stop the passersby. He is, in other words, all set to give the theatre management lightning service, the high-pressure cooperation which he desires."

"The fact that the story has been thought worthy of publication is an added sales force for the picture. It carries conviction to the potential seatbuyer, always a clinching element in sales. And the large sales that Doubleday Doran have had from many of the novels which we have published in conjunction with their filming, have undoubtedly had a profitable effect on box offices.

"Book shop tie-ups lend an element of distinction to the exploitation of any picture which might otherwise be overlooked by any theatre showing worthy product. And remember that the salesmen of these book shops are instructed to advise their patrons to see the picture as well as buy the book."

"Syncopation" Tie-Up Cited

"As an example of what we do to promote the sales of both books and pictures, let me cite just a few of our activities on "Syncopation," R.K.O.'s all-talking, all-singing motion picture, filmed from Gene Markey's novel, "Stepping High." We issued a large press sheet-size promotion sheet to all of our book dealers, thousands of them throughout the country, which contained sales matter on both the book and picture. We reproduced on this sheet newspaper advertisements running from three-inch single column space to quarter-page size. In the ads we played up both the title of the book and the picture. This press-sheet also went forward to motion picture theatre managers who are advised to work with their local bookseller. Ideas for window displays, successful slogans, cut mats, etc., are liberally supplied our dealers.

"We have found that it pays the bookseller to tie-up with the exhibitor. And we have had numberless assurances from theatres that bookstore tie-ups have paid them.

Unusual Tie-up Chance

In Lois Wilson's Election

Theatre owners in towns where there are women's colleges will find a chance for profitable exploitation in the recent election of Lois Wilson to Beta Sigma Omicron. A special college night sponsored by the sorority in these towns will be easily arranged in connection with Warner Brothers' "On Trial," "Conquest," "Kid Gloves," "Stark Mad" and other pictures in which Miss Wilson appears.

Colleges where there are chapters are in Greenville, S. C., Jackson, Miss., Madison, Wis., Bloomington, Ind., Lexington, Ky., Bloomington, Ill., Los Angeles, Cal., Jackson, Miss., Albuquerque, N. M., Oxford, Miss., Evanston, Ill., Champaign, Ill., Batesville, Ark., Oxford, O., and Indiana, Ind.
“Weary River” Exploitation Shows The Great Value of Thoroughness

Because of its thoroughness and effectiveness, the Pittsburgh exploitation campaign on “Weary River,” the First National-Vitaphone special starring Richard Barthelmess, deserves particular attention. The picture opened at the Grand theatre February 21, and is now in its fourth week of record-breaking business. The phenomenal success being scored by “Weary River” in this engagement is attributed in no small degree to the campaign devised and executed by Harold B. Dygert and his assistant, Larry Jacobs, of the Stanley-Davis-Clark organization. The scale of prices for the Grand during the engagement of “Weary River” was 25 cents higher than that of any other picture house in town.

The Pittsburgh Press conducted a review contest during the seven days preceding and following the opening of the picture. This meant a story each day and hundreds of contributions from the readers of the Press. Five prices were awarded, $50, $25, $15, $10 and $5. The winning reviews were selected by a committee of judges comprising well-known Pittsburgh citizens.

Bread Firm Ties Up

Through a tie-up with Barry’s Bread, 300 window cards were distributed throughout the city and sixty full-sheet cards were carried on 30 trucks of the Barry Company. Fourteen thousand inserts were wrapped in packages of the bread and an amount of free tickets.

The Standard Talking Machine Company, Victor distributors, which reports “Weary River” as the best-selling record of the season, arranged 60 window displays in the shops of dealers. Streamers announcing the engagement of the picture at the Grand were used in all windows.

The Majestic Radio contributed eight full windows in the downtown district, using five-foot cut-outs of Barthelmess standing in front of a "mike." Forty Majestic dealers in Allegheny County cooperated in a full-page Sunday ad featuring “Weary River” in newspapers.

Before the opening and during the weeks following, radio stations WCAE, KQV, KOKA and WJS gave the “Weary River” song a big play. Also, it is being sung in the night clubs of Pittsburgh.

Other Houses Help

The Gulf Refining Company distributed 50,000 throwaways and placed 200 cards at the stations of the company. The Postal Telegraph Company placed a branch office in the lobby of the theatre displaying wires congratulating Barthelmess on the success of his performance and suggesting that patrons wire their friends to be sure to see “Weary River.”

The “Weary River” talking trail was used at the Stanley, whereas an organule with scenes from the production attracted much attention at the Enright theatre. Loud speakers carrying the “Weary River” melody were used in front of the Grand.

Ten thousand “Weary River” cards were distributed in the Pittsburgh hotels, and at Kramer’s restaurant, one of the most popular eating places in Pittsburgh, the “Weary River” announcement was carried on the back of the menus. Old Virginia restaurant put out “Weary River” chocolates in a special box. The coming of the picture to the Grand was announced by means of trailers in the ten suburban houses under the Stanley management.

The billing for the picture covered the city and suburban towns with 100 block 24-sheets and 49 lithograph 24-sheets. One thousand one-sheets and one thousand two-sheets, specially prepared for the engagement, were posted at advantageous points.

Charity Wins Good Will

For Milwaukee Manager

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, March 19.—Emil Frank, manager of the State theatre, is admitting free of charge 25 orphan boys and girls from the Jewish orphanage, each Friday night. This charitable act is one of the type which has been creating much good will for the Milwaukee Theatre circuit, owners of the State theatre.

No Adult Without Child Pens “Sonny Boy” Run

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—A new angle to the Saturday morning matinee idea has been applied at the Warner Brothers theatre to the Vitaphone special with “Sonny Boy.” “No adult admitted without a child” is the slogan for the series of extra performances which Warner Brothers is putting on in various parts of the country.

A special price scale is in effect at these times, every seat in the house selling for one dollar. An autographed photograph of Davey Lee is presented to each child who attends the morning matinee. The innovation of such a performance for “Sonny Boy” is resulting in a big extra revenue in week-end business. As much as this Vitaphone attraction has an unusual appeal to youngsters on account of its four-year-old star.

Public Highways Used

To Aid “Trail of ’98”

(Special to the Herald-World)

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 19.—Two hundred highway markers on the four arterial highways leading into Oklahoma City, were part of an exploitation campaign waged by Pat McGee, manager of the Capitol theatre, on “The Trail of ’98.”

The markers consisted of half-sheet cards attached to stakes in the highways, presenting the Highway in the direction of the city. Five days in advance of the showing, a question and answer contest was started, assisted by special stories and layouts in the two daily papers. Three thousand book marks, 2,000 coat hangers and heralds were passed out in the various office buildings. Cooperative music tie-ups were arranged along with store window displays. During the playdate, a sound trailer was run at the Criterion, the other Public house.

Effective Campaign On

“The Canary Murder Case”

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, March 19.—Cliff Gill of the publicity department of Fox Theatres, and manager Wallace James of the Wisconsin theatre, recently put over a very effective campaign on “The Canary Murder Case.” Advertising in both English and foreign language newspapers got the home play to many people, as well as book tie-ups with a large chain drug company and stationery stores. Trailers run in each of the local Fox theatres, and broadcasting over the local radio station, resulted in some very nice business.

Unique Novelty Used for Exploiting “Wild Orchids”

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 19.—A unique novelty which is proving a big seller in connection with the release in MGM’s “Wild Orchids” is a cardboard orchid to be pinned in a coat lapel. “Wild Orchids” is starring Greta Garbo and was directed by Sidney Franklin.

These cardboard orchids are five-leaved, light lavender in color and have the billing, “Greta Garbo in ‘Wild Orchids’ ‘A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture,’” with one blank leaf left for the theatre billing.

NEW YORK, March 19.—John Gardiner has been appointed director of publicity for Visigraphic Pictures, Inc. He was formerly a resident of Ottawa, Ont., and Montreal. In Quebec he was prominent in newspaper circles.

A girls’ basketball team was an exploitation of Colleen Moore’s “Lilac Time” when it showed at the Central theatre in New York. Philadelphia Jack O’Brien tells the usherettes how to score.
Among the breaks I have enjoyed for a good many years I have counted high the good fortune which has exempted me, until now, from the death-dealing urbanity of Mr. Roy W. Adams' typewriter. If you have read Mr. Adams' letter on page 62 of last week's issue—and if you haven't, you've missed something—you undoubtedly could see me squirm. For Mr. Adams is past master of the attack dilatory of adjetival precision and—most important—of weighty logic tightly laid down. I have been his constant and somewhat envious reader for all these years.

But I do not believe that Mr. Adams' disapproval of my remarks pertaining to Herr Von Stroheim's costly picture is so deeply grounded as he makes it sound. Specifically, Mr. Adams attributes to what he terms "dollar mark publicity" a proposal pending in the Michigan legislature to tax his and other cinema admission tickets exorbitantly. The rate of tax is 33 1/3 per cent on fifteen-cent tickets and 20 per cent tax on twenty-five-cent tickets. (I shudder to think how much the designer of the bill would consider a fair rake-off on a Ziegfeld Follies admission.)

I think Mr. Adams has been hasty in concluding that the proposal in question has origin in dollar mark publicity. It is too extreme, too "nutty" if I may use the vernacular, to have emanated from any source so relatively civilized. I should rather suspect the legislator sponsoring the bill, whose name I know not, of wishing to be paid off (as we hear it phrased in Chicago) or of simply having lost that more or less prevalent blessing known everywhere as reason. What I mean is, I don't think a guy who could frame a racket like that bill is the kind of a guy who needs dollar mark publicity or any other sort of foundation to base it on.

On the other hand, I think even Mr. Adams will admit that a great deal of the success of show business in general is dependent upon the glamour thrown about it. And that, whether we like it or not, idle braggery about great plenitude of money has been the most reliable producer of glamour ever since show business was a kid. And that not even a Michigan legislature—which is putting it strongly, if all we hear of its life-for-a-pint law is true—can be shown the hole in the doughnut of dollar mark publicity, if indeed the majority of its constituents do not already know that all expenses-sheets unfuelled from Hollywood are not pure gold.

But I am not disheartened by Mr. Adams' letter. For immediately following it on the page is another from the likewise literate Mr. George Benson. And Mr. Benson says I'm not so bad. I echo, "Thanks," and call the week a draw.

In OLD ARIZONA

Can you imagine a man of my years, experience and resultant impatience making four trips to a theatre to see a picture? Well, I couldn't either. But that's what happened. The theatre being McVickers, which hasn't done such business since 1925, and the picture being "In Old Arizona." But here's the real kick: I finally went to see it at eleven o'clock in the morning. And, even then, I had to stand in line for fifteen minutes!

Now if you're not in the habit of going to picture shows at that unreasonable hour in the morning, and I sincerely hope you're not, you can imagine my surprise at finding the picture not merely interesting but great. Great! Magnificent is a better word. And even that one isn't good enough. (Why bother with inventing words to name the talking picture, when there aren't even words to describe it?) I suppose you've read good news about the picture before this. Possibly in this magazine. But you've really very little information about it until you've witnessed it. The job of telling how good a silent picture sometimes is had become pretty tough, but over a period of years certain phrases had gained certain significances that helped. The job of telling how good a really good talking picture is is something else again, in fact the job of describing a silent one plus the job of describing a good stage play plus the practically impossible job of telling how good is the sum of these two. Frankly, I give it up.

But I don't give up the idea of convincing you that you ought to go somewhere and see "In Old Arizona" if you haven't. Whether or not you buy it for your theatre is none of my business. Whether you see it, is, because I want you to know what I'm talking about as you read this department from now on, and I'm afraid you won't if you haven't seen "In Old Arizona." You won't know what I mean when I say some actress is almost as good as Dorothy Burgess. And you won't know why my remarks about Warner Baxter, who until now has meant almost nothing in my young paragraphs, swing suddenly to high fervor. In fact you won't know what I'm talking about, at all, and if that news were to filter back somehow to the office of publication I'd probably lose my job. (Now, now—no fair taking advantage of that.)

"The Trail of '98"

And here, dear ones, is where the old master breaks down and tells all. All this time I've been pretending to be a very old and correspondingly knowing and crabbish individual. I've even considered myself as such, not without the testimony of white hair on the one hand and a broken arch on the other (what a mess I made of that crack), but I find it isn't true. For I had no idea that the Klondike stampede of '98 was anything more exciting than a lot of prospectors going somewhere to try their luck. What a break for me, then, to see "The Trail of '98." Whoops!

It seems there was a good many aspects of the rush that didn't get into the school books, or the kind of histories, they gave me to read, and I suspect that the news was still a little fresh for inclusion when I was at the so-called acquisitive age. History's funny that way, isn't it? Probably my grandson will learn more about the world war out of a book than I did out of a dishpan. Oh well—

This picture called "The Trail of '98" was my second great picture of the week under discussion and I ask you who could demand more of a job than that? Imagine getting paid—not much, of course, but regularly—for going of a morning to see "In Old Arizona" and then going the same evening to see "The Trail of '98"? Next to fishing with J. C. Jenkins and Phil Rand I can imagine no more satisfactory way of spending a day. But where was I?

Oh yes, I was saying that "The Trail of '98" was a great picture. Well, let it go double. That is, it's a great melodrama and it's also a great historical document. Doesn't that make it doubly great? If it doesn't, add that it's a great entertainment and surely that will begin to give you an idea of it. I fear I can't do so otherwise.

I wonder if any of you folks are having this trouble with your nouns and verbs. I suspect so. What I mean is, are any of you finding it difficult to rave coherently about the really good pictures? (No trouble, of course, to rave incoherently about the bad ones.) Well, the shortage of good practical descriptive sentences has been bothering me for quite a spell now. And yet I seem to have learned quite a number of bright, new words and phrases, too. I trace the trouble, rather, to a lack of youthful patience with nob resistance to idea.

Yes, It's Duty to Report

GOLDEN CITY, MO.—To the Editor:—I have never reported on shorts, in fact, very little on features but I really believe it is our duty to do so. Personally I feel that we get lots of good out of our territory, it is not fair to receive and never return at least an effort to repay the debt.

That being refrained from reporting on shorts is because most of them are so poor that the reports would make seem a crank or a knocker. I have run about thirty Educationalists and sincerely believe that not one out of ten of them provoked much laughter, that they were not worthwhile and just time was cut. These Educationalists were of the vintage of 1927, and I didn't re-buy.

I ran some Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of 1927 last spring and they were but little better than the Educationalists.

I have run the “Gumps,” one out of five are fair. Snookums, of the “Newlyweds,” because that we give a kid no matter what he does, proved to break out a laugh occasionally. Stern Brothers “Keeping Up With the Joneses” are very poor as laugh gags.

“Beauty Parlor” series of 27-28 I consider good. Not so many laughs but were well made and a valuable asset.

Mickey McGuire absolutely no good because people didn't like to see him with that cigar in his mouth and he could not provoke any mirth with that feeling of hatred toward the cigar.

Oswald the Rabbit, my best bet. Re-bought and will re-buy for this reason. I had been running Educational, M-G-M's and Stern Brothers for four or five months and wanting a one-reel short I get an Oswald. Mr. Max Brallier, who I thought had, in the past, run a few Oscars. When I threw Oswald on the screen this time there was the biggest commotion I have ever heard in a theatre. It was in the booth projecting and upon looking out saw upon the screen just the title and didn't think much was the matter. In fact I thought I had the wrong reversed thing. But the patrons knew and I found out afterward that I was showing the best, that I could show my people and the best that money can buy for this town. I have never seen a bad one. I have never failed to hear hearty laughs from the audience and I have had people tell me that they certainly were crazy cartoons but they sure liked them.

Newsreels I get too old to think much of and am going to cut them out when my time is up.

Have run as serials, “Blake of Scotland Yard,” rotten, for this reason guns are carried to be used by desperadoes. Horses cannot run as fast as autos can travel and people can't gallop at top speed without being killed and man cannot whip four or five. “Vanishing Rider” another one with nothing, a little more so. Just for kids, no other reason. “Trail of the Tiger” could have been a dandy but there was too much inconsistency in it.

Now I have a one and a fact, I believe they drove away business and I swore I would never run another one. But I have now run “Tarzan the Mighty.”

Started it off by trailer and a free showing of the first chapter, just like I did the others and used no other advertising on it at all, while I did show ones and photos on the others. And the result is that I showed the second chapter of “Tarzan” to 253 last Saturday matinee, boys and ladies, and I see a few reports from the third. “Tarzan the Mighty” is a real gold mine, will make up for the loss of the other three I ran, I'm sure. Everybody, not just the children, likes this.

I was down to Carthage and noticed a bunch standing in front of the theatre. I went over and interviewed several looking at the photos of “Tarzan” and upon asking them how they liked it one small boy spoke up and said, “Tarzan is the best picture we have ever had here—it and "Wings." I have been about right at that. I have seen many a serial Make them like “Tarzan” and I want them, or they are like old fashions. You wouldn't give ten cents a dozen for "Vanishing Riders." Reports said it was good—good for what? To personalize 253. H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.

What'll She Be Next?

SALMON, IDAHO.—To the Editor: I want to congratulate Trags on his New York City writeup. That was a dandy and he hits the facts square on the nose. Keep hammering away at this and you are the doyen.

Then I found in the February 9th issue that wonderful and laughable letter of another stalwart champion, J. C. Jenkins. Some folk may say that was the same old fellow at the same time—well, J. C. confounds such critics—for J. C. can do it and does it. I certainly hope every producer will read his "Colomy."

The only thing I didn't like in his letter was his statement that after seeing “Shopworn Angel” he promptly rechristened his Rolia for "Nancy" after one Nancy Carroll. That dared old Mormon! Each springtime his thoughts surely do turn to love and if months after we read his love sounds and wonder if he is going to start a harem or become editor of the “Lover's Dream Book.”

They say, “I'm feeling rather "Violets" then "Clara," then some cutie I have forgoten, then another pretty face, and now "Sue" for God's sake. Now, I say, Will J. C. please? Well, maybe it will be "Sue" soon. Who it was, when J. C. was rattling around in his model T. days, I don't know, but, of course, there was a question mark as to whether he used cigarettes with or without the cough, on that too. J. C. lives so far away that I can't possibly give him a job, as he needs but T. O. Service sees him now, and when an offer to take him outside the city limits where he'll be perfectly safe from the bandit boys or demon women doesn't come, then I'm slow and sleepy and quiet and safe, and tell this gay old buck to quit cyaning the young females and to write a dozen plays.

Well, he can have his "Nancy" but I for one am going to stand by my old love "Colleen."

—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

A “Newcomer” Speaks

OMAK, WASH.—To the Editor: When I was a kid I was raised in a nice quiet town which consisted of one of the things that made it nice and quiet and one of the things that everyone, especially "kids" and newcomers, were very careful not to speak out of turn. Now I suppose am quite past my picture business and wouldn’t for the world speak out of turn, but it seems that whatever it was that put the one, ought, also, put the urge in me to write you. You see, I am a fellow feels kind of guilty when he gets all the benefits of the Herald and gets a chance to cash in on the other side of the fence of the business. I have nothing to let them know that he is getting it.

"What the Picture Did for Me" is the department that I should be writing to but so far, if I would tell the truth in answer to that caption, it would only tend to lower my already inflated morale. In truth it hasn't done very much to me because when I went in a put couple years experience gained on a carnival lot, when was a sapling, up against a service station owner's cash, and with the promise of the local Commercial Club that our town would reach a point where San Francisco would be watching us, and right away too, we built the "Joint."

As soon as the distributors heard about the "Joint" we got over the "need" to go next day in next city, they got busy and rearranged the rates or rentals on films up to a point that would be in keeping with good business (for us). Good business! The local boosters lied a little, but they wanted to be sure to be getting enough in case 25 months didn't come off. Next year, which all means What the Pictures Did to My Partner; Plenty—Brother—Plenty. But he is a good sport and we are sort of getting through it.

If it is worth anything to you, let me tell you that man J. C. Jenkins is there; and that bird's name is "Amen." And a good name, too.

But to get serious, and by the way the only other time in my life that I got serious, I made a lot of promises that she still insists on my keeping, but J. C. is absolutely right about the five grand showers going back to the soil, if something like the "Resurrection" doesn’t happen in this game out in the tall, then.

I suppose the older and more initiated purveyors of cinema entertainment can appreciate the difference in films, but to a novice like me, it seems that anything with over three thrills in 8 reels or six laughs in a week's run is called a Special, and as soon as the distributor telegraphs back the results or records to make the train whistle right out loud on the screen, we will be asked to pay them for something we didn’t have and for something that is interesting, I know, but it will give you an insight into the mind workings of a small townier up here near the B. C. line and if the boys will just clip the names off the bottom, and if ever they are up this way, they may find that we know a lot of things besides "available pitchers." We do know where the big ones bite, and we know where the birds are, and we know a fellow that makes good cider. He'll be out in twenty days more. Just as soon as we get over the "need" to run credits and the apple money comes back we expect to be able to tell you:

"What the Picture Did for Me"

Until then accept this as our apology for appearing to be "unbalanced" and its really worthwhile contributors.—A. H. McDermont, Omak Amusement Company, Omak, Wash.

How It's Done

BATH, S. CAR.—To the Editor: We enclose postal money order for $3 to cover renewal of our subscription for two years, from March, 1929, to March, 1931.

Here’s a special report on “What the picture did for me” too long to condense on your regular forms.

Something is wrong, sure as thunder, when an outsider can come in and pack your theatre at 10 cents and 25 cents with a picture several years old, in which the women wear
Columbia

ALMONY ONLY: Lois Wilson—February 5-6. One sweet picture. Lois Wilson is excellent. All of Columbia pictures have been very, very good so far. Six reels. — G. V. Humerber, Parkersburg, W.Va.—General patronage.

DRIFTWOOD, STOOL PIGEON: Special cast. March 24-25. Good little program picture. I have played seven Columbia pictures and every one of them was a good program picture. You exhibitors that are not using Columbia pictures are missing a good bet. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

Street of Illusions: Special cast—12%. March 8. A good clean entertainment. Story good and acting fine, better than average program picture. Bert Stern is managing this theatre, Greenville. Mich.—General patronage.

The Apache: Margaret Livingston—48%. March 3-4. General picture and drew a good house when the roads were almost impassable. Columbia pictures O. R. Frink and photography very good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

First National

Seven Footprints to Satan: Special cast. One of the best First National pictures I have played this year, and I am quite sure every one will proclaim it good entertainment. We showed it in silent film, but it would be even better in sound. Mill produced, with good account made by entire cast. Six reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

Outcast: Corinne Griffith—70%. February 20. Excellent, a very good program picture that went over fine. Miss Griffith was fine in this one. A lobby photo would be highly appreciated. Seven reels.—G. L. Salisbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

Heart to Heart: Special cast.—February 27-28. This is just as nice a picture as any one could wish to show. Bright and clean. Comedy running all the way through. Well acted by good cast. Wish we could get more like this one, for it surely did please. Seven reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

Trail of the Horse Thieves: Tom Tyler.—45%. March 2. Another real Ball liked. Some very pretty scenes. The kid, Frankie Darro, just gets them. Six reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmarnock, Va.—General patronage.

Heart to Heart: Astor-Hughes—February 25-26. Have seen some good reports on this one but personally I thought it just fair. Of course, it's only a program picture and one expects very little from program stuff these days. If a picture is good it's special, and that means special price. Seven reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

Heart to Heart: Special cast—One of the comedy-dramas that almost every exhibitor is talking about. Starts with Mary Astor as an Italian princess, but immediately transplants her to her native American soil, where the comedy starts. Louise Fazenda contributes her full share toward entertainment.—Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weiser, Ark.—General patronage.

Lady Be Good: Mulhall-Mackall—45%. February 23. A very good comedy-drama that was well received without any regrets, well worth its rental. Starts and ends that could be asked for. Seven reels.—G. L. Shubhury, L. O. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

Rose of the Golden West: Mary Astor—Here is another picture that pleased our patrons. Seven reels.—Glacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Chaser: Harry Langdon—March 2. Too silly to be entertaining. Six reels.—Mrs. G. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

The Upland Rider: Ken Maynard—65%. February 27. Ken Maynard's Westerns are consistently good. This is no exception. Roads are in very bad condition at present, and many people were unable to come. Six reels.—E. B. Conant, Charle- roben Hall, Lincoln, N. H.—Small town patronage.

The Phantom City: Ken Maynard—A little different kind of Western and has more comedy and epoch element in it than the "Haunted House." It seemed to please, and Tarzan the horse is simply a knockout in this picture. He sure does his stuff. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughn, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

Oh Kay: Colleen Moore—26%. February 24-25. Amusing farce-comedy, but the weather was against me.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

Three Hours: Corinne Griffith—Very good. Many favorable comments. Corinne draws well here.—Rex theatre, Byron, Ill.—General patronage.

Smile Brother Smile: Mulhall-Mackall—This picture was a pleasant surprise. Many favorable reports.—Rex theatre, Byron, Ill.—General patronage.

The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come: Richard Barthelmess—Played to increased business his first week. Very good. Nine reels.—Rex theatre, Byron, Ill.—General patronage.

Adoration: Billy Dove—A good picture that pleased the majority.—Carl Rech, Palace theatre, Malta Mont.—General patronage.

Fox

Romance of the Underworld: Mary Astor—41%. February 22-23. Dandy little crook picture that is a treat from the rest. The detective in this is great. Nothing big but good. Seven reels.—O. Lane, Star theatre, Trumamburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Wild West Romance: Rex Bell—48%. March 8-9. Pretty good Western, the star is no drawing card. Print and photography good. Five reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

The Lone Eagle: Special cast—This drew better at 20-10 cents than = "Air Circus" at 40-20 cents run as a special. People spoke favorably of it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Prep and Pep: Special cast—Good picture, but could not get them in, big loss. Some against it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Horseman of the Plains: Tom Mix—Jan-
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD March 25, 1929

THE GIACOMAS OF BROADWAY

The Crystal theatre on Broadway—operated by the well known motion picture theatre, Gaumont—recently changed its name. How does it sound? And the Herald-World congratulates the brothers Gaicoma on their success. The new name is a neat word. Tombstone, Ariz., theatre has become a Broadway house without the removal of a stick or a stone. It seems—indeed, it is a fact—that with the completion of the Southern Pacific railways from New York to San Diego, both towns have a street called Broadway. How would a name like Tombstone become a synonym of America—‘you’ve heard of it, of course. Well, then, this highway runs right through Tombstone—we have received a map from Giacoma Brothers to prove it. And that’s how the Crystal got on Broadway. Simple, isn’t it?

EXHIBITORS

April 29-30, It is a Mix picture it is good, but that is not saying much. A good theme of comedy runs through the picture, which puts the picture across. As the picture goes, it is the result of E. H. Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE NEWS PARADE: Special cast—Personally selected by Chicago theatres. Out of all the popular films of the past season. Seven reels.—George H. Koch, Gem theatre, Lyndon, Kan.—General patronage.

MAKING THE GRADE: Special cast—February 24-27. If you have the Screen Service and 11x14 photos, you’ll have a lot to explain to your patrons and it is the least you can do. Second best show we have this year in the picture. The trailer on it showed the hero (Edmund Lowe) as having more luck turning the wheels out in the mountains. Nothing of the kind appeared in the picture. We had to laugh at that one off. Six reels—National,ershe, Parkersburg, la.—General patronage.

HOMESICK: Special cast—March 1. See him in "Gay Retreat" or "Why Saloon Go Wrong" and you certainly will be delighted with this one.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

HOMESICK: Sammy Cohen—February 1-2. Here is a riot. Played it too new and did not know the value of it. Equal to Gay Retreat and Why Saloon Go Wrong. If you see your back seats are well bolted down when you play this picture. Mr. ware, six reels—C. V. Humberg, Parkersburg, la.—General patronage.

THE RED DANCE: Dolores Del Rio—February 22. This is a good picture and we all have been waiting for it to run. A new girl in every film rental back. Think this the best one of several of Del Rio’s.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

FUGITIVES: Madge Bellamy—February 18. Just fair. Nothing to go wild over. Filed this on our 18th.—Phil Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

M. M. GANGER: Special cast—February 12. I liked this and the novel way of telling the story by the way of a dairy.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE RIDE: A man of the mountains—February 26-28. Very good little picture and one with which practically everyone was satisfied. My first picture with a poor attendance over big with our audience. Eight reels.—W. C. Pullin, Lindon theatre, Columbus, O.—General patronage.

PRESENTATION OF THE UNDERWORLD: Special cast—Phonoplay magazine listed this as one of six best for the month, so I stepped on it. My people knew I was a star and stayed at home. I did not make out very well. Sorry, boys, I couldn’t see it and don’t say it was a good picture, two told me it was fine, but no one said it was any “six best.” People asked me why I was away. Poar a dachip in English language, too. We want to be enough for our theatre, but one minute hurts balance. I suppose the “movie” game is being run for business values. Keep a real picture for the making class youths who like this stuff and will blow their last dollar to take their cutie to a Sunday two dollar picture just to show their gals how Liberal and sporty they be. If that be so, the industry is pondering to the lower elemental passions of the mob, which may make the city exhibitors rich, but it makes the country exhibitors poor, and can the industry survive without city and country exhibitors all being success? It is hoped that there will be another good local. Give us pictures that will take, in any theatre at any time. We do have a few such pictures but we need more. Especially we need one to make the small town theatres much money, yet a fine big murder court room play does none. I’ll admit—and I think it was and cut it into this picture. I remember well, and the photography shows it. It is a very pictorial picture, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE FARMER’S DAUGHTER: Margery Beebe—February 19. Would knock out a good stick two reel comedy. As a feature it was trimme. Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HELLO CHEVENNE: Tom Mix—Tom Mix drew them in as usual. Didn’t see the play but the boys who played it, were excellent. A record for 1928 said this was a good Western, so my comments would be superficial anyway. “What would we do without this record?” It’s a life savior eure enough.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

TRUE HEAVEN: Special cast—29-29. Feburary 23. Can’t get them out to see this picture, thank Heaven! Neither can we get to see the little girl in the role of a cheap convers, smoking and drinking. The dire dramatic climax and sentiment are put aside for the offensive frankly sporting house atmosphere of the earlier scenes. This is a fine theme to show you youngsters. If you want to start a crusade against motion pictures.—Roy W. Adams, Palm theatre, Mazon, Mich.—General patronage.

THE AIR CIRCUS: Special cast—This pleased generally but did not draw as we expected it would. Frewt high too.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

FOUR SONS: Special cast—A wonderful picture. Everyone cried and enjoyed it. I boosted this in my newspaper advertising it and it drew better. Fresh picture that we have whom we have not seen all winter. Step on it, you can’t praise it too highly. One of the best.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

THE CAMERAMAN: Buster Keaton—One of the few Keaton pictures that pleased our people. Not a special by any means, but a good comedy for program or program. Combination theatre, Palace theatre, Malaga, Mont.—General patronage.

THE CAMERAMAN: Buster Keaton—41%. February 15-16. Have been looking for this one, and what could they do but laugh and enjoy themselves? Our first Keaton and. interesting studio picture of Keaton great! Eight reels.—O. Lane, Star theatre, Trumansburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

THE CAMERAMAN: Buster Keaton—March 2. A riot of laughter from beginning to end. Best comedy we have played for months. Full of action and pleased 100 percent.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Dela.—General patronage.

THE TRAIL OF ’98: Dolores Del Rio—February 25-March 1. Play this one up big. A stupendous production and one they will all enjoy. It filled the house every one. It opened in Los Angeles—Covered Wagon, “Big Parade” and other special programs. We have the only program price. Buy it and get the wife her spring outfit—or go fishing with Phil Rand.—Cash, Bell, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

WEST OF ZANZIBAR: Lon Chaney—79%. February 24. Mostly a lot of expensive and brilliant digging work. We have the only special price. This is the best dog story we have had in some time. Very satisfactory to patrons.—Mrs. Payne Corp., Linton theatre, Columbus, O.—General patronage.

THE GREAT RICHards: Special cast—Flash—March 12. The dog is the whole show. Seven reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Special cast—An extra good picture of the underworld type.—Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Welner, Ark.—General patronage.

THE BUSH RANGER: Tim McCoy—February 20. Eighth of this series—very good. A Wilson picture I used to like Tim.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE WHITE RANGER: Tim McCoy—so much.—Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Welner, Ark.—General patronage.

SHOTS: Eyd Chaplin—February 14. Full of comedy and action. Our patrons very enthusiastic in their praise of the film. Many good comments on their part, their interest is by virtue of propetry, but very funny at all times.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Dela.—General patronage.

BROTHERLY LOVE: Dane Archer—February 16. This team is always good, given something to work with. Not as good as some other teams but enjoying rotten business—no fault of pictures. Combination theatre, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—February 24. One of the high priced features. Neither Davies or Haines up to standard. A rather disappointing picture. We expected more than we got.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Dela.—General patronage.

HER CARDBOARD LOVER: Marion Davies—February 12. A very funny comedy, Acting by both stars. Keep it up. A real laugh to the largest of laughter. Good for any house, large or small.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Clayton, Dela.—General patronage.

THE FLYING FLEET: Special cast—February 8-9. Very good—hold it as “not a war picture.” Our patrons are rather fed up with the fact that they never get uniform on the advertising. This has clever story, good cast, thrills. Aeroplane stuff excellent. Please all who saw it, but local interest not at its height.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, III.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—March 1-2. Plenty of good comedy. Haines doing some of his best stuff, goodness—we felt he did come home. Marion Davies also is a favorite among our patrons. Nine reels.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ind.—daven at night.
FOUR WALLS: John Gilbert—February 21. Was disappointed in this one, although it was fair as a program. Certainly upon this basis I lead me to believe it was something better. H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

TIDE OF EMPIRE—Tod Browning—March 4. This is not another "Covered Wagon." It is not an "Epic of The Golden West," but the small-town treatment is no less a great deal better than the average Western. Renee Adoree is captivating as a Spanish beauty and gives as good a performance as allows. Some of the scenic shots are marvellous. The picture has humor, pathos, a good horse race, a fair hanging scene and, withal, makes good narrative pacing. Eight reels.—C. Wallace Smith, The Rakun theatre, Clayton, Georgia.—Small town patronage.

THE BABY CYCLOPS: Cody-Pringle—February 13. Not much to this one. Just one of those kind that box office business wore. Seven reels.—H. B. Wilson, Palace theatre, Golden City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

A SINGLE MAN: Pringle-Cody—March 4-5. Good but the two preceding pictures from these two stars were much better. They do not now draw the Western. It is a little misleading, but the picture will satisfy if you get them in. It was a good story but will need strong advertising. Eight reels.—H. B. Keys, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

FOUR WALLS: John Gilbert—Here was a very good picture. It pleased our patronage very much. Eight reels.—Glaron Bros, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

RIDERS AT THE DARK: Tim McCoy.—Just another one added to what has gone before. Six reels.—Glaron Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

HER CARDBOARD LOVER: Marion Davies.—My patrons all enjoyed this immensely, perhaps not so much as some of Max Daaco former comedies, but more people came out on Tuesday and Wednesday than usual, and we lost less than we generally do on mid-week plays. Marion is popular here. Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE WHITE SISTER: Lilian Gish—70%. March 16. Another surprise package from Metro. Bought right and did nice business. Gish isn't extra popular here, but I think if the public should see this book in full they would be fairly known. While the entire setting is foreign (Italy), yet the picture does not have the usual foreign effect. Get it in as a story, this is a good entertainment. Eight reels.—No admission and give entire satisfaction, especially if you have seen some of Miss Davies popular pictures. Exquisitely printed and most beautifully photographed. Eleven reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

BEYOND THE SIERRAS: Tim McCoy—9%. February 19. Best Western we have had in some time. Played to the smallest crowd we ever had. Can only do handfuls on Friday and Saturday in this town. Six reels.—D. Lane, Star theatre, Trumaneburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

DREAM OF LOVE: Joan Crawford—82%. February 27. Certainly has the program pictures. Have yet to see one a total flop. This was a wonderful production. Everyone in the cast handled their part well. C. Pullin, Linden theatre, Columbus, O.—General patronage.

THE BABY CYCLOPE: Cody-Pringle.—It seemed the "brainy" men of Hollywood have smut complex these days. It is impossible to get pictures anymore that hasn't vulgar scene. Outside of that it's a silly comedy that they may like. Seven reels.—P. C. Turner theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

WEST OF ZANZIBAR: Lon Chaney—Well, it's different from the usual collection of underworld pictures we've been getting away. Former Lon Meet his fate suddenly, when the powers that be decide it's time to end the picture. Spooky and gruesome, but they fall for it. I rather liked it, so did my patrons. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE CROWD: James Murray.—Very poor drawing power. Fell down terribly second night.—Rose theatre, Honolulu, Hawaii.—General patronage.

DIAMOND HANDCUFFS: Special cast—29%, February 27-28. A mediocre picture which played to poor business. Personally did not care for it, but a few told me they did. The excellent cast employed in this picture deserves better stories. Seven reels.—A. B. Krieger, Majestic theatre, Myerstown, Pa.—General patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD: Wm. Haines.—We ran this on our best nights, Sunday and Monday, at advanced prices, with a Metro comedy, "Leave 'em Laughing," and Paramount News. This made a dandy program, which all seemed to enjoy. I am running comedy and news with my Sunday rased-price shows, unless I have a ten or more reel special on, when I leave comedy out. Metro is the only producer whose comedies I dare to show on my best nights. Their comedians are certainly fine. Metro has also some splendid comedy-dramas of the Haines and Davies trademark and they are always a pleasure to show.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: Special cast—March 3. This didn't quite come up to the expectations of our patrons. Not much of a story to it and it is rather drагy in spots.—Paul H. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE BABY CYCLOPE: Cody and Pringle.—Another one that tried to keep the patron's mind on a level with the doors. Many director's minds could stand a lot of uplifting to make them satisfying to the ordinary theatregoer. Another one that tried to keep the patron's mind on a level with the doors. Many director's minds could stand a lot of uplifting to make them satisfying to the ordinary theatregoer. Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weimer, Ark.—General patronage.

CIRCUS ROOKIES: Special cast.—Just a fair picture. A little above program schedule. Not much of a box office attraction.—Mrs. J. B. Travis, Elite theatre, Placerville, Calif.—Small town patronage.

THE CROWD: James Murray.—Very poor drawing power. Fell down terribly second night.—Roo theatre, Honolulu, Hawaii.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston.—First night fair, second night retted. Can't make a cent on Metro, Ralston and Vidler. This so-called society type appeals to a small group of the ladies but not to the general public. However, I think we should run a few of this type, but the trouble is, too many occur on a contract to make it desirable. My wife says she liked it pretty well but didn't like neliec plays where husband and wife run around in scanty clothes and intimate bathroom scenes.—Philand Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THREE WEEK ENDS: Clara Bow—84%. February 27. A very good picture, pleased fairly well. Miss Bow must have fallen into the hands of a new director. Consider it her best one we have seen. Herefore her pictures have been too much the same. Same on her part, same acting, same eye movements, same expression. Did not adhere to the story. If she would show in her acting the four forms of emphasis, and support them by living and feeling the part, she would please her supporters beyond measure. Six reels.—G. Salibay, I. O. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

MORAN OF THE MARINES: Richard Dix—March 2. This is a very good picture and a pleasuring change from creak stories and red hot love melodramas. One the whole family can enjoy. Ruth Elder is good, regardless of critics' knocks.—Mrs. Faye Pero, Colonial theatre, Col- fazi, Ill.—Small town patronage.

RED HAIR: Clara Bow.—Good picture to best busi-

NEILGH, NEBRASKA, March 8, 1929.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

If anyone thinks it’s a snap to write a column when he is cooped up in a little town where the only things of importance that has transpired within the week was a truck driver ran over Mrs. Smith’s skidoodle and broke one of his hind legs, just let him try it.

We know how George and Joe will feel about it if we don’t fill so much space, and we know how you will feel about it if we don’t make it cut one continuos narrative all the while, with nothing to look forward to except the next mudhole around the bend.

A number of letters have come to use from late from exhibitors from all over the country wanting our advice on this, and the other thing, and it seems as though they think we are qualified to advise on any subject from how much tallow to use on the baby to the best recipe for making home brew.

An exhibitor down in New Mexico writes us and says, “You have traveled around a lot and have seen a lot of pictures, and I would like to know if you would advise me to play pictures or not?”

Boy, all we know about “THE WEDDING MARCH” is what we have learned from the reports on the picture. T. O. Service says it is the best picture he has ever seen under the von Stromer banner, and this might be saying a lot or it might not be saying adumbrating. All the reports we have seen from exhibitors inclines us to believe that it is not a small town picture. If von Stromer ever made a good, clean picture, we were absent when it was shown. We have never seen “THE WEDDING MARCH,” therefore are not competent to say what it is, but if it is a typical von Stromer production, we wouldn’t worry about their leaving it out of the contract.

From Texas comes this inquiry, “Dear Grandpa: I want to sign up for X— service for next season, but my wife insists that I buy Z—a service and instead of saying I don’t she is going to pack up and go back to her mother. She says I haven’t got sense enough to run a country store. What do you advise me to do in this case?”

Brother, this looks like the commencement of a family row—may it be the termination of one. But this puts us in the nine hole. We have got a lump on the side of our gourd as hard as a large bean. We interfered with a family row once, since which time we have had a lot of leery mixing in family affairs. But our advice would be the same if you are going to let your wife run your business, you had better sew some ruffles on the bottom of your pants and familiarize yourself in the use of safety pins.

Here’s a stunner. It comes from an exhibitor down in Arkansas and he says, “Dear Sir: I have been following your column for a number of years and if you have ever yet said a sensible thing it has escaped my attention, and I am one of Darwin’s star oroligines. I have been talking to my wife about your words and comments in your magazine, as soon as it comes to see where you are and what you have been saying. I want you to be the first to tell me to be as frank and as truthful as your column is of any benefit to the public, it might remove a doubt in my mind as to your sanity.”

Had this letter come from Wisconsin instead of Arkansas, we could have accounted for it, because there is a fella up at Neilleville who would be apt to use just such language, but since the post mark is Arkansas, it is an all for Darwin’s star oroligines. I have been talking to my wife about your words and comments in your magazine, as soon as it comes to see where you are and what you have been saying. I want you to be the first to tell me to be as frank and as truthful as your column is of any benefit to the public, it might remove a doubt in my mind as to your sanity.

And now a boy down at Golden City, Mo., takes a wallop at us through the HERALD-WORLD. Here is a letter that this young man permitted us to travel through that state last fall. We wish to assure our good friend, J. B. Wilson, that all the exhibitors in this country we’d be the happiest man on earth, we are offering as an all for not calling on him, that the bridge had been washed out on the road and Nancy was waiting for him at the bridge. Should our good friend come back and prove that there was no bridge nor creek, on the road, it will make it awfully bad for us. We hope he doesn’t do it. Should Missouri continue to go Republican, it might be necessary for us to make another trip down there, in case we will surely call on our good friend, but in the meantime we hope to meet him at Detroit Lakes next summer, at which time we will smoke the pipe of peace and take an invoice of his hip pocket.

From Spokane, Wash., comes a letter from George Larkum Scott who grieves us very much. George Larkum says, “I note by one of your letters in your HERALD-WORLD that you seem to be subjugating jazz music. Knowing you as I do, having tasted good jazz, and carnally with choice cuts of beef-teak from the neck on your table on many occasions. I am surprised that you are not keeping pace with the march of progress being made in modern music. Let me ask you a simple question. Where would our old friends directing his symphony orchestra and church choirs in the latest and most popular jazz selections. Having raised George Larkum from a pup, we are looking forward to a pleasant visit with him.

THE WOLF OF WALL STREET” is one of the hopeful signs for the industry, hopeful because it shows that good pictures can be made if they will employ good directors, a good

28. Not much of a picture. Seven reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

LOVE AND LEARN: Esther Ralston—February 5-6. A very good comedy feature which pleased everyone. Poor print on an otherwise passable print and colored. Poor title, but will please if you get them in. Six reels.—H. B. Kayes, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.-Small town patronage.

SOMEONE TO LOVE: Special cast—March 2. A very pleasing picture. About the best that we have had this spring.” Bud,” and “Every man’s business was very poor due to the almost impossible conditions in which we read.—Mrs. T. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, I11.—General patronage.

THE FIRST KISS: Special cast—January 26. Two good pictures, with good comic mixtures. It is safe against such sloppy titles. You can’t make any but the morons come in on it.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, I11.—General patronage.

THE MATEING CALL: Thomas Meighan—March 5. A good picture. Six reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE WATER HOLW: Jack Holt—February 22. A very good Zane Grey. Print and photography good. This picture comes to us from a list of fans of here. Seven reels.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, I11.—General patronage.

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—February 16. A good picture with good comic mixtures. Just a little better than the regular Western. Colored film part has no bearing on story and not much of it any interest. Not worth any extra film rental over the program price. Our patrons were pleased. Seven reels.—E. H. Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE WATER HOLE: Jack Holt—February 27-28. This is the all-color special we bought last fall at a special rate. It does have a little color sequence in it but is far from a special. It is at all right if you can buy it right but don’t pay the price of a special for it. Five reels.—B. N. Wilson, Film edition theatre, Holyrod, Kan.—Small town patronage.

BARBIE WIRE: Special cast—Comments all to the good. Rea Adams. Eight reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Special cast.—Rita compromise herself in order to win Florence Viker’s bean, then Florence compromises herself to win the bear back. Neglige bath robe love, also has some Indian woman in toe cracks for a bar. A good story. Colored, good for Idaho.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE VANISHING PIONEER: Jack Holt—March 9. Nothing extra for a Zane Grey. In fact, somewhat disappointing. Poor print and photograph poor except the versus. We have a list of this that we once. We have a hold of this defective stuff, the fire demon will you pay us a call. Whenbeer the Arbitration Board will be down. We have a list of this stuff. Declaring this exhibitor guilty of negligence, none and whatnot. All to the detriment of someone’s hope. Seven reels.—B. N. Wilson, Film edition theatre, VaJa, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

EASY COME EASY GO: Richard Dix.—February 26. March 6. Again some sentimental Gone Glengarry little comedy-drama. Did not have business with it. Backed up last night, chiefly due to the fact that the March lion came to town with a 40 degree temperature drop and chased the March lamb back into the fold. Poor print. Good photography. Six reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Seneca theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

story and a good cast, and forget that drunken hrawl in road houses where women predominate are essential to good entertainment.

We can think of only one person who could play the part of the Wolf better than George Bancroft, nor you can't either. We don't want to think of anyone better, for when George is good enough, it is good enough. We may be a little partial to George, but that's George's fault, for we have never yet seen him in a character—when it was played less than 100

As you will surmise from the title, "THE WOLF OF WALL STREET" is a story of the stock exchange in New York, where they tickle 'em under the chin in the morning and then slap their ears down before the gong sounds at 3 p.m., and where the snickers run as well as the stocks. And in March, or begin in March, and be sure to find out what as much show as a Republican would in a Democratic caucus in Shreveport, La.

George had a wife, which was probably necessary in carrying out the story and which may be common to stock gamblers, and this wife sidestepped certain of her marriage obligations, as we have been told. But Lucas should have made love to her instead of picking out some of the other Hollywood stars we could name, the camera failed to photograph in this. Seven reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

HALF A BRIDE: Esther Ralston—15% February 20-21. A wonderful little program picture which pleased the general public. Esther was washed out by final night of big medicine show here. Those who knew the show for ourselves from our own experience, we can see nothing either of us would have understood why Esther does not draw. She is beautiful, can act and has a pleasing personality.
Seven reels.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

TAKEN ME HOME: Bebe Daniels—February 6. A very choice little comedy picture. Well performed. We all like Bebe Daniels. Six reels.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

TAKEN ME HOME: Bebe Daniels—February 6. Bebe Daniels is very certain of the crowd which made her produce more than one dollar on this one for myself on one of the best specials shown recently. A good comedy picture. Mrs.
Faye Corlee, Coliseum theatre, Colfax, Ill.—Small town
patronage.

DOCTOR OF NEW YORK: George Bancroft—February
24. For those that like underworld pictures, this will do. Just an ordinary program picture. Eight reels.—A. G. Crow, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE SUNSET LEGION: Fred Thomson—February 28-March 1. A good Western with plenty of comedy in it. Seven reels.—William E. Tragos, Traga theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

AVALANCHE: Jack Holt—a Zane Grey picture burst through raving on Zane Grey's pulling power. They all prove good in advertisement office enough attention paid to details in the making. Also Paramount is too clever for exhibitors left open a margin only for exhibitor.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—February 24-25. A very good picture of a kind which will appeal to the better element of your audience. One of the kinds that you can hand out with a good conscience. Would have pleased better if it had been one reel or two shorter, as in nine reels it goes into too much detail, and can't be a trick to one who can take his thrills. Nine reels.—William E. Tragos, Traga theatre, Nellisville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WIFE SAVERS: Beery-Hutton—February 27-28. Thank goodness this is the last from this pair. Six reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—
General patronage.

Pathe

LET 'ER GO GALLAGHER: Junior Coghlan—February
26. Lively melodrama, and they seemed to like it.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE DEVILS TWINS: Leo Maloney—February 23. Pretty good Maloney picture. Considerable comedy and nothing wrong with it. A good many laughs for the patrons and a few moments good scrapping in the last reel. Most of my crowd left the theatre in a good humor.
Seven reels.—C. Wallace Smith.
EXHIBITORS

Universal

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast—48%. February 27-28. By all means, brother exhibitors, play a good American story. The plot is on. Four—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast—February 21. Wondering drawing power. A real special, and a picture that will run well. Fifty-six reels. George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast—Very good picture this Tuesday. The most profit we thought would be made with box-office receipts. Would advise small towns to play it.—Mrs. J. T. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placeville, Del.—General patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast—85%. February 22-23. Business was not up to expectations. First week, we played it. Second week, we played it。”

The DANGER RIDER: Hoot Gibson—A good picture with a lot of very good rodeo stuff worked into it. Hoot apparently does his own stunts in this one. Much of the rodeo stuff was done at the arena of the rodeo dier's field, Chicago. Six reels.—F. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura La Plante—This is our old friend before we could use it. But picture was in good shape and pleased the majority.—Rose theatre, Bryan, Ill.—General patronage.

RYKO (FBO)

SILVER COMES THRU: Fred Thomson—93%. March 2. Very good business and we played it second-run in competition to Tom Mix in "Son of the Golden West." This one has the largest audience, and it's avery good picture. Print fair, Photography fair. Six reels.—G. O. Tunstall, The midway theatre, Martinsville, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele.—Good picture to just fair business. Five reels.—George H. Koch, Gain theatre, Lynden, Kan.—General patronage.

LADIES BATTLE: George O'Hara—Good picture, holds interest throughout the entire length. Four reels.—George H. Koch, Gem theatre, Lynden, Kan.—General patronage.

CHARGE OF THE GAUCHO: Francis X. Bushman, Jr.—15%. March 6. A good big picture program. Slow and tiresome until last reel, then some action. General satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WALL FLOWERS: special cast—32%. March 4. Fair business, but not up to as much business as we expected. Print and photography good. Seven reels.—F. G. Hold, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE TEXAS TORNADO: Tom Tyler—31%. March 12. A very good picture, but not as good as the first. Print and photography fair. Five reels.—F. G. Hold, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

SILVER KID: Bert Silver.—15%. March 19. A very well accused story, with a lot of action, from a McFadden True Story, and therefore you know what to expect—a lot of bunk, husk, fig, or what have you. The half bakers will probably enjoy it. Seven reels.—F. G. Vaughn, Sun theatre, Kannas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE BOY RIDER: Russ Barton.—Very pleasing picture, with plenty of good, clean comedy. Five reels.—Rose theatre, Byron, Ill.—General patronage.

OUTLAW: Tom Mix—February 26-27. Better than the first but one still far behind from being the star or drawing as many people. Five reels.—K. A. Keyes, Colonial theatre, Butler, Pa.—General patronage.

Tiffany-Stahl

THE DEVIL'S TRADE-MARK: Belle Bennett.—February 8-9. A very good picture. We will get by for one night. Seven reels.—Mrs. C. K. Betts, Paramount theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

LUCKY BOY: George Jessel—89%. March 2-8. Nice picture. Missing big in this locality

EXHIBITOR'S HERALD-WORLD
March 25, 1929

COUNCIL OF TEN: Charles Ray—11%. February 12. Special program. Fair profit, but not as good as most others. Seven reels.—O. Lane, Star theatre, Trumansburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

MAN, WOMAN AND WIFE: Special—Fair program. Fair profit on the picture. Five reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

KING OF THE RIDERS: Hoot Gibson—A very good picture with a lot of very good rodeo stuff worked into it. Hoot apparently does his own stunts in this one. Much of the rodeo stuff was done at the arenas field, Chicago. Six reels.—F. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.
Warner Brothers

CAUGHT IN THE FOG: Special cast—March 7. Ordinary program picture. Seven reels.—Orris F. Collins, Palace theatre, Rector, Ark.—Small town patronage.

THE GIRL FROM CHICAGO: Conrad Nagel—February 19-20. Better than some underworld pictures. We received several comments from our patrons on their way out and that is a good sign of satisfaction. Five reels.—H. B. Keys, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE LITTLE WILDCAT: Audrey Ferri—64%. March 2. A very good, very pleasing picture that went over without any regrets. Fine cast, but the lady playing with Mies Ferri stole the honors from her by some very fine acting. Five reels.—G. Salisbury, L. O. O. F. theatre, Wickford, R. I.—General patronage.

POWDER MY BACK: Irene Rich—68%. March 4-5. A very good, very pleasing picture that will satisfy most any audience. Not a special.—C. C. Kaufman, Gen. theatre, Colusa, Cal.—General patronage.

State Rights

UNITED STATES SMITH: Special cast—29%. February 22. A very satisfactory program picture. Pleased them all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenfield, Mich.—General patronage.

DEVIL'S TOWER: Buddy Roosevelt—February 23. Not much of a Western and played to only fair business. Print and good photography. Five reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: Special cast.—Pulls like a special feature. It's great for young and old and should mean a few weeks of extra business.—Carl Vest, Palace theatre, Malta, Mont.—General patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: Special cast.—Have just finished this serial, and after analyzing the receipts for its fifteen-week run, unfortunately we find nothing could join in the bouquet throwing. Cannot, honestly say that it brought us any extra business. However, to continue with this painful honesty, must admit that we did not give it circus advertising at the jumping-off, which it should have had. There's no doubt it's a dandy serial—if you like serials. Personally, they all give us a pain. Fifteen chapters.—O. B. Wolfe, Screenland theatre, Nevada, O.—Small town patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: Frank Merrill—Very good so far. It certainly increased our business on our poor nights. Kids go wild over it. Adults enjoy it. The animal part is very good. We are well pleased with it. Our third night was a landslide. If it keeps up we will have trouble seating them. Give it a good start and it will do the rest.—H. B. Keys, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

HAWK OF THE HILLS: Special cast.—This one is terrible but it has bought: our Wednesday and Thursday daily receipts up 15 per cent, so I can't kick. The story, if any, is put together for the average 12-year-old's intelligence. Ten episodes.—C. Wallace Smith, The Kabun theatre, Clayton, Ga.—Small town patronage.

TARZAN THE MIGHTY: Very good, although with bad roads, I'm not getting them in so fast.—Mrs. H. S. Record, Palace theatre, Cambridge, Ill.—General patronage.

Serials

Short Features

EDUCATIONAL

BEAUTIES BEWARE: Jerry Drew—Very good and pleased all. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

CAMEO COMEDIES: Bust on the market. More action in these one-reelers than most companies' two-reelers. One reel.—George H. Koch, Gen theatre, Ren, Kan.—General patronage.

CALL YOUR SHOTS: Mermaid—Very good, plenty of laughs in this one. Print and photography good. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

FISTICUFFS: Lupino Lane—Good. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Man.—General patronage.

FOLLOW TEACHER: Big Boy—One of the best juvenile comedies. Two reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

HOT OR COLD: Al St John—A good slapstick comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

KID HAYSEED: Funny kid comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Griswold, Mich.—General patronage.

MAKING W HOOPEE: Just a wrinkle. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MAKING W HOOPEE: Pretty good. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

OH MAMA: Jack Miller—The best out of the last ten Cameos. One reel.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

PEP UP: Cameo—Fair. Print and photography good. One reel.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

SERVED HOT: Cameo—Better than a lot of two-reel comedies. Educational comedies much better than they used to be. Print and photography good. One reel.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

FOX

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY: Van Bibber—Print so bad we could hardly show this one. Two reels.—Simpson & Asmussen, Palace theatre, Clearwater, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY: Van Bibber—Not much to this one. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

CHICKEN A LA KING: Special cast—49%. March 1. Light and sightly entertainment that all enjoy.—12 reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmanrock, Va.—General patronage.

COW'S W HUSBANDS: They got a lot of laughs from this one. Two reels.—Simpson & Asmussen, Palace theatre, Clearwater, Neb.—Small town patronage.

DAISIES WON'T YELL: Good. Two reels.—Simpson & Asmussen, Palace theatre, Clearwater, Neb.—Small town patronage.

LOVE IS BLONDE: Average comedy or a little better perhaps. Two reels.—R. D. Carter, Fairfax theatre, Kilmanrock, Va.—General patronage.

FOX NEWS: Good newscast, and we get it early. One reel.—O. L. North, Star theatre, Trumanburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

THE BOY FRIEND: Max Davidson—Good comedy, very good print out of Buffalo. Two reels.—O. Lane, Star theatre, Trumanburg, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

CHASING HUSBANDS: Charley Chase—Very laughable and better than his last few. Two reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

EARLY TO BED: The first Laurel-Hardy that failed to click. The idea to make a comedy using no one but these two guys in the whole two reels, and it could not be done. Two reels.—Dinsmore & Son, Majestic theatre, Weiner, Ark.—General patronage.

FEED 'EM AND WEEP: Max Davidson—Not so good. The female Hardy-Laurel combination fall Sound Film Too Real
For This Canine
(Special to the Herald-World)
KINGSTON, ONTARIO, March 19.—The story about the monkey and the parrot was enacted in real and reel film just recently at the Capitol theatre. A lady patron happened to find her dog with her in the theatre. Presently a Movietone topical "shot" depicting the hooting of an own was screened. The effect upon the canine was immediate, the dog raising a big rumpus much to the amusement and fright of patrons.

Manager Smithies immediately placed upon the admission of all animals into the Capitol.

20 Theatres in Canada Showing Sound Films, Majority Wired by W. E.
(Special to the Herald-World)
OTTAWA, March 19.—Twenty theatres in Canada are now presenting sound programs on a permanent basis and practically all have a Western Electric installation. There are two Canadian cities already boasting of wired theatres. In Winnipeg, At Ottawa, the Regent, Avalon and Rex theatres are no other silent and a fourth, the Imperial, is opening with sound pictures on March 16. Winnipeg has the Metropolitan, Capitol and Garrick theatres with synchronized screens.

The Capitol theatre at Kingston, Ontario, opened with Western Electric equipment on March 4. The Capitol theatre at St. Catharines, Ontario, is planning installation for revovation and for the installing of sound equipment.

The smallest town in Canada to have a sound-film theatre is Sherbrooke, Quebec, this being the Granada theatre, recently opened by United Amusements, Limited, Montreal. The Prince Rupert, a more or less isolated town of British Columbia, is also being wired.

Meeks Resigns Post
As Milwaukee Manager
(Special to the Herald-World)
MILWAUKEE, March 19.—Wm. T. Meeks, manager of the Shorewood theatre for the past four months, has tendered his resignation, to take effect March 14. Meeks was with the J. H. Silliman theatres for nine years and later with the Milwaukee Theatre company, where he resigned to accept the management of the Shorewood, a twelve hundred seat community house.

Kansas Projectionists Elect McElroy President
(Special to the Herald-World)
WICHITA, KAN., March 19.—Local 414, projectionists, recently elected the following officers for the current year: President, A. McElroy; Vice-President, C. E. McBride; Secretary, W. B. Fider, and Business Manager, Arthur Lee. Frank Welsh, chief projectionist of the Municipal theatre, is installing Bristolophone equipment.

Indiana Firm Dissolved
(Special to the Herald-World)
INDIANAPOLIS, March 19.—Officials of the C. E. B. Theatre Company of Frankfurt, Ind., have filed papers with the secretary of state here evidencing the final dissolution of the corporation.
In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors and producers in the preparation of their advertising campaign.

TYPE AND THEME: Jack Flynn gets a beautiful but泼agey woman with a worldy art force. Here he learns that Mary's daughter is the girl of his dreams, but she is just given the chance to save her after a series of exciting events and fights. Jack finds some blackmailers and wins Helen.

TYPE AND THEME: Slappy is left waiting at the altar by his fiancée and becomes the laughing stock of his set. He plans revenge, marries the girl of a sympathetic character, and then does everything he can to arouse the gang to kill him, finally trying to be killed between two gancing, and finally double both of them in such a way that they both can kill him. Finally, his wife finds out that he is to be "put on the spot" and saves him. They remain in love for each other.

TYPE AND THEME: Boys Allen is attending college and lives with Jack Holmes, who is a wonderful, rowdy student. At the university, he and his friends, who are the best of friends, always have a good time. However, Jack Holmes becomes jealous of his friends and becomes a nuisance to them. He tries to steal their money and even comes close to getting caught by the police. Finally, his friends realize that he is really just a harmless character and decide to forgive him. They remain in love for each other.

TYPE AND THEME: Stella Armes and her group of friends go to a wild party at an exclusive girls school at an exciting party. They all get excited over the new, handsome professor, Dorothy Reiver and Ben Lyon, who have the romantic leads in "The Quiter," shown as they appear in a scene from that Columbia production.

Glimore. They find that he is serious and will not tolerate foolishness. Soon afterwards they are ex- eluded from an exciting party because of their strictness, so they go to a dance house. Here a fight starts and Glimore, passing by, rescues Stella. This causes a lot of gossip. After a series of events that forces Glimore to rescue Stella and to leave, they decide on no wild parties, but a life for party two.

SPIRIT OF YOUTH: Western with Hal Roach and director. Released May 23. Length 4,890 feet.

TYPE AND THEME: Betty Grant and a librarian, falls into love with the champion boxer of the navy, Jim Kenney. Before the fight leaves, Jim asks Betty to wait for him. After his engagement expires, she learns through the newspapers that he is a professional fighter. Jim has risen to fame and meets Claire Ewing, a wealthy society girl, who induces him to box at a charity ball. On his way he meets Betty and pretends that he has forgotten her. Jim fights and loves and is snubbed by Claire. He then decides to betty for encouragement and love.

TYPE AND THEME: Bob Tauler, son of the sheriff, and his Indian friend save Janet Reynolds in a stage holdup. Later Bob is taken for the bandit and jailed. Because of his friendship with the Indians, his father refuses to help him so his mother and Janet aid him to escape. His father admits his mistake and goes to Bob but is captured by the bandits. Bob and his Indians go to rescue and capture the bandits. Bob and Janet go back home.

TYPE AND THEME: Red and Hank are searching for Bob's missing father when they find gold and fill a claim. They save an old man and his daughter from the outlaws and later are captured, so the bandits can return to the old man's cabin and hunt for his hidden gold. Red escapes and with the help of Hank and a secret service man rounds up the bandits, who prove to be counterfeiters.

TYPE AND THEME: Donald Heirne and his skirts long, and night scenes were taken in "twilight blue" (if you know what I mean), and you only have a small regular attendance at that. We usually have about 35 children and 100 adults at our regular Monday and Thursday shows, but Saturday, March 19, the whole city was out. Mr. Baldwin of Charlotte, N. C., showed "One Million Dollar Baby," and the benefit of the local School Improvement Association, and packed 179 children and 212 adults in our theatre, more people have been in it since we showed "The Birth of a Nation." If the exhibitors could learn how Mr. Baldwin does it, I would prevent many, if not all of the 5,000 theatres closing, as predicted by "Pa" Jenkins.

Mr. Baldwin had an electric chair outside the theatre, and a list of the Herald-World for advertising, and packed the house. On our regular shows we put a $1.00 sheet and a one-sheet for our advertising. And it is the opinion that the pictures we show regularly are as good, and many of them better than "ONE MINUTE AWAY." All of you fellows get an opportunity to line up with Mr. Baldwin on this picture, do so, and talk with him about how to get those same business at your regular shows. Maybe he can help you. I would have talked with him myself, but these theatres are operated purely for the amusement of our operatives and they can come or stay away as they like. But if I was in the business for a living, I would find out how Mr. Baldwin does it. —H. I. Grace, The Aiken Mills Theatre, Bath, S. Car.

You Tell 'Em!

REPUBLIC, KANSAS.—To the Editor: Sure! Here's my check for another two years. Have taken the Herald-World since its first year and will always take it. You may tell the world that we read the letters from other exhibitors; also from J. C. J.

The exchanges are certainly doing all they can to present to the public the good side. They are doing a lot of good enough of the correct kind of features. Too many "sex" pictures—not enough good home stories and comedies-dramas. Would install "see and hear" equipment, but film rental for sound pictures is prohibitive in this town. Don't own the McAlpin equipment that sells for $1,250 and it is not too good. —GRAFTON NUTTER, Nutter's Royal Theatre, Republic, Kan.

Paging Hattie Mizelle

UNION CITY, IND.—To the Editor: After reading Hattie Mizelle, Alkazar theatre, Dubois, Ala., of the February 25th Herald-World, it makes me wonder why Hattie doesn't sell out and get into some other business. Do believe anyone could sell an audience the idea of a picture with an automobile or a can of talcum powder, if they held such priggishness against the thing they are trying to sell. A lot of stuff is just what is hurting the business. I sometimes hand my magazines to doctors, barbers, or hardware, to lay on their desks for their patrons to read, and I cannot understand why when I think the public should not see, and derive some benefits from them. Believe me I wish Miss Hattie Mizelle of Hattie's around where any one would see it.

Use this for an ad to anyone wanting to buy tickets. I believe Hattie wants to sell out. And a warning to anyone that sells book Chief Pontiac and Princess White Beaver and Pontiac Garage, to beware. I booked them for three days, then got liberal and paid my share first night, then they walked out on me. So beware, unless you have a written contract, then refuse to pay until the last night.—R. S. WENGER, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.

What To Call Them

ALBION, N. Y.—To the Editor: I have been reading some of your articles on a name for the talkies. The following is in my opinion a common sense idea. Now then, if Vitaphone has been accepted by the public as a talking picture, but will be fast dying out, as there are so many other disc machines on the market, and the exhibitors, instead of wishing to publicize or advertise a talkie or part talkie. The public in turn hear a poor talkie or a Vitaphone in which the girl talks on the screen and the man talkie on the Vitaphone come out and say that talkie turned out to be a squawkie, which is a rotten ad for Vitaphone or any other talkie. They go home and say they heard a squawkie.

All of us exhibitors who are putting in talkies and not Vitaphone tell our patrons that Vitaphone is a trade name only for a certain disc machine and then perhaps we go on and tell them that the film machine we are installing is much better. Now, I believe Warner Brothers would not have anything to lose if they gave the word away for anybody to use. They will advertise a Warner Brothers Vitaphone and Fox could say Fox Vitaphone picture, and so on with Paramount and others. We exhibitors would then advertise this war to the public, no matter whether it was on a disc or film. And as I say, the public has already accepted it. But if Warner Brothers on the contrary, keep it to them in a year or so it wouldn't amount to anything for them or anybody else, as they will all be calling them talkies or squawkies, depending on the machine one puts in. If this appeal to your good judgment you might suggest it to Warner Brothers in the light that I suggest, so that those names may have a chance. —WILLIAM H. ROBBIE, Kibbo theatre, Albion, N. Y.

"Echoie" Is Proposed

MUNICH, N. D.—To the Editor: I am submitting the idea of "Echoie" at this time and I hope I am not too late. I would suggest "Echoie" a good name for talkie. This name is easy and one and a good one for children. Have been through a good deal of consideration.—W. T. TABBERT, Munich, N. D.

"The Vocals"

SIOUX CITY, Ia.—To the Editor: I would suggest that the new synchronized sound pictures be named "The Vocals." This means all that "the talkies" dislike and more, and has a dignity the pictures deserve but that most of the suggested names lack. It is understandable, easy to speak, and will be remembered. —CARL E. ATHERTON, Haywood, 234 Douglas Street, Sioux City, Ia.

Screen Stars Gambol

Tickets Going Fast

(Hollywood-World) HOLLYWOOD, March 19.—Sales of tickets for the Screen Stars Gambol held at the Shrine Auditorium April 1, are selling fast according to Lou Anger, executive chairman of the Screen Stars Gambol committee. During the past five weeks broadcasts have been given for the show, and the results from the first broadcast which was sold for $2,000 worth of tickets. Many stars have appeared on the radio in the broadcasts in an effort to sell more tickets.

Son of Owner Will Run Theatre; Former Lesser Plans to Start Next Door

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19.—Robert O. Robison, son of Lester M. Robison, owner of the Rigney theatre, is taking over the house, with the expiration of the lease of Lloyd M. Braum, former operator, a building adjoining the theatre and plans to put in his own theatre there. Robison will make several additions to the Rigney.

Plenty of $2,000 Men But Few Worth $10,000 Declares Chain Manager

MILWAUKEE, March 19. There are plenty of $2,000, men, but few worth $10,000, in managerial positions, declared Henry Goldenberg of the Embassy theatre in addressing the Milwaukee Circuit Managers. "In the theatre field right now, as I see it, there is needed a large number of men who can handle the technical and business details, and prepare to meet them," Goldenberg said. "In a chain organization the right sort of supervision means a great deal. Superintendents can be got to a greater extent than the theatre field."

Summerville Elected to Civic Board at Toronto

TORONTO, March 19.—That it is impossible to keep a good man down is indicated in the case of former Alderman W. A. Summerville, owner of two theatres, who has been elected to a seat on the civic board of control for the city of Summerville. The Fords of Wales and Gerrard theatres, was elected January 1, but resigned his seat when a technicality was set up. Second election was required and he was returned by a big vote. He previously had served the city for eight years as alderman.

Ames Theatre Gives Up Fight for Sunday Shows

AMES, IOWA, March 19.—Joe Gerbracht, manager of the Ames Theatre Company, announced the discontinuance of Sunday shows in the theatre close to campus of the state college. This is the culmination of years of Sunday show wars. A referendum several years ago stopped the Sunday shows, but the city council passed an ordinance permitting the house to open. Business men and the students urged Sunday shows.

Alexander Frank, York Theatre Manager, Dead

WATERLOO, IOWA, March 19.—Alexander Frank, who up and until recently was the manager of one of the new theatres at York, Nebraska, was found dead in his car here on the evening of February 25. The cause of his death was not given in the dispatch, presumably he died from heart failure, which he had been suffering from poor health. Frank was well known throughout Iowa, having been connected with a number of theatre companies. He had taken the active management of the house at York.—J. C. J.

Netoco Adds Another

WALTHAM, MASS., March 19.—Netoco is taking over the Embassy, a 2,200-seat house. The operating policy will remain the same.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

THE move to step up the period of daylight saving in Chicago caused something like a tornado of protest to sweep down around the ears of Alderman John Toman, who, not knowing the fury with which Chicago exhibitors can express themselves, had innocently sponsored the ordinance to advance the period from April 28 to April 7. The ordinance has accordingly been set aside.

Such leaders in the local theatre field as Jack Miller, M. S. Marks of Marks Brothers, Sam Gesen of the Shuberts, Ralph Kettering of the Woods interests, and representatives of B & K, beat the proposal with arguments which centered around the main contention that more sunshine hording would take just about that much sunshine out of the vaults, if any, in Chicago theatres. Said Jack Miller in writing to Toman:

"If the amendment should pass you will find the average small picture house ready to throw up the sponge. The extra three weeks would bring bankruptcy in numerous cases."

World Wide reports a release of two pictures, according to Bill Bramberg, manager of the local exchange. The two pictures are "Tommy Atkins" and "A Honeymoon Ahead." "A Honeymoon Ahead" stars Monty Banks and Gillian Dean. The first World Wide picture to open in the loop was "Tommy Atkins," which played at the Rose theatre last week. Other World Wide pictures that will be released in the future are "The Bondman," with Norman Kerry and Frances Cuyler; "A Woman in the Night," with Maria Corda; "Pawns of Passion," with Olga Chekovka; "The Woman in White," starring Blanche Sweet, and an all-talking picture, "Black Waters," with Mary Brian and Jack Loder.

 Corrine Griffith, First National star, passed through Chicago last Sunday on her way to New York, where she will attend the opening of her picture "Divine Lady."
 Movie-Phone has been installed in the Chateau theatre, 3810 Broadway.
 Nils Fry, general manager of the Homes Theatre Corporation, Danville, Ill., was visiting the row last week.
 Bull Montana, the sheik of Hollywood, passed through Chicago last Thursday.
 Leatrice Joy, star of many pictures, is touring the Orpheum circuit making personal appearances. She was present at the placing of the last stone on the new Palmovie building at Michigan and Walton Place last Thursday.

The Linden theatre located at 63rd and Halsted Street, having Movietone and Vitaphone, played "The Sinking Fool" last week and packed the house till it nearly burst. The picture is playing to capacity all through Chicago, and one wonders if there is some one who has not seen "The Sinking Fool."

 Lew Cody, M.G.M star and husband of Mabel Normand, passed through Chicago last Friday. Cody is suffering from complications which followed an attack of influenza. He stayed at the Sherman hotel and was in charge of a nurse.

Lon Chaney, the man of a million faces, was in Chicago last Friday making scenes for his next picture to be called "Thunder." The scenes were taken at the Union station, and countless number of bystanders witnessed the shooting, one of the most unusual ever witnessed in Chicago. In this picture Chaney, supported by Phyllis Haver, Laddie Bigs, and George Duryea, is a railroad engineer. A special train was made-up with cotton and other material that made it look as though it was covered with snow. The make-up of the train looked so real that many buttoned their coats.

Chaney was clothed in overalls and posed for the many cameramen of Chicago newspapers. William Nigh, the director, was busy arranging the necessary things to be done. The cameraman, Harry Sharpe, who photographed two Douglas Fairbanks pictures, "The Iron Mask" and "Black Pirate."

The picture deals with railroad life. Chaney is the father of Laddie Bigs and George Duryea. Chaney retires from the railroad, but returns when a flood breaks out in some valley. He succeeds in rescuing the lives of many who are trapped in the flood. The company remained in Chicago four or five days to get pictures of different railway yards and surroundings. Scenes were also taken in Wisconsin. The picture will be ready some time this spring.

 Steve Dennis of the Lincoln theatre in Lincoln, Ill., visited Tom Gilliam last week.

Saul Bragan, head booker for Educational, reports that Educational's "Whirls and Girls," starring Andy Clyde and Harry Gibbon, and "The Old Barn," with Johnny Burke, were booked by the entire B & K circuit.

 Ray Frisz is no longer connected with the Coston Booking Circuit, having signed with the Lynch Theatre Corporation. He is now at the York theatre in Elmhurst.

 Jack Miller won his first dollar from Grad Sears at the Golf Show at the Sherman hotel last week. Jack outshone Sears in putting, and took the prize. According to Miller, the dollar will be put in a gold frame in remembrance of the big victory.

 Marie Pearson has discontinued her Exhibitors HERALD-WORLD

March 23, 1929

Herald Service to accept a position with Brunswick.

 Edward Grossman, formerly of the United Artists exchange, has returned to Chicago once more to take over the position of district sales manager for Vitaphone, with headquarters at the Warner Brothers exchange. Grossman left United Artists last July to engage in theme song writing and has a number of popular songs on the market now. However, since Warner Brothers recently took an interest in the music publishing firm of M. Wilmart and Sons, he will continue to contribute theme songs for Vitaphone pictures.

 Jack Hoxie, popular Western star is in the city, making a few personal appearances. He will do several weeks over RKO before going to Texas, where he has a large ranch. He says a story for a real Western is being prepared for him but the rest of the story is a secret.

 According to reports the State and Lake theatre was packing them in last Sunday. From early Sunday night till about 9 o'clock the theatre was standing them in line. The new policy of the State and Lake is a sound picture and vaudeville. Pathé's "Godless Girl" was the opening film of the new policy.

Tommy Greenwood showed what an accomplished automobile driver he was last Monday. Picking up the Herald-World fellow at Clark and Archer, Tommy showed all signs from there on as being a second Segrave. No fooling it was a very enjoyable ride, Tommy, and we appreciate it.

Pathé Installs Sound

In $50,000 Exchange

(Exclusive to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, March 19.—Pathé has fitted with sound projection equipment its new $50,000 exchange here. In addition to the sound equipment, the exchange will have a dark room for Pathé cameramen, and throughout it will be one of the most modern equipped film centers in the country, according to Les Weir, Western division manager.

Saenger Manager Donates Paintings

NEW ORLEANS,—Maurice Barr, managing director of the Saenger Theatres, on behalf of the Saengers presented recently seven oil paintings, portraits of leading statesmen and military figures of the allied nations during the World war to the American Legion which will be hung in the Legion Home.
There Is No Substitute for Circulation!

NUMBERS count. In a compact trade field like the motion picture industry they tell the whole story.

Fancy analyses of “buying power” are not a substitute: coverage of the field from the Roxy in New York to the smallest theatre in the smallest town in the country is what the advertisers in this field require. Quality circulation is important, but when a publication covers its entire field it has all of the quality, as well as all of any other kind of circulation there is.

The greatest circulation means, at the same time, the best. As the whole trade knows, EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES have the greatest circulation which has ever existed, now or previously, in the motion picture industry.

And every subscription making up the grand total of 12,865 is paid for—which fact is eloquent proof of the standing, prestige and reader-interest of the HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES.

And—most satisfactorily to advertisers—every circulation claim of the HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES is backed up by the unchallengeable proof of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.*

—Martin J. Quigley

*The HERALD-WORLD is the only motion picture trade publication which is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Statements for the year ending December 31, 1928, now available.
WHAT a task to live up to a name like IDEAL! And how Jack White and Jerry Drew are doing it.

Snappy, dapper Jerry breezes easily through a whirl of pure fun, decorated with delightful trimmings of feminine beauty, and leaves your whole audience gayer and happier. And when you can do that, that's comedy. That's the ideal touch of spice in your program.

MOVIE-PHONE

HAS PROVEN ITSELF IN CHICAGO!

Chicago exhibitors did not believe it was possible for us to sell equipment for $1,000.00 that would give them $15,000.00 worth of results! The Chateau Theatre was the first to take the lead—that was three weeks ago—now, last week's orders out of the Chicago territory included the following theatres: Ascher Brothers' Diversey, Beck's Castle, Sussman's Adelphi, Leventhal's Calo, Abraham's Strand and Great States' Theatres at Harvey, Blue Island, Peoria and Rockford; also the Hoosier in Whiting and Palace in Crown Point.

The above installations, together with the 58 others made throughout the country last week alone, furnishes conclusive proof that MOVIE-PHONE is recognized as high grade equipment with perfect tonal quality, synchronization, absolute interchangeability with any product and covered by patents that are backed up by a responsible company and a real organization which spreads from coast to coast and from Canada to the gulf!

"'The Letter' should cause everyone in the business to stop, look and, above all things, listen. This picture, now visible and audible at the Criterion Theatre, New York, is more than a milestone in motion picture history. It is the herald of a new order. It is as far removed from the standard conception of a sweet, sloppy, sentimental movie as 'The Wild Duck' is from 'Pollyanna.' And it will make considerable sums of money."

—Robert E. Sherwood (Bell Syndicate) in N. Y. Evening Post and other leading newspapers

Why does a keen and experienced motion picture writer like Mr. Sherwood make a statement about "The Letter" like the above? Why do the five leading New York newspaper critics call "The Letter" the greatest talking picture yet made? Why is all New York discussing this picture? Why is the Criterion Theatre sold out weeks in advance at $2 admission? Why is every film man of any importance pulling every wire to get a look at "The Letter" as soon as possible?

Because "The Letter" is a history maker. Because it tosses overboard 25 years of motion picture tradition and leaps to something far greater than anyone has ever seen and heard before! Because with "The Letter" the talking picture officially comes of age and proves itself the world's greatest entertainment on stage or screen.

Because Jeanne Eagels, with her soaring talent, magnificent voice, gives a performance of such gripping power and savage intensity as the screen as never hitherto known.

Because the fame of "The Letter" is already sweeping the country and will sweep theatre grosses to new high figures.

Because now more than ever PARAMOUNT'S supremacy in the talking picture field is proved beyond question.

AMERICAN THEATRE EQUIPMENT EXPOSITION

to be held in

The Coliseum, Chicago
June 1 to 9, 1929

This exposition—the greatest event of its kind in the history of the industry—will be staged for the sole benefit of motion picture theatre owners and managers. All of the leading manufacturers of theatre equipment will exhibit their products.

This exposition will also mark the first time that exhibitors have been offered the opportunity to hear—under a single roof—and to compare the latest and the most improved sound reproducing devices produced by different companies.

One of the large halls of the Coliseum will be set aside for these demonstrations which will be held under actual theatre conditions. Schedules governing these demonstrations will be announced well in advance so that exhibitors can arrange to be present at those in which they are most interested.

And Chicago in June presents ideal vacation conditions. It is a real summer resort. The weather is delightful. The city offers a wide range of diversion and entertainment, including some of the finest motion picture theatres in the world.

Write us immediately for further details, hotel reservations, and tell us in what way we can serve you to the best advantage.

COME TO CHICAGO IN JUNE
Carl Laemmle

He man who made SHOW BOAT—the picture which marks a new era in entertainment.
The man who, for the first time in show business history, combines a best-selling novel with a tremendous musical comedy success and blends the two into the most gigantic screen entertainment ever dreamed of—
The man who gives every theatre in the land the opportunity of presenting, at popular prices, the cream of a $7.70-per-seat stage production plus a romantic drama that has swayed the nation's millions.

Truly—Carl Laemmle Shows the Way!
A New Era in pictures

THREE great forms of expression merged by master showmen into the one giant entertainment that will establish new high grosses for theatres throughout the land. Think of it! As a novel SHOW BOAT topped all others in sales ... as a Ziegfeld Musical Comedy it was a sensation...now—as a Laemmle's talking and singing Triumph, Universal gives you the biggest thing that ever happened in motion pictures.

SHOW

A Harry Pollard
Entertainment!

YOU will HEAR as well as SEE the famous Ziegfeld stars...HELEN MORGAN singing "Bill," and "Can't Help Loving That Man"...JULES BLEDSOE singing "Old Man River"...AUNT JEMIMA and the celebrated ZIEGFELD PLANTATION SINGERS singing "Hey Deller" and "Come On Folks." The brilliant Universal cast of screen stars including Laura La Plante, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan, Ilma Rubens, Emily Fitzroy, Jane La Verne and hundreds of others.

BOAT magnificent!

Flamenz Ziegfeld

Carl Laemmle's SHOW BOAT Production

The celebrated showman who produced the record-breaking Broadway musical comedy version of SHOW BOAT. He is known far and wide as the world's greatest producer of brilliant musical hits. New York paid as high as $25 per seat to see his SHOW BOAT, and now for the first time the cream of his hit is available to YOU!
The Grandest Show

— with the greatest array of stage and screen celebrities ever identified with one picture

Names, names, names — BOX-OFFICE NAMES! Carl Laemmle, for 20 years the industry's leader; Florenz Ziegfeld, work known producer of stage hits; Edna Ferber, one of the greatest living writers.

Think of it! — the exquisite music of Jerome Kern, the most successful composer of music for musical comedies; the heart-touching lyrics of Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, one of the most illustrious names in show business; th direction of Harry Pollard, whose every picture fattens your bank account; the brillant Universal cast headed by Laura La'lanie, Joseph Schildkraut, Otis Harlan, Alma Rubens, Emily Fitzroy, Joe Laverne and hundreds of others; the singing of Helen Morgan, who has 'it' and puts it into her work; the singing of Jules Bledsoe, greatest living singer of negro spirituals; the singing of Aunt Jetima and the Ziegfeld Plantation Singers. ALL IN NE PICTURE! ALL IN SHOW BOAT!

Glittering, Gorgeous, Glamorous!

As a novel it was the TALK of the reading public of the nation! As a stage production it was the TALK of the show world the country over! As a SINGING, TALKING, motion picture it is already the TALK of the industry wherever showmen foregather. Glittering, gorgeous, glamorous SHOW BOAT—the romance of the ages!—what a story; what a picture; what an attraction! Edna Ferber's characters to the life—singing, dancing, talking, LIVING before your eyes on the screen. Living for you—with you—the tremendously compelling dramatic episodes of a novel that took the country by storm—a novel with a scope as broad, as deep, as sweeping and as restless as life itself! Scenes to plumb the depths and reach the heights of human experience; sounds to vibrate on the heart-strings of a nation held spell-bound! That is SHOW BOAT!
The Biggest of Them All

BECAUSE—

—it is the greatest entertainment ever offered in a motion picture.

—it includes the most brilliant array of stage and screen celebrities ever identified with one picture.

—its box-office values fairly stagger the imagination.

—no such piece of show property has ever before been held within the gift of a motion picture producer.

—no such attraction has ever before been offered to exhibitors.

—you HEAR it on every tongue—in the streets—in the theatres—in the clubs—SHOW BOAT will be the greatest money-maker of all time.

—it marks a new era in entertainment.

Glittering, Gorgeous, Glamorous SHOW BOAT.

Educational's
Talking Comedies
Took the Industry by Storm

BEGINNING with the very first release Educational's talking comedies have commanded a leading place on the programs—and in the exploitation—of the biggest and finest theatres in the land. And the box-office is showing why.

Read what the Editor of Exhibitors Herald-World says:

"Big theatres in the larger cities were dropping the short features to make room for presentation acts... motion picture theatres were drawing further and further away from motion pictures...

"With the advent of sound, the short features came promptly back into their own... Educational promptly took the cue and today there is a livelier demand than ever for this type of entertainment.

"Big theatres which dropped the short comedies for acrobats and singers, orchestras and masters of ceremonies, have come back to short features. Comedies are back in style."

If such a sketch as that at the Carthay Circle (the Coronet Comedy "The Eligible Mr. Bangs") does not meet with favor, none will.

BOX OFFICE WHOOPEE from FOX
There's something funny about this!

Pathe has produced some all talk comedies with George LeMaire, of Broadway fun fame. When we screened them Harry Scott said they were good.

John Flinn took them out to a tryout house nearby and practically wrecked the place with mirth—so he reports.

Phil Reisman heard about it and suggested that we release them to the trade for current consumption. He's commercial.

However, we have decided to limit the distribution of these comedies to only 250 prints of each subject.

Strictly reserved for the exclusive use of the customers of Pathe.

DEFOREST PHONOFILM has achieved a place in the talking pictures field that makes it the standard by which every other device is judged... to the exhibitor who has it it is the best sound in town... in the industry at large it is the best sound in the world... yet Dr. Lee DeForest and the engineers of General Talking Pictures Corporation have succeeded in improving the device which has already been recognized as the best... improved it by adding safeguards and additions that make more certain a continuous efficient performance... improved by redesigning it so that it is now the most compact as well as the most efficient sound projector... these are the opinions of actual theatre owners who have seen and heard the New and Improved DEFOREST PHONOFILM... It is the supreme achievement from every angle... so good in tonal quality, so efficient in volume and so consistent in continuous performance that it is beyond comparison with any other reproducing device regardless of price.

There Is No Substitute for Circulation!

NUMBERS count. In a compact trade field like the motion picture industry they tell the whole story.

Fancy analyses of "buying power" are not a substitute; coverage of the field from the Roxy in New York to the smallest theatre in the smallest town in the country is what the advertisers in this field require. Quality circulation is important, but when a publication covers its entire field it has all of the quality, as well as all of any other kind of circulation there is.

The greatest circulation means, at the same time, the best. As the whole trade knows, EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES have the greatest circulation which has ever existed, now or previously, in the motion picture industry.

And every subscription making up the grand total of 12,865 is paid for—which fact is eloquent proof of the standing, prestige and reader-interest of the HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES.

And—most satisfactorily to advertisers—every circulation claim of the HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES is backed up by the unchallengeable proof of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.*

Mr. J. D. Williams
World Wide Pictures, Inc.
130 West 46th Street
New York City

My dear Mr. Williams:

This is to acquaint you with the fact that the World Wide production “Piccadilly”, reviewed by our Committee on Exceptional Photoplays on March 20th, was selected by that group for major mention in the National Board’s exceptional photoplays list.

It was the consensus of opinion of the Committee that this film is the finest picture yet imported from England and one of the finest pictures, for that matter, to reach this country from anywhere else. They considered its production quality all that American standards and American picture taste demand and particularly commented on the consistency of its story, the truthfulness of its characters, the very high level of acting on the part of the entire cast and, last but not least, the great distinction of Mr. Dupont’s direction which holds the plot at a point of continuous interest.

With best wishes for the success of this very fine film,

Sincerely yours,

Wilton A. Barrett
Executive Secretary

New Era Dawns

DAY by day unquestionable evidence accumulates as to the vast and fundamental changes that have been brought about in the motion picture industry through the addition of sound and dialogue.

But even today, outside of a few persons in high places who have all of the evidence before them, there is still little recognition of just what has happened.

The exact story of what has been done can hardly be told in moderate and conservative language. The new fields that have been opened are so vast, and the state of the industry is so much changed, that only by the generous use of superlatives can the immediate future of the industry be depicted in anything like an accurate manner.

It has long since ceased to be a secret to well-informed persons that for the past five years the industry as a business has not made the progress that was expected of it and the progress that was necessary were it to continue as a prosperous, healthy and developing industry. Despite heroic efforts of producers the best grade of general product it was possible to make fell short of developing a wider popular support. It may be said that the industry was virtually kept going by occasional great attractions that the studios were able to turn out. The general run of product was not building greater patronage.

It might be imagined that even without a growing public for motion picture theatres the industry could continue almost indefinitely as a profitable business. But this is not correct, due to the tremendously larger amounts of capital that were put into the industry. This created the necessity for greater earnings. Investments, particularly in theatres, were mounting more rapidly than it was possible for the theatres to make correspondingly larger earnings. There are experts who believe that the industry, prior to the introduction of sound and dialogue, was rapidly reaching a state of no profit on operations.

And then came the virtually perfected sound and dialogue picture. At first the novelty of these pictures immediately increased theatre revenues. Gloomy and skeptical persons predicted that the novelty would soon wear off and then attendance would promptly drop back to the old figures. But these persons did not understand the basic appeal of the new developments and, also, they were not making due allowances for the crudities which necessarily were the result of early experiments.

The fact of the situation today is that the box office has never in the history of the amusement business received such a stimulus as it has from the audienc. Everywhere throughout the country theatres running the acceptable audience pictures that are now available are doing a volume of business which they hardly dared dream of with the silent picture. The average talking picture is now pulling the public in as has never been done previously except by the occasional great silent picture. And such a tremendous rate of improvement is being made in the audienc that it would be looking for trouble to imagine that the public's interest in these pictures is only a passing fancy.

The public's present interest in audienc is only the start of a vastly greater popularity for motion pictures. Attendance records everywhere are going to be revised upwards at surprisingly rapid rates. The industry has already passed the threshold of an era of prosperity that will make the old days look small and insignificant.

Skilled who have been unable to see the entertainment advance represented by sound pictures and the tremendously greater box office significance of these subjects are going to be in for a bad time.

Mechanical Argument

COMPETING exhibitors may be warned that just about the worst thing they can do to their own business under existing conditions is to engage in popular debate with their opposition over the relative merits of their sound reproduction devices.

The opportunity and the responsibility for the theatre man at this time is to build, promote and stimulate interest in sound pictures; any effort he may make which may create a question in the public's mind about any type of reproducing equipment is plainly and distinctly bad business.

Because of the newness of the medium and because being new and still somewhat in an experimental stage, the public will automatically have plenty of questions of its own about sound and dialogue pictures. Consequently, it becomes a matter of bad policy for an exhibitor, for the sake of a little immediate gain for himself and a little embarrassment for this opposition, to do anything or say anything that reflects adversely upon any kind or type of equipment anywhere in use.

All of the above applies with redoubled emphasis in the case of the producer. And in the case of the producer, who is presumed to have more information on the general situation, criticism of the other man's system of recording and reproduction is decidedly less excusable.

For any producer to disparage the system in use by another company and to insist that his system is the only good system is a foolhardy and ridiculous course. As a matter of fact, virtually perfect recording and reproduction is possible, under favorable circumstances, with several of the systems. On the basis of experience and continued use some one or more systems may be centered upon and may be proven to be the best. But this is not a matter for public argument and is certainly not a matter which should be permitted to interfere with the industry's main job at this time which is selling talking pictures to the public.

Let these arguments be kept within the inner councils of the industry.

Meanwhile let the industry present a solid front on the matter of promoting interest and appreciation for sound and talking pictures, regardless of the mechanics employed.
Fox to Make Only Sound Films; More Stars of Stage Signed

Theatres Not Yet Equipped

"Taken Care Of," Says Sheehan

Foreign Market Provided For for Another Year and a Half—Will Rogers Acquired

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, March 26.—From now on, the William Fox organization will produce sound pictures exclusively, abandoning the silent film of motion picture tradition.

In a conference here on Sunday, prior to his departure for California, Winfield Sheehan announced that only dialogue and musical pictures would be made at the four Fox studios in New York and California. Sheehan made it plain that he spoke for the Fox Film Corporation, of which he is vice president and general manager in charge of production, and not for any other Fox unit, such as the newly acquired Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization.

Together with the announcement of this change in policy, of the greatest significance to motion picture exhibitors throughout the world, Sheehan announced the signing of another group of stage celebrities: Will Rogers, Lonergan, and DeSylva, Henderson and Brown, composers of musical comedies with successful Broadway runs.

Outstandingly Important Move

Sheehan made it clear by his manner that he considered this step taken by Fox to be as important as the change from horse-drawn vehicles to automobiles.

The new Fox policy was not decided upon yesterday, or even the day before, said Sheehan. It was first considered last June at a conference in the Hotel Rialto here in New York and events since have justified the stand taken by those who favored the new mode of eye and ear entertainment. When "Street Angel's" records were broken time and again by sound pictures, mainly because they had dialogue, that clinched the decision. The decision for this step was made at the box office.

Two interesting points were cleared up by Sheehan. First, he said that the Fox studios were not equipped for sound reproduction would be "taken care of." Second, the foreign market is provided for for another year and a half, at which time some decision as to what is to be done for the showing of pictures abroad will have been reached, possibly automatically.

Sheehan said that Fox has spent $15,000-000 the past year in preparation for this announcement. As a result, he predicted that Hollywood will now become the international capital for stage producers, dialogue writers, singers, actors, dancers, comedians and monopolists.

"Old Guard" Fearful

The statement issued by the Fox office contained this interesting material:

"This revolutionary change has been fearfully anticipated, according to reports from Hollywood, where the old guard of producers and editors of the foreign market would stave off so radical a decision in production policies. Many screen favorites, unable to measure up to the new vocal requirements will probably lose out as a result of the new production policies prevailing at these studios beginning today."

"Not only will thousands of actors be affected, but also scenario writers, title writers, directors and supervisors. While this little wind is blowing good for some it means new importance will accrue to speaking actors, singers, stage experts, song and dance directors, lyricists, composers of popular music and operettas, dialogue writers, electrical engineers and acoustical experts."

Silent Studios Soundproofed

"This is far more than a matter for the studios today is not as sudden as this announcement might suggest, since William Fox and Winfield Sheehan have built at a cost of $10,000,000 an entire new studio at Fox Hills, California, known as Fox Movietone City. Twenty-five complete recording units are now in operation on the soundproof stages at this new plant, which covers 180 acres."

"The silent studios at Sunset Boulevard on both sides of Western Avenue have been soundproofed and equipped to meet the new production requirements with the addition of..."

Move to Extend Midnight Show Time in San Francisco Dropped on Protest

SAF FRANCISCO, March 26.—A proposal to prohibit theatrical performances on the West Coast between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., has been withdrawn by Supervisor Roncovieri, chairman of the Police Committee. The chairman advised the supervisors that so many objections have been made to changing the law, which now prohibits performances between 1 and 6 a.m., that it had been deemed best to amend the present law, making such performances unlawful, except when a special permit had been obtained from the Police commission. Opposition to any change was voiced by Supervisor Roncovieri, who declared that after-midnight shows too often develop into orgies that are a disgrace to the city and to the theatres participating.

a $800,000 Movietone laboratory and new sound reproduction equipment. "Present plans call for the filming of one complete feature-length talking or musical production every week, including comedies, operettas, dramas, melodramas, and spectacular dramas. "Many new personalities will be heard by motion picture audiences as a result of this radical departure in production. Negotiations which Mr. Sheehan was unwilling to discuss are now being conducted with many important theatrical and literary personalities. Of those with whom contracts have already been signed the following were announced: "Will Rogers, America's best-known comedy talker, whose contract was signed at the beginning of the year, has signed a two-year contract to be heard and seen exclusively in talking films to be produced by Fox Film Corporation in Hollywood. "Owen Davis, well-known dramatist, has completed the dramatization of Rogers' first screen talker.

Straus Completes Play

"Oscar Strauss, distinguished Viennese composer, has completed the score and book for a musical play which Strauss has titled 'Married in Hollywood.'"

"Based on opetta 'The Dollar Princess' will be produced as a singing musical Movietone feature. "Four original musical comedies will be produced with words and music by DeSylva, Brown and Henderson, now at work at the Fox Studios. This trio is responsible for the current Broadway successes, 'Follow Through,' 'Good News' and 'Queen High.'"

"Davie Stamper, former composer of Ziegfeld musical shows, has completed a musical comedy for film production. "Meyer, now in the editing stage, has been produced as the first of an annual series of musical revues. Words and music are by Con Conrad, Archie Gottlieb, Jerome Kern, with the book by Billy K. Wells and the direction by David Butler and Edward Royce."

Jessel Starts in Month

"George Jessel, musical comedy and vaudeville favorite, leaves for California next month to begin production of a musical play with an Italian background as his first picture on a 3 year contract. "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," a dramatic classic from the pen of Jerome K. Jerome will be produced as a talking film. "Camel Kirby," by Booth Tarkington and H. Irving Brown, is being put into production as a dialogue feature with Warner Baxter in the title role. "Degas Diggers' mystery story, 'Behind That Curtain,' is also scheduled for immediate production with Irving Cummings directing. "The Cock-Eyed World," will be directed by Raoul Walsh, following his successful 'What Price Glory,' with dialogue by Billy K. Wells, based on the original story by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson. Ford Making First Audien

"King of the Khyber Rifles" by Taibolt MacNeil was produced by John Ford as his first feature length all-talking film with Victor McLaglen, Myrna Loy, David Rollins, Lumsden Hare, Ray D'Arcy, Mitchell Lewis, David Torrence, Pat Somerston, Gregory Gay, Claude King, taking their parts in a colorful story laid in the mountains of Afghanistan. "The Man Who Came Back," dramatized by Fox from a short story by John Fleming Wilson, is scheduled for production beginning next month. "Other dialogue plays for which immediate production plans are being made include 'Conquistador,' 'The Mad Song' and 'Frozen Justice.'"

Stars Pass Movietone Tests

Among the film favorites whose Movietone tests have been successful and who will be heard in Fox Movietone features will be Janet Gaynor, Mary Duncan, Lois Moran, Sue Carol, Louise Dresser, Shannon Lyon, Charles Farrell, Warner Baxter, Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe, Nick Stuart, David Rollins and Paul Muni. "Directors who during the past six months have been learning the new technique will now direct exclusively talking and musical films. These include Frank Borzage, Raoul Walsh, John Ford, F. W. Murnau, Irving Cummings, Allan Dwan, Benjamin Stoloff, David Butler, Werker, Harry K. Holtop, John steering, Lam Tishling, Alfred Werker, Berthold Viertel, Howard Hawks, George Seitz, Marcel Silver and Norman Taurog."

Playwrights Listed

"Additional directorial talent, recruited from the stage, includes A. H. Van Buren, Clark Silverin, Edward Royce, Frank Merwin, Lester Lerner, Frank Tasselt, Campbell Gullen, Seymour Felix and Bobby Connolly. "Broadway playwrights who are writing dialogue at the Fox studios in Hollywood include Paul Gerard Smith, Harlan Thompson, Walter Weems, Billy K. Wells, Edwin Hitch and Tom Barbor. "Dialogue writers who are now in Hollywood working on Movietone features include George S. Brooks, S. K. Lauren, Zoe Akins, John M. Howard, William Kopp and Lee Gillette. "Much of the talent will also be working on a new production at Fox Movietone City. "Indications are that further inroads will be made on Broadway's stage talent as production is expanded to meet requirements of additional theaters being equipped to show Movietone film in response to public demand for this new type of entertainment."

All Directors Ordered to Learn to Make Audiens

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—The Fox Corporation's announcement yesterday that all of its directors and writers will be trained for the new talkies was the first of its kind in the industry. The directors who have not trained speaking voices for their pictures will be given an order from Sol Wurtzel's office that all directors under contract must report at once to learn how to make dialogue pictures. A director who has made no dialogue pictures will sit in with members of an audion unit in order to study the new technique.

Six silent pictures are in production. Another, 'Chasing Through Europe,' goes into production this week under Al Werker's direction. It is the last silent motion picture ever to be produced for the screen.

The Fox actors who are jobless with this announcement are people who have had steady employment on the lot merely by picture to picture. They are thrown out of work similarly are scene-fillers and titers.

Corinne Griffith Makes Most of "Divine Lady" Role

NEW YORK, March 26.—Under the blue-white glare of the Klieg lights a first night crowd filed into Warners theater to see Corinne Griffith give a performance one of the most romantic characters in British history, the simple Emma Hart who became the divine Lady Hamilton, last Friday, in the 'Divine Lady.' They also came, this first nighters, to see the screening of one of the greatest naval engagements of battle time, the battle of Trafalgar.

The theater was packed to overflowing with the well-dressed crowd that makes a habit of attending the premieres of the best-known producers. That they were not disappointed in this picture was obvious from the applause they gave it.

Miss Griffith was charming Jan Keith as George, H. B. Warthe, Lord Hamilton, and Victor Varconi as Lord Nelson, her lover, were excellent. And for a period picture, "The Divine Lady" was as remarkable a portrayal of the perfection of its detail in the pageantry of its scenes as any in the commission and completion of the ships of the line which battled at Trafalgar.

A thoroughly entertaining picture, the audience decided, with lots of color, lots of human interest and plenty of dash and thunder in the battle scenes.
A. H. Blank Sells 20 Theatres
To Paramount; Still Owns 24

All Except Four of Houses in Deal Are Equipped for Audiences

Says Sale Is Promoted by Desire for Much Needed Rest—Started in 1911

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

DES MOINES, March 26.—Sale of the A. H. Blank Theatre corporation to Paramount Famous Lasky was announced Friday from New York by Blank to local newspapers. The amount involved, however, was not mentioned. The deal includes twenty Blank theatres in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois, the Iowa building and the Capitol theatre building in Des Moines.

The Des Moines houses purchased in the deal are the Capitol, Des Moines, Garden, Palace and Strand. The others include: Riviera, Rialto and Strand, Omaha; Broadway, Council Bluffs; Capitol and Princess, Sioux City; Capitol and Rialto, Newton; Capitol, Cedar Rapids; New Riviera, Waterloo; Columbia, Garden and Family, Davenport; Fort Armstrong and Spencer, Rock Island, Ill.

Blank's announcement made in New York and issued by Public, read: "I have today sold my entire interest in the Blank Circuit, operated by the A. H. Blank Theatre Corporation and its subsidiaries, to Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, who have been associated with me in the ownership and operation of the circuit. The sale is prompted by my desire to take a much needed rest after many years of constant theatre activity. I have no immediate plans for the future."

Still Retains 24 Theatres

Although Blank relinquishes his major holdings in this deal, he still owns 24 houses in the smaller cities and towns of Iowa. Plans are already under way for the improvement of the Iowa building in Des Moines. This will enlarge the Des Moines theatre from its present capacity of 1,250 to 2,800 and will involve the expenditure of $500,000, according to the announcement. This house will be made into an ultra-modern cinema palace.

A. S. Graven and Company of Chicago are preparing the architectural drawings and specifications calling for reinforced concrete construction with an exterior finish of brick and terra cotta similar to the present finish of the building.

Started in 1911

It is reported also that the Rialto theatre at Omaha will undergo a remodeling and enlarging program.

According to Blank, all but four of the theatres sold to Paramount are equipped for auditions. "Admission five cents," and a new reel every day, was the policy of the Star theatre, the little film theatre in which A. H. Blank started on the road to fame and fortune. From that humble beginning in 1911 he advanced rapidly until, in the deal with Paramount, March 22, he relinquished his hold on twenty theatres in three states. The Riviera in Omaha, built at a cost of $20,000, 000, added to his chain of five other theatres in the Middle West, is a startling contrast to the little house where he began the motion picture business eighteen years ago.

On the second birthday of his son, Raymond, Blank opened his second theatre, the Rialto, Dec. 1911. He invested practically all the money he could get, in that venture. In four months he sold out for $25,000. With $15,000 of this amount he bought a lease on the Garden, then the leading Des Moines theatre. After remodeling it he opened with a new sign, "Admission ten cents.""}

Among First to Introduce Music

As the years passed, however, Blank showed his good judgment in the purchase and operation of half a dozen houses. His theatres were among the first to introduce music and to switch from a different show each day to a three-week change. Fans predicted failure then. They said the public must have a new show every day.

Blank became one of the founders of First National Pictures, recently sold to the Warners. He was on the executive board of First National for years.

Bill for Local Option on Sunday Shows
Brings Fight; Ohio Censor Measures Die

[Special to the Herald-World]

COLUMBUS, March 26.—Fireworks were touched off at the public hearing before the supreme judiciary committee of the Ohio Legislature, March 20, when a bill to permit municipalities to vote on the question of Sunday motion pictures exhibitions came up for hearing. Opponents were principally ministers and officials of religious organizations. Proponents consisted of P. J. Wood, business manager of the M. P. T. O.; George W. Emerson, manager of the Cleveland Theatre Owners Association, and others. The committee recommended passage.

The Women's Civic Club of Cleveland Heights has organized against Sunday shows.

All bills to change Ohio censor laws were killed in committee. On motion of Senator Bender, author, the bill to abolish censorship was indefinitely postponed.

The two bills of Senator Johnson to include auditors in censorship and to raise the fees were likewise killed.
Preparing RKO for 1929-30

SOME of the nation's most talented authors have been engaged by RKO Productions to write the stories for the 1929-30 program of Radio Pictures. Of the writers pictured here, Eugene Walter is the author of "The Easiest Way" and other stage successes; Charles MacArthur collaborated with Ben Hecht in writing the recent legitimate hit, "The Front Page"; Samson Raphaelson is the author of "The Jazz Singer," and John Brownell is a staff writer.

This is the perfect answer to the old question as to why business is punk. When business is bad bring in a few good pictures and the whole scale of living jumps up. Pictures are the answer to every important question in the industry and always will be.

Incidentally, this might be a lesson to the producers of legitimate drama. They are in the doldrums, with business worse than it has been in years and years. What they need is fewer tears and more good plays.

A Long Run House

THE plan of the Erlanger theatres, whereby sound equipment is to be installed, is another bit of evidence of the importance of this new mode of entertainment. Erlanger's name is famous in American entertainment and his foresight in preparing for the future is something not to be overlooked. His huge string of theatres will be available for long runs.

Incidentally, the Cameo, which has played an interesting role in New York pictures, is to be made into a long run house beginning March 30.

"Picadilly"

THE World Wide organization is riding the heights of enthusiasm as the result of a long look at "Picadilly." This picture, which I have not seen as yet, is proclaimed as the best yet brought out of England and such a smashing hit that it will give World Wide a new ranking.

The National Board of Review all but burst into song over "Picadilly," calling it one of the finest pictures to reach this country from anywhere, a production that is all American standards and American picture taste demand. It was directed by DuPont of "Variety" fame. Of course, J. D. Williams let this information out quite reluctantly.

Erlanger Equipping Entire Legitimate Chain for Sound

Many Now Ready and Remainder to Be Wired by August 1—Plans to Give Patrons Audiences as Well as Productions of Dramatic Stage

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—A chain of theatres devoted to the dramatic stage is being prepared for the presentation of sound motion pictures.

A. L. Erlanger, reputed the largest individual owner of stage theatrical properties in the world, is having his long chain of theatres wired and equipped with all the other accessories necessary for the proper presentation of sound pictures. Many of the houses are now ready and the work in the others will be completed by August 1. The Erlanger chain has always been recognized as one of the leading strings of legitimate theatres in the United States.

It has always been Erlanger's policy to keep his theatres up-to-date, equipped with all the latest appliances and inventions, both on the stage and in the auditorium. It is in pursuance of this policy that he is now spending the enormous sum of money needed to prepare his houses for the showing of sound pictures.

Not for Audiences Only

He has no intention of devoting his thetre exclusively to the kind of entertainment, but he realizes that the sound pictures have come to stay, and, as a purveyor of theatrical amusements, he wishes to be able to give his patrons the very best that is offered in drama, musical comedy or picture.

Among the theatres of the Erlanger chain that have been or are about to be wired are the Liberty in New York city, the Colonial and Tremont theatres in Boston, the Erlanger and Grand theatres in Philadelphia, the Erlanger in Chicago, the Erlanger in Buffalo, the Nixon in Pittsburgh, the new Wilson in Detroit, the Erlanger's Grand Opera House in Cincinnati, the American in St. Louis, the National in Washington, Ford's in Baltimore, the Erlanger in Atlanta, the Erlanger in Birmingham, the Tulane in New Orleans, the Biltmore and Mason in Los Angeles, the Erlanger and Columbia in San Francisco and the Metropolitan in Seattle.

"Built for Sound"

Each of these is a leading first class theatre in its community. Each of them was "built for sound." That is to say, they were intended for the presentation of the spoken drama and for that reason every attention was paid to the acoustics, so that spectator sitting in any seat in the auditorium would be able to hear as well as to see everything that went on in the stage.

Erlanger has shown most of the big feature pictures of the past, such as "The Birth of a Nation," "Ben Hur," "The King of Kings" and "Wings," in his theatres, and he is ready now to book audiens, by whatever process they may be made.

Trendle Is Appointed
Detroit Commissioner;
Opens Big Easter Week

(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, March 26—Detroit theatres are anticipating one of the biggest weeks of their history during Easter Week. Through the efforts of George W. Trendle, general man-gager of the Kunsky Theatres Corporation, the public schools will have their Easter vacation, the week following the usual Holy week. No doubt that the theatres will play to many thousands of children and special shows are being arranged for them.

Mayor John Lodge reappointed Trendle to membership on the Detroit city fire commission. He was originally appointed by Mayor Smith and his reappointment came despite the keenest rivalry for the job. Trendle was also recently elected to the board of directors of the Union Trust Company, one of the leading financial institutions of the middle west.

man out of Washington exchange and David W. Hunt has been appointed salesman out of the Columbia's Memphis office.

Government Grants New Delay to Defendants in Chicago Antitrust Case

The 12 Chicago exchanges and Publix interest in Chicago named as defendants in the suit brought several months ago by the government under the antitrust laws, have been given until sometime in April to file their replies. The defendants had been granted a previous postponement until March 20.
The exact date is to be set later, according to department of justice offices in Chicago.

Film Theatre Destroyed
By Mysterious Flames

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—The Venus picture house, owned by Peter Ferrara, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. The building had a valuation of about $10,000 and the contents represents an additional $5,000 or more.
Industry Is Facing Most Successful Era of History, Says Hays

Weekly Audience of 250 Millions Is Rapidly Being Increased by Sound, M P P D A Is Told in Annual Report

(To the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—The most successful era of its history faces the motion picture industry, in the opinion of Will H. Hays, president of the M P P D A, who made his seventh annual report to the directors of his organization here yesterday.

The meeting of the Hays organization was a particularly important one and his report on the state of the industry was heard with close attention.

On the other hand, it was interesting to note that William Fox was not present at the meeting, visiting Atlantic City. And the Fox organization was not represented.

The motion picture's weekly audience of 202,000,000 is rapidly being increased through introduction of sound, Hays declared. Nevertheless, orders are being attracted, and these audiences, he predicted, will be held as technical and directorial improvements are made.

Sound has served to open a wealth of material, formerly unusable because it lacked action for the silent screen, Hays declared.

The case with which sound has been adopted by the industry is indicative of its ability to expand naturally and normally, and instead of slowing up the industry's progress, injection of sound has "quickened the pulse of the industry and paved the way for a new blood through its arteries," he added.

The one obstacle in the way of the greatest progress of sound or silent pictures is the attempt which persists in some places to censor," Hays continued. "This tendency to restrict more than was spent before, has taken on a seventh liberty and not a single claim was litigated before arbitration. In the five years since the institution of this arbitration system, 70,652 controversies involving $17,724,300 have been disposed of. This achievement is unprecedented, Hays reported.

"The increasing recognition of universities and art institutes of motion pictures as a distinctive art-form is gratifying," he declared.

"Harvard has appointed a motion picture archive committee which soon is to make its awards of merit for the best photoplays of the past two years, after which such awards will be made each year. Columbia has expressed the desire to have a motion picture forum once a year at least, with noted individuals in the industry as speakers; a motion picture course has already been launched in the University of Southern California. This is a cultural course, and motion pictures, including talking films, are covered."

Q R S and DeVry Firms Merge Projector and Camera Manufactures

Merger of two of the strongest concerns in the amateur motion picture field—Q R S and the DeVry Corporation—is just announced.

Q R S has only lately entered into the motion picture industry, while the DeVry Corporation has occupied a high position in the manufacture of portable motion picture cameras and projectors, both in this country and abroad. The DeVry Corporation was organized and developed by H. A. DeVry.

The amalgamation will enable Q R S to transfer all its motion picture activities to the DeVry factory. The new company's apparatus will range from the least expensive camera retailing at $95 to the highest quality combination talking picture outfits for home and business.

Warner-F N-Stanley Club Gets Set for Real Frolic April 6; All Tickets Sold

(To the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—The first annual banquet and ball of the newly consolidated Warner—First National—Stanley Club will be held Saturday, April 6, at the Hotel Commodore. Ben Bernie will officiate as master of ceremonies. Many celebrities of the stage and screen will attend.

All tickets have already been sold and demands for additional tickets have unwillingly been turned down.

Radio Stimulates Interest in Every Amusement Field, Declares Editorial

"When radio's first feeble squeaks sounded, many musicians scoffed," said an editorial last week in the Chicago Herald-Examiner. "Others asserted that it should be fought as a mechanical rival to concerts and recitals. The phonograph industry felt itself threatened and producers of motion pictures wondered if the new medium would split their income or lower their prestige."

"Latest figures compiled by the National Broadcasting Company show that America spends more money on music than ever before and that the amount is growing steadily. More than $30,000,000 annually is the total, and this is $10,000,000 more than was spent before radio was perfected."

"The phonograph industry leaps forward to greater prosperity. Motion pictures increase to unprecedented popularity. Radio has done more than vindicate its own claims to entertainment value. It has stimulated public interest in every amusement province it has touched."

"Showboat" Praised, "Cohens and Kellys" in Atlantic City

(To the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26—Florence Ziegfeld rates Universal's "Showboat" as the greatest picture ever made. High-lights of the Universal's production were incorporated into the picture by Beckstone and the music written by Jerome D. Kern.

Atlantic City, where most of the "Cohens and Kellys" was filmed got the first chance to see the complete picture last week at the world premiere of the picture.

Managerial Changes
In Universal Chain Announced by Flader
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, March 26.—Edward Yost, recently manager of the Yost Broadway theatre, Santa Ana, Cal., has been appointed division manager of the Universal California Circuit, according to an announcement from Fred A. Flader, general manager of the Universal Chain. The Universal houses in California include two in Santa Ana, two in Fullerton and two in Whittier, all equipped with sound apparatus.

"Wild Heart of Africa"
Will Be Distributed by Parthenon Pictures, Inc.
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, March 26.—The Walker-Arthurthot Hunting expedition has completed negotiations with the Parthenon Pictures, Inc., to distribute the motion picture of the trip in Central Africa, titled "The Wild Heart of Africa." The expedition was composed of the famous scientist and wild game hunter, Dr. Thomas S. Arthurthot, co-founder and dean of the Pittsburgh Medical College and Fletcher Jr., and Kenneth R. Walker. The party have succeeded in shorting over 40,000 feet of the jungle thrills.

"Joan of Arc" OK'd
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, March 26.—The New York State Board of censors has passed "The Passion of Joan of Arc," a film which was barred in England. It will be shown shortly at the Little Carnegie.

Newsreels Are Shown
At Church Services
(Special to the Herald-World)
WABASH, IND., March 26.—Rather than sit a long time and make a lot of enemies in an attempt to stop Sunday shows, the Rev. L. P. Burdette, pastor of the Christian church, figures on a little competition. He has announced that for the next thirteen weeks motion pictures will be shown at Sunday church services. Decision to use pictures was reached only after several months of deliberation. The matter first was discussed by the pastoral committee and the church board last July.

Publix-Fox Battle Royal for New England Control Awaited
Publix Completes Negotiations for Theatres Under Construction in Three Cities—Fox Goes Ahead with Plans—
K A O Gets Sites, But Bides Time
[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

BOSTON, March 26.—Publix and Fox are apparently actively at work in the principal cities of the New England territory for theatres to add to their chains and a battle royal between the two organizations is expected. In spite of this activity for control of leading houses, Publix theatres in Boston, for the first time in years, were all playing films from other exchanges than Paramount last week. The Metropolitan is playing a Warner Brothers film while the Washington Street Olympia and Fenway were playing Fox features and the Sollay Square Olympia a Pathé feature. Publix, following closely upon the announcement of Fox taking over the Poli circuit, has completed negotiations for theatres under construction in Salem, Mass., New Port, R.I., and Taunton, Mass., besides the theatres recently added.

Meanwhile plans are going forward to give Fox its first theatre in Boston on the site of the Hotel Touraine and adjoining properties. Announced plans of K A O interests to obtain theatres of their own in the Fox-Poli cities appear to have taken a hold, for outside the announcement that sites for theatres had been obtained in all of the Fox-Poli cities, nothing further in the way of starting work on such theatres has transpired. With this in mind, the progress of the Publix-Fox expansions with a view to stepping into the scene at the opportune moment remains to be seen.

Sunday Amusements Are Being Bitterly Fought
In Two Florida Towns
(Special to the Herald-World)
FORT PIERCE, Fla., March 26.—Petitions requesting the city commission to call an election on the question of Sunday motion pictures being circulated have been submitted to the commission by H.E. Flader, general manager of the Universal Chain. The Universal houses in Florida include two in Santa Ana, two in Fullerton and two in Whittier, all equipped with sound apparatus.

"Hula" with Clara Bow
"Starts" Theatre Fire
(Special to the Herald-World)
OAKLAND, March 26.—Clara Bow's work in "Hula" is hot stuff, as the management of the Century theatre on Broadway, can attest. Yesterday, just as she was getting in some of her most effective work, the flame burst into flame and Kenneth Baek, the operator, barely had time to get out of the booth and close the fireproof doors. Two projectors and 3,000 feet of film were destroyed. The house could not be reopened until the booth had been re-equipped and new projection machines installed.

Local Cinema Club to Start First Production
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—Plans for filming the first story of the New Orleans Cinema Club are now under way. This club is patterned along the lines of the little theatre guild and other clubs now operating in parts of the United States.

The plans call for the production of a play, using local talent in the picturesque settings of the city and surrounding territory. The club has all the equipment necessary such as cameras, projectors, sun reflections and every detail of the production will be handled by club members.

Circle Manager Goes To Acme Film Company
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, March 26.—Max Herschmann, manager of Loew's Circle and formerly a member of the home office, has tendered his resignation effective March 24th. The Acme company is located at 1540 Broadway.

Kingsmore Appointed Loew's Cleveland Head
(Special to the Herald-World)
CLEVELAND, March 26.—Howard Kingsmore, present manager of Loew's Baltimore theatres has been appointed general manager, in charge of operation of Loew's Cleveland theatres. This is considered quite a promotion.

The Cleveland chain consists of fourteen houses and Kingsmore will arrive about the first of April to take up his new duties.

Officials Deny Columbia Will Release Sennett, Roach and Christie Comedies
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, March 26.—Rumors to the effect that Mack Sennett, Hal Roach and Charlie Christie comedies were to be released by Columbia were received with denials and rebuffs. Hal Hodes, new advertising manager of Columbia, said it was nothing to his organization, and Hal Roach said "there is not a damn bit of truth in it."

Gordon S. White of Educational pointed out that Sennett audien comedies are to be released through Educational for at least a year. George Weeks, eastern representative of Christie, said he had heard the rumor, but that Christie told him there was nothing to it.

Pathé Audio Review Makes Its Bow With Terry Ramsaye Editor

Score of Technicians Puts First Series Now in Exchanges—Phone Used—Silent Version, Too
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Introducing Pathé Audio Review! This synchronized, talk and sound edition of Pathé Review comes to the theatre built upon eleven years of growth and development of the Review, and with Terry Ramsaye as editor, it reflects the whimsical point of view and expression as well that has been Ramsaye’s in his writings.

This new sound short, Pathe is giving the same attention per foot as its long features and a score of technicians and assistants have helped make the first of many in the exchanges. RCA Phone has been used, as in other sound product of Pathe.

Silent Edition, Too
At the same time, the silent edition of the screen magazine will continue in its present production. Numbered as a new series, Pathé Audio Review will be released concurrently with Pathé Review to meet the demand and the need of the many sound theatres. With the exception of its talk and sound effects, and its musical synchronization, it will differ little in its scenic subject matter.

Big Staff Aids Ramsaye
A daring, saucy, impish humor is promised as the keynote of its appeal. It will pick its subjects where it finds them.—in New York, London, Paris, San Francisco, Timbuktu, the North Pole or the South Seas. An already high-gear staff will make sure of that.

Beverly Jones will assist Terry Ramsaye in the editing of the new unit. P. Fortier Jones, one of the most artistic and skillful cameramen in France, will lend the Continental flavor and its pretty girls, joyous places and novel happenings. Vuyjan Donner, artist and connoisseur in the matter of feminine foibles and fashions, will contribute. Clelia Corte will give it the Latin paprika. Donn McElwaine, from Hollywood, will keep it in touch with the West Coast and cinema happenings. T. J. Ryan-Hogan will be its director of dialogue; Herbert Cleaves, B.S., is the staff ornithologist; Arthur Fishburn, Ph.D., is the ethnographic expert; Joseph O’Brien, one of the pioneers in sound film technique, will supervise its assembly. John McLarron, will create its typographical effects and Giacomo Pozzi is the specially appointed photo-chemist in charge of its development.

Wide Range of Subjects
Outstanding and unique subjects in the first issues of the talk and sound edition is the presentation of a troupe of boy cowpunchers in rope tricks and merry chatter a la Will Rogers; a first minute in the life of a Napatilah Crane, child poetess, reciting one of her poems; the gay scenes to sound and music of the world-famous Bal Tabarin at Paris; Pepita, the dancer, and other hand-picked subjects, with synchronization and sound.

"I’ve let D. W. Griffiths, Von Stroheim, Herbert Breslin and their staff make sure of that," Ramsaye said. "My forbearance is at an end. I’m going to produce Pathé Audio Review to provide ear and eye entertainment for the theatres and audiences of true discrimination. It is to be seen on the screens where superior pictures play. It will be smart and modern. It will tell who’s who and what is what. It will brook no competition nor acknowledge any."

April 15 Named as Publishing Date of Richardson Book

Many letters of inquiry have been received by the Herald-World Book shop regarding the date of publication of Volume Three to F. H. Richardson’s Bluebook on projection, and it has now been ascertained that the work will be ready by April 15.

Inasmuch as the price of the book is not definitely known, reservations will be accepted without the money, thus orders will be filled from the first copies and delivered C. O. D.

Powers Cinéphone Given Special Screening and Demonstration March 22
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—A special screening and demonstration of Powers Cinéphone, which is installed at Brecher’s Olympia theatre on Broadway, was held on March 22 for exhibitors.

The program consisted of subjects produced by the leading film companies recording sound-on-film and on the disc. Some of the subjects shown were: "Clara Bow in Fox and Pathé sound news; an Educational sound comedy; a Warner Brother vaudeville short; trailers of "On Trial" and "Abie’s Irish Rose."

Roxy Hears 7,000 Singers

NEW YORK.—During the past two years Roxy has given over 7,000 auditions to singers, in his search for new material. Out of this number only six were found to have a voice suitable for stage and radio work and twenty accepted for chorus work.
As the Jewish Theatrical Guild of New York feted Eddie Cantor, famous comedian, at a dinner March 10 at the Commodore. Seated are Grover A. Whalen, New York police commissioner; Cantor; Mayor James Walker; and George Jessel, stage and screen star. Standing are Judge Max A. Levine; Dr. Burnstein, chaplain of the guild; Major Edward Bowes of the Capitol theatre; William Fox and Bugs Baer, columnist.

Leo, M.G.M.'s trade mark, helped celebrate the Mardi Gras in New Orleans and was greeted by thousands as he joined the big parade. He seemed to be getting a real thrill out of his Canal Street admirers and roared a welcome. Leo stopped in the Southern city, while on his world tour, which has been confined to the South this winter. With the Trackless Train in Asia M.G.M has two World Tour crews on exploitation service.

Colleen Moore, First National star, and John McCormick, her producer (and husband) on their yacht, "Aimee," during a recent cruise of three weeks along the coast of sunny California. Nautical and nice, eh?
A big job is that of directing the vast press relations of the RKO circuit. Mark A. Luescher handles it according to those dimensions.

One of the scenes of striking beauty in First National’s “The Divine Lady,” a new starring vehicle for Corinne Griffith. This shot was taken from the deck of a battleship and shows the enemy ship preparing for an attack in the rather innocuous-looking manner of long ago. Victor Varconi plays the male lead and with Miss Griffith will be heard for the first time in talking sequences.

Gillian Dean greeting Easter morn with a big rabbit. Miss Dean is coming to America in a World Wide picture starring our own Monte Banks. It was made in England and is titled “A Honeymoon Abroad.” The production is one of several foreign pictures which World Wide has scheduled for release this spring. April 21 is the date.

H. B. Warner won much praise for his wonderful work with Monte Blue in “Conquest,” a Warner Brothers all talking picture. He will soon be seen again in another Vitaphone feature entitled “Stark Mad.”
Fox’s Stock Company Circuit To Solve Need of Audience Talent

NEW YORK, March 26.—A school of the speaking screen, already started by Fox Film Corporation in the form of a theatrical stock company at the Fox Palace theatre in Hartford, is to be expanded into nationwide branches in a dozen theatres with the use of the stage as an ally for the development of audiences.

With the ambition to stimulate new talent in acting, writing, and producing, it is hoped by the Fox executives that the plan will produce both new players and new plays as a constantly growing source of talent for Fox Movietone. Of course, current Broadway hits also will be presented.

William Fox made no announcement of his plans until they had been tried out for two weeks at the Fox Palace, following upon a campaign by Fox to secure talent for talking pictures. It had obtained such outstanding players from the footlights as Mary Duncan, Sylvia Sage, and a host of stars from Twelvetrees, Lumsden Hare, Helen Ware, Dorothy Jordan and Charles Eaton.

Broadway Sapped of Talent

But it also was found that Broadway was being sapped of desirable talent. Many stars were magnetized into the field of other talking pictures. Also many of the old line of seasoned talent, the veterans of the stage, were either passing on or retiring, due to the unfavorable conditions on Broadway this season. Youthful faces were likewise difficult to find.

William Sheehan, vice president and general manager, encountered some very striking experiences along this line. To get the right players for the leads in “Speakeasy,” the all-talking picture of New York now at the Foxes, the director, Benjamin Stoloff, literally hunted high and low all over the city for several months. Besides frequenting vaudeville and Broadway productions, he studied faces on the street, at athletic meets and atop busses. He finally hit upon Paul Page from variety and Lola Loring from “Home Towners” which was a big success here.

National Campaign To Teach Public of W. E. Sound System

NEW YORK, March 26.—To familiarize the motion picture public with the facts concerning the recording and reproduction of sound and dialogue motion pictures by Western Electric Sound System, Western Electric is instituting a huge national advertising campaign to be printed during the remainder of the year.

A circulation of more than 8,000,000 will be reached by the Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, Colliers, Photoplay, Motion Picture Classic, Time, College Humor, The New Yorker, and many other magazines. The first advertisement will appear May 6 in the Saturday Evening Post.

Lobby displays are being prepared for the use of theatres that are using Western Electric Systems.

“Mary Dugan” Into Embassy; Follows “Broadway Melody”

NEW YORK, March 26.—“The Trial of Mary Dugan,” all talking picturization of the stage success of the same name which will begin an engagement at the opening of the American Embassy theatre, 28th. “Mary Dugan” ran on the stage for more than one year on Broadway and is now being presented by eighteen road companies in this country and in Europe.

The picture has an all star cast headed by Norma Shearer, Lewis Stone, H. B. Warner and Raymond Hackett. The voice of Miss Shearer is reported to be one of the best among screen players, despite the fact that she has had no stage experience.

“Noah’s Ark” Given British Premiere At Piccadilly Theatre

LONDON, March 26—Warner Brother’s “Noah’s Ark” was given its British premiere at the Piccadilly recently. This is the second Warner Brothers to play at this house which has over Dolores Costello is starred in the picture.

Tenderfoin, another production starring Dolores Costello, was given a general release this month throughout Great Britain and has proved a big hit in many houses. Tenderfoin’s has bettered the record of Warner’s “Home Towners” which was a big success here.

Open Breach of Circuit with Unions Follows Sound Wiring
Walkout Laves T & D's Vitaphone Theatre at Oakland Dark and Silent—Two Other Houses Discharge Musicians—Projectionists Quit in Sympathy
[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 26.—An open breach between T & D Junior Enterprises, Inc., operating a chain of motion picture houses in Northern California, and organized musicians and projectionists, has been brought about as a result of the installation of Vitaphone equipment in the Strand theatre, Alameda, and the refusal to accede to the demand of the projectionists.

Projectionists in this theatre went on strike and two days later workers in the Vitaphone theatre, Oakland, another East Bay suburb, quit in sympathy, leaving during the showing of the feature picture in the middle of the afternoon. Five operators, seven musicians, an organist and two stagehands were affected here. The walkout left the house dark and silent, and Manager Jack Hunter was obliged to announce that no performance could be given for at least two hours. When a non-union force arrived it was found that the projection machines were out of order.

The Vitaphone theatre has been carrying a full orchestra and an organist at full salary ever since Vitaphone equipment was installed last June, and since this time they have averaged but six minutes work a day, according to Manager Hunter, receiving $15,000 for this.

Two Discharge Musicians
Later in the week the Castro theatre in San Francisco closed its doors to its orchestra of eight musicians, and the Alhambra, also a T & D house, discharged its orchestra of seven. Vitaphone was installed in the Castro theatre early in February and since then the musicians have had nothing to do, but their retention has meant an expenditure of $500 a week.

There are rumors that by discharging the musicians we have violated an agreement with the Musicians Union," said James Nesser of the T & D Jr. Enterprises. "These rumors are baseless.

The Gentlemen's Agreement
"As members of the Allied Amusement Industries we have a gentlemen's agreement with the union to pay a certain wage scale. That agreement has one clause that they cannot pay wages below, and there is nothing in it to compel a theatre to hire men whose services are not required. We met the executive committee of the union and asked for relief in some form, but the only suggestion was to keep the men for another year."

Union Difficulties at Birmingham Settled
BLACKHAWK, ALA, March 26.—Difficulties between the Operators Union and the Rialto and Princess theatres were settled with the signing of a contract by those two theatres here. The basis on which the union returns to the theatre is not definitely known, but it is said that the demands of the musicians, which brought on the strike, have been withdrawn. It is also said that the union takes into its membership one of the projectionists employed at the Rialto during the strike.

Some eight or ten cases against persons charged with throwing "stink bombs" are pending, as are two for assault. What disposition will be made of these cases is not known.

Tyler to Make Audiens; Buck Jones Will Tour With Wild West Circus

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Two Western stars came into the limelight again this week after a few months' retirement. Tom Tyler signed a contract with Tren Carr for a series of eight talking films with the probability that they will be Westerns. Buck Jones is organizing a large company to stage a wild west circus that will tour the country, and make its debut in Los Angeles in about six weeks. Jones will be the star attraction.

Frank Bates Buys Foreign Rights on Dick Talmadge Film

NEW YORK, March 26.—General Pictures Corporation announces that Frank Bates, president, has purchased the rights for Germany, Scandinavia and Belgium to "The Bachelor's Club." This is the first of four comedies starring Richard Talmadge, produced by the Universal studios by Oscar A. Price.

The first of the series was synchronized on the Fox Movietone with a special score by Erno Rapee and his Roxy orchestra.

Fraser Signs Craven; He'll Write Dialogue For Lloyd's Picture

NEW YORK, March 26.—William Fraser, general manager for Harold Lloyd, signed Frank Craven to write titles and dialogue for the comedian's latest which will be Lloyd's initial venture into audios.

Craven has been touring the country with his own new "Jim Dandy," and among other plays he has written are "The First Year," "Spite Corner," "Money From Home," and "This Way Out."

Artclass Closes Big Deal for Distribution in Foreign Territory

NEW YORK, March 26.—Hoffberg-Cornfeld Co., Inc., has taken over the distribution of the entire product of Artclass Pictures Corporation, for Central Europe. Artclass officials announce that the deal comprises about 140 subjects, features, comedies and shorts and is said to be one of the largest deals to be negotiated in the foreign market by an independent producer.

Bill to Censor All Advertising Posters Offered in Kansas; Passage Is Doubtful

KANSAS CITY, March 26.—Having apparently foreseen the probable defeat of a 10 per cent amusement tax bill in the Missouri legislature, political bosses and alleged reformers in this city this week introduced a bill in the house of the Missouri legislature at Jefferson City which would require all advertising posters to be used in conjunction with the showing of pictures to be passed upon by an official in each county of the state. The "joker" in the bill is this: For each poster or advertising material that is used there would be a fee of 25 cents each. Although the bill would have a damaging effect should it become a law, it is not generally believed that it has a chance to be passed.

In the Kansas legislature at Topeka a bill to create local censorship boards in towns, in addition to the regular state censor board, was left to die in the hopper when the Kansas legislature adjourned. Thus ended the worries of Kansas exhibitors.
Private Showing Of "Piccadilly" Held In World Wide Office

NEW YORK, March 26—"Piccadilly," the Arnold Bennett story directed by E. A. Dupont, has just been screened for the World Wide officials.

World Wide intends to get behind this picture which presents Gilda Gray in the star role with Anna May Wong and Jameson Thomas as featured players. Another artist is discovered in "Piccadilly" in the person of King Ho-Chan, an Oriental night club dancer. Jameson Thomas plays the part of a night club proprietor.

World Wide will synchronize the production, introduce songs, dances and effects through the R.C.A film and disc method, and it will be given a Broadway premiere at the same time it is released over the country. Cutting and synchronization are now under way, and it will be ready for release in one month.

A company of players, etc., arrived in United States from England to complete the picture for "Kitty," Warwick Deeping's novel, which was started at Henley, England's boating center.

Arriving were Victor Saville, the director; John Stuart, leading man; Dorothy Cumings, who plays the mother; Charles O'Shaugnessy, character player and James Campbell, musical director.

British Firm Brings Out Portable Sound Device at Scala Show

LONDON, March 16.—[By Mail]—Demonstration of a portable sound device is announced here for March 19, at the Scala theatre. The device is being brought out by New-Fair National Pictures, Ltd., which announces that it is the apparatus by arrangement with Portable Talking Pictures, Ltd.

The device is the product of British engineers and it is represented as being not only a competent sound machine for all types of productions, but it is being heralded as a way to profit from the silent exhibitor. Within a few weeks, it is said, production is to be at the rate of 100 per month. The device will be marketed upon sharing terms, including full maintenance.

The special showing at the Scala is to present the device playing a program consisting of an overture, several short, a feature picture (described as eight reels of speech, effects and complete musical accompaniment), and an exit march.

Famous Players Canadian Control of 153 Theatres Transferred to Canada

TORONTO, March 26—Stirring developments have taken place in connection with the financial structure of Famous Players Canada Ltd. a non-operating 153 theatres in Canada. N. L. Nathanson, managing director, announced on March 20 that the control of the organization had now been transferred to Canada through the purchase of a block of the company's stock which had previously been held by interests in New York. Following this announcement the Canadian company made an issue of 165,375 common shares, the value of which was $992,930.

Atlantic City House Opens Sound Policy With Pacent Device

ATLANTIC CITY, March 26.—The Globe theatre has its sound opening Sunday with Warner Bros. "Noah's Ark." The house was filled at a $2 top price. The 1,900 seats in that house were taken.

Installations of a type 4MJA Pacent reproducer system was completed the middle of last week. This installation, the Globe was the third made by the Pacent company last week.

New Company Formed To Make Audiens and Operate Own Theatres

NEW YORK, March 26.—American Sound Pictures has been formed with E. B. Kohlenbeck, New Jersey real estate magnate as president. The corporation controls the American Sound Studios and will enter the exhibition field as the American Sound Theatres Syndicate.

Jack Noble, formerly with M.G.M will supervise and direct. Within a few days production will start on a series of 12 short subjects, with dialogue and sound effects.
Huge Sound Studio Chief of $300,000 Pathe Improvements

IMPROVEMENTS totaling approximately $300,000 have been launched at the Pathe studios in Culver City. Chief among these, according to William Lissom, general manager, is the building of a tremendous sound studio which will be one of the largest in the world. It will house three separate sound-proof stages, or chambers, where three different companies can work simultaneously.

The very latest methods of sound proofing will be utilized, with much attention being paid to the practical side of making dialogue attractions. The building will be 252 feet in length by 76 feet in width and will have a 42-foot ceiling.

Each separate stage, or chamber, will be entirely sound proof so that companies working on the adjoining stages cannot possibly interfere with each other. The building will be constructed with double walls, with air chambers between to aid in making them absolutely sound proof.

The new sound theatre, which is a miniature picture palace, is rapidly nearing completion. Few big theatres will be equipped with this one for the screening of audible productions. The interior of the theatre is more than 60 feet in length by 30 in width and will seat nearly 100 persons.

It will be equipped with three complete sound projectors, are illuminated. For sound and voice reproduction eight huge dynamic speakers will be used.

Another interesting development at the Pathe studios resulting directly from the sudden success of talking pictures will be the construction of a sound research and equipment department, which will be devoted to the improvement of sound recording equipment. A new miniature and effects department also is being planned.

Western Electric Issues First Press
Sheet to Exhibitors
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—In line with its national advertising campaign to boost sound pictures and to aid the exhibitor in his local exploitation, Western Electric has just put out the first number of a press sheet called "The Voice of Action." This sheet goes to every exhibitor using their equipment and is also sent to the executives of all theatre chains.

"We are doing more than advertising Western Electric," an official of that organization told the Herald World today, "we are trying to make the public sound conscious, something which will help almost every branch of the motion picture industry."

The press sheet emphasizes advertisements appearing in the leading weeklies and urges the exhibitor to let these books work for him. Copies of Western Electric advertisements appearing in magazines like the Saturday Evening Post are reproduced and exhibitors may send for the mats if they want them. There are also the usual canned stories for local newspaper insertion.

Warner's Sign Stage
Stars and Orchestra
For New Sound Films
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Minnie DuPree will play opposite J. C. Nugent in her first audition under the direction of Byron Foy in a sketch entitled "The Veteran." Miss DuPree will be remembered as the original Katy in "Heidelberg." She also appeared with David Warfield in the "Music Master."

Josie Heather, the famous Scotch comedienne has just finished a short audition for Warners.

Leo Reisman and his Hotel Brunswick Orchestra recently completed a short Vitaphone act. For eleven years he was at the Brunswick hotel in Boston and for two years at the Ritz-Carlton and Waldorf-Astoria Roof in New York.

W. E. System in Christie Studios; Preparing for Feature Length Audiences
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Christie is revamping his studios for talking pictures. Western Electric system of recording is being installed for the releases for Paramount. These alterations have been held up until the Christie silent comedies were completed but arrangements have been made to make full recording by remote control from the recording plant at Metropole.

Strand at Chillicothe
Gets New Dress for Sound
(Special to the Herald-World)

CHILlicothe, MO., March 26.—Construction is under way on the general remodeling of the Strand theatre which will open with sound. Movie-Phone is being installed in the Orpheum at Parsons, Kansas, owned by the Glen Dickinson Enterprises. The Broadmour, a suburban house in Kansas City, has been indefinitely closed.

To Install Vitaphone
(Special to the Herald-World)

FITZGERALD, GA., March 26.—The Grand theatre here will be equipped with Vitaphone at an early date, according to G. E. Ricker, manager of the house. The house is now being renovated and has a seating capacity of 1,200.
Power Faults Start Move to Enlist Aid Of Electrical Firms
(Special to the Herald-World)

BOSTON, March 26.—Following the blowing of fuses and even more serious troubles in some of the suburban and outlying theatres which have installed sound equipment, representatives of sound equipment companies are paying special attention here to this feature and are endeavoring to secure the cooperation of the companies supplying current to the theatres.

The greatly increased load requires sufficient current which in some instances means additional power wiring. One Lynn theatre was unable to complete its Saturday night program last week and estimates a loss of $750 as a result of the failure of the current to operate.

Patents Acquired for Making Industrial and Ad Films with Sound
(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, March 26.—E. F. Howe, president and general manager of the National Film Publicity Corporation of this city, has announced the acquisition by that concern of patent rights and recording equipment of the Warner Recording Company of Kansas City, for use in making industrial and educational short subjects for the sound screen.

J. F. Warner, inventor and electrical engineer who developed the Kansas City company's method for sound reproduction and synchronization with motion pictures, has been retained as a consulting engineer for National Film Publicity Corporation. Heretofore the company has produced only silent advertising and industrial films.

The company also plans to produce unbreakable phonograph records and novelty greeting records and is now negotiating for larger factory space in the vicinity of their present plant.

Qualitone Plans National Distribution from Coast
(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—Los Angeles-made talking picture projection devices will shortly be installed in theatres in practically every state of the Union, according to Samuel Freedman, president of the Qualitone Corporation, in addressing a group of electrical and projection engineers.

"We are now catching up on our production and within two weeks we expect to be turning out the machines at the rate of two a day. At the present time we have 22 installations under way in various sections of the country, and it won't be long before the Qualitone attachments will be used in every state."

The Qualitone Corporation is the first California concern manufacturing sound devices to invade the national field.

Patent Devices Put in Houses on Both Coasts

A. West Johnson, Oregon representative for Pacent Reproducer Corporation, reports installation of the equipment at the Granada theatre, Portland, and the Granada in Camas, Wash., of the Type 2MDA, $2,500 machines. The Venetian theatre at Hillsboro, Ore., will be equipped with a Type 4MDA, $3,500 set.

Playing "The Home Towers," as the opening production in sound on a Pacent device, the Walker theatre in Brooklyn had a highly successful opening on St. Patrick's Day. The installation at the Walker is the large Pacent machine, Type 4MDA.

Where Columbia Audiens Will Be Made

Here are views of the new sound studio now being constructed by Columbia at that company's plant in Hollywood. The stages have been planned according to the latest discoveries in acoustical science and engineering and with a main stage 92x110 feet, facilities are expected to meet future as well as present demands. The new sound plant was described in this department last week. Western Electric equipment will be used.

Audiens Will Draw More Patrons, Manager of U Chain Believes

(Milwaukee, March 26.—Sound pictures have come to stay, according to Fred Flader, general manager of the Universal chain theaters throughout the country, who was in Milwaukee last week inspecting the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc., which is owned by Universal.

"The public is sold on sound, although there may be a few people who object to it just for the sake of uttering protests," stated Flader.

"We have wired over 60 houses and in every instance have found the patrons who have patronized the houses better. It seems to me that the sound comedy and short subjects in sound are sometimes taking glory away from the main feature sound productions. There is no doubt but what a good comedy sound picture will make a hit with almost every audience. The sound pictures have boosted comedy from the slapstick kind to the witty kind and people are looking upon comedy shorts as the chief attractions at many houses."

According to Flader, sound will develop a great deal in the future. It has a certain harmonizing influence as well as "humanizing" influence that the black and white pictures lacked. He believes that sound will draw a larger number of people to the theaters than silent pictures ever did.

In the operation of chain theaters, Flader said that it was very important to permit the managers to use much of their own initiative in managing. In this way better results will be obtained all the way around. In too many chains in all fields the tendency has been to have a manager who took all his orders from a main office. In successful chain theater operation a high class manager must be maintained in every house, one who can act right when the call for emergencies comes, and who can contact with people and make them realize that the chain theatre is doing everything possible to give them the best possible type of entertainment.

"If the theatre manager will fraternalize with people in his locality, he is a valuable asset to the organization," declared Flader.

LeBaron Buys Two New Stories as RKO Specials

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—William LeBaron announces the purchase of two stories for auditions, "High River" and "Tanned Legs" by George Hull. "High River" is planned to be one of the really big important pictures of R.K.O. and is a melodrama dealing with the life of river folks who come in conflict with the new ideas of this jazzy generation. "Tanned Legs" deals with our hectic youth and the troubles that follow too free love making among the children of the rich.

Burr Returns to 2-Reel Comedy Field With Audien Series
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—C. C. Burr returned to the two reel comedy field today when he announced plans to make a series of audien. He has headed the Burr & Hines Productions which have been released by First National. Burr has always set and maintained a standard for his pictures, many of which have been comedies. According to some of the leading independent distributors, Burr "has never made a bad picture."

It is understood that the entire West Coast is already sold.

Burr has enjoyed an enviable reputation in the independent market, having produced and distributed pictures—most of them of feature length—in this market for some years.

Burr's first comedies will include a cast of well-known names from both stage and screen and will be produced by both the film and record method. They will be 100 per cent talking and will include all incidental sound effects.

Cruze, Inc., Buys Chadwick Studios in $100,000 Deal

Enters Audien Production—Colleen Moore Starts "Irish Eyes”— Ruggles Signed by RKO—Talmadge Changes Leading Man—Christies Announce New Lap Dissolve
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—James Cruze, Inc., this week bought Chadwick Studios to be used in making talking pictures. It is said the company paid more than $100,000 for the real estate and equipment. The transaction marks further retirement of J. E. Chadwick and the crystallization of Cruze's plans to go headlong into audien production; he has completed a half dozen two reel dialogue films.

In addition to the purchase the deal includes use of the building in the adjacent lot at Sunset and Gower streets.

Cruze said: "You can credit talking pictures with our embracing a real estate proposition when so many others in the industry on the West Coast are wondering what their next step will be. We believe that talking pictures will make real estate values, not lower them. We needed elbow room and I think with the new buildings and other improvements now under construction we will have one of the finest equipped and most modern and technically correct plants of its kind."

Cruze announced production on his first feature dialogue picture begins April 15. Ben Hecht wrote the story. No sound stages are necessary with Cruze's pictures, it is reported, because the synchronization is put in the picture after the film has been shot. The system requires careful watching of voice and action.

Colleen Starts "Irish Eyes"

Colleen Moore has started work in her first talking picture, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." The leading male role opposite Miss Moore is played by James Hall, whose stage experience and excellent singing voice qualify him particularly well for this important part. Both Miss Moore and Hall are called upon to sing, as well as talk, several melodies having been written especially for it.

Claude Gillingwater and Robert Homans, two talented character actors, have been signed by Producer John McCormick to assist a dozen of central character in "Irish Eyes" which has been signed for an important characterization.

Ruggles at RKO

Wesley Ruggles, good director, has signed "A Contract with RKO, which makes him the Viennese Charmer" as his first production under the new affiliation. This important assignment with the revitalized RKO organization comes to Ruggles following two and one-half years with Universal. His most recent work there has been the direction of Laura LaPlante in "Scand'l," and the collaboration with Paul Schofield on the original story and dialogue of Paul Whiteman's Universal vehicle, production of which has been postponed until June.

During his time with Universal, Ruggles directed most of the pictures which brought LaPlante to her present eminence. On the other hand, he directed a number of all-star dramatic specials, and his latest picture presents her in a highly dramatic role. Previously, he had made pictures for Paramount, First National, and most of the other leading companies, and his picture experience is well based on stage training and musical knowledge which fits him for the new regime of the vocal screen.

Immediately upon completion of the dialogue version of "Scandal," upon which Ruggles is now engaged, he will move his megaphone and camp chair to RKO and begin preparatory work for "The Viennese Charmer," on which he expects to begin "shooting" about the middle of April.

Roland to Have Hearty, Not Hero, Role

Norma Talmadge's next for United Artists will be directed by Lewis Milestone. "Milestone was originally slated to direct Lupe Velez' first all-starring production on the return of the little Mexican tornado from the east."

A unique situation is revealed in the fact that Gilbert Roland will not play opposite Miss Talmadge in her leading male role. He will play the heavy with another leading man for the warmer episodes.

Just what the United Artists executives have up their sleeves in making this dras

"Doug and Mary" View Mexican War Via Air
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Mary Pickford and Doug Fairbanks left Saturday night in a Maddux plane for a week's tour over Mexico saying they wanted an aerial view of the war. Four others were in the party. They will meet Joe Schenck and Irving Berlin in Albuquerque in a few days and bring the two gentle men home via air. Berlin and Schenck are returning from the East.
Pickford Makes Sharp Change in Style with "Coquette" Role Preferable in Modern Kind of Characterization, Declares Hodges—"Syncope" a Hot Footed Extravaganza in Synchrony

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—The new Mary Pickford in the new Pickford picture leaves you rather snacked. Her transition is almost amazing. The picture, being more or less suggested from the stage play, is "Coquette." It is a story about a Dixie flapper who gets herself and her kin into a good amount of woe.

I prefer her in her newly chosen characterization. I shall not be surprised if others prefer the old one. She has greater opportunity to act in this kind of role and therefore I think it the kind of role she should continue.

But the story breaks so many old barriers and goes contravene to so many old fashioned production theories that it takes 12 hours of reflection to come out from the effects of the picture.

A remarkable item is the fact that the picture possesses one element that is outstanding in Fairbanks' latest opus. The main character of the plot survives all the important and sympathetic scenes of the "The Singing, Fairbanks' story all the three musketeers are shot out of the picture as well as the heroine. In the Pickford the lover and the father comes out effectively and the heroine trods on alone.

In order to picture the story the stage play was thoroughly deloused of sin and illegitimacy. Software is seeking a careful manner that none of the values is lost.

It isn't easy to watch Mary Pickford with a permanently broken heart because she has been known to show it because her father has killed himself. There are no remedies, even in scenario writing, for a broken heart.

 mismo. She comes up clearer to declaring her solution for the tragedy than her words: "I have to hurry home and help my brother with his algebra."

Her voice is remarkably good throughout the picture. John Mack Brown held up his role as the lover from the hill country excellently. The entire cast displayed admirable ability in working under the handicap of dialogue richly flavored with the dialect of the South.

Sam Taylor is the director.

ADICTS of the determined hope and trust that audien films have a short life are getting a shock. In the one with the introduction of each one with musical settings. Musical comedies on the screen appear to be the most successful manner of issuing sound, voice and cinema simultaneously. One of them is "Syncope," featuring Waring's Pennsylvanians. Simple enough story as it is, it wouldn't stand a Chinaman's chance as a cinema; but it is a roaring, moving, hot footed extravaganza in synchronisation and synchronycap. The title given to see, can be "Lantern."

They need not tell so much narrative because entertainment also depends greatly on emotion. The silent screen was handicapped by its ability to portray emotions only. The sound screen breaks down barriers even felt by the stage.

"Syncope" makes these things clear. It is enacted by a cast of Eastern stage people and is directed by a man who has given many years to fine photography, Bert Glennon. It was for the Department of camera knowledge with the craftsmanship of his camera-operators. Because he knew that principle so well he succeeded in getting the best results that can be gotten.

It is a fine show. It is certainly not more than a second cousin of the motion picture. It is as closely related as the stage play.

A HALF dozen press agents in Hollywood are rank high in their professions. There are two or three who have no equals in their line of work in the world. But the less proficient have begun to complain of "a hard winter." Many of them have been practically forced out of the trade. There is a report on foot that there is an organized movement to rid the colony of all cheaper freelancers.

Clara Bow Returns
But Doffs That Wig
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Clara Bow is back over the radio with that wig that she wore to New York. The wig successfully fooled the Eastern chattering and shopping throngs. Her wig was chiefly to show to some old friends in Brooklyn. She did very little shopping.

R K O Engineers

Hugh McDowell, Jr., and John Tribby, recording engineers, arrived today at the R K O studios in Hollywood from the RCA Photophone headquarters in New York City to join the staff of experts at work on talking Radio Pictures.

The sound staff at R K O studios will be further augmented by the arrival shortly of Gilbert Brown and James Maresco, respectively to the RCA Photophone company in New York.

Christie's Audien Lap Dissolves

Marking another step in the technical advancement of the art of motion picture engineer Lodge Cunningham of the Christie staff, has worked out what is believed to be the first perfected lap dissolves done with voice and picture, in the current Douglas MacLean feature, "Divorce Made Easy." Scenes which dissolve back and forth between characters in which the voice and picture dissolve as well as the picture merge perfectly on one picture and sound track with no duplicates throughout, much careful manipulation, and the results are said to be strikingly novel and developed to the same state of perfection which the simpler lap dissolves had attained in the former silent pictures.

Even more of an achievement has just been accomplished by Cunningham in completing a process for double exposures in picture and sound, whereby a talking character can play a dual role, conversing with himself in the film, to two different voices. First use of this will be made in a new Christie talking play to be started this week.

Carey in "Trader Horn"

Harry Carey will play the part of "Trader Horn" in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization.

He was signed this week for the title role by Irving Thalberg in New York where Carey has been making his home since his ranch at Saugus was swept away in the St. Francis Dam disaster.

Carey, retiring from the Western field, made his last appearance in "The Trail of '98." Since that time he has been playing in a vaudeville sketch.

Jim Watson's Boys Among Us

Traveling with Cap'n E. G. Watson, son of the noted Indiana senator, left Los Angeles for Chicago recently following his father's visit in this city to the Qualitone Corporation, a local manufacturing concern sponsoring a new talking picture projection device.
Radio Pictures Unites Several Departments in Max Ree's Jurisdiction

Art, Property, Drapery and Costume Offices Merged for Color Harmony

(Hollywood, March 26)—A new departure in studio activity has been established by Radio Pictures. It is a union of related departments under the central jurisdiction of Max Ree, noted art director.

Departments involved in the merger are the art department, where all sets are designed, and the property, drapery and costume departments, all of which are engaged in the dressing of completed sets. The organization of each of these departments remains undisturbed by the innovation; Max Ree simply has become the central authority supervising the work of the various units.

Ree's work will consist of establishing harmony between color, line, costuming and what may be called relation of surroundings to character.

"In the past," said Ree, "the main obstacle to combining the work of these departments has been lack of time. Through this union we shall strive to avoid clash, to make each picture show appropriate color and line characterizing each character and story."

"We expect to attain more striking effects in scenic presentation and in costuming. We will give the star, whose characterization is so very important, added support in his or her surroundings.

"It is our aim to establish harmony of line and color in expressing the plot and character of the story. But it is not harmony of beauty alone with which we will be engaged. It includes as well harmony between the basic theme of the story and its physical surroundings."

"Naturally, the designer must know his limitations. In drama, for instance, his work must be subservient to story and action; in musical comedy and such extravaganzas as 'Rio Rita' and 'Hit the Deck.' On the other hand, he may thrust himself forward in creating striking costuming or scenic effects."

In Europe he created sets and costumes for Max Reinhardt's productions for four years. In 1921 he came to the United States and for three years served as art director for some of the largest revues and extravaganzas in New York.

Al Wilson Hurt in Plane Crash 7,500 Feet Up; Mechanic Killed

Stunt Flier's Ankle Sprained When Goggles and Gloves Prevent Opening of Parachute Until 1,500 Feet From Ground

—Making Scene for "Hell's Angels"

(Special to the Herald-World)

VAN NUYS, CAL., March 26—Al Wilson, stunt flier, narrowly escaped death and his mechanic, Phil Jones, was killed in an airplane crash here Friday. The two were preparing to enact a dangerous scene 7,500 feet in the air for "Hell's Angels."

Wilson remained with the plane after its left wing had collapsed. He tried to bring the machine under control but found it impossible. When it had fallen 3,000 feet he shouted to Jones to jump, and left the controls.

His heavy gloves and goggles prevented him from opening his parachute readily, and he dropped another 2,000 feet like a plummet. He finally threw off the impediment and reached the string that controls the parachute. It opened at once but in his remaining 1,500 feet it failed to retard his descent sufficiently. Both his ankles were sprained.

Mechanic Crushed to Death

When he was rushed to the hospital he learned that his companion had been unable to liberate himself from the cabin of the giant Gotha plane. Jones' body was crushed.

The plane was the one which has been used in both "Council of War" and "Hell's Angels" and had served throughout the World War in the Prussian service.

Planned 7,000 Foot Talispin

Howard Hughes of the Caddo company had planned to photograph a 7,000 foot tail spin and an air fight with the plane this week. The stunt was dangerous and he enlisted 25 expert airmen to handle the big craft in the stunt; but all refused, saying the thing would mean sudden death. Hughes finally succeeded in a transaction with Wilson to do it alone. Jones was advised not to try the trip but insisted that he wanted to make it.

Acrade Will Present 1928 Awards of Merit At Banquet About May 1

(Hollywood, March 26)—Formal presentation of Academy Awards of Merit for 1928 will be made at the Annual Awards banquet, to be held at the Roosevelt Hotel, on or about May 1. This decision was reached by unanimous vote at the last meeting of the board of directors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The award is a bronze and gold statuette, distinctive and striking in appearance, and is given in recognition of achievement in film work. Presentations will be made by Douglas Fairbanks, president of the Academy.

The annual Awards Banquet, it is hoped, will become one of the most impressive film ceremonies of the year. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, a non-profit organization, is working for higher artistic qualities and greater social usefulness in motion pictures.

Darmour Acquires Cal-Art Plant for Sound Production

(Hollywood, March 26—Larry Darmour has taken over the entire Cal-Art plant at Santa Monica and Van Ness, and it will be known henceforth as the Darmour Studios. There has been a complete reorganization of the studio operating crew in preparation for the greatest volume of production in the company's history.

The new Darmour Studios will be completely equipped with R C A Photophone and outfitted with every device necessary to the production of sound and dialogue pictures. The R C A engineers have been busy on installation for the last several weeks and have pronounced for the plant as being ideal.

For the current season Larry Darmour has contracted to produce 25 two-reel subjects for the R C A program. These will include the Mickey McGuire comedies based on Fontaine Fox's famous Toonerville cartoon and a series based on stories by H. C. Witwer.

Studio space at the Darmour plant will be made available to a limited number of producers of recognized standing. Several applications have already been made and announcements with regard to them will be shortly forthcoming.

New Fox Newsreel Issues Tell Story of Modern Reporting

IT'S a tough story indeed that the newsreel cameraman of today doesn't get—and then he probably gets it. The newspaper reporter who crawls in the window and "borrows" the photograph that the owner does not want published, thinks himself quite the journalistic berries—at least, he used to. Such is child's play for the knights of the newsreel cameras, and modern conveniences have made him more certain of his story than ever.

Getting shots of Col. Charles Lindbergh has been a bit difficult at all times, because of the reticence of the famous young man, but when he and his fiancee, Miss Anne Morrow, are together, it becomes nigh impossible to picture the colonel.

But following refusal to pose together, Alfonso Manrique, Fox cameraman, finally got pictures of them as they drove up to visit the Cuernavaca hacienda of Ambassador Morrow. The Southern heavens have afforded the cameramen unusual opportunities to show their resourcefulness and courage. Fox had five cameramen covering the inundation, three from the air and two from the ground. Lawrence Kennedy flew from Tampa to Pensacola and was forced down twice, the second time into a swamp. He then tramped 14 miles to repairs, then continued his flight to the strain area to get his story. Frank Lamb, also of Fox, had similar experiences in a plane. Even the sacred rites of a Mohammedan temple, kept secure from infidel eyes by centuries of vigilance, have succumbed to the determination of the newsreel cameraman, who, aided by sound, has brought through a new Fox Movietone News the ceremonies of the Juma Masjid mosque at Bombay to the non-Mohammedan world.

The Wilkins-Hearst expedition to the South polar regions is contained in the current issue of M-G-M News now being shown at leading theatres throughout the country. The pictures were made personally by Sir George Hubert Wilkins, commander of the expedition of discovery and research.

Many of the scenes were seen for the first time by human eyes when Wilkins and his valiant pilot, Carl B. Eielson, flew over them. Another eye, almost human too, also saw the weird, strange sights—the eye of the motion picture camera.

Captain Wilkins established his base of operations at Deception Island, 700 miles south of Cape Horn. There are interesting scenes at the barren, forbidding land as Captain Wilkins and his little band of associates made ready for the great flight of discovery through the air.

More Theatres Launch Stage Policy

Detroit Fox
Week Ending March 22

Manager S. J. Stobbs had another one of those triple-barreled stage presentations at the Fox this week, headlined by that Victor recording artist John Martin, he of steel galvanized ukulele fame. Johnny, a personable young chap, did his stuff before a drop resembling a stained glass window. It was a beautiful setting, the lighting being arranged so effectively that the curtain apparently was stained glass with the sun shining through the multi-colored panes.

"Where the Sky Little Violets Grow," was Johnny's first number. He played it and he sang it, and then dropped into sort of a pseudo yodel for the third verse of the number and he got a big hand when it was over. Next came "Sweethearts on Parade." Johnny dropping his ukulele in the middle of it to finish up the verse with a musical saw.

For the remainder of the act, Johnny worked with a partner whom he introduced as his brother Frank. The latter was attired in one of those trick suits which Johnny aptly described as a "seeruucker suit."

"Every time they see a sucker they sell one," said he. Arthur had a trick yodeling song, and they closed with a duet of steel guitar and ukulele in "I Love You, Sweetheart of My Dreams."

St. Patrick's Day falling this week, the second harrel, of course, was an Irish scene. There was a thatched cottage in the background and a jaunting cart with a real donkey attached to it off to one side of the stage.

Thirty-two Tillerette collyoos were ranged tastefully in the foreground and they presented some nice little dances, ending of course, with an Irish Jig. Harold Van Deusen did a nice trick and proved to be the occupant of the jaunting cart, and he pleased with the old time favorite "Mother Machree."

Patsy Ruth Flann, premier danceress, was much in evidence during the ballet numbers and the three O'Connor Sisters watched Irish airs sweetly.

The third presentation was way over on the other side of the earth. In India, to be exact, for it was entitled "Dream of Buddha." This was a weirdly exotic presentation, for it was the interior of a Buddhist temple with the idols being members of the ballet troupe. The most striking part of this act was a dance by Marione and Mena who, during most of the act, sat poised as the god Buddha in the central niche of the temple. They sat one behind the other so that, to the audience, only one person occupied the niche.

But at the start of the dance, the one in the rear began waving his, or her, arms, in conjunction with the one in front until it looked like one person with four arms. The effect was novel, to say the least. And as dancers, the team turned out to be amusing and circus and their steps were weird and exotic.

David Gould's third production, "Rainbow Trail," is the best Gould has done and about the best of the Pothuck stageplays witnessed for a long time. This stageplay opens in a beautiful western musical set, with the entire ensemble, in cowboy and Indian costume, during the introductory scene as an Indian maiden, paddles a canoe in the background. Ted Clark, in cowboy suit, enters and leads the orchestra in a fast and zippy number called "Stampede," with Paul Small following with a fine vocal chorus.

Ted next introduces Marie White, who offers a good and snappy toe routine. Bud Garfield, a real Ben Ross has become the most popular young man about town in Newark and Jersey City, where he appears every other week as the singing master of ceremonies at the Bradford and Stanley Theatres—In fact Ben is so popular that the Stanley management have signed him to a new long term contract to rotate at these two deluxe houses. Before he became interested in Presentation week, Ben was well known in musical comedy circles and received his first band directing and master of ceremonies training at the Kit Kat Club, Chicago.

Store Aids Theatre

Thirty living models presenting every phase of the fashion trends for the season were an attraction at the Capitol theatre in Des Moines during the week ending March 22. The tie-up was made with Younger Bros., leading merchants in women's clothing.

Special Stunt Increases Saturday Matinees

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 26—The Milwaukee Theatre Circuit's Ocoiusko and Lake theatres here are featuring Lew Fine, a veteran vaudeville trouper, in connection with special matinees programs Saturday afternoons for the kiddies. Mr. Fine appears at the two houses every Saturday afternoon in addition to the feature playbill and has created a large following for himself among the children of the neighborhood.

The two theatres have increased their Saturday matinee business considerably by means of this method.

Charlie White Selected as the Master of Ceremonies for Metropolitan ATLANTA, GA., March 26.—After operating for more than a year under a straight sound picture policy, the Metropolitan theatre has launched a stage bandshow policy that commenced March 25. The new policy was inaugurated at a midnight show—starting one minute after midnight—Sunday night. The stageband will be Charlie White's Jolly Jazzers, with Mr. White serving as leader and master of ceremonies. The initial program will feature the Melody Maids Revue, a snappy aggregation of fifteen talented dancers and singers.

The feature picture selected for the occasion was Columbia's "Restless Youth," co-starring Ralph Forbes and Marceline Day.

The Metropolitan is ushering in the new policy with a highpowered publicity campaign, including newspaper display ads, billboards, posters, lobby displays and a special trailer on the screen.

Manager Carter Barron is thoroughly sold on the stage bandshow idea and has sought consistently for many weeks to persuade the operating triumvirate to launch that policy. Tickets for the opening show—the midnight performance Sunday—have been on sale at the box-office since the first announcement broke on Monday, and the fact that those tickets sold in advance adds strength to Manager Barron's conviction that Atlanta wants something more than a straight sound picture policy.

HARRY ROSE TAKES OVER NEW CAPACITY

Harry Rose has been made master of ceremonies at the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, vice Eddie Fennelly, the Banjo King, who moved on to the Pacific Coast. He will move into the Warfield Theatre in San Francisco, St. Louis, and other locations, and the former master of ceremonies at the Missouri, Ben Smith, will become the master of ceremonies at the Missouri theatre. Rose is a native of Chicago, and has spent all his life in the theatre business. He has been associated with many of the greatest figures in the business, and is well known throughout the country as a master of ceremonies. He is a fine speaker, and is always well received by the audience. His speeches are always well received, and he is always ready to entertain his audience.

BLIND ORGANIST DOES HIS OWN SCORING

Frank Voeller, blind organist at Humboldt, Iowa, has been unable to see since he was six years old. In spite of the handicap he is to be one of the most successful motion picture organists in the middle west. Voeller reads the cues and plays the music. An assistant does the lines aloud to him so that he knows when and how to change his line-up.

Mein Brings Steady Flow At Loew's Park

Ted Mein, popular organist at Loew's Park, Cleveland, has attracted many of his organ programs. Most of his programs are arrangements which permit the playing of various popular tunes. Sometimes old-fashioned songs are played. Usually the program file the feature picture in some way. His music is augmented by colored slides flashed on the screen, with words to fit the music, and accompanying illustrations.

"She Goes to War" is the theme song for "Joan," the new photoplay starring Eleanor Boardman, produced by United Artists. The song was composed by the "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" and published by Riemer & Co. Corporation.

"My Madonna" is the title given to the theme melody for "Waxworks," written by Victor Werner Harris and Vitaphone production, "Madonna of Avenue A." A trio of popular song experts combined their talents in the preparation of this piece which is being published by Irving Berlin, Inc. The words are by Billy Rose and the music is the work of Fred Fisher and Louis Silver.

Toronto Theatre Aids Audiences with Color Foot Lights

A feature of film presentations at the Up-town Theatre, Tonawanda, key theatre of the Famous Players chain in Canada, is that the topical portion of the program is screened in silent form with house orchestra accompaniment. This is partly due to the fact that it is the policy of the house to select scenes from various current weeklies, such as Paramount, Fox and Pathe. Special orchestration is arranged for every shot by Jack Arthur, director of music.

Another interesting fact is that Movie-tissue is used, and these are presented with the scenes flooded with colors from floodlight lamps, the latter being placed on the stage directly in front of the screen. With the screen framed in black, the rays do not show outside of the picture. The solid colors of red, green and amber are changed with such succeeding vaudeville act, thus giving variety to the screening. The colors are not strong enough to detract from the picture sharpness and, in one sense, they give the effect of color photography.

A synchronized picture of the Capitolians at the Capitol theatre, New York, at the Toronto Up-town fades out with the Up-town house orchestra and Bradbury's orchestra from the pit in perfect rhythm under the baton of the orchestra conductor for the remainder of the selection.

Week Ending March 15

Eddie Pehnody presented the "Crab Bag" as his semi-final stage offering to the St. Louis theatre goers. Ward and Van, eccentric clown comedians; Pauline Gardner, flute and clarinet player; Franky Robinson, tap dancer, were prominent in the entertaining.

Intermission entertainment was "Old Hettiebell" based on the music of "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Student Prince," and Johann Strauss' "Blue Danube." The Madrigal Voices and the ballet assisted in this presentation.

STAGE SHOWS

westerner does a rope-twirling act, with the high-light being the twirling of five ropes at once as he dances and talks. He was forced to bag off.

The Gluck-Sarel Girls, in pretty cowboy costumes then do a smart singing and dancing routine, in which they keep time by firing both hair-poles. Seven totem poles with a number of "bullseye" targets on them, lower and the girls, using rifles, fire at the targets and as each scores a hit, target lights and different toned halls ring. In this manner they play a tune. This is extremely novel and it evokes good applause.

Claire next announces two romance, bang-playing cowboys, Osman and Matthew, who ply their trade with fine playing. Jean Boydell, comedienne, then offers a bit of nonsensical songs and eccentric steps that earn loud applause. Claire then leads the orchestra in a fine rendition of "Yo Te Amo" theme song of "The Wolf Song;" Tod's fine hand directing with his announcements and his unobtrusiveness, when the acts are working, has gained him a greater popularity than practically all the masters of ceremonies heretofore. Paul Small obliges with a fine vocal chorus.

The Bachelor Four, dressed as Indians sing "The Sunset Trail" as the ballet in gorgeous Indian garb second and an enormous Indian head, with girls as feathers, lower in the background. This is the finale of the fine stage show.

Ted Claire is leaving shortly to open the Public theatre, in Los Angeles, but will return after a few weeks.

San Francisco Warfield
Week Ending March 14

Gene Morgan, the funny fellow with the green hat, red coat, and sunglasses, who continually causes much merriment in the audience of the Fanncone and Marco creation, "Green Hatters' Idea." Gene makes his first appearance in the audience, near the stage, and asks if t. "O. Taylor is in the house, Mr. Taylor responds and is told to hurry to a certain number on the Second Street as a customer is waiting for a bottle of Scotch.

Next, Al Krae and the band gave several short numbers with Andy Goes singing and Abe Gott playing a trombone solo. The house called for more and the boys gave it to them.

Harry Dewaye opened by singing "Satisfaction of Your Smile" off stage came on and drowned with Al and got a big hand after singing "Grieving For You." He came back with an impersonation of an opera prima donna. Al then introduced him as a Vittorio style tenor. He was followed by Al Krae, giving a drunken impersonation and singing "Goodby Broadway, Hello Montreal," and then, assisted by the band, costumed in tuxedos, wrestling with lighted lamp posts, got a big hand and was followed by Buddy (Traps) Rich who did a fast stepping tap dance and finished with a demonstration of standing his ability as a drummer. The finale consisted of the orchestra with the band arranged on lighted blocks, stepping upwards.

Chicago Norshore
Week Ending March 15

Al Krae opened his show with the Norshore's ballet of the, tiniest and face dance number accompanied by his band working behind a drop. At the end of this number the curtains part and introduce Al and his gang.

He received a big hand and introduces the Meyaoke Sisters, who give a tumbling dance and at the same time execute several difficult feats of strength. At the end of this their brother came out, played a saxophone and sang on the same; then received a good hand and then the girls gave a novelty dance entitled "Picking Cotton" and offered a modern version of the "Turkey Trot.

Next, Al Krae and the band gave several short numbers with Andy Goes singing and Abe Gott playing a trombone solo. The house called for more and the boys gave it to them.

Public Demand Brings Al Short Back to Atlanta

ATLANTA, GA. March 26—Al Short returned to the Howard Theatre on March 25 to wind up his tour of the stagehand and serve as master of ceremonies. During the many months that he officiated in a similar capacity at the Howard nearly two years ago, Mr. Short built up a large and loyal following and his return to the post is the subject for congratulations and felicitations.

Al Short is, first of all, a thorough musician. He is equally able in the interpretation of classical and popular numbers. Next, he is a showman, and as such he qualifies with high honors for the apportionment, "penalty leader."

And finally, he knows how to get results when he has good talent in a stage-hand. Such being the case, much is expected when he takes the baton.

Lou Lowry, who has won many friends during his stay as guest bandmaster at the Howard, is leaving to accept a similar assignment with Publix at the Indiana Theatre, Indianapolis, Indiana. Mr. Lowry came to the Howard early this year when the theatre reinstated the stagehand show policy after several months of "straight sound pictures."

Roy Detrich and his orchestra made whoopsie this week and the people filled it, no fooling. Whoever arranged the memory together with the production, made a fine job of it and it looks exactly like a waltz. The band, which finished the nightly tour, and he sang a song that he likes like him. A jazzy, hot number and that sort of song is not Roy’s kind and when he sings those kind he won’t over. Roy needs more like he sang this week and watch him. The audience was so charmed by Roy’s rendition by the right person and Roy is the right fellow to do it.

The stage artists were good and some fine singing was heard, too. Among the girls, were Anda and MacFarland, and Roddy Boys, five of them, sang, danced and played some mean looking instruments. They went over both with the audience in the same way that their band, and somehow or other they were absent and the pair that took their place really were good. In fact that act was the best on the bill.

Roy Detrich sang “High Up In The Hill Top.” A fine song, and there have been scores of songs that have been others on the program but no name were mentioned. It was a good program and people like making whoopsie.

St. Louis Fox
Week Ending March 8

The stage bill for the week included “Symphony Carnival” a jazz revue, and a ballet offering, “The Pas de Deux.” The Woodwind Serenade, a new feature, the Robespierre overture was played by the orchestra.

Portland Portland
Week Ending March 21

Another outstanding stage presentation in typical Publix style brought exceptionally good business for the second annual presentation of the Pantomime ceremonies. Henry Basse, who has been officially adopted by Portland.

Eddie Martill, “the crooning megaphone king” brought vem to their feet in their -“Volcano” show. Frank Melino & Co. in their sea tornadoes, Ted and Jack, a collection of boys, accompanied by local U. of O. Symphony Orchestra. The famous Foster girls exhibited in novel totem pole dance, and the high notes were hit by Gl Wix, a veritable caruso of the revue stage. On screen “Tide of Empire” only fair.

Boston Metropolitans
Week Ending March 15

Two famous movie stars, Tom Mix and his horse, Tony, were the leading attraction in the Public Re- vue “Rainbow Trail.” Tom Mix was the leader of a cast of twenty-five, and the Mix film, who exhibited lariat twirling and other Western stunts for the edification of the Eastern “tender-feet.” The film was so successfully dramatized and managed to be a musical comedy, with Joe Ries, new master of ceremonies, at the helm, heading the cast.

A short film showing Tom and Tony doing their "keeping fit" stunts, preceded their personal appearance on the stage. Tom rides in on Tony, and after some comedy patter, does some trick shooting, following which two cowboys from the Hollywood ranches appear on stage. Tom wears his red coat sleek and gleaming appears again at the end of the act, much to the delight of the hundreds of boys and girls, but greatly to the disappointment of the majority of adults, who went to the "Met," not to see Tom Mix alone, but his wonder pony perform. Tony however failed to do even one single trick.

The revue opened with gypsies, a chorus of eleven girls, singing, along with a cowboy quartet. The chorus did an eccentric dance, followed by the entrance of Joe Ries. He introduced Marie White, singer and dancer, who received as fine a hand as did Mix, only she was recalled three times.

Osman and Schepke, baujo artists, were the next feature. They were introduced preceding a dance by the chorus. Jean Boydell received the finest ovation of the show with her swelling and dancing impersonations. She was extremely clever in her presentations and found an extremely appreciative audience in the overtures. The feature picture was “Star Mad,” starring Louis Funstands and H. B. Warner.

Philadelphia Fox
Week Ending March 23

The overture, “Morning, Noon and Night,” by the Fox orchestra is received with enthusiasm.

The Four Aristocrats of W. Victor, recording artists, compose a quartet of marked ability. They present a varied program consisting of solos and both vocal and instrumental quartets. One of the boys sings “Sweetheart of My Dreams” with plenty of pathos. “Rainbow Round My Shoulders” is one of their popular instrumental numbers, played with a swing that gets you.

Charles Brugge in burlesque costumes gives the impression of being much younger than he looks. His acting and the showmanship you should. Her name is Helen MacFarland and, outgrowing the astringency on the instrument the band made Signor Fricke famous, she is a grand little hooper.

The Gamy-Hale Girls donned in pretty costumes and Al Evans and his Michiganers played the music for the show.

New York Colony
Week Ending March 15

Sammy Kahn and His Colony Melodist, with the well known Walter O’Keefe as master of ceremonies are featured attractions at this house at present. This week’s stagehour opened to a song called “Your Imagination” played by the ten piece orchestra, and a violin solo and also sang a few clever verses. Kahn appears to be the best bet this house has ever had. He sings, plays and dances.

Walter O’keefe, also a songwriter, introduced the act and offered comedy songs and about 10 minutes of extraneous cleverness. Then followed an amazing and truly rubber skeleton for the bones of the average human being.

"Beaux Arts Frollo" is the public stage show, planned by Frank Cambria and put over with the help of its art setting, the lighting plan and some novelty ballet numbers agreeably done by the Gamba-Hale Girls.

Angelo Sato is most popular in the two Italian operatic arias. Handers and Mills give a new slant to comedy in their novel act. Brynpi, Rahn and Youse, a two girl, one man act, present some difficult acrobatic and pseudo Latin quarter artstic numbers. Alberta Hayes, loves blue singer, comes back after an absence of several weeks to receive a welcome she deserves. She has made improvement in several lines.

Don Galvan, banjo playing stage leader, does two novelties. One of these he does with two girl dancers, who also play banjo and the other be put over with the aid of some amusing antics by the first violinist and the drummer.

The orchestra gives over place Irish melodies introducing the voice of John McCormack. The organ number, "Taking Chances" with Carroll Wallace at the keyboard. The feature picture is "The Bellamy Trilat." There is the new reel to complete the program.

St. Louis Ambassador
Week Ending March 15

Ed Lowry's stage offering was "Making Lafing" in which Burns and Kissen, jokers; Grace Johnson, xylophone player, director, duet, had Jolly, Hello, Roy, boy entertainers, and Harry Johnson, a singer, were featured. Dave Silverman and his orchestra played for the overture, "The Song I Love."

Salt Lake City Pantages
Week Ending March 16

The Pantages vaudeville this week is headed by two exceptional acts. Trout and Helt, blackface comedy, who keep the audience in constant uproar with their new patter and songs, and a dance novelty, consisting of five girls and two boys, presenting a score of new ideas and novelties, make up a distinct presentation.

Ed Lavine opens program with a new array of juggling acts and comedy novelty. "Bright Bits of Musical Hit," presented by Bonner and Power, is fairly well received.

The picture presentation at the Pantages of this city this week is Lon Chaney in "West of Zanzibar," and also "Across the Atlantic," via Zeppilin. Good sized audiences were enjoyed.

The "Good News" idea, presented by Pachnoff and Mountain, substitutes the vaudeville comedy here this week. The "Good News" chorus consists of twenty girls and eight boys, who established a record in theatrical circles in that, although the show duration, the chorus continues indefinitely as a unit. This chorus is under the leadership of Miss Kane, and is famous for its song, "Varsity Draw" number, and the various routines done in perfect union.

Attebury and Gilman, billed as two "college slickers," supply comedy songs and piano playing. Rosaly Tomlinson, tenor, with Bo Peep Karlin, sings a refreshing duet. Gray and Grace, tap dancers, feature in specialties with the chorus.

BOSTON THEATRE ORGANISTS BELIEVE IN GETTING TOGETHER

BOSTON, Mass., March 26—Boston's very active organists, who meet at least once every month at one of the Boston theatres, enjoys a dinner and program of its own and then organizes at the Metropolitan. The program for the courtesy of the theatre, provided a new stunt at the Public Metropolitan Theatre this week at the conclusion of its meeting. As the console slowly arose to view of the audience, it revealed R. G. Del Castillo of the Capitol organ and former theatre organist, lying on top of the console playing the upper manual; Arthur J. Martell, organist of the Metropolitan, standing and playing the other manuals while Chet Brigham, assistant organist at the Metropolitan, was on his knees, playing the pedals with his hands. The stunt received well merited applause.

At the meeting and dinner at which 150 members and guests were present, Bobby Agnew, who was playing at one of the Boston theatres in person, entertained with several solos, Fred Kingsley, chief organist of the Radio-Orpheum organization, was a guest and speaker.

The program committee consists of R. G. Del Castillo, Arthur J. Martell, Francis Cremann, organist of the Loew's State Theatre; Mrs. Sally Frise, organist at the Lancaster Theatre; Malcolm R. Hie of the Neco chain and Chet Brigham. The program committee consists of R. G. Del Castillo, Arthur J. Martell, Francis Cre-

New Haven Olympia
Week Ending March 20

John Murray Anderson's first revue on his return with Publicis is without a doubt the best he has ever done taking the show from all angles. The title is "Laces and Grace" with a finale that takes the audience by surprise. It is a wedding with everyone costumed in glittering lace and rhinestone and the bridal veils taking up the entire stage covering the band.

Tommy Atkins Sextette with Neil O'Day top the show on entertainment. Fortunello and Cirlinelli are standard acts, and Lora Hoffman with her clear, strong voice, the Gamble-Hale Girls do as usual, the troupe this week being the line that worked with the Four Marx Brothers in their talkie at the Paramount Long Island studio. Give them more like this and one need not worry over poorer pictures.

Indianapolis Indiana
Week Ending March 22

The stage show this week is called "Just Kids." It features, in addition to the stage band, Ad Carter, cartotist. His various characters are impersonated by members of the cast. The act has some good dancing, some clever chorus stunts and a blues song or two.

Charlie Davis and his band play "Love Tale of Alusa, Lorraine." The Indiana Stock Company likewise presents its famous show, with Charlie Davis and Phil Davis, a vocal trio and a young woman as the dramatis personae.

Lavina Byrd has charge of the organ of the Circle theatre to the Indianapolis, where she, in return, enhances the audience to sing and whistle.

Kansas City Mainstreet
Week Ending March 23

Al Herman, who admits Kansas City is his home town, was given a prominent place on the stage program at the Mainstreet, as the usual, consists of blackface comedy. He drafts Harlan Christie, master of ceremonies, into his act for a short period, and the people love him.

Benedo DePace, who makes a mandolin "howl and talk," offered a wide variety of mandolin selections. Unusual instrument accompaniments, as usual, consists of blackface comedy. He drafts Harlan Christie, master of ceremonies, into his act for a short period, and the people love him.

Meahan and Newbrough, as comic skit entitled, "Vaudvillianterest." The act consists of humorous dialogue and a series of jokes. The Louisvilie Loons, the theatre's orchestral stage attraction played "Dream Train" as an overture, Walter Davies directing.

Chicago Capitol
Week Ending March 29

The National Playhouse, Inc., is sure making some big strides to help put over their stage presentations.

The show opened with a song by the entire orchestra, entitled "Charlie Makes a Song Charlie the Chalwei" to which Crabu makes his entrance receiving considerable applause. He made a short speech telling the folks he was glad to be at the Capitol and hoped to fill all their wants. Every new m. c. makes these kinds of speeches but, somehow Charlie's speeded a bit sincerely.

The "Texas Redbreasts" were the opening artists and as they say the happy couple sure put over a classy dance. This sort of dance is the kind the public likes and the applause awarded them proved it.

Charlie Agnew, the well known member of the orchestra, came on the stage and played the hellos. Charlie played several numbers and walked off with a nice band. Not bursting but, tough to be proud of.

The hit of the show, outside of Crabs, were Ford and Whitney. The latter being a mere fox terrier. This pair proved one of the biggest novelties seen her in some time. Their act but, credit must be given his trainer. Smart, clever and sensational can be said of them. "Honey, why you do that way?" Those rang out and how? Two numbers and a few choruses were not enough, so Charlie had to sing and sing until he begged off. Hope he don't have too many more acts. Theirs is a fast one, and he'll kill himself. The people like him so good luck Charlie.

Terry with Fox

Terry Fox, who formerly was the organist at Loew's State Theatre in St. Louis is playing the organ for the new Fox Theatre here at Grand and Washington boulevards. Terry has more than 7000 pieces of music classified under 68 headings, playing each for a certain psychological effect. He is one of the outstanding theatre organists of the country.

MILTON SLOSSER

There are times when a man is too successful in his own particular field of work. For example, take Milton Slosser who organs so successfully for the Skouras Brothers at the Missouri theatre in St. Louis. Nearly all of an organist's chances are that Skouras Brothers would give him an opportunity to do the master of ceremonies thing. But Slosser has been doing it successfully during last seven years to the St. Louis public, he is an organist, and an organist he will remain until the end of his time, or maybe a month or two less.

When Slosser came to St. Louis in September, 1922, he was the youngest one of the twenty-five or thirty men claiming the billing of “the world's youngest organist.” Slosser, then barely twenty-years old came to St. Louis from the west coast, via Kansas City. On the Pacific Slope he had been a theatre organist in Pasadena and Hollywood and also at San Diego and Arizona. Frank Newman had brought him to Kansas City to open the Newman theatre. From this theatre, Hertzel St. Louis took him to the Missouri, where Tom Terry had been organist.

When Terry left Famous Players, who then operated the Missouri, Stilpater elevated Slosser to the chief organist's post, which he has held down for the last seven years.

That Slosser has a rare aptitude for the master of ceremonies "jacket" was proved when he acted as master of ceremonies during the interval of the performance of Frank Fay and the debut of Eddie Peabody.

He is quick witted, amano a piano in clever style—has been seen at the same time. He was certainly a born organist, and has been a source of humor and this is radiant in his personality at all times.

Just at the present time Slosser is not only playing the organ as feature soloist but is also acting as master of ceremonies during the "tragedy" extant between the theatre of Eddie Peabody and the induction of the Missoures new permanent master of ceremonies whenever he will be.

Being so versatile as to hold down both these jobs at the same time, it is not a wonder that some are but one who is one of the few organists in the world to do with ease and success.

LARRY SPIER

P. S. Next week this column will contain the life of another well known organist.

ORGAN SOLOS

Preston Sellers (Chicago Oriental) after making many changes of organists at the Oriental, Preston sellers secured the services of an old hand, Arthur Genk and he is proving his worth. Sellers' name can be seen in big electric lights on the theatres canoes which are now making him some money. His solo this week was called "It Pays to Advertise" and he clicked once more.

Alberta Buck (Kansas City, Palace) the pipe organist came to Kansas City from the organist and conductor Harry Kessell offered a singing novelty, Miss Buck playing and singing during the progress of the number, which was billed as "An Organ Symphony.

Leo Weber (Jersey City State) featured a Bevlecst community stunt that met with instant success. This was called "Lost New Garden." The numbers he was called "A Precious Little Thing, Called Love," "The Sun Is At My Window," "Where the Sky Little Violet Grow," and "If You Want the Rainbow." He closed this solo with the first named tune.

Sammy Williams (Chicago Regal) offered as the first of a new series of illustrated song numbers, "Love Makes the World Go Round," "Dream Train," "I Saw A Little Brown Jug," "I'll Faw Down An' Go Boom," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and ended with "Glad Ray Doll." The organist should be given to Sammy. Because of his clever arrangements and showmanship he can always get a willing response from the audience.

McNeil Smith (Chicago Marcuswitz) had the bow community singing stunt this week ever witnessed by this reporter before. He used clever gay slides playing the organ in a big part of the solo. McNeil is a very popular organist and people like him as much here as the Stratford theatre listed Terry. He certainly has an encore.

Al Mitchell (Minneapolis, Minneotas) erstwhile band leader, is ushered into Eddie Dunsteder's place at the console, while Dunsteder is busy making a ward of his own creation. We take it that Mitchell was not entirely arrived to the coup d'etat. He doesn't seem very enthusiastic about it. However, he does entertain the audience with a wide and rather to low, medley of recent successes.

Leonard Smith (Chicago Avalon) is about as popular as the Avalon as Paul Ash was at the Oriental. Smith received a big band for his solo this week. In fact one would wonder where all the fervor was coming from, as the show was almost empty at the time.

John Gart (Jamaica, L. L., Valenca) offered a pleasing solo called, "Continuity in Love." As he played, "Lov's Old Sweet Song" and other old timers which had "the love story" were used. Hisstraight numbers were, "Marnie," "How About Me" and "I'll Get My Man." During the chorus, slides were projected on the screen, but no sone. Judging from the tremendous response by the audience, at the end of the solo, everyone was satisfied to listen to Gart's fine playing.

Don Miller (Detroit Capitol) had a unique Hall of Fame to offer his customers recently. Don played "You're the Cream in My Coffee" throughout the number while slides of Albert J. Static, Inventor of the loud speaker horn, John Filbers, the eminent Scotch organist and others were flashed on the screen. Among them was Mabel J. Whitley. Two guesses who that was meant for! It was good for a lot of laughs.

Arthur Gutbow (Detroit Michigan) had one of the cleverest organ solos seen around here in some time in a new version of "East Side, West Side." It started out in a cartoon comedy of a dog searching through old comic books for the tune. Then the words of the songs were washed to the projected slides of the actual music, which was flashed on the screen. Among them was Mabel J. Whitley. Two guesses who that was meant for! It was good for a lot of laughs.

Harold Rieder (Jersey City Stanley) offered "Evo dution of the Moon Song," which was a very fine solo. During the solo, slides of the moon were made from "Moon" songs, popular between 1900 and the present day hits. "Pale Moon," "Silver Moon," "Harvey," "The Man in the Moon" and "All By Yourself In the Moonlight." Were the number to which the audience sang. The entire solo was played as a mental test. He put it over in great style and got a fine reception.

"THE GHOST TALKS"

I REMEMBER, a good many years ago, the sensation that went abroad when "On Trial" appeared as a stage play. Here was something new, novel, swift, dramatic, snappy. The scenes were cunningly shifted to give the illusion of cutback. The stage play ran a long time and became a sort of mile post. Lots of people tried to make something like it. Some even succeeded.

In audien form, "On Trial" shows a little more clearly than any other picture I've seen the advantages of the new medium. The sequence of the thing is about as it was in the original, if my memory's any good, but the effectiveness of the scheme is far greater. There is no cracking mechanical device to go askew at the wrong moment. There is no waiting for this or that. There is swift realism, smooth shifting of time, consummate matching of incident.

In case you don't remember the original plan of the play, this is it. A murder trial is in progress. Witnesses called to the stand tell their stories. As each speaks, the scene changes to the place of their testimony and action described is shown. Thus the related incidents are woven together in a constantly clarified pattern until the whole is complete with a suddenness that startles. It is a great little scheme. It works out in film much better than it did on the stage.

Bert Lytell, Pauline Frederick, Lois Wilson and a little girl whose name got away from me are the principals. Holmes Herbert, if I haven't confused the names, is the fourth important member of the cast, and Richard Tucker is the prosecuting attorney. There are a good many others who speak— in fact, everybody speaks more or less—and the clerk of the court, who swears in the witnesses, should have his name more prominently placed in the cast.

"WHY BE GOOD?"

I SHOULD like to take Colleen Moore and John McCormick to an exhibition of "Why Be Good?" in Chicago. I should like to see Miss Moore's eyes snap as she beheld the liberties the local censors have taken with her little picture. I should like to record Mr. McCormick's illuminating references to censors in general and these in particular. For the girls and boys of the censor department in this grave, upright community have sheared not wisely but with devastating effect.

A thing like this always makes me mad. Here was a nice little picture with the nicest little star of them all in it and lots and lots of snappy subtitles for the boys and girls who like that sort of thing. It was a swift, clear little yarn about a girl who tried to hide a virtue for which the market value seemed to be down. It was merely told, with many a gay commentary on the sophistations of today's young impossible, and it unquestionably carried more soul-saving power than all the censors in all the world. But the censors, of course, are beyond salvation. And so they looked long and blindly upon the tinselled sin of the dance hall depicted and put their scissors into play.

Of course things like this have happened before, to Miss Moore's pictures as well as others, but this time the censors were handicapped by a well-earned musical score which, naturally enough, didn't go so well with the print after the clipping process. And so, what I ask you, was done to correct the break in accompaniment? I doubt if you'd guess. Nobody but a censor would.

Well, if ten feet were clipped from a given scene, throwing the accompaniment ten feet out of gear, then ten feet of action was repeated, bringing back the synchronization if that's the word. Isn't that a nice hot idea? You should see the picture.

Yet not even a board of censors can wreck a Colleen Moore picture completely.

"THE IRON MASK"

I WISH I were so sure of tomorrow's mood and next month's rent as I always am of a Fairbanks picture. He doesn't miss. So sure have I become of him that, last week, I broke an ancestral tradition on his account. It happened thus:

I write, you see, under another name, for another magazine. I had planned to write of "The Iron Mask," in the issue that went to press the morning after Mr. Fairbanks' picture was to be shown at an exclusive preview in Chicago. I went to the preview, the host had carelessly sold tickets to it and his gaily uniformed and uniformed doormen told me to line up with the mere payees and await my turn, whereas I returned blithely to the office and wrote of the picture just as though I'd seen it—incidentally saving myself two hours' sleep on the night. And, of course, I said just about the same thing I'd have said had I been writing, as I am now, after the seeing. Perhaps I lacked something in knowledge of what it was all about, and certainly my typewriter imparted little of the enthusiasm I would have felt had I seen the picture a few minutes before writing, but the point is that I was quite secure in my praise of the picture and knew that I was. No one but Fairbanks is like that. I should dare the adventure with no other man's picture.

"The Iron Mask" is a story based on two other stories and it takes liberties with both. And Fairbanks takes liberties as usual with everything and everybody in sight. He re-assembles the three musketeers, makes history turn flippantly, duels more people than there are duelists in the civilized world and adds his inevitable personal touch at the finish by calling the end "The Beginning." If he had not already made a great picture, this touch would have been worth the admission price. But the picture is great, and the touch is a crowning gesture.

I suppose you'll want to know how much Doug talks in the picture. Well, if no one has told you before, he appears on a stage set in a couple of spots and recites briefly. I know, personally, that he can speak a great deal better than he does in these bits. But he speaks well enough. He has made no attempt to represent the picture as a talkie. I think he'll make one of those, and if he doesn't I'll take back all the good things I've ever said about him and say a few of the other kind, but for the present there is no need of it. "The Iron Mask" is approximately perfect as it is.

Tie-Up for “Flying Fleet” Links Theatre, Air Line and Newspapers

(Special to the Herald-World)

Minneapolis, March 26.—Frank Burke, manager of the Hennepin-Orpheum, put on a real publicity stunt when he tied up with Universal Air Lines and the Minneapolis Star to put over M.G.M.’s “The Flying Fleet.”

Burke contracted with the air line company to drop 5,000 handbills from its planes flying over the city. These handbills contained 16 aeronautical terms that were to be defined. The person to send in the complete correct list to the Universal Air Lines office received free tickets to the theatre.

The second phase of the stunt to put over the picture concerned the newspaper also. A contest was conducted to secure the largest number of aviation term definitions. The prizes were two round-trip tickets to Chicago, eight rides in Universal planes over the twin Cities, and thirty pairs of tickets to the Hennepin-Orpheum. The prize was won by a 16 year old boy, James Henion, who defined 1,107 terms.

The handbill dropped from the plane carried an ad for the picture on the left side, while at the bottom of the sheet was a coupon for the name of the contestant and a picture of one of the air line planes. The aeronautical terms to be defined were carried on the right side of the bill. The questions were as follows:

1. What is meant by contact?
2. What is a ground pilot?
3. What is an “immelman” turn?
4. What is “zooming”?
5. What is the difference between a biplane and a monoplane?
6. What is meant by going “solo”?
7. What is “Hedge-hopping”?
8. What is a “hangar”?
9. What is “taxing”?
10. What is a “washout”?
11. What is a “gadget”?
12. What is meant by a three-place plane?
13. What is a “dog-fight”?
14. What is a “stick”?
15. What is “dual control”?
16. What is the naval flying insignia?

Our Gang Ice Cream Tieup Gets 70,000 Window Displays

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recently effected a tieup with The Wolf Company, manufacturer of lithographed displays, whereby Hal Roach’s Our Gang is assured a minimum of 70,000 store window displays.

The Our Gang ice cream display consists of a set of three cutouts. The center depicts the entire gang and all the rascals enjoying ice cream cones. The other two pieces consist of the single figure cutouts of Joe Cobb and one of Harry Spear, both in similar poses of the center cutout.

Contest, Lobby Album Exploit “Cameraman”

Stunts that included limerick contest and a giant camera album in the theatre lobby, were used by W. J. Slattery, manager of the Majestic theatre in Kankakee, Ill., to put over his showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer’s “The Cameraman,” starring Buster Keaton. Slattery was assisted by an M.G.M. exploiter in working out the details of his promotion work. A large “Camera Album” was built with stills and captions to fit them. This was mounted on compo board, one still to a page, 30 by 40 inches. These were bound into a large volume and were put up for display in the lobby of the theatre one week in advance, and also in a prominent drug store during the engagement.

Nearly Every Idea Is Combined in One Big Drive for This Film

Exploitation that smacks of energy and thoroughness, not to mention ideas, was that of Carol Langme, manager of Warner's Metropolitan theatre in Baltimore, for Gotham's "Times Square.

A tie-up was effected with one of the leading newspapers and that started a long list of fun and stunts which —well, let Langme tell you all about it himself.

He writes to this department:

"First, I got in touch with the Baltimore Post and suggested we would run a special showing for the newsboys, who numbered about 1,200.
The Post liked the idea and arranged a party for the boys, which was followed by a parade through the town, accompanied by a brass band and banners describing the event, playing it up big—and with plenty of advance notices. I was host to the assemblage—and was successful in lining up several of the candy shops, all of whom contributed enough merchandise to the house to make each kiddie a present of a box of candy.

"In conjunction with this, I made a hook-up with the local flying field, which furnished a place and took up the Gotham exploiteer, Mike Simmons, who—from a spot 3,000 feet in the air—deluged the town with heralds, announcing that "Times Square" had come to Baltimore. I then got several 5 and 10 cent stores and a few radio and vistora shops to give full window displays. Also got the local radio station, in connection with the Post idea, to broadcast four times. This line of action, together with a poster campaign consisting of 22 twenty-four sheets, 65 three-sheets, 100 one-sheets, 40,000 heralds and 350 window cards, resulted in the expected reward of a smashing box office at the opening.

"Oh! yes, not to forget that at the most popular night club in town we succeeded in prevailing upon the management to run a celebrity night, in which the idea was to bring 'Times Square' to Baltimore, and this embodied inviting all the actors of the different shows that played the town that week, and who were ostensibly from New York, meeting in a body as a sort of 'Times Square' set-together.

"This gives you a slight idea of the excitement occasioned in town by the showmanship which gilded the scene."

Tie-Up with Yellow Cab

Puts Over "Two Lovers" (Special to the Herald-World)

RACINE, WIS., March 26—Robert C. Wood, manager of the Venetian theatre of this city, recently staged a special tie-up in connection with the showing of "Two Lovers," starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Bánky.

The tie-up was with the Yellow Cab Company of this city, and each taxi carried a tire cover on its spare with the words "Two Lovers' Yellow Cab—" and notifying the public where they could see the picture. This stunt made a big hit and pulled in considerable extra business for the house.

Frank Dau, who was connected with several of Fox' downtown houses in Milwaukee for several years, has been named assistant to Harry Wood at the Venetian, which is operated by the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, Inc.

Ties Up with Navy

G. R. O'Neill of the Pathe advertising and publicity department put up a most effective tie-up with the navy, as "Anna Polis" played the Hippodrome, New York City.

A navy night was arranged and many ranking officers were guests of honor and escorted to the theatre with a band.
Norma Shearer, the star, and Lewis Stone in a scene from "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producers adapted from the stage play of the same title which enjoyed unusual prosperity in New York and Chicago as a high type of melodrama.

TYPE AND THEME: Bob dances the waltz and his hand plays on the propensities and rob them of their poisons, and the boy in the role of a bandit, gets in the hands of the bandit, if he wants to make his way to success in bringing the Hawk to justice.

TYPE AND THEME: Bob devours the arsos as they are well digested by his brother. He gets a job with a vintage troupe that offers the idea in an Algerian cafe. Here he meets Jeannine, a revivalist, and offers her a place in his gang. Bob and Jeannine make their getaway and Bob learns that he has been cleared of the theft committed by his brother.

TYPE AND THEME: Texas Malone, night club exterior, is determined to be the million- dollar girl and with the help of Don Holland opens a club of her own. Years before, her husband left her, taking her baby boy, and she has resolved to make the world pay for her ill treatment. For her club she employs a COUNTDOWN, and Phil Parr and thus unknowingly has hired her own and her son. One night Nicolino and Phil Parr are supposed to force her out of business so that they may conspire to force her to a rendezvous and accuse of murder, and Tad learns that he is her son with a fight for his freedom and proves his innocence.

TYPE AND THEME: A girl of the underworld falls in love with a young, clean-cut usher. His fights with the owners of the club, she becomes the woman is hostess. A flood carries the owner to his death and the stoker and woman start life anew and in a place that has been washed clean by the flood.

TYPE AND THEME: Tad is being sent to a military school on funds stolen by his father, who he believes, died a military hero. A new bandit, and Tad's father, is employed at the school and can watch his son and as a friend. Tad becomes the chief barker, and one night while returning from a party he discovers thieves in the office. Shag's friends have been in and out of Tad to help rob the office under the threat of returning to his son's identity. Tad attacks the thieves and Shag is killed in stepping a bullet meant for Tad.

TYPE AND THEME: Tad cuts loose from the town and a bandit makes his way to town. A young woman's face is known by the people and the town makes their way for the young woman.

Come Again!

OMAK, WASH.—To THE EDITOR: When I was a kid I was raised in a nice quiet Irish community and one of the things that made it nice and quiet was that, everyone, especially "kids" and newcomers were very careful not to speak out of turn. Now, sure I am a new-comer and sometimes can't contain myself for the world speak out of turn, but it seems that whatever it was that put the Ire in Irish also put the urge in me to write you. You know how a fellow feels kind of guilty when he gets all the benefits of the Herald and gets a chance to cash in on the ideas of men who write for you, but does nothing to let them know that he is getting it.

"What the Picture Did for Me" is the department I should be writing to, but so far, if I would tell the truth in answer to that caption, it would only tend to lower an already deflated morale. In truth, it hasn't done very much to me, because when I went in I put a couple years' experience gained on a carnival lot when I was a sapling up against a service station owner's cash, and with the promise of the local Commercial Club that our town would reach a point where San Francisco would be watching us, and right away too, we built the "joint."

As soon as the distributors heard about the third dimension they expected to move in next day, they got busy and rearranged the rates or rentals on films up to a point that would be good in keeping with business (for THEM). Of course, they knew that the local boosters lied a little, but they wanted to be sure to get enough in case twenty-five minutes before they got to be and when they got back next year, which means What the Pictures Did to My Partner; plenty, brother, plenty. But, I am a kid and we are sort of getting through the Winter.

If it is worth anything to you, let me tell you that man J. C. Jenkins is there, and that bird Trags isn't so rotten.

What About the Future?

MANILA, ARK., To THE EDITOR: I have just finished reading Better Theatres. I enjoy reading this almost as well as I do the Herald-WORLD.

I get a lot of kick out of reading the different advertisements on sound equipment. Twelve months ago I never saw anything like this, and I am just wondering what will take place in the next 12 months. Well, two or two ago we would go to the theatre and enjoy looking at a moving picture and wonder how they ever made a picture that would move so naturally. Now we not only see them move, but we hear them talk. If they ever get to where we can walk up to the screen and shake hands with the star, then we can do some real advertising. We can say, "See, feel and hear Richard Dix," or any other star that we happen to be showing.

Well, anyhow I am sure that I am not the only man who is wondering what the future has in store for the exhibitors who are not in shape to handle talking pictures.—C. N. PIPP, New theatre, Manila, Ark.

For States Rights Films

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.—To THE EDITOR: Wonder why you don't spare an exhibitor without sound a few lines in your Herald-WORLD?

I have just finished a check of the greatest business my theatre, the Triathlon, has ever done with a states right picture, "The Face That Kills," without Movietone or Vitaphone. Just a plain silent print with organ music played by a human artist. My record was broken by over one thousand dollars.

The reason I am writing this letter is because I did business with the heaviest rainfall in 20 years—ten inches of rain in three days. Yet I stood them up! So I am for states right pictures of the right type here. I think the time is ripe for the magazine to continue.—GEORGE STEELE, Triathlon theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Expedition Pictures Shown

NEW ORLEANS.—The first showing of the motion pictures taken of the John Goddians Gray Memorial Expedition into Central America was held in the Athenaeum, Frans Blum, head of the department at Tulane, explained the pictures.

Columbia

THE SIDESHOW: Special cast—Good atrey of a circus that pleased.—T. W. Barcom, Showa theatre, Mount Shasta, Cal.—Small town patronage.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS: Virginia Valli—49%—March 15. Not much to it, will get by as a feature program. Six reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

THE SIDE SHOW: Marie—Prev. in March. March 5. I would call it a pretty good feature. By the way, Herald-World, it has warmed up out back in Nebraska and things look a little brighter. Won’t need those fur lined pictures. Six reels.—S. A. Hayman, Lyda theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

SUBMARINE: Jack Holt—72%—March 7-8. My first Columbia and a good one. This should please both the kids and the adults. They’ll like it in March. Nine reels.—W. C. Pullin, New Linden theatre, Columbus, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE TIGRESS: Special cast—March 5-6. I see where one of the boys said this was punk. It was different, and quite old. It was a good program picture. The tale of a Spanish gypsy and her infatuation for an Englishman. Why is it that the other film houses spend most of their time pushing this Columbia stuff? The program pictures I bought from Columbia were all good, and I didn’t have to give them my hatchet for ‘em either. Six reels.—William E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

First National

ADORATION: Billie Dove—Quite wonderful, from every angle. I believe it brings out Billie Dove in her best performance. I would rank this picture as one of the best productions so far this year. It is interesting in story, it is well cast, and a perfect production. Business for three days better than average. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Coy theatre, Winderbase, Ind.—General patronage.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS: Special cast—March 11-12. Good picture but not as good as some of the star’s former productions. Seven reels.—E. O. Luma, Coy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SCARLET SEAS: Richard Barthelmess—50%—March 8-9. Columbia continues to turn out good pictures. The stars are doing well. Seven reels.—J. E. Luma, Coy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SHOW GIRL: Alice White—February 27-28. Pleasing, light affair. This girl is as good as Bow if they will give her the chance. J. W. Wagner, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

DANCING VIENNA: Ben Lyon—Only ran this one day but would have stood another day. Very good picture. Was afraid it was no good. Seven reels.—E. D. Lynn, Coy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

HEART TO HEART: Special cast—March 14-15. Due to all the good reports I had read in this herald, and as one of the churches wanted a benefit, I gave this to them to a full house with a full 100 per cent reaction. Do not recall any picture which gave better satisfaction than this little picture picture. Clean, wholesome, small town comedy. Let’s give the director a hand. I’ve got to look and see who it was—it was, oh! William Beaudine. Boys, you can run this picture on any night in the calendar and you won’t offend one single soul in your towns or audiences. Seven reels.—William E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SYNTHETIC SIN: Colleen Moore—February 25.

SEVERAL MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE

GRATIFYING, indeed, are the letters we have been receiving testifying to the value of this department. It must be as pleasing to you who contribute the reports as it is to those who handle them editorially, for it is the reports that make our department the great service institution it is. And that reminds us of several things.

One of them is the value in a report of giving the circumstances in which the picture was received. The theatre may be "good" under one set of conditions, and "bad" under another. Also, a few words of explanation why the picture is thought worthwhile while or to the contrary is usually just what the exhibitor who has not played it wants to know.

Another matter is the keeping of reports free from mere expressions of prejudice—a condition of mind or soul to which all of us, being human, are heir. The picture is the thing, and though those who made it are to blame if it is not suitable, the picture itself remains the thing to be criticized.

A matter which may not be so important from the point of view of strict practicability, but one which is nevertheless worth consideration is the com- ment the exhibitor can often make on various conditions in the industry, in just a few words, in the report itself. Such comment need not be serious. Indeed, one of the most effective ways of speaking seriously, we’ve found, is by giving a thought a humorous twist. As we said, these bits of chat in a report, about the picture business in the world at large and the theatre business—is, of course, an important part of the theatre business and is as important as the theatre business itself.

(And they make our job much more interesting!)

—GEORGE SCHUTZ.

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

Copyright, 1929

Miss Corda made a very good comeback in this one, as I was not let up over the last one she was in (in a team with W. B. Bouchy, Jr., Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LOVE MART: Billie Dove.—This went over satisfactorily as a special. Eight reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seashaft, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

THE YELLOW LILY: Billie Dove—March 19-21. Another of those foreign affairs. A fine picture of its kind, but nobody with good sense cares a tinker’s damn. Derrick: stuff I can’t wish anyone any hard luck, but I hope they take all those foreign directors (as well as the local talent with a foreign complex) and send ‘em all back to Russia, Bulgaria or wherever they come from. A good picture, but you can’t get anybody in to see this stuff. This one is a real misfire.—William E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

OUT OF THE RUINS: Richard Barthelmess—25%—January 31-February 2. This is the poorest picture of Dick’s I’ve ever shown. Why do producers put those doughy-faced close-ups of kissing in a picture for, anyhow? You can go to any dance ball and see two thousand pictures of kissing. Why ask good sensible patrons to pay good money to see such trash? Dick is one of the greatest actors on the screen in my estimation—why spoil him?—A. C. Digney, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man., Canada.—General patronage.

THE PATENT LEATHER KID: Richard Barthelmess—64%—March 6-7. "Very good show," said what few came. Played it for Legion benefit. Worst roads we have had this winter had four or seven cars on street. Twelve reels.—Mrs. S. J. Brown & Son, Phoenix theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—General patronage.

THE PHANTOM CITY: Ken Maynard—Best Maynard in a long time, at least it pleased my patrons the best.—Harold H. Kortes, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

SEE YOU IN JAIL: Jack Mulhall.—Very good entertainment.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE DREDGE:—Just a fair rail love story.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LIFE OF REILLY: Special cast—This went over big and everyone seemed to enjoy it immensely. Seven reels.—Glenn Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

WEARY RIVER: Richard Barthelmess—This is another good one from this star. I certainly am pleased at the way he is pleasing my patrons. Seven reels.—Leslie Hahle, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

LILAC TIME: Colleen Moore—17%—March 4. This picture is as good as all the other exhibitors.
Ten Thousand Lakes
Are Calling
By C. J. Byrne
Lay aside your cares and worries, Close your desk and pack your grip, For you owe yourself an outing, A vacation and a trip.

Come and rest your weary body, Where the laughing waters steal, Through the shady nooks that lure you, Come with trusty rod and reel.

Come and learn real joy of fishing Sporty bass or gamey pike,— Take with and have it at home town, You can motor if you like.

Come and hear the wild birds singing Jisting in the welcome, too, For ten thousand lakes are calling, They are calling,—calling you.

[Editor's Note: And you are each member of the Herald-world family, and the particular bit of Minnesota referred to is Detroit Lakes. I knew that Andy Anderson of the State theatre, is to hold forth as host to the second annual "Vamping Convention" next July. So do your planning early, you can leave home your canoe; just take yourself and family where those lakes are calling you.]

ROCKWOOD OF THE UNIVERSE: Mary Ackerman, in her good picture, "The Lost Chord," at the Majestic, Grand Forks, Okla.—General patronage.

JUST TONY: Tom Mix—March 9. Just a fair Western, with good stunt work. We were satisfied, and so were most of our patrons. New print, fair but good. Five reels.—G. E. Ar euch, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

JUST TONY: Tom Mix—Relocu. Tom is a consistent draw, and we always see him leave. If we exhibitors only had enough guts we would demand producers to make us Westerns and they would do it. Instead we cuss them and do nothing about it. These husky boys out here want these pictures; six reels.—E. C. Ar euch, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

HORSEMEN OF THE PLAINS: Tom Mix—March 1—2. Good Mix picture, but strain effect record in first reel and sure had them guessing how it was done. No business. Bad roads and cold, Five reels.—Mrs. S. J. Brown & Son, Phoenix theatre, Neool, la.—General patronage.

BLOOD WILL TELL: Buck Jones—Meoch my and still they come! Just another picture. Five reels.—Glencoe Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE RHINE WITCH: Del Rio—Buck Jones—A good Buck Jones.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, III.—General patronage.

A GIRL IN EVERY PORT: Victor McLaglen—With get by as a program picture over this.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

THE FLYING FLEET: Ramon Navarro—February 16. This is a wonderful production. You can patch the rest up and get the approval of all. The best Metro we have played since "Ben Hur," Navarro is better in this than in any other in the past. Except "Ben Hur." Navarro does not draw here. Eleven reels.—J. W. Engenhaier, Movies theatre, Broken, N. D.—Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON: Flash—March 2, No plot, but a lot of foolishness that went over big with the kids and a lot of the gags. Six reels.—W. E. Engenhaier, Movies theatre, Broken, N. D.—Small town patronage.

A LADY OF CHANCE: Norma Shearer—March 3. Good. Shearer, and several others. Seven reels.—Mrs. S. J. Brown & Son, Phoenix theatre, Neool, la.—General patronage.

WHITE SHADOWS IN THE SOUTH SEAS: Monte Blue—The best south ern island I have ever run. Very entertaining and faithful real. Now there is a lot of truth about the educational fact. —John W. Schill, Grand theatre, Breese, III.—General patronage.

WEST POINT: William Haines—February 23. A 100% picture from both angles—business and entertainment. Don't miss it. In the Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE MISTRESS LADY: Greta Garbo—March 5. This was one that pleased my people. Metro allowed me to trade one I didn't want for this one. Quite lucky, of course, by paying a little more. The ones you want to trade for are always special, and while this was a very special, it was a lot better than the one I traded for, so I guess everyone is happy.—H. B. Wilson, Golden City, Mo.—General patronage.

BROTHERLY LOVE: Dan-Arthur. The best one this team has turned out since "Rookies." In fact, the only one since that's been worthwhile. There is very little stunt in "Brotherly Love," which should easily have been omitted, but so a whole it is very funny. Seven reels.—V. Vanam, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE TRAIL OF '98: Dolors Del Rio—February 25. I didn't drink a drop and yet I let them take my money. Film was advertised in a town of 2,590 (mine's 59) paid the minimum, $50, too. He made a nice profit and I broke even. West Point is a good show, but not worth five times the price of program stuff. Never—never! Frank Schilt, Majestic theatre: Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE TRAIL OF '98: Delors Del Rio.—Great entertainment, especially for small towns. Seems to please right up to the center of the fair business season. A genuine special that should play at advanced admission. Seven reels.—E. D. Lona, Crazy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE TRAIL OF 98: Dolors Del Rio—March 4. This is a good trail picture. Played to pretty good business in bad weather. Print and photography very good. Ten reels.—E. D. Lona, P implant theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

FOUR WALLS: John Gilbert—60% Good picture.—General patronage.—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

WALTERS: John Gilbert.—Ram this as special. Fair, too barbie for some. Eight reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—General patronage.

WEST OF ZANZIBAR: Len Chaney—March 9. Just like all the Chaney pictures, a horrible story but good acting. Didn't draw as well as "London After ROSE MARIE: Joan Crawford—A good picture, although it had a lot of rough outdoor the women seemed to like it. Eight reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaford, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

SHOW PEOPLE: William Haines—March 2. Have seen lots of adverse reports on this, but we liked it. Anything that has Bill Haines in it is bound to be good. This was the only picture he was in in “The Patsy.” Good print and photography. Nine reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: March 9. Nothing but praise for this one. Drew well both nights. Step on it. Seven reels.—Frank Salas, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

WHILE THE CITY SLEEPS: Lon Chaney—February 15. Have gotten the fullest of establishment.—A. C. Digney, Victoria theatre, Charleston, W. Va.—General patronage.

OUR DANCING DAUGHTERS: Joan Crawford—February 2. Though the title did not help us draw in the business, it still is plenty all alike. Nine reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

SHADOWS OF THE NIGHT: Flash—January 12. A very good thriller, not over long. A very hit hit here, only to have the dog star slip when we played “Honeymoon” and they found no dog star. Seven reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movie theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

THE SMART SET: William Haines—About the best smart slick picture Bill has made, and he should stay in these roles, but I guess he will go the way Charles Ray went.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Browe, Ill.—General patronage.

THE ADVENTURER: Tim McCoy—December 12. McCoy has lost what little drawing power he had with the patrons. This was rotten, and we had no use to promote our patrons that we would play no more of his productions. Five reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

SKIRTS: Syd Chaplin—35%. December 27-28. This had them laughing all the way. Syd Chaplin is a good drawing star for me. A. C. Digney, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man.—General patronage.

SKIRTS: Syd Chaplin—November 17. A slap stick two reel comedy extended to six reels, but it went over big for us. We did not make any money on it, but the patrons enjoyed it, and asked for more. Six reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

DETECTIVES: Dane-Arthur—November 24. Lay off this. Not that it is rotten, but it will fall very much short of pleasing the usual percentage of patrons. Seven reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

TELLING THE WORLD: William Haines—December 1. The usual Haines, drew a small crowd but I praised only the usual 40 per cent. Perhaps the patrons expect too much. Eight reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

A WOMAN OF AFFAIRS: Gilbert-Garbo—This one pleased them and they told me so when they left. Made a lot of Garbo fans with this. Nine reels.—Leslie Brocket, Movie theatre, King City, Mo.—Small town patronage.

THE ACTRESS: Norma Shearer—14%. March 10. Costume pictures are a flop for me and this one is exceptionally poor. Eight reels.—W. C. Pullin, New Linden theatre, Columbus, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

LAUGH, CLOWN, LAUGH: Lon Chaney—I call this a dandy, but Chaney does not pull for me.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Browe, Ill.—General patronage.

LAUGH, CLOWN, LAUGH: Lon Chaney—October 24. This was not up to the usual Chaney class. Eight reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

AVENUE: Jack Holt—Good Zane Grey production that especially pleased my patrons. Seven reels.—J. W. Bascom, Shasta theatre, Mount Shasta, Cal.—Small town patronage.

AVENUE: Jack Holt—February 24. A very good Zane Grey-Jack Holt. This combination is a good one. Seven reels.—Leslie Halsey, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE PATRIOT: Emil Jannings—March 6-7. Personally I thought this intensely interesting and that Jannings was wonderful. But it failed to draw and failed to please. Twelve reels.—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE WEDDING MARCH: Eric Von Stroheim—People do not care for this type of picture.—J. W. Bascom, Shasta theatre, Mount Shasta, Cal.—General patronage.

MANHATTAN COCKTAIL: Nancy Carroll—March 11-12. This is what we have been trying to do ever since the “Devil”—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

DOCKS OF NEW YORK: George Arlert—Guess there are still a few more ways to make money on a picture. We advertised this one, “Adults only should attend,” and boy, what a fat little gross we had! Eight reels.—E. C. Arehart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patronage.

LADIES OF THE MOMB: Clara Bow—February 22-26. Clara is good in this, but we like her better in the flapper type. We are getting tired of under- world pictures, anyway. This didn’t draw. Print rotten and in bad shape. Photography fair. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

FEEL MY PULSE: Bebe Daniels—March 12-13. A ruff’t-up trouble which got a lot of laughs. Your serial element will think it is hot stuff. Nobody but Bebe could get away with anything like this and live to tell about it. Six reels.—William E. Travers, Trasg theatre, Neillerville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NEVADA: Gary Cooper—A good Zane Grey picture. Seemed to please, as it had a lot of fine scenery in it even if it didn’t follow the book. They have butchered so many of Zane Grey’s stories that his name is getting to mean less and less at the box-office. Seven reels.—William E. Travers, Trasg theatre, Neillerville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NAMELESS REPORTS

Reports have been received from a theatre in Indiana which are not identified. The reports are on "Shadows of the Night," "The Shady Lady," "The Air Legion," "The Case of King of Kings" and "While the City Sleeps." Comment on "King of Kings" said in part, "This is a fine, mature, but I want to say that it is a real production. We had people in to see who were never in our theatre before." From the above, the exhibitor should be able to identify his reports, and he is asked to send in his name so that the reports may be published.

Seven reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Searfot, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

Pathe

ANNA POLIS: Very good picture that failed at the box-office.—J. W. Baecon, Shastona theatre, Mount Shasta, Gal.—Small town patronage.

LAW'S LASH: Klondike—March 2. Good dog picture. However, the dog pictures is that about the time you get your public acquainted with the name of the new dog, the producer takes the lead, and plays a dog, but fails to get out and get one with a new name. If they could make such dog stuff we would have more cash customers.

Five reels.—William E. Tregodora, Trag theatre, Millville, W. Va.—General patronage.

SIN TOWN: Special—February 23. This pleased my Saturday crowd and is a good Western with lots of comedy. Five reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SKYSCRAPER: William Boyd—March 7. One of the best feature comedies we've ever played. Not much drawing power but if you can get them it will sure please 95 per cent. Photography good. Print not so good. Eight reels.—G. O. Thomas, Frontier theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

MAN MADE WOMAN: Leatrice Joy—Failed to satisfy. Poor program picture.—J. W. Baecon, Shastona theatre, Mount Shasta, Gal.—General patronage.

CRAIG'S WIFE: Special—Fair program picture.—W. H. Boughn, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

TENTH AVENUE: Phyllis Haver—Just another crock story. The public is certainly getting fed up with this stuff. Seven reels.—D. F. Frank, Reel Joy theatre, Wayland, Mich.—Small town patronage.

SADDLE MATES: Wally Wales—March 2. It's a rip roaring Western, my people seem to want a little of this rough stuff. Guess they like variety. Six reels.—S. A. Haines, Palace theatre, Grand Island, Neb.—General patronage.

HOLD 'EM YALE: Rod La Rocque—November 3. Here is one of the good stuff. Perhaps one reason was that we played it right in town patronage.

THE NIGHT FLYER: William Boyd—March 9-10. Another good Boyd. Tiresome in places but a swell ending makes up for it. High percentage owing to this being "Gift Night." Seven reels.—W. C. Pullin, New Linden theatre, Columbus, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

LET 'ER GO GALLAGHER: Special—December. A very good stuff but do not raise the price. Six reels.—J. W. Engesather, Movies theatre, Brocket, N. D.—Small town patronage.

SKYSCRAPER: William Boyd—December 6. Nice little program picture. However, I got a rot- tered picture on it. I have been getting my money's worth, leaving something to the imagination, which is one thing still in favor of silent pictures. Eight reels.—W. C. Pullin, New Linden theatre, Columbus, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

RKO (FBO)

THE PINTO KID: Buzz Barton.—These Buzz Barton's are fair to good, but he does not pull for much money through regular distribution. Also, he wants Grand theatre, Brees, Ill.—General patronage.

LOVE IN THE DESERT: Olive Borden.—February 28, 1928. A most interesting picture of the conventional type. We would have done "Man of the West Age." I don't know who got the decision in this, but both took a lot of punishment. Six reels.—J. W. Boughn, Shastona theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

PANTHOM OF THE RANGE: Special—This seems O. K.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Brees, Ill.—General patronage.

TAXI 11: Chester Conklin—February 20-21. Tom Tyler—March 7. Very good picture which Conklin can't make them nowadays as people have got over watching this kind of picture. Six reels.—W. H. Boughn, Reel Joy, Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

MARKED MONEY: Junior Coughan—February 14. Very good picture for a mixed crowd. Will please the kids. Lots of thrills and action. Ran it on my 10 cent night, and I usually get a good crowd, anyway. Seven reels.—W. E. Boughn, Jr., Sun theatre, Walthill, Neb.—General patronage.

THE AIR LEGION: Special—March 9-8. Best RKO picture that we have had in some time. Nothing is special. Just a good picture. Six reels.—Mrs. S. J. Brown & Sons, Phillips theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—General patronage.

DOG LAW: Ranger—This is a good picture. Ranger is the best dog in the business. Six reels.—N. E. Frank, Regent theatre, Wayland, Mich.—General patronage.

DANGER STREET: Special—This is a nice program picture, not a special by any means. Eight reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

FURY OF THE WILD: Range—February 14. Personally, I didn't get any kick out of this picture, but it seemed to please our folks, I believe companies do it. Six reels.—J. W. Boughn, Reel Joy theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE PERFECT CRIMINAL: Gile Brook—March 5. Very good picture of its kind. Holds the crowd every second. Olive is my favorite star. Six reels.—W. E. Boughn, Jr., Sun theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—General patronage.

SINNERS IN LOVE: Olive Borden.—Just fair, no drawing power here. This is not the type of story for Olive Borden. Six reels.—N. E. Frank, Regent theatre, Weyland, Mich.—General patronage.

THE AIR LEGION: Ben Lyon.—March 14. A good story and good acting, but why so dark? The day scenes were dark and the night scenes very bright. I think that this is a proper theatre picture. Photos and one-sheets show scenes that are not in the picture. Have had more or less of this on all RKO stuff that I have run. Seven reels.—G. A. Dills, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patronage.

BY THE WAY

(Being extracts from exhibitors reports)

William E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.:

"Says, Herb, if we don't have any more prosperity during the next four years than we did on the night of March 4, we are going to have the same old service. It's our system."—Well, it comes only once in four years.

H. B. Wilson, Golden City, Mo.:

"Why they would pack the house on 'Ramona' and leave it empty on 'The Gauche' is completely beyond me for there is no comparison. Your 'Ramona' for outside, 'Sorrell and Son', 'My Best Girl,' 'Two Arabian Knights' and 'Revenge.' Why didn't 'Revenge' repeat?'—Holbum, the same old mysterious public taste.

H. B. Grice, Alykes, Mo.—B. Conant, Bath, S. Dak.: "A rather an added attraction we showed Lewis-Sonnenberg wrestling match, and some of the children thought it was a comedy." What but are wrestling matches?

A. C. Digny, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man.: "I was very fortunate in picking comedian, and I think what 'The Picture Did for Me' that helps in picking 'em.'—The editor and your fellow exhibitors thank you.

E. C. Arhart, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.: "Guess there are still many ways to make money on a picture. We advertised this one, 'A little one only should be in,' and boy, what a fat little cross we had!'—And were they disappointed—or offended?"

February 23. Good handle-picture. Pleased. All the thrills one could assimilate at one sitting. Frank Sahin, Majesty theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

THE MAN WHO LAUGHS: Special cast.—A Universal special that no one seemed to care for. Un- internatinal star—Ben Lyon. Cast—50%.—B. Colman, Bliss, Idaho,—General patronage.

THE KNOCKOUT: Special cast.—The picture, with the exception of a few reels, the remainder of the feature has that "patronage". For the first, $10 for the latter and Paths $100 for "King of the Kings," providing the public would come on, then they shall have one. Seven reels.—G. R. Robinson, Arcade Public Schools, Arcade, Mich.—General patronage.

EXHIBITORS' HERALD-WORLD

United Artists

COLLEGE: Buster Keaton—March 10. My first Buster Keaton, was given me. Picture was particularly good, story and plenty good laughs and all patrons were pleased. Six reels.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farrell, Neb.—General patronage.

The Gaucho: Douglas Fairbanks—March 3. Another good one and my last of United Artists. This did not draw at all but I think it one of the best pictures we have ever run. Why they would put a picture like this on and leave it empty on "The Gaucho" is certainly a mystery to me, for there is simply no comparison. Yet 'Ramona' far outdistanced it. My best advice, though, is to go out and see 'The Gaucho.'—R. G. Colman, Bliss, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE WINNING OF BARBARA WORTH: Banky, Colman, March 3. A good picture but too old and too much of the same old routine. We got one copy and not less than one of our other pictures, for the money. After checking up B. O. receipt, I had to use considerable red ink in my ledgers. Nine reels.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farrell, Neb.—General patronage.

Universal

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast.—This picture is coming so near pleasing 100 per cent of any thing on the market, it also has remarkable dialogue. It is the best picture I have ever run in this theatre. Six reels.—L. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN: Special cast.—I certainly am satisfied with the way this picture is doing in the theatre business after showing this one, as it pleased all the people of the same size as my boys. Twenty reels.—Leslie Hables, Red Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SHOWING OF THE MOVIE: Host Gibson—March 1. The best Host Gibson that we have run this. One is sure to please if Host is a favorite in your town. Six reels.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farrell, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LAST WARNING: Special cast.—I believe this is the best one of the mystery pictures that were played this year. The identity of the girl is absolutely cannot be guessed by the audience, and he is not exposed within five minutes of the end of the picture. Eight reels.—L. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND THE CANARY: Laura LaPlante

WARNER BROS.

THE BRUTE: Monte Blue.—A good rough picture for Saturday night.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breez, Ill.—General patronage.

WOLFS CLOTHING: Monte Blue—Not much to this one. Seven reels.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breez, Ill.—General patronage.

LAND OF SILVER FOX: Rin-Tin-Tin—February 21-22. Did not draw at all. Was a good picture for my boys, but lots of them will not come on a Western or dog picture anymore. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Red Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE THIRD DEGREE: Dolores Costello.—Very good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breez, Ill.—General patronage.

State Rights

THE PORT OF MISSING GIRLS: Special cast.—Fair.—Glacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THERE OUT: Yakima Canutt—March 6. A horse and dog picture that was very good and had good comments on it. Should have played it on Saturday instead of Wednesday, no doubt, as it is a new, photogra-phy very poor in places. Six reels.—G. O.土豪, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

SERIALS

VULTURES OF THE SEA: THE VANISHING WEST: (Bayar)—I have already completed these serials at the Avaloe theatre, with an exceptionally fine cast of Western performers. They are corking good serials. Personally don't care for chapter plays, but it seems that the 'Vanishing West is interest- ing enough to have me take time to look at it, and like it. Comments are satisfactory, and it seems to have been, too, lots of them will not come on a Western or dog picture anymore. Six reels.—D. M. Brotman, Avaloe theatre, 2311 West Diversey Avenue, Chicago, Ill.—General patronage.
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD
March 10, 1929

J. C. Jenkins
His Columb

NELIGH, NEB., March 16, 1929.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Send us six stenographers right away. We don't care whether they are blondes, brunettes or odd looking. We need six stenographers to work in our new office in Los Angeles. We have a policy of hiring only women who can type 60 words per minute. We are willing to pay $1,000,000 for the best six women stenographers in the country. Don't waste our time by sending us men who can only type 30 words per minute.

$1,000,000 Policy On Corinne Griffith's Voice

NEW YORK, March 26.—One million dollars is the sum of an insurance policy written by the Commonwealth Casualty Company to indemnify the voice of Corinne Griffith. The policy, one of the first of its kind, was written by Henry L. Lang to First National Pictures.

Unknow to the star her voice was tested and registered in the laboratory and as a result she was awarded a new five-year contract, which stipulates that each of her productions will be 100 per cent dialogue.

LEWIS VS. SONNENBERG: This went good here.

One reel—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

LOST LAUGHS: Wallace Lupino.—The laugh sure was lost in this Cameso comedy.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

PAPA'S BOY: Lloyd Hamilton is slipping for me. Not so good. Two reels.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

SEEING STARS: Good.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

FOX

FOX NEWS: Fox News claims to have cameramen all over the world, but I guess they are all dead except the man in San Francisco. Nothing ever happens anywhere outside the U. S. A. except in Italy. Every week the newreels are a large percent worse than the week before. I wonder why?—N. E. Frank, Regent theatre, Wayland, Mich.—Small town patronage.

HER MOTHER'S BACK: Good comedy. Please stick to these regular stories. Both adults and children. Can't understand the name as there is no connection to the picture. Two reels.—G. E. Robinson, Arcadia Public Libraries, Arcadia, Mich.—General patronage.

KISS DOCTOR: Van Bibber.—Rather degrading comedy. Two reels. I think one reel of this type should be pulled from the second. Why can't Fox put out a clean comedy or feature? Two reels.—G. E. Robinson, Arcadia Public Libraries, Arcadia, Mich.—General patronage.

OREGON TRAILS END: Robert Schmitt.—Excellent comedy of Columbia river highway which I have been over. One reel.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

ON A SOUTH SEA SHORE: I find those one reel Fox outings good. One reel.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

MARTO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

ACHING YOUTH: Charlie Chase.—Personally I did not care for this, but my wife did. It is good for the public at and that's whom I want to satisfy. Two reels.—A. C. Diney, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man., Canada.—General patronage.

BRING IN THE UP FATHER: Special cost—Million dollars but the picture rather disappointing. Marie Dreeswell was good but the tone of the picture was low. Seven reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Safford, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

CAME THE DAWN: Max Davidson.—Very good. Max sure brings the laughs. Film in good shape. Two reels.—C. D. Dirny, Central theatre, Carberry, Man., Canada.—General patronage.

HABEAS CORPUS: Laurel-Hardy.—This was a return engagement on this one and it pleased again. Better to do this than play some so-called comedy. Two reels.—J. S. Walker, Texas theatre, Grand Prairie, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Short Features

EDUCATIONAL

THE FIXER: Big Boy.—Very good and Big Boy is working up a following here. Two reels.—G. O. Tunstall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patronage.

HECTIC DAYS: Lupino Lane.—Not so good for Lane. Two reels.—Julius W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE FORGOTTEN ONE: Louis Wolheim.—This one is going over well. Two reels.—G. E. Robinson, Arcadia Public Libraries, Arcadia, Mich.—General patronage.

Real Life in Hollywood
Full of Human Interest
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—During the filming of "So This Is Love," Littlefield appeared in a prominent role, he was called upon to speak Hungarian. He placed himself under the tutelage of Gusto Portos, eminent Hungarian actor. A chance remark started a conversation that revealed that at one time they both were fighting against each other with human life at stake. Portos, an officer in the King Ferdinand's forces on the Plate, was leading his men against the forces of King Emanuel, in which was Sergeant Littlefield with a unit of Uncle Sam's Ambulance Corps.

MGM NEWS: These newrears are fine and very interesting. I figure they are business holders. Prints always good.—A. C. Arach, Victoria theatre, Carbor-ry, Mich. Canada. General patron-age.

WE FAW DOW: Laurel-Hardy—We think we expect too much from this great Laurel-Hardy team. This one just so-so. Two reels—E. C. Arach, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patron-age.

WHAT EVERY ICEMAN KNOWS: Max Davidson—Very good. Laughs all the way. Film in good shape. Two reels.—A. C. Arach, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man, Canada. General patron-age.

PARAMOUNT

OFF THE DECKS: Billy Dooley—Not so good as Billy has been making. Two reels. — G. O. Tunistall, Midway theatre, Martinsville, Va.—General patron-age.

VACATION WAVES: Edward Everett Horton—Nothing to rave about. Two reels.—E. C. Arach, Auditorium theatre, Laurel, Neb.—General patron-age.

SOCK EXCHANGE: Bobby Vernon—Bobby is quite a favorite here and he goes over good in this one. Two reels.—E. C. Arach, Auditorium theatre, Laub, Neb.—General patron-age.

SWEETIES: Bobby Vernon—Good comedy. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patron-age.

PATEE

ALL ABOARD: Smitty Comedy. This pleased everybody.—A. C. Arach, Victoria theatre, Carberry, Man, Canada. General patron-age.

CHICKEN: Here’s a real comedy, wish we could get more like it.—Harold H. Korus, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patron-age.

SMILE WINS: Our Gang—Just fair.—Julius W. Schmid, Grand theatre, Eureka, Mont.—General patron-age.

SMITH’S CANDY SHOP: I tell you, they don’t make better comedies than these Smith’s. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patron-age.

RKO

MICKEY’S MOVIES: McGuire Comedy—Nothing to these. Hardly a smile in the entire twosheets.—G. A. Dilla, Sun theatre, Farwell, Neb.—General patron-age.

TITANY-STAHIL

COLOR CLASSICS: Some wonderful scenes in the most attractive and beautiful colors. Real "Gems."

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

Vox Pop is the most erratic guy in the world, and we won’t except our old friend Thomas O. Sabin. We remember when they first tried a skating rink in your town how Vox Pop tore his underwear down there get and there’s his skates on one leg and a wrapper on the other, and you will also recall with what suddenness that crate flattened out, and since then the only guys we know of who keep their skates on all the while are those citizens down in Chicago, but then Chicago should not be held up as a prop for that reason, for Fishy Phil did like to live close to the water. But anyhow, what we are trying to get at is that if the balloon wants to go up let ‘er go up, but you keep both feet on the ground and your eye on the hired girl and the ice man and don’t get excited, for that balloon may have a puncture.

We remember when we went to call on a young lady at peace with all the world. We felt like a kitten full of warm milk. There wasn’t a guy in the community that had anything on us, and we could have sung in a Bengal tiger’s face with one eye shut. But when the bulldog met us at the front gate and tore the seat of our pants out and exposed our enthusiasm, it gave us a very different outlook on life. All of which may not mean a thing, but since it doesn’t cost anybody anything, we ought all to be satisfied.

And now, while the orchestra is playing another jazz selection, let’s look at it from another side.

You exhibitors know about how much money your community will spend for amusements. Your experience has no doubt taught you that you can’t expect them to go beyond a certain limit, and if after you have installed sound and talking equipment, you may find that your sound and talking service has been histed in price to double or treble the silent service. Can you stand the gaff? We are not saying this will be done—we don’t know. New York may, but Main Street don’t, and it seems like Main Street can’t find out. At least we have been able to turn the key and move out any information along that line and we are one of the housekeepers on Main Street.

These are things for you to consider, as well as the cost of this extra installation. Our advice if you’re right here—you can order anything on the card that you like. That’s fair enough, isn’t it?

Occasionally we meet up with an experience that makes us wonder whether we are a part of the United States or a citizen of Nellville, Wis. We had such an experience this past week and we are so overjoyed that last night we dreamed that Fishy Phil was reuniting to us his love affair with “Rawhide Rosy” at Salmon, Idaho. We saw three rattlin’ good pictures, right in succession at the Main Street theatre. Yes, sir, that’s what we said—three of ’em. You may not believe it, but we did.

The first one was Colleen Moore and Tony Moreno in “SYNTHETIC SIN,” in which Colleen broke away from the herd and went down to New York to get a thrill. She got it, and when Tony found that there was one short, he went down to a corral in N. Y., and found her courting with a lot of mavericks that the police had been trying to brand ever since Jake Volstead stepped out in front of the foot lights. We are not going to tell you any more about the picture. It might dampen your enthusiasm to see it, and that would be just too bad.

The next picture was Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton in “WHAT A NIGHT,” a newspaper story wherein Bebe was a news reporter and came near gumming up the whole works. She found Neil engaged in a little social game of draw poker with some of the boys around the platitude, familiar with poker etiquette, she took the liberty of going around the table and taking an invoice of each hand, an alder she saw that Neil held four kings the lady said, “OCEEGOSH,” and then the balloon went up—and so did the celluloid chips when she dropped a lighted match among them. But that’s enough of the story. Go see it, or you will not be a lady you can guard with this picture.

The third picture was “SHOW FOLKS” with Eddie Quillian and Lena Basquete. Eddie was stuck on his shape, more so than he was on Lena, and he impersonated a botta guys we used to see on our stage back in the barnstorming days when they tried to impress us that they were out in the “sticks” to get “atmosphere,” when they should be back on Broadway lighting up that cow trail across the mesa. Eddie did a real job and the producers ought to recognize it with something more substantial than thanks, and the only criticism we would have to offer would be that he didn’t fall for Lena as soon as he should. Our weakness would have been evident right from the start, and any man who couldn’t get out in front of the curtain and dance with Lena must have wooden legs. Eddie did, and hoy, how be could dance! And Lena wasn’t slow herself, and they knocked ‘em cold right in August with all exits wide open. If you don’t go and see “SHOW FOLKS” when you have the opportunity, you can’t play in our yard no longer. You can take your little red wagon and go home and be through with you.

Hello, Iowa, how are you over there? We’ll be over to see you next month. Nancy sends her love, she’s so kittenish that way.

J. C. Jenkins,
The HERALD-WORLD man.

P. S.—The HERALD-WORLD covers the field LIKE AN APRIL SNOWER.
ASSURING MR. ODOM

A puzzled inquiry and a bit of news are included in the same short note from Walter Odom, Sr., of the Dixie theatre in Durant, Miss. It seems Brother Odom has not seen some recent reports of his in the department, and he asks, "Am I scratched off of your list of friends?"

In the first place, our list of friends is written in indelible ink. And in the second place, our business is to add friends to it, not to scratch any off. And in the third place, at least one report has been published, if not at once, as soon as space permits, and that is always within an inch or two at a time. This news has been received. Now for the news: A Pacific sound device has been installed in the Dixie theatre, also one new Simplex projectors. And Brother Odom has contracted for Warner Bros.' unialk pictures. It is not necessary for us to say anything further about the enterprise behind the Dixie. Actions speak louder than words. All that is left for us to say is, "Congratulations and best wishes for your continued success."

Fox Buys Mayflower, Seattle's New Theatre

(Special to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, March 26.—Through the acquisition of what was to have been known as the Mayflower Theatre, but which now will be called the Fox Theatre—Fox-West Coast Theatres has obtained what is called one of the most beautiful houses in the Far Northwest.

Announcement of the purchase of this million dollar theatre which has been a year and a half in construction and now is nearing completion came today from Harold B. Franklin, president of the circuit.

Paramount Signs Santley; Henley to Eastern Studio

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Monta Bell, production executive of Paramount, announces that John Santley has been assigned as a director. Santley, stage actor and producer, has been co-directing with Robert Florey on a talking film, "The Coconuts," starring the Four Horsemen.

Hobart Henley, one of the most experienced directors, has been engaged by Paramount to direct a picture at the Long Island studio. His last picture for Paramount was "His Tiger Lady," starring Adolphe Menjou.

Mary Nolan Signed for Paramount All-Audien

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Mary Nolan, the beautiful blonde has been signed by Paramount to play opposite Ruth Chatterton in "The Captains Lady." Glue Brook and Paul Lukas will have the two principal male roles.

Miss Nolan's first successful appearance was in "Sorrel and Son" and recently she was seen in "West of Zanzibar," with Lon Chaney.

Fire Damages Studio

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN RAFAEL, CAL., March 26.—Fire yesterday destroyed one wing of the California motion picture studio, causing a loss of $10,000. The studio, famous for its scenic setting, was active a few years ago.

"Barnstormer" and "The Minstrel Show" Follow Pollard's "The Showboat"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 12.—The release of "The Barnstormer" and "The Minstrel Show" this month will mark the first of a trilogy of the super talking pictures dealing consecutively with three colorful and romantic phases of American stage life, and all three directed by Harry Pollard.

In the order of their production and release, the Harry Pollard trilogy will be "Showboat," "The Minstrel Show," and "The Barnstormer." "Showboat" opened last March and had its world premiere in two theatres, the Capitol, Miami, and Paramount, Palm Beach.

Tobis Foreign Patents Acquired by Combine

(Special to the Herald-World)

BERLIN, March 26.—The foreign patents of the Tobis Syndicate (Tobis) have been acquired by an international combination to which belong American, French and Dutch groups.

In order to guarantee successful working, a continued exchange of experience will be encouraged, and with regard to decisions of any importance it will be granted to Tobis an essential influence.

The new company is empowered to establish national subsidiary companies in the different countries. A mutual working will be assured by delivery of apparatus and exchange of programs.

Paul Stein Will Direct "Queen Kelly" Dialogue

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Completing her plans for the dialogue version of "Queen Kelly," Gloria Swanson has signed Paul L. Stein to direct, and camera work will be begun in the immediate future.

Adopted from Erich von Stroheim's original story, the audible version of "Queen Kelly" has been in preparation ever since completion of camera work on the silent picture more than a month ago.

Warner-F N-Stanley Event Set for April 6

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—One of the biggest social affairs planned to top previous ones, will be tendered by Warner-Frist National-Stanley organizations at the Hotel Commodore on April 6.

Ben Bernie will act as master of ceremonies. Tickets will cost $15 a couple.

Lois Wilson Making Two More Columbia Pictures

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Columbia Pictures has renewed its option on the services of Lois Wilson, and will make two additional productions on this year's program.

Miss Wilson was featured in Columbia's "Object Alimony," "Alias the Lone Wolf" and "Ransum."

Sprunck with Paramount

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, March 26.—Paul G. Sprunck has been signed by Paramount and will be in charge of photographic effects at the Long Island studio.

Mme. Marstini in "Redemption"

NEW YORK.—Mme. Rosita Marstini, Franco-Belgian actress and player in "The Big Parade," has been added to the cast of M.G.M.'s "Redemption," which will star John Gilbert.

Fox West Coast Makes New Division of Montana

(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—A sixth division, the Montana division, has been created by Fox West Coast Theatres. The new division was made necessary because of the increasing importance of the Montana theatres.

Will Steege, who has been manager of the houses in Great Falls, has been appointed division manager with his headquarters in Great Falls. This division means that Montana will no longer be in the Seattle office.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. F.

RKO’s “Syncopation” had its Chicago preview last Thursday at the State-Lake theatre, and despite a heavy rain, many were present. The entire main floor of the theatre was packed, and the balcony held still more. “Syncopation” is a story of a gal and her husband trying to get along in the world by dancing in night clubs. The husband is a sort of a chap that loves his wife and cares not for gold as long as his wife cares for him. But the wife, on the other hand, is different. She likes her husband but wants to go higher in her stage career and never is satisfied.

Like every picture, there has to be a fellow in it who makes things hard for the husband of the beautiful wife.

During the showing of “Syncopation,” a character in the picture whispered, “Darling, I love you,” to which some exhibitor or reviewer replied out loud, “Oh Yah?” The crack might not seem so funny but it caused an outbreak of laughter in the theatre. Lots of funny things happen at these previews. One chap took his shoes off, and another insisted on someone going up on the stage and asking the Waring band to play “Sweet Adeline.”

Len Ulrick was seen running around the theatre like a lost boy. To be sure, Len’s customers got good seats—and don’t let anyone kid you about that. Herb Washburn took the tickets at the door and everyone was greeted with a big smile. It was overheard that the State and Lake wants to sign Herb up now. He was such a big success last Thursday.

“Syncopation” was recorded by RCA Photophone, and officials from RCA were present at the showing. Walter Brown, once a member of the RKO staff and now district manager of RCA, was there with his office force.

S. E. Brady of the New Broadway theatre in Cape Girardeau, Mo., has contracted with DeForest Photophone to install the Phonofilm device. A new DeForest office is to open in Milwaukee very shortly.

The State-Lake theatre is thought to have broken all records with the opening of the new policy of vaudeville and talking films. The house opened last week for the first time with the new policy, showing Father’s “Godless Girl,” and a record crowd attended.

The latest fad of Chicago’s bandits became known last week. A bandit carrying what looked to be a baby wrapped in blanket, entered the Harvard theatre and held up the cashier. He escaped with $125.

Harry Scott, home office executive of Pathe, was visiting Harry Lorch at the local exchange last week.

According to reports the “Iron Mask” is pulling down all records held at the United Artists theatre. The picture is drawing capacity crowds each day. Douglas Fairbanks gives another performance of his clever tricks, and Chicago critics are giving it nice write-ups. The picture that the “Iron Mask” bettered at the B. O. was Charlie Chaplin’s “The Circus.”

DeForest Photophone gave a demonstration of the device for exhibitors in Milwaukee and Wisconsin last week. The demonstration was given at the Symphony theatre, where a DeForest device has been installed for some time.

Richard Bennett, famous legitimate stage actor, was present at the showing of “Syncopation” last Friday to see his daughter, who is appearing in the picture. Ashton Stevens, well known critic for the Herald and Examiner, was also at the screening.

Tess Heraty is once more an aunt and she celebrated all last Wednesday in honor of the new arrival. The baby is the daughter of Tess’s sister, Mrs. Clarence Sullivan. He will be called Jack.

The Lindo theatre in Freeport, has installed Photophone. John Ditmar is the owner of the Lindo.

Dave Dubin, manager of the Educational exchange returned from New York last week. Dave says that Educational shows are being made as fast as they can, but it’s hard to keep up with the sales, which keeps Percy Barr, salesman for Educational, working day and night.

A screening of Educational’s “Zim Bom Ba,” the first all-talking Jack White comedy, was given at a Loop house last week. According to reports, Max Banfield of B & K, witnessed the screening.

A big Chicago theatre is seeking pictures showing the Mexican, Hindu and Italian in a favorable light. These films are to be used for psychological purposes. A line to the Herald-World regarding such pictures will be appreciated.
